Part second consisted of a description of "The Work and its Needs," by the following: Japan, Miss Marguerite McCutchen; China, Miss Susie Woodland; Burmah, Miss Hull; Assam, Miss Florence Serrell; Telugu, Miss French; Africa, Miss Shreve. They were attired in the costumes of the various countries and each read a sketch of the country represented.

Mrs. Gilbert then told briefly of the early life and conversion of Judson, the missionary. While the latter was confined in prison he composed a few verses of poetry. The words were set to music by E. J. Fitzhugh, and Miss Blair followed Mrs. Gilbert's remarks by singing them.

The silver offering was then taken, after which Hazel Grant gave a recitation and Ernest and Leslie Powlson sang a duet.

Mrs. Yerkes announced the offering to be $74.48, $3.48 of which was contributed by the women of the Mt. Olive Baptist church.

The exercises closed with the singing of a hymn, after which tea and wafers were served.

Those pouring tea and presiding at the tables were Mrs. W. R. Chapman, Miss Florence Marsh, Miss Ida Yerkes and Mrs. DeWitt C. Brokaw.

During the closing a pleasing violin solo was rendered by Lindley Hillman.

MRS. LANE TAKEN TO PRISON.

Tried in the Somerset County Court for Attempting to Shoot Calvin Corle.

Mrs. Pompey Lane, who attempted to shoot ex-Senator Calvin Corle, on Main street, Somerville, several months ago, was taken to the State Prison, at Trenton, Thursday, to serve a term of three years. Mrs. Lane was a leader among the colored population in that locality, and an active church worker. She is a handsome mulatto, about sixty years of age. Her antipathy to Mr. Corle originated in his refusing to turn over money to her from her late husband's estate, which had been left in trust but which she claimed was due her. When the homestead was sold she refused to leave until she was carried out by the Sheriff.

At the trial Mrs. Lane denied that she purposed killing Mr. Corle. She was, however, found guilty, but a commission was appointed by the Court to examine into her sanity. It reported that she was sane, so Judge Bartine gave her three years. There has never been a blemish on her character before.

DISSATISFIED POLITICIANS.

Borough Republicans Have a Misunderstanding Last Night.

A rumor of slight dissatisfaction has gained currency in the borough today in regard to the Councilmanic honors bestowed last evening at the Republican primary. It appears that a slate had been prepared which bore the names of W. C. Smith, P. A. Emmons and H. J. Martin. It was the intention to have two out of the three nominated. It was generally understood that W. C. Smith would not run again, and as afterward learned, neither Mr. Martin nor Mr. Emmons wanted it. It now appears that Mr. Smith had changed his mind and was willing to stand, but this fact was not known till after the caucus and some of his supporters feel slightly put out.

VICTOR AND VANQUISHED.

I.

Though the crowded streets returning, at the ending of the day,
Hastened one whom all saluted as he sped along his way;
In his eye a gleam of triumph, in his heart a joy sincere,
And the voice of shouting thousands still resounding in his ear.
Passed he 'neath a stately archway toward the goal of his desire,
Till he saw a woman's figure lolling idly by the fire.

"I have won!" he cried, exultant; "I have reached a cause from wrecks.
Crushed the rival that I dreaded, set my foot upon his neck!
Now at last the way is open, now at last men call me great,
I am leader of the leaders, I am master in the state!"

II.

Languidly she turned to listen, and decorous was her pretense,
And her cold patrician features mirrored forth indifference;
"Men are always scheming, striving for a name pretty end," said she;
Then, a little yawn suppressing: "What is all of this to me?"

II.

Through the shadows of the evening, as they quenched the sunset glow,
Came the other, farting homeward, with dejected step and slow.
Wistful, peering through the darkness, till he saw, as oft before,
Where a woman stood impatient at the threshold of the door.

"I have lost!" he faltered faintly. "All is over," with a groan;
Then he paused and gazed expectant at the face beside his own.
Two soft eyes were turned upon him with a woman's tenderness,
Two white arms were flung about him with a passionate caress,
And a voice of thrilling music to his mutely uttered plea
Said: "If only you are with me, what is all rest to me?"

III.

All night long the people's leader sat in Dull of eye, with brain unthinking, for his heart was turned to stone;
While the hours passed all unheeded till the hush of night had ceased
And the haggard light returning flecked the melancholy east.

But the other, the defeated, laughed a laugh of merriment,
And he thrust his cares behind him with an indifferent contempt,
Recking not of place and power and the smiles of those above,
For his daily life was illumined by the radiance of love.

Each had grasped the gift of fortune, each had counted up the cost,
And the vanquished was the victor, and the winner he that lost.
—Harry T. Peck, in Bookman.

THE FORCE OF EXAMPLE.

Scene—Drawing-room with French windows opening on a terrace with flower beds. In the distance, woods in the glory of autumnal foliage. Time, six o'clock p. m. Their small child, nursing two bachelor friends of some 28 and 30 years of age, respectively.

BAID (to First Friend) — Master Harold's in the garden, sir. If you'll please to wait here, I'll go and find them. (Exit.)

First Friend (walking to the window)—What a fortunate fellow Tom Ralston is. They tell me he has got a pretty wife and two lovely children. In such a bower of roses his life must be one long dream of domestic felicity. A summer idyll the year round. (Sighs sentimentally.)

Second Friend—I can't quite see how it can be that in the winter, but (taking a breath as if preparatory to a long-distance dive) I envy him this air; it's like champagne. He's on sand, I fancy, and just see the fall the tide has got for his drains. None of your London fogs, or germs, or bacteria here; 45 minutes by train and he leaves all that behind. When the lease of my little flat runs out, off I pack to the country myself.

First Friend—Nonsense; you make your health a regular fetish.

First Friend—Well; isn't health the first thing in life?

First Friend—Possibly; but you'll never forget your own ailments till you have to think of those of another person. Take a wife, man; depend on't, there's no true happiness outside of matrimony. I've thought a lot about it lately, and I mean—but, there, you would only laugh at me.

"A SUMMER IDYLL THE YEAR ROUND."

Second Friend—Who's talking nonsense now? Take care! You'll recover from a fit of sentiment to find yourself married.

First Friend—And what if I do? When a man gets to a certain age it's his duty to marry.

Second Friend—Well, don't let us quarrel. Just fancy Ralston saying he hoped we shouldn't be bored. Bored in this enchanting spot!

First Friend—And with such a picture of domestic felicity!

(Enter Mr. and Mrs. Ralston.)

Ralston—Awfully glad you have come down. Always a pleasure to see old friends, isn't it? Allow me to introduce you to my wife. (Usual introduction effected.)

Ralston (to First Friend)—You haven't been the gardens; come and have a look at them. (Exit Ralston and First Friend.)

Second Friend—How jaded we Londoners must appear to you, Mrs. Ralston.

Mrs. Ralston—On the contrary; I was thinking how remarkably well you both looked.

Second Friend—You flatter us. How can we compete with you who live in the country, braced by this pure atmosphere and possessing every sanitary advantage.

Mrs. Ralston (sharply)—I consider this the most unhealthy spot in the kingdom.

Second Friend (in great surprise)—You would not say that if you lived in London.

Mrs. Ralston (speaking rapidly)—If I wished to enjoy good health I should live in a big town. Just now there are two cases of typhoid in the village, and measles among the children keep my darlings in the house. Besides, there's no doctor for miles, and the medicine is made up by the schoolmaster, who is so worried by the radicals on the board that, as he told me only the other day, he hardly knows what he is putting into the bottles. What do you think of that?

Second Friend (visibly paling)—It's as bad as the middle ages.

Mrs. Ralston—Isn't that dreadful?

"ISN'T IT DREADFUL?"

In the house we never know what the plumber will do; he drinks so. Tom says he has his doubts about our well. By-the-bye, will you have some tea?

Second Friend (earnestly)—No, thank you.

Mrs. Ralston—Perhaps it's safer to drink aerated waters in a dry season like this. You see a large town has its advantages.

Second Friend—My dear Mrs. Ralston, you stagger me.

Mrs. Ralston—I thought I should. But here comes Tom and your friend. He hates to hear me talk of village matters; so, as I have lots more to tell you, we might take a turn in the garden ourselves.

(Enter Ralston and First Friend.)

Mrs. Ralston—Tom, dear, we are going for a stroll in the garden. (To Second Friend). There is really quite a pretty view, and the fog won't begin to rise for another hour. (Exit Mrs. Ralston and Second Friend.)

First Friend (heavily)—I am pleased to see you again, old man. I almost lost sight of you after your marriage.

Ralston (gloomily)—Of course; a wife always loathes her husband's bachelor friends (grimly) unless she likes them too much to be pleasant; but a man can pay her back—(with resignation)—by loathing her relations.

First Friend—How bitter you are! Isn't it always the same; a man never knows when he is happy.

Ralston—He knows when he was happy.

First Friend—Nonsense. What more can a man want than a charming wife, jolly children, a rose covered—

Ralston—Bosh—and ever! You have no idea of married life.

First Friend—I can at least imagine a long, sweet dream—

Ralston (sharply)—Nightmare, you mean. I've lost my liberty, and, according to the rules, should help you to lose yours. But I won't. As an old friend I give you my candid opinion: Matrimony is the very deuce. To begin with, just think of the responsibility—

First Friend (nervously)—Of course, a man must be prepared to make sacrifices.

Ralston—So might a woman. My wife spends more on dress every year. Then I have given up my club to please her.

First Friend—She wants to have you with her always. How beautiful is true love! (Sighs.)

Ralston—You call it true love; I call it true jealousy. If I stayed in town to dine with one of you boys she would ask me she was deserted. Yet, when I'm down here, she merely grumbles. Not that I blame her for that; the place is beastly dull, and its her sole amusement.

First Friend (taking him anxiously by the arm)—Surely, you're joking?

Ralston—I wish to goodness I were. You want to marry as a sentimental experiment. So did I. My experiment failed. So will yours.

First Friend—By Jove, you stagger me!

Ralston—I thought I should. (Walking to window.) Pretty view, isn't it? Hello, here comes your Fidus Achates. I'm sure he's been talking about his health, he looks so confoundedly miserable.

(Enter Mrs. Ralston and Second Friend. Mrs. Ralston crosses over to speak to her husband and the two friends stand together.)

First Friend (sotto voce)—By the bye, old man, I was joking when I hinted that I contemplated matrimony. You quite understand that?

Second Friend—Oh, of course. And that little flat of mine is very comfortable. We've had some jolly times there, eh? I think I shall renew the lease. It's very healthy.—Black and White.

The night police of Girard, Pa., are instructed to arrest all boys and girls under 18 years of age who are found on the streets without proper escorts after eight o'clock in the evening.

The heaviest horse in New England is said to be one owned in Somerset, Vt., and used in lumbering on the mountains. It is a Clydesdale, is five years old, stands 18 hands high, and weighs 2,100 pounds. A horse weighing 1,500 pounds is considerably big.

An Arizona prison has an extensive apiary which is under the charge of the inmates. A single hive is said to have produced 200 pounds of honey last year, and it is expected that the industry will prove exceedingly profitable.

FASHION'S DECREES.

The use of contrasting side sections in skirts seems to be increasing. There are also fronts of entirely different material.

A dress of putty-colored cloth has an Eton jacket of wine-colored velvet with velvet sleeves and collar. From beneath the jacket, entirely across the front, is a full-puffed vest of cream-colored crepon.

Hair-dressing has become elaborate in the extreme. Puffs, feathers, combs, aigrets, ornaments and ribbons are mingled in what might become inextricable confusion were the arrangements less artistic.

Shades of yellow are in demand for evening wear. A very rich costume is of a copper-yellow satin, brocaded with small designs of rose color and foliage in natural tints. The trimming is of very open jet passementerie, with a full fringe made of extremely fine jet beads.

A very rich and handsome opera cloak is made of cream-colored velour, elaborately embroidered in silk and pearl beads. A fringe made of ostrich plumes falls from the lower edge, and the shoulder cape is similarly trimmed. The hood is edged with the trimming, and enormous bows of satin ribbon are set on at the front and back.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Government is frequently in vogue for justice in these days.

Jersey justice is not of the old time brand in the case of a seventeen year-old boy who has been confined in the Trenton jail for a year on the charge of passing a counterfeit dollar.

The Press trusts that the Plainfielders who attend the Board of Trade dinner at Elizabeth tonight will return home and inculcate a little spirit of progressiveness in the local organization.

Mr. Boss Platt took a fall in New York yesterday. But it was on an icy sidewalk. His political boots are spiked so that he never loses his equilibrium on a lubricated slide of deals constructed by his enemies for his downfall.

A new political party is to be born in Pittsburg next month when a convention of the crank elements of the country will meet to discuss the affairs of the country. Jacob G. Coxey and the women will play important parts in the melo political event.

The Somerville Unionist-Gazette advises the Somerset County Board of Freeholders to employ an engineer to superintend the erection of new bridges made necessary by the flood the first of the month. Where an expenditure of $50 000 is involved it would seem that the idea would be an economical one in the end.

Here's a lesson for Plainfield. The little town of Madison, Morris county, owns both its own water and electric light plants, and after six years operation they are now both self sustaining, with a prospect in the immediate future of a liberal income from these improvements. More and more does it become evident that these necessities in every city and town should be the property of the people.

The success and enthusiasm of the Board of Trade dinner in Elizabeth the other night, says the New York Press, has caused Plainfield to prick up her ears. Her local organization seems to be in need of progressiveness and her newspapers are digging at it, with Elizabeth as an inspiring example. Both Elizabeth and Plainfield might take Paterson as an example, and Paterson can look on up to Newark.

The Republican State Convention for the selection of delegates to the National Convention at St. Louis, June 16th next, was called yesterday to be held in Trenton, Thursday, April 16th. The number of delegates to which each county is entitled to under this call will be as follows:

Atlantic	19	Middlesex	36
Bergen	30	Monmouth	41
Burlington	37	Morris	30
Camden	64	Ocean	13
Cape May	8	Passaic	17
Cumberland	27	Salem	17
Essex	147	Somerset	17
Gloucester	20	Sussex	13
Hudson	108	Union	2
Hunterdon	17	Warren	17
Mercer

An incident in the history of the Republic which occurred in 1849 made David R. Atchison, of Missouri, President for a day, and made his name known throughout the country, yet probably very few of the politicians of today remember that such a man ever lived. Atchison was President pro tem of the Senate in 1849. March 4th at the end of President Polk's term and the beginning of the term of President Taylor fell on a Sunday. President Taylor was a strict observer of the Sabbath, and would not take the oath of office until noon on Monday, March 5th.

If, as reports now seem to indicate, the trolley road is built from Elizabeth to this city, the volume of trade which comes to local merchants would be greatly increased. Even with equal transit facilities to Elizabeth it is most probable that the trade of Westfield and Cranford would come to Plainfield. The merchants in this city have demonstrated that they are the most progressive of any in towns of this size in New Jersey, and there is but little doubt but what they can successfully compete with Elizabeth dealers. The extension of the trolley would be a good thing for Plainfield.

MAY LOSE HIS ARM.

A. S. FRITTS SUFFERING WITH SARCOMA OF THE FOREARM.

The Mysterious Trouble Started Two Years Ago and Has Been Growing Gradually Worse — Operation Necessary.

About two years ago A. S. Fritts, son of Dr. J. T. Fritts, of Park avenue, noticed a small lump growing at the base of the right thumb over the wrist joint. It was about the size of an almond nut and nothing serious was thought of it at the time.

A year ago last September it was thought best to remove it. This was done by Dr. Fritts, and no further trouble was anticipated, until another lump began to grow in the same place, and in less than a year it was as large as the first one. Between Christmas and New Year's Dr. Collins, of New York, removed the second lump, but it began to develop again. It was then thought wise to have the trouble examined at the College of Physicians and Surgeons, in New York, where A. S. Fritts is a student. Drs. Fruden, Bull and Weir made thorough examinations and pronounced the growth that of sarcoma, which is considered very serious. The physicians all advised him to have the arm amputated at the elbow, which course was considered best in their judgment.

No cause is attributed to the growth, but the physicians say it might be the result of a bruise. In view of the fact that Mr. Fritts has been preparing to take up surgery as a profession and expects to be graduated this spring, it is an exceedingly sad case. After close application to studies and ambitious to conclude the prescribed course in his profession with honors, he is nearly crushed at the thought of being compelled to lose his right forearm. But this will undoubtedly be the result as the physicians offer him no encouragement. The prospects are that in a week or so the operation will be performed at the college in New York. The duties at the latter place makes it impossible for him to undergo the operation at present.

ABOUT EGYPT.

Rev. Henry Mason Baum Delivers an Interesting Lecture.

The illustrated lecture on Egypt given by Rev. Henry Mason Baum, D. C. L., in the Y. M. C. A., Saturday evening, was well attended and thoroughly interesting to all. Mr. Baum gave a geographical description of this wonderful country in commencing his lecture, thus acquainting his hearers with the dimensions and situation of it. He then went on to tell something of the country. The pyramids are chiefly located on the west bank of the Nile river, which overflows its banks once every year. The Egyptians formerly had the idea that the heavens were flat and made of iron, and that the stars were suspended from chains. They worshipped the Nile and several kinds of animals.

The pyramid of Gizeh, he said, covered over seven acres of ground, and the supposition is that it took 100,000 men twenty years, working three months in the year, to build it.

He presented a picture from the top which gave a beautiful view of the country, showing the Nile, with its winding course.

These pyramids were beautiful inside, being divided into spacious rooms, with massive columns handsomely carved.

He showed an ancient table giving the age of Egyptian civilization to be 4 000 years. This fact is exactly in accordance with the Bible and confutes the ideas of the higher critics who tried to prove that the Bible was wrong.

Other views were given showing in detail many points of interest which are of great value to Bible students.

A FAREWELL TO BACHELOR LIFE.

George Firstbrook Gives a Dinner to His Comrades of the West End.

George Firstbrook, who was recently married, gave a dinner on Saturday night at McVey's to a dozen of his comrades of the West End. Alex. Muir, Dan Page and John Cose favored with songs, and James Brown made a few remarks. The gathering was a sort of a farewell of Mr. Firstbrook to his bachelor friends.

Those who enjoyed Mr. Firstbrook's hospitality were: Alex. Muir, Dan Page, John Cose, James Brown, David Gray, Ben. Eddy, Walter Higgins, Sylvanus Hoffman, Harry Page, John Evans, Frank Marsh and Art. Leland.

A New Company.

The Boys' Brigade of Hope chapel has disbanded. A paper is now going the rounds of the chapel, and is being signed by all the young men, with the intention to organize a company. The number of signers already makes the affair an assured success.

Large Accessions.

Twenty-three persons united with Trinity Reformed church at the Communion service yesterday morning, eleven by confession and twelve by letter. A large congregation was present and the new members received a hearty welcome.

CITY AFFAIRS QUIET.

THE POSITION OF DELINQUENT TAX COLLECTOR NASH QUESTIONED.

The Council Increases the Salary of James A. Martin to $600 a Year. Licenses Granted and Other Business.

The regular March meeting of the City Council held last Monday was very much unlike the weather which has ushered in the month, for the session was an exceedingly tame one, and little business was transacted. All the members were present except Councilmen Giana and Fisk. After the minutes were read and approved a petition, signed by Howard Fleming and other residents of Park avenue, below Ninth street, asking the Council to lay sidewalks, curb the street, fix the roadway and place a crosswalk in front of the Park Avenue Baptist church. The matter was referred to the street committee.

A. G. Vogeler asked for the privilege of erecting an awning in front of his meat market at 207 West Front street. This was also placed in the hands of the street committee.

Alonzo Aldrich and several other residents of the west end petitioned the Council for a fire-alarm box, to be located at the corner of Grant and Sherman avenues. The matter was referred to the proper committee.

The following applications for hack and cart licenses were presented and later they were granted: Hack—Daniel Hibbits, Richard Day, George Belcher, J. Galbraith, P. M. Peterson; cart—C. Columbus, P. Robinson, D. Jones, A. Hankerson, S. Conway, F. Brown, R. Wortman, M. Ayres, E. J. Dunn, J. E. Smith, M. Lizanovits, W. Hand & Son, P. B. Bandolph, A. B. Summers, George Honora and A. B. Noe.

Mayor Gilbert then sent in the following nominations for policemen: Regulars—George W. Lunger, C. E. Post; specials—Jos. Galbraith, Chas. Giese, and they were confirmed by the Council.

Chief Doane presented his monthly report as building inspector. It showed that twelve permits had been granted. The report was received and filed, as was also the collector's and treasurer's reports for the month of February.

Mr. Dumont said that V. W. Nash had sent in two bills for the months of January and February. In his judgment he thought that Mr. Nash's term as delinquent tax collector expired at the close of 1895, and he did not think that the Council should pay the bills, as he had not been re-appointed to the office and has nothing to do with it. He recommended that the bills be returned.

The question of the assessment on the Sarah A. Dickenson property, corner of LaGrande avenue and Richmond street, which was brought up at a previous meeting and referred to the Commissioners of Appeal, was reported upon last evening by the commissioners. They recommended that $300 be deducted from the whole amount, and a release given. On a motion offered by Mr. Dumont, the recommendation was adopted.

Mr. Barrows made a motion that $225 be appropriated for the police department, to be used in purchasing uniforms for the new men and keeping the department in good condition. The motion prevailed.

On motion of Mr. Stebbins the matter regarding the salary of James Martin, first assistant chief engineer of the fire department was taken from the table. He then moved that Mr. Martin's salary be increased from $300 to $600 a year. It was so ordered. Mr. Martin will now devote his entire time to the department.

Mr. Tolles offered a resolution that the street committee be authorized to secure bids for crushed stone, to be used in building culverts and for crosswalks. Resolution was adopted.

The auditing committee reported all bills correct, except one of John Siddall's, which had not been sworn to, and moved that they be paid, also the latter, when Mr. Siddall had complied with the requirements.

The Council then adjourned.

THE POET SCOUT SPEAKS.

He Entertains an Interested Audience in Crescent Avenue Church Chapel.

Captain Jack Crawford is not an unknown visitor in Plainfield, and despite the inclement weather of Saturday he attracted a goodly number to the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church. The entertainment given by the "Poet Scout," as he is called, was of a general nature and included songs, stories of his own experiences and original recitations. Humor and pathos were blended together in his stories in a way that made the entertainment a very enjoyable one. It was given for the benefit of Marconier chapel, and Captain Jack Crawford gave his services gratuitously.

A Contest For Slippers.

The Skandia Junior Society will hold a ball in Saenger Hall, Somerset street, April 20th, at which there is to be a slipper contest in which the lady receiving the largest number of votes will be the winner of a handsome pair of slippers.

out in the rain

A good drenching in a cold rain is often the beginning of consumption. Yet no one claims that the germs of this disease exist in the rainwater. Then how was this brought about? The exposure was followed by a cold; the vitality was lowered; the cough continued for some weeks; the throat and lungs became congested; and thus all the conditions were favorable for the consumption germs.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, does not directly attack these germs and kill them. But it does tone up the whole system and restores the body to health before serious harm is done. The germs of consumption thrive best when the system is weakened and the throat and lungs congested. Do not delay until it is too late, but treat your cough early. Cod-liver oil and the hypophosphites, in the form of Scott's Emulsion, are the very best remedies.

Green Bones as a Poultry Food.

Is green bone a profitable food with which to feed poultry? This is the question I want answered. We think it is and our reasons are that hens fed on green bones will lay a larger percent of eggs than they would if not fed the bone. A larger number of the eggs will be fertile; the chicks hatched from eggs laid by hens that were not fed green bone, especially if these are winter eggs or if your fowls are confined in yards. Now why is this so? Because the composition of bone contains nearly all the elements of an egg, which is proof positive.

The chemical analysis of bone by Berzeline is:

Gelatine and blood vessels	33.30
Phosphate of lime	51.61
Carbonate of lime	11.30
Floride of calcimus	2.00
Phosphate magnesia	1.16
Soda and chloride of sodium	1.20
	100.00

Some chemists add to this about 1 per cent of fat. Drevenstedt says: "An egg is a concentrated food weighing 1½ ounces, composed of lime, soda, sulphur, iron, phosphorus, magnesia, oil and albumen, which are nearly all found in the composition of green bone. So if we feed the hens it, we supply her with the proper materials with which to make egg, for the hen is the mill to grind, the crop the hopper, and the egg the grist.

A good bone cutter therefore is a necessary requisite. We know that the one manufactured by the F. W. Mann Co., of Milford, Mass., is a thoroughly reliable and practical machine.

New Books in the Library.

The February bulletin of the new books in the Plainfield Public Library is as follows:

Fell on His Way Home.

William Van Alstyne, of Watchung avenue, while returning home on Saturday evening, about six o'clock, fell and received a scalp wound. He is under the care of Dr. Thomas H. Tomlinson and is doing nicely.

DEATH CAME TO RICHTER

TWO OF HIS SELF-INFLICTED WOUNDS PROVE FATAL.

Before Dying He Told His Daughter That He Was Sorry—What His Wife Has to Say About Him—Her Condition.

Death came at last to John Richter, the would-be murderer and suicide, for two of the three bullets that entered his body on Saturday afternoon accomplished their object and, after hovering between life and death for two days, the spirit of the desperate and hopeless cobbler flitted away last evening at about 6:0 o'clock. The end came unexpectedly. His condition had been about the same since his arrival at Muhlenberg Hospital, with a slight improvement yesterday morning. Late in the afternoon he began to sink rapidly but was partially conscious up to the last moment. He had nothing to say, however, and gave no sign of repentance for his actions of Saturday.

At 7 o'clock last Monday a hackman drove up to the door of Mrs. Richter's home on Richmond street, and announced the news of her husband's death.

To a Daily Press reporter, Mrs. Richter said, "I was almost overcome when I heard the news, and it is so hard to think that a man could be influenced by bad men, and be made to do such a thing. It was very hard to get along with him, but it will be harder to live on without him. No one can imagine what it is until they have lived through it all. Oh! it was something awful! He never left anything for the support of the children, and I took in washing and ironing, and cleaned houses for people living in the neighborhood, and clothed the children myself. He wasted his money in drink, and often came home drunk. I was able sometimes to keep him home from the saloon for two or three weeks at a time, and then some one would say to him, 'Richter why don't you come down town any more? I wouldn't let a woman rule over me in that way, why don't you take her by the throat and blow her brains out'"

At this point in her story, Mrs. Richter's grief became uncontrollable, and she burst into a torrent of tears, but she soon continued, however, and said:

"He could not stand this and would again visit the saloon."

Sunday evening little Annie Richter accompanied by her uncle, Ernest White, of New York, went to the hospital and spent a short time with Mr. Richter, who at the time was suffering badly. The injured man told his daughter that he was very sorry that he had done it, but he did what the men told him to do; he also told her that if he had followed the teachings of his mother he would never have come to it. His last words to his daughter were 'I wish I had never done it."

Mrs. Richter is improving, but is not in condition to do any work. She has been unable to sleep since the time of the shooting and at night, as she says, "I go to sleep for two or three minutes, and wake up in a fright seeing someone standing near pointing a revolver at me."

Mr. Richter left his wife the society benefits, already mentioned in The Daily Press, and a few dollars found in his pockets. She has been renting the house, in which she is now living, by the month, and said that she would continue to do the same for a few months longer. Mrs. Richter is doing nicely, and will recover from her wound in a short time.

Richter's funeral will be held on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock at his late home, 211 Richmond street.

BOROUGH DEMOCRATS MEET.

An Opposition Ticket is Placed in the Field for the Coming Election.

The Democratic primary was held in the basement of the school house on Saturday evening. The meeting was called to order by D. D. Smalley, who was elected permanent chairman, and D. J. Carney, secretary. Nominations for candidates for Councilmen brought forth the names of Clarence L. Murphy and George Kireh. Mr. Murphy declining, Joseph A. Blatz's name was substituted. For constable, three years, Thomas Meloher was unanimously nominated. D. D. Smalley and Harry H. Conklin were named for Justices of the Peace. For Commissioners of appeal: R. H. McCullough was nominated for three years; W. J. Carney, two years; and A. F. Marsh, one year. No nominations were made for Surveyors of Highways or Pound Keepers, the matter being left to the following committee: D. D. Smalley, A. F. Marsh, J. B. Newman. The committee will also make out the necessary appropriations that must be placed on the ticket. The meeting then adjourned.

ASSAULTED ON THE ROAD

WM. FLASHBACH KNOCKED DOWN BY THREE UNKNOWN MEN.

He Attempted to Punish One of His Supposed Assailants, and Was Arrested. He Could Not Swear to His Identity.

William Flashbach, of East Front street, was walking along Richmond street, Saturday night, when three men sprang at him and sent him rolling in the gutter. The assault, he states, was utterly without cause. The three men went down to Front street and walked in the direction of the centre, of the town, while Flashbach followed in the rear. On Front street, he saw the man that he thought had knocked him down, and struck him with his umbrella. The man protested against such action, and Roundsman Rockafellow arrested Flashbach.

Flashbach appeared before City Judge DeMeza, this morning, and the young man he had struck, William Schwick, was also present. Flashbach thought he was the same one, but was not willing to swear to it, so Schwick was released. Sentence was suspended on Flashbach.

THE LAST SAD RITES.

Miss Jemima Hillyer and W. Lance Tilsworth Laid at Rest.

The funeral services of the late Miss Jemima Hillyer were held Saturday afternoon at two o'clock, from the house 30 Duer street.

The attendance of friends, including members of the Women's Relief Corps No. 10, and L. W. Scarrell's Bible class, of which the decedent was a member, was very large.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes conducted the services, and spoke highly of the Christian life of the departed, and of her faithfulness in attending the church services. At the close of the remarks an impressive selection was rendered by E. E. Runyon and Miss Bessie Blair.

Interment was in Plainfield avenue cemetery.

There was a very large attendance of relatives and friends at the funeral services of the late W. Lance Tilsworth, which were held at 2:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon from the house, 518 Watchung avenue.

Rev. Dr. Lewis read appropriate Scripture selections and made a few remarks. The closing prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Livermore. The floral tributes consisted of a handsome pillow from Jerusalem Lodge, No. 31, F. and A. M., a crown from the Royal Arcanum and several small bunches of choice cut flowers from friends. During the service selections were rendered by Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, E. E. Runyon, Miss Nancy Randolph and D. E. Titsworth.

The pall bearers were Joseph Titsworth, Arthur Titsworth, George Titsworth, E. Wood Titsworth, David E. Titsworth and J. D. Spicer.

Interment was in Hillside cemetery.

A NEW SCHOOL BUILDING

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION PROVIDE FOR ONE AT THE MEETING.

It Will Cost $20,000, and the Money Will be Raised on Bond and Mortgage—Other Routine Business Transacted.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Education was held Monday evening at the pleasant home of F. C. Lounsbury, secretary of the Board, on Plainfield avenue, instead of at the High School building as usual. Messrs. Probasco, Lovell, Lounsbury, Jenkins and Abbott and Superintendent Maxson were present. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, and a list of audited bills were read and ordered paid.

The question of the new primary school building, to be erected on the property recently purchased by the Board at Berckman and East Second streets, was discussed, and the designs for the new building drawn by ten different architects were exhibited. After the members of the Board had examined the drawings and learned the merits of the different designs, Mr. Lovell introduced the following resolution:

Whereas: On inquiry and report, the Board is satisfied that the location of a new public school building upon the corner of Berckman and East Second streets, will cost the sum of $20,000, and

Whereas: The Board is persuaded of the necessity that such building shall be constructed, and as it is not possessed of sufficient funds to meet the expense thereof. Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Board will borrow on bond and mortgage upon said ground and building, for the erection of such structure, the sum of $20,000, and that the Finance Committee be instructed to immediately ratify and effect the borrowing of said sum when required.

The resolution was unanimously passed without discussion.

Superintendent Maxson read his report, which gave an account of the annual convention of the National Association of School Superintendents, that he attended last month. The report was an interesting and instructive one, and was attentively listened to by the members of the Board, and on motion it was received with thanks and filed.

President Probasco then stated that the postmaster, J. M. Hetfield, had agreed to place letter boxes in front of all the public schools, if the Board would provide the necessary posts to support the boxes. He had just received a communication, President Probasco said, from Postmaster Hetfield stating that the posts, placed in position and painted, would cost $6.50. Mr. Lovell then moved that the President request Mr. Hetfield to place the posts and boxes in position at once. After ordering several bills paid, if found correct, the Board adjourned subject to the call of the president.

The new building is to contain eight rooms, and will relieve the over crowded condition of the primary grades in the other buildings.

The annual reports of the Board for 1895 were distributed at the meeting, as were the financial reports for the month of February. The latter was as follows:

Balance February 1st..... $24,481.33

RECEIPTS:

After the regular business had been transacted the Board of Education proceeded to consider the plans submitted in competition for the new primary building in the First ward. Ten plans were submitted, all under a non de plume, so that the authors were unknown to the Board.

After much consideration three plans were selected as the best: those signed "Romanesque," "L" Ecole Modern" and "Cuibono." The sealed envelopes having been opened, the authors were found to be Patton & Firth, C. P. Karr, and David B. Provoost. At some future meeting of the Board these architects will appear before them and present the special merits of their plans, when the Board will make a final selection of one plan as the be t.

A DOUBLE TRAGEDY.

J. RICHTER ATTEMPTS TO MURDER HIS WIFE AND SHOOT HIMSELF.

Quarrelled About Money—Her Wounds Were Not Serious, But He Lies in the Hospital at the Point of Death.

With starvation and ruin staring him in the face, John Richter first attempted to murder his wife and then tried to commit suicide by shooting himself with the same revolver.

Ever since the first of February John Richter and his family have been living at 211 Richmond street in the second row of houses known as the "Eight Sisters," between Second and Third streets. Richter is a German and has lived in Plainfield for the last twenty years, where he is well known as a shoemaker. The shooting occurred at the house about 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. Pistol shots were heard and the next moment Mrs Richter, followed by her children, came rushing out of the front door and took refuge at the home of their neighbor, A. D. Jennings, of 215 Richmond street. Mrs. Richter was screaming, and there were two bullet holes in the clouk that was thrown about her shoulders. Her speech was incoherent and disconnected. "He is going to shoot the baby! Shoot the baby! He shot me! He shot me!' she cried, as she burst in upon her frightened neighbors.

Kendrun Jennings was sent for a policeman, and he found Sergeant Kiely. That officer and Patrolman Saunders reached Richter's house at the same time, and Chief Grant soon joined them. An investigation was made and Richter, shot in three places, was found in a back room on the second story. Drs. Murray and Hedges were called, while the officers made a brief examination to learn the nature of his injuries. The ambulance was sent for and carried the injured man to the hospital.

The circumstances of the attempted murder and the causes that led up to it were told to the officers of the law and a Daily Press reporter by Mrs. Richter herself when she had returned from the hospital after having her wound dressed.

When he came home at dinner time she asked him for some money. He replied that he had none. "I must have some for the baby; you had some last night." He still refused and nothing more was said for a time. After their scanty meal, Richter laid down on one of the beds upstairs. When he came down he said that he was going down town, and she replied that she was going too. Richter went upstairs again and then came into the sitting room where his wife was waiting. "Are you going to town?" he asked, and when she replied that she was going if he did, he seized her roughly by the coat, for she was all prepared to go out, and cried 'Then you will have to die.'" He whipped a revolver from his pocket and fired. Her back was partially toward him and the bullet struck her on the right shoulder, inflicting a slight flesh wound. She ran into the hall, when he fired a second time, the bullet passing through her coat, but missing her. She fled for protection to the neighbors, screaming to her ten-year-old daughter Annie to bring the baby. There are four children—Annie, ten years old; Paul, five years old; Willie, three years old; and little Fredia, who was born only last June. Annie is a brave little girl, and went back after her baby sister.

To a Daily Press reporter, she told a simple, straightforward story of how she went back and started to carry the little child away. Her father saw her and shot again, missing her but burning her face with powder. She managed to escape. Her story of the quarrel was somewhat more lengthy than her mother's and gave several details that had not before been mentioned. When her mother asked for money, she said, her father told her that the dollar that he had given her was enough for the week. Her mother begged for some money to buy bread, and Annie thought he gave her a little. When her father asked her where she was going, the reply was, "None of your business."

Mrs. Richter was taken to the hospital in a hack and while she was absent, little Annie seemed to be the only one that could sooth the baby.

The house where the tragedy occurred, is an ordinary two story and attic frame house with three rooms on each floor and a loft above. The front room Richter had made his workroom until about a week ago. The rooms were sparely furnished downstairs except the sitting room, while the bedrooms were more homelike. It was in one of these, the right hand rear room, where Richter tried to end his own life. The only trace of it was a few drops of blood on the floor and rug and on the sheets of the bed.

Mr. and Mrs. Richter both came to this country from Germany and were married in Plainfield eleven years ago last February. Their married life has been one continued round of disputes and quarrels. Although neither is known as a quarrelsome person, they never seemed to be able to live peacefully together. He has deserted her four times, the longest time being from April 11th to January 20, nine years ago. In speaking of it Mrs. Richter said in her broken English, "I never asked for money, but took in washing and kept boarders to support myself and children. I gave up my bed to the boarders and slept for many nights on a board, and that board is up stairs now. At last he returned and wanted to come back, and promised to be a good husband and never listen to the bad men again." At this point in her story Mrs. Richter's feelings overmastered her and she wept as if her heart would break. The first time he ran away he took $35 of their savings with him, and returned after three days with only $4 left. Two other times he ran away, once for twenty days and the other time for twenty four days. The last time happened eleven months ago. They have been living on East Third street next to Thorn's laundry, and moved to their home on Richmond street, several weeks ago.

Mrs Richter is thirty seven years old, short and not very stout. She has two brothers in this country, one in New York and the other on a farm near Springfield. Another sister and brother of Mrs. Richter still live in the "Fatherland."

John Richter came here about twenty years ago and was employed first at Solomon Flagg's cobbler shop at the corner of East Front and Church streets. After seven years spent here, Richter opened a shop near the Potter Press Works. About nine years ago Richter entered the employ of Doane & Van Arsdale and remained with Mr. Doane, moving with him, until last January when he started a shop of his own in the same store with Charles Yaeger on West Front street. He moved it to his house on Richmond street and then to Madison avenue and, when he shot himself, was just considering the question of a new location for his shop. He was an excellent workman and managed to lay by quite a little, owning several lots at Netherwood at one time, and being a member of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association. During the last year he has been particularly unfortunate and has had very little work to do.

During the last two years Richter has made two attempts to commit suicide, but each time, as he told T. U. Smith, of Deane Gutsell, there has been something strong that seemed to hold him and he couldn't pull the trigger. He has always indulged in liquors to some extent and the last month he has been drinking heavily. It is thought that he was partially intoxicated at the time of the shooting which will perhaps account for shooting at his children as he has always been very fond of them.

In one of his drunken rages, last winter, he drove his wife out of the house at midnight and she wandered about until midnight when the police found her and gave her shelter.

A LEAP YEAR CARD PARTY.

Miss Overton, of Rockview Avenue, Entertains Her Friends at Hearts.

A charming leap year party was given Saturday night by Miss Kathryn Overton, of Rockview avenue, to a number of her friends of Plainfield and Brooklyn. Progressive hearts occupied the attention of the young people for most of the evening, and costly prizes were awarded at the close to the Misses Alice Barlow and Lulu French, and Messrs. Walter Douglass and Edward Waring. Those who enjoyed Miss Overton's hospitality were the Misses Agnes Blair, Lulu French, Hafla VanDeventer, Sarah Douglass, Grace E. Overton, Alice Barlow, and Miss Eddy, Miss Pate, Miss White and Miss Lane, of Brooklyn; the Messrs. Douglass, Waring, Coriell, Petrie, Nevius, Brown, Peek, Gallup, McGee, and the Messrs. Abbey, Richard Edwards and James Edwards, of Brooklyn.

Twenty-Five Years Ago.

At the silver anniversary of the W. B. M. Society, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, last Friday evening, there was a very large attendance. A most interesting programme had been prepared under the direction of Mrs. Peter Wykoff, the president. Miss Libbie Fish recited very impressively the poem, "Only a Chinese Babe." There were also carefully prepared papers read by Mesdames Fish, Middledith, Opdyke and Rand. After the collection, which amounted to $-2, a Russian tea was served.

THIRTY-THREE BAPTIZED.

The Converts of the Revival Meetings Baptized at Mt. Olive Church.

Sunday was a day which will go down in the history of the Mt. Olive Baptist church as a day with the greatest number of baptisms since the church was founded. Thirty-three candidates, all of them converts of the recent revival meetings which have been held in the church came forward to receive baptism at at the hands of the pastor of the church, Rev. P. S. Gibson. The congregation that witnessed the ceremony was one of the largest seen in the church in a long time, every seat being taken and no standing room was available. Last night each one who had been baptized in the afternoon had the right hand of fellowship extended to them by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Gibson.

TWO

NEW YORK NEWSPAPERS

PAY A CLEAR PROFIT

OF OVER

A MILLION DOLLARS

A YEAR EACH.

For the purpose of increasing the circulation of the new York Daily and Sunday Mercury, established 50 years ago, the Mercury Printing Co. offers the best investment in the world to small investors.

Alert investors now have an opportunity to secure, some of the stock of the great enterprise. They can buy New York Mercury stock at the very low price of $10 per share. The Mercury Printing Company is incorporated under the laws of the state of New York. The capital is $500,000, divided into 50,000 shares of the same par value, $10 each, non-assessable. Stockholders have no individual liability whatever. This stock is a rare chance for a highly profitable security that is certain to pay large dividends and rapidly increase in values. It gives the small investor an equal chance with the capitalist. Any person with a small sum to invest can buy from one share upward at the same price as capitalist buys millions. When one considers the very high prices that stock in other New York newspapers commands, it is apparent that this present opportunity to buy New York Mercury stock at $10 is one of those chances that occur only once in a lifetime, for at the present rate of increase shown in the past six months in the circulation and in the advertising, the stock is absolutely sure to pay enormous dividends and rapidly rise in value.

The advertising receipts of the Mercury have doubled since Jan. 1, 1896, and circulation has increased at the rate of 50,000 per week. April 1, 1896, or the last 3 weeks. Weekly and Sunday editions and is continuing to increase at this rapid rate.

We will send one copy of the Daily and Sunday Mercury free to every share holder until the stock is fully paid for by the assignee. For example, if a subscriber purchases 10 shares of stock he will be entitled to ten copies of the daily and Sunday Mercury free to him or any other address as long as he continues to be a stockholder in good standing. These copies of the paper may be disposed of by subscribers to the capital stock in any way desired by them.

There will be only a limited amount of this stock disposed of to this way. Those who are lucky enough to obtain these shares will find that in a very short time they will be worth 200 per cent. premium.

For further particulars address the Secretary, THE CONSTITUTIONAL CONSTITUTION, NEW YORK MERCURY, 1 Park Row, New York.

As an advertising medium the New York Mercury is unexcelled.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

How They Are Conducted in the German Capital

Voters Divided Into Three Classes—The Mayor Is Selected by the Council and Afterward Accepted by the Government.

[Special Berlin Letter.]

Municipal election in America is something vastly differing from a municipal election in Germany. Not that the interest taken in it by the populace is less; on the contrary, it is a deeper and much more lasting interest in the affairs of the commonwealth which is taken here. Nor are the objects at stake of less importance, and the ambition which impels the candidates here to run the gauntlet of public opinion and to undergo the vicissitudes of a political campaign is fully as great and as lively here as across the water. And it may be believed that the administration of a municipality like Berlin, where an annual budget of close on to 100,000,000 marks or about $25,000,000 lies, so far as its disbursement is concerned, in the hands of the city council and its magistrate, furnishes plenty of opportunity to sterling talent and varied administrative ability. There is, in fact, a deal of similitude between municipal conditions here and those of a fast-growing American city—inasmuch as the fact of a rapid growth and a ceaseless expansion of territory must be taken into account. No, the principal difference lies in the material that offers itself for municipal candidacies.

As to the prevailing methods here I am not going to act as their advocate, but shall content myself with stating the facts. The body of the population is divided into three parts—electors of the first, second and third class. These classes are graded solely according to their varying capacity of paying taxes. In other words, the great majority of electors forming the third (or lowest) class are those paying a minimum of taxes. Paupers, criminals, non-taxpayers are excluded from the right to vote. The third class comprise, therefore, the working classes, the small merchants and trades people. The second class are the moderately well-to-do, paying medium-sized taxes, and the first class is made up of a small body of large employers, capitalists, etc., paying the maximum rate of taxes. The injustice of this system of popular representation—based purely according to the material possessions of each class—is the fact that each class elects exactly the same number of members to the municipal council, while it is undeniable that the first class is not over one per cent. of the population as a whole, and the third class is about 53 per cent., yet each class is apportioned as over 33 1-3 per cent. of representation.

But with this system, open to just criticism, it is nevertheless true that excellent results are obtained, the reason being that the candidates offering themselves at the polls for election into the council are, with rare exceptions, men of unimpeachable honor, of ability, and of a ready disposition to sacrifice their time and best efforts for the common good of the city. For it must be understood that, with the exception of the small number of salaried members of the magistrate—or higher municipal body) the Berlin aldermen, as well as those of all other German cities, are not paid, either directly or indirectly, for their services.

It is the honor which pays them, for here it is really an honor to be a "stadtverordneter" or municipal delegate.

And while it cannot be said that the first step for a beginner (German politician to take is to be elected into the city council—since the majority of German politicians never start in such a body—it is true at least that to be or to have been a member of a German city council is a certificate testifying to a man's intellectual and moral worth and to his public-spiritedness. Again, the fact that the three classes of electors have each their own candidates brings out a body of men elected into the council which is very much more varied in its make-up than could be the case in any American city under our prevailing system of election. I will illustrate this by mentioning that just at present—and for some years past and to come—there are three such men of world-wide reputation and of diametrically opposite tendencies serving as Berlin aldermen as Prof. Virchow, the renowned anthropologist and physiologist; Prof. von Treitschke, the historian (both being professors in Berlin university), and Singer, the noted leader of the socialists and member of the reichstag for a score of years past. Of course they were elected by different classes of electors, but each of the three in his own way does much for the good of the city and its citizens. Singer, for instance, has successfully withstood the growing plutocratic tendencies of the administration, and the excellence of the Berlin free public schools is, in some measure, due to his untiring efforts. Virchow, on the other hand, who is politically a radical liberal, has done an immense amount of good for Berlin's hygiene and for everything else which tends for the physical benefit of the population, lending the weight of his scientific opinion and vast experience to that object.

Von Trietschke again has fostered esthetic and scientific aims in the administration of the city, the planning and execution of new public streets, trees, parks, public baths, instruction, etc. I might, however, extend the list of names among the members of the council of those who have exceptional gifts one way or another, such as Hobrecht, the architect who for 40 years or over has lent the city the benefit of his ripend judgment. It is owing to men like Hobrecht that Berlin has grown into the handsomest city in the world, barring alone Paris.

Another man who has done much—probably more than any other single individual—for Berlin's progress and municipal prosperity is its late mayor —Von Forckenbeck. Mayors of towns and cities in Germany, however, are not elective officers, but are chosen by the council and magistrate jointly, and the government is then asked to approve this choice. Usually the government does approve the choice, but only after careful inquiry into the character and the antecedents of the man proposed, and not infrequently the chosen one is then rejected. Apointment to the mayoralty is for a term of years, and may then be, and usually is, renewed. So that, in any case, a mayor, if he be of the right stuff, can accomplish quite a deal, inaugurate a series of reforms, bend and shape municipal administration in new ways, and leave the impress of his work on a city for generations to come. His position is a salaried one, and salaries for mayors run, in fact, quite high when compared with the salaries of the common run of government officials. Salaries of 10,000 marks in small towns and of 20,000 to 30,000 in large cities are not uncommon. In this German mayors differ radically from the members of their municipal councils, though the term of office of the latter is also a lengthy one and, unless the services rendered were unsatisfactory or a considerable change has taken place in the political complexion of his elective district, is usually followed by reelection.

Aldermen often serve for ten, twenty even thirty years. Von Forckenbeck was a man of genius in his line, clearly seeing the vast possibilities in store for Berlin and shaping his whole policy all along in conformity with his conviction that Berlin was to become, in fact as well as in name, the imperial city of New Germany. Hence his programme was not retrenchment, niggardly parsimony and hand-to-mouth financiering for the city in all those things which were necessary in building up its future greatness, but rather lavish, generous expenditure in creating the present admirable system of street cleaning, parks, water supply, sanitation and sewerage. The establishment of the "Rieselfelder"—the 30 square miles of sewerage farms—at a cost of 120,000,000 marks, of the magnificent abattoirs, central and branch market halls, of the filtering of the drinking water, of the municipal gas works and electric light plant, were also mainly due to his influence, though the enlightened conservatism of the council was indispensable to him in this as in anything else. Besides these monumental tasks successfully planned or executed by him during his long incumbency of the office—and any single one of which would suffice for the everlasting glory of an ordinary kind of mayor—there are many handsome statues, single public buildings, etc., which also testify to this extraordinary man's signal abilities as an executive and administrator. In German city administration it is nothing out of the common, yet I will mention the fact that during Forckenbeck's entire administration, although an aggregate of about $1,000,000,000 or more or $250,000,000, was paid into and out of the city coffers, not a cent of it was misappropriated and nothing directly wasted. PLAYED HOOKEY.

Two Borough Boys Worry Their Parents by Suddenly Disappearing.

There was great consternation in the borough that Friday, caused by the disappearance of Amos Stout, aged twelve years, and Gus Kirch, aged ten years. They started for school at noon but did not go, owing to a desire on their part to play hookey. After school they did not return and their families began to worry about them. Supper time came, but the boys were nowhere to be found. Early in the evening the police in the borough and city were notified to look out for the missing youngsters. In the meantime the interested families began a search, assisted by the neighbors, but their efforts seemed fruitless. About ten o'clock Firman Long, of 37 Summit avenue, was returning home, when he discovered Gus Kirch jumping a fence on Grandview avenue. He caught him and took him home, and a half hour later Amos Stout was caught near the same place. Both were unwilling to go home, fearing the rod which might be applied. This is the second time that they have run away, but their experience led them to be*lieve that home is the best place.*

Reports Heard From Those Who Are Raising Money for a Carpet.

It might just as well have rained Friday as far as the sociable at the First M. E. church was concerned, for everybody thought it was going to, and the attendance suffered in consequence. A delightful programme had been arranged, but all those who were to take part in it, except J. R. Joy, were unable to be present. George R. Cornwell made a few remarks at the start, saying that they were like the young lady at the dance who, when asked if her dance-card was filled, replied that it took more than two pieces of cake and a plate of ice cream to fill it. Mr. Joy was introduced as the cake and read two humorous poems, and then Mr. Cornwell filled the place of the cream. In a rather novel manner he received the reports from the subscription cards issued to raise the necessary $400 to pay for the carpet. Despite the small number, $150 was received, and a number of cards were not heard from.

The evening closed with doughnuts, coffee and conversation. The first two were served by the Misses Day, Davies, Teel, Davis, Chandler, Douglass and Barnes, and Messrs. Robert and Alvah Davis, D. S. Dunavan, W. F. Cornwell, Will Simmons and Garfield Pike. The conversation was passed around by everybody. The ladies in charge of the social, which was given by the Ladies' Aid Society, were kept busy in the kitchen. They were Mrs. D. E. Davis, chairman; Mrs. G. R. Cornwell, Miss Rachael Day and Miss Fisher.

LELAND AVENUE SURPRISE.

The Friends of Miss Dora Frederickson Call on Her Unexpectedly.

A pleasant surprise party was given to Miss Dora Frederickson at her home on Leland avenue, last evening, by a number of her young friends. The event was arranged by the Misses Caroline Erickson and Lizzie Burrows. Dancing was the principle pastime of the evening. Those present were as follows: The Misses Annie Frederickson, Lizzie Burrows, Caroline Erickson, Mamie Nelson, Christina Lorenson, Caroline Burrop, Pauline Shimmin, Annie Burrop, Maggie Stilsed, Dora Frederickson and Ida Mirs; Messrs. Richard Kissam, Ben Frederickson, James Erickson, Alfred Leiwold, Harry Noble, George Reid, Jeppie Lorenson, Marins Lorenson, Christian Lorenson and Louis Henry.

FIRST FLAG FLOATED.

Charles Noel Flys the Cuban Flag at This Country's Recognition.

From the residence of C. J. Noel, of Netherwood, now floats the first flag of the Cuban Republic that has been raised in honor of the granting of belligerent rights to the Cubans. Being in connection with the movement Mr. Noel was duly notified by telegraph from Washington of the news and on the receipt of which, Mrs. Noel at once unfurled the banner to the breeze. The flag is composed of five bars, three blue and two white, at the left hand on top of which is a triangle of red, a little over one-third of the length of the flag, and upon which is a white star occupying one-third of the triangle.

TOLD DIFFERENT STORIES

BUT OUT OF THE BABLE OF VOICES FRANK WAS FOUND GUILTY.

The Essex Street Boarding House Scrap Aired in the City Police Court This Morning—Their English All Mixed Up.

The misunderstanding between the Essex street boarding house keeper and the boarder, which was described at the time in The Daily Press, was thoroughly aired in court Saturday morning. From the testimony given there must have been two scraps, for the complainant, Charles Ramsberger, and his boarder, Andrew Frank, told stories that did not agree in many points.

The charge against Frank was a long one, and included door and window smashing, indecent language and fighting. Frank represented himself with the aid of an interpreter, for his English was rather unrecognizable. H. B. Reed, of Reed & Coddington, represented the Ramsberger family.

Mrs. Ramsberger was the first to tell her story. She said that her boarder had been drunk on Saturday and Sunday but did not grow abusive until Sunday night about 8 o'clock. Then he used such language that Mrs. Ramsberger held up her hands in horror when she told about him. According to her testimony he followed her upstairs, calling her names and swearing. He went into his room and began to handle a revolver, then he went down stairs and pounded on the table. The husband and wife descended to the kitchen, and there Frank broke a cane over the door and then belabored Ramsberger on the back with it. Ramsberger and his wife "very gently" pushed their boarder out of doors and locked the door. Then Frank smashed the panels of the door with a billet of wood and broke the glass in the window, cutting his face, at least, so Mrs. Ramsberger said.

Theodore VanHorn, a visitor the family in the house was the next witness and told substantially the same story. Of the forced exit of Frank, VanHorn said: "They took him along very gently, much more so than I would." But the witness dodged the question just how gentle they were

The same story was repeated with variations by Charles Ramsberger who became somewhat excited over it. He is a German, and in the excitement, the mother tongue tried to gain the mastery. He painted Frank's character in flaming colors, and exclaimed in the climax of his speech, "If he is drunk he will do anythings, if he is sober he will run for a boy! I took him by the neck, gave him a couple of punches and pushed him out." Then followed what he would like to have done, told in true jingo style. Miss Maggie Hauser also saw the scrap and described it. She owned up having filled an empty beer bottle with tea.

Frank was next put on the stand, and declared the bottle was emptied by her. Excitement changed his English into German, and he jumped up and down as he tried to explain his case to the Judge. According to him, not a naughty word had passed his lips, while Ramsberger and his wife were just the contrary. He gave a sad account of his exit, and claimed that the cuts on his face were made by Mrs. Ramsberger's nails. There was a general testimony by all in concert, with here and there a solo part, that was finally closed by Judge DeMeza, who adjudged Frank guilty, and made the punishment a fine of $5, or ten days in jail. The fine was paid.

WINS HER FIRST CASE.

New Jersey's First Woman Lawyer Starts Well on Her Career.

Miss Mary Philbrook, who is a frequent visitor and well known in this city, appeared in the Second District Court, Jersey City, Thursday morning, for the first time in her legal career, prepared to argue the case of J. Hughes & Sons, who are being sued for failure to carry out a contract for selling repairs to Percy A. McGeorge's house.

Miss Philbrook was on hand bright and early, and so were a great many curious persons who came to hear the first woman lawyer of New Jersey argue a case. They were disappointed. George Ryerson, the opposing counsel, failed to appear and was nonsuited.

Of course, everybody was disappointed, the court officials included. Miss Philbrook received many congratulations, and left the court room soon after.

It is a harmless substitute* for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have a few more medical supplies what is known as regular practice, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

MISER LEAVES A FORTUNE.

His Will Gives Nothing to the Woman Who Cared for Him.

By search made in an old black trunk it was learned recently that Watson B. Prentiss, who died in South River on February 16th, was worth about $70,000 instead of being a poor man, as all his friends supposed.

For thirteen years Prentiss had lived with a Mrs. Dunham, who, believing him to be poor, cared for him without receiving any money. Prentiss was helpless from old age and had not gone out of the house in months before his death. At times he hinted to Mrs. Dunham that he had a little money and that when he died she should get it all. The only known relative Prentiss had was a brother, Thomas Prentiss, who lived in New York. A few days ago it was learned tha Prentiss had left a will, filed with a lawyer in New York, leaving all his property to his brother and two second blecss. Mrs. Dunham was not mentioned.

In searching the man's property his trunk was opened. In it were found thirty $1,000 bonds having unpaid coupons for from fifteen to seventeen years, in addition to deeds for property in Connecticut worth $10,000, a large sum of money and other valuable papers aggregating in all about $70 000. Thomas Prentiss has filed a caveat against the probate of the will.

SURVIVING VICTIMS RECOVERING.

Miss Bertha Giles and the Dunbar others Considered out of Danger.

Nelson and Ralston Dunbar and Miss Bertha Giles, who were injured in the accident in which Miss Laura Giles lost her life, at a crossing of the Pennsylvania Railroad in Stelton, Wednesday night, are recovering. Bertha Giles, who is at the home of her grandfather, in Stelton, was reported dead at two o'clock yesterday afternoon, but the rumor was later denied by Dr. N. Williamson, who is caring for her. He says that the girl is seriously injured, and that her condition has been made worse by her grief for her dead sister, but he has every reason to believe that she will recover.

The two brothers, who are in the Wells Memorial Hospital, in New Brunswick, are still in a critical condition, though their recovery is considered probable. They have not yet been told that Laura Giles is dead. County Physician Carroll gave a permit for burial, deeming an inquest unnecessary. The funeral services for for the dead girl were held in the Stelton Baptist church, at half past two o'clock this afternoon

Red Men's Ball Masque.

Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque, No. 193, of the Improved Order of Red Men, met Wednesday evening. The committee on the second anniversary reported that they proposed holding a grand ball masque, entertainment and Indian peace dance on the evening of April 16th at the Crescent Rink, on which occasion many prominent tribes of New Jersey will be represented. If Columbus could be in the city that evening and witness the beautiful array of costumes he would be compelled to say that Plainfield was indeed in the hands of the primitive Red Men. Tickets can be secured from any of the members at $1 each, including supper.

WENT OFF SMOOTHLY.

THE BOROUGH REPUBLICANS NOMINATE FOR THE COMING YEAR.

Mayor Hegeman Thought That $3,000 Was Ample for Borough Purposes, and That Sum Was Appropriated by them.

The North Plainfield Republican primary meeting held last Friday in the basement of the Public School was largely attended.

Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., called the meeting to order, and Hon. Chas. A. Place was chosen chairman, and Borough Clerk J. K. Arnold was selected as secretary.

The following nominations were then made, the secretary casting the ballot for each:

Councilmen, John G. McLoughlin, L. B. Woolston; Justices of the Peace, H. S. Thomas, J. A. Karet; Surveyors of Highways, J. H. Lunger, J. H. Worth; Poundkeepers, S. Taynor, P. Eaganey; Commissioners of Appeal, R. B. Carson, *three years; J. P. Em*mons, two years; Isiah Coriell, one year; Constable, three years, Peter Hansen.

Next came the amount of money to be appropriated. Mayor Hegeman stated that $5 000 was raised last year, which was $3,500 in excess of the year previous. In view of the fact that the borough had received their share of apportionment from the township when the two were divided, he thought that $3,000 would be ample to meet all the expenses. He then suggested that the amount for borough purposes be $3,000. It was so ordered. For roads $3,000 was appropriated. In connection with this Mr. Hegeman said he thought that this amount would be sufficient. Last year it was $4,000, but the money received from the township would help out in this department. He did not think it wise to specify any certain amount for any particular part of the borough, such as was done last year in the case of Somerset street.

For the support of the poor, $1,500 was named. Overseer of the Poor David R. Weaver then stated that he thought that the above amount would really be needed. There was a division in regard to the amount for the Board of Health. Last year the sum was $500, but the Corporation Counsel, C. A. Reed, thought that they should have $600 this year, as the board had been to a considerable expense of late. Dr. Carman thought the same, but N. B. Smalley, another member of the board, said he thought that $500 was enough. A motion by Mr. Reed that $600 be appropriated was lost, and an amendment by N. B. Smalley, that $500 be raised, prevailed.

On motion of Mr. Reed, the chairman appointed B. S. Braider, P. A. Emmons and H. N. Spencer a committee to fill vacancies if there should be any. The meeting then adjourned.

New Market Nominations.

The following are the Republican nominations in Piscataway township: Town clerk, Charles S. Day; freeholder, Calvin Drake; town committee, John Sebring; surveyors of highways, Albert L. Boice, Samuel S. Giles; overseer of poor, John C. Morris; commissioner of appeal, Henry Hummer; constable, Z. P. Osmun. Appropriations: Small bridges, $400; support of poor, $1,000; roads, $4,000.

AN EVENING OF MUSIC.

MONROE AVENUE CHAPEL MEMBERS ENTERTAINED BY YOUNG MEN.

Will Runyon Indulges in a Number of Topical Songs and Receives the Applause of His Auditors—The Other Numbers.

A very good attendance greeted the first number on the programme rendered in Monroe Avenue chapel last Friday, under the auspices of the Young Men's Association. The throng was an enthusiastic one, and they gave the entertainment the hearty applause that it deserved. Blanchard Randolph, the president of the Association, acted as master of ceremonies. The programme opened with a pleasing selection by the orchestra, which was composed of first violins, E. Higbm, Dr. Gaston, Arthur Mosher; second violins, Mr. Henderson, W. V. Moy; cello, Dr. J. F. Berg; clarionet, James Hewitt; cornet, Miss Berg; trombone, Garrett Dunham; accompanist, Howard Case. A mandolette from the Lotos Glee Club, composed of Charles H. Angleman, Willard M. Miner, W. E. MacClymont and Raymond A. McGee, next rendered "We Meet Again Tonight" in a most artistic manner. "Three Little Darkeys" was then given as an encore, which caused a general laugh. When President Randolph announced a song to be rendered by William N. Runyon, that popular young man was given a rousing welcome. He sang "The Letter Gal," but like Oliver Twist, the audience "wanted more," and it took two more selections, "Standing on the Corner" and "She Wanted Something to Play With," to satisfy them. An instrumental duet by Miss Berg and G. T. Dunham, was much enjoyed, and then Clarence Mills rendered a very difficult selection on his violin with pleasing effects. Miss Grace Carroll's sweet clear voice was very effective in a Scotch song, and loud applause was accorded her. The first part closed with a delightful instrumental trio by Miss Berg, Dr. Berg and Mr. Dunham.

Part second was opened by a pretty selection by the orchestra and then Will Runyon took his turn. That most rediculous of songs, "The Irish Jubilee" was given in a manner that drew tears from the audience, that is, from laughing so hard. He responded to the loud applause by giving the song for which he is so justly famous "And the Parrot Said." It was not until he had also sung "The Band Played On" that he was allowed to escape. "Annie Laurie" and a "Slum ber Song" were charmingly sung by the quartette. Another well rendered violin solo by Clarence Mills, and a pleasing vocal selection by Miss Alice Carroll followed, and the programme was concluded by a piano solo by Miss Charlotte Aldrich.

ELIZABETH'S BIG BANQUET.

Business Men's Dinner a Gathering of Representative and Eloquent Citizens.

The business mens's dinner, held last Friday in the Drake Opera House, Elizabeth, by the Elizabeth Board of Trade, was the most successful affair of this character ever attempted in that city. More than two hundred of its prominent business and professional men participated.

To accommodate the company a platform was erected over the seats in the orchestra and circle of the large auditorium of the Opera House. The five long tables were arranged so that the one at which the toastmaster and the speakers sat faced the others. The interior of the theatre was decorated with flags, bunting, plants, exotics, etc., with prettily arranged electric light effects.

Peter Agenoll, president of the Board of Trade, acted as toastmaster. Henry H. Isham, former president of the New Jersey Agricultural Society, responded to the toast "Elizabeth, Present and Future." In response to the toast, "The City of Elizabeth," Mayor J. C. Rankin spoke. "Ships and Shipyards," was responded to by Lewis Mixon. Comptroller A. B. Carlton responded to "Finances and Taxation." "Our City, Its Development," was responded to by Judge P. H. Gilhooly. "Our New Factories" was responded to by Robert S. Rudd. Thomas F. McCormick responded to the toast, "Law and Lawyers."

J. Fred MacDonald was the only representative present from the Plain field Board of Trade.

The Legislature.

Before election the cry was Reform. Every question was to be made subservient to the great question of morals, Judiciary and all else was second; but now, since election, what has become of the "Anti-Gambling Amendment," the Bosses from Governor down to the immaculate Senator from Union? How easily the whole question is side-tracked. Of course, it's all in the interest of the promises made by the Republican party before election. They called it morals and reform. J. E. M.

Activity Appreciated.

The quickness with which the fire department responded to the alarm Thursday morning was greatly appreciated by Charles H. Hand, at whose home the fire was, and he presented the Firemen's Relief Association with a check for $5.

BIG BICYCLE DEALERS.

The Frank L. C. Martin Bicycle Company Getting Ready for Business.

Enterprise and industry have always been a winning combination for a business house and there is not a better example of it than in the great success of Plainfield's oldest and most reliable bicycle dealers, the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company. In 1889, when the bicycle trade was in its infancy and there were only two or three stores in the State, they started. Mr. Martin is considered an authority on cycling and his interest dates back long before he went into business, for it was his enthusiasm over the sport that started him as a dealer. His popularity has grown ever since and it has reached a high level as was shown last year by the way that he introduced a wheel, scarcely known, and made it the most popular.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company has made a thorough study of the business and aim only to use and sell the best. This year they will be able to serve their patrons better than ever before, in their Park avenue salesrooms, which is among the finest and best equipped in this part of the country, a pretty display of wheels is now arranged, prominent among which are the Cleveland and Crescent wheels which, as last year, will be their leaders. The excellent satisfaction they gave last year and the strong guarantee, made doubly so by the able manner in which this cycle company looks after all irregularities that happen to appear in the wheels, makes their choice an excellent one. The easy payment system is so arranged that almost anyone can buy a wheel of modern pattern.

This spring Mr. Martin associated himself with Frederick Keer, of Newark, and a branch store has been established in that city, where Mr. Martin spends part of his time.

FIRMLY ESTABLISHED.

Methods of the New Jersey Mercantile Agency Accepted by Merchants.

The New Jersey Mercantile Agency have become firmly established in this city, and are doing effective work for local merchants in the matter of collecting debts that are considered of a poor kind. Nearly all the prominent dealers in all lines of business have become members of the agency, though at first they were a little conservative with reference to accepting the methods of the concern because of the many snide and unreliable organizations who had heretofore secured their money and then never did any work in return. But the methods of the New Jersey Mercantile Agency have been accepted by reason of the fact that those connected with it have proved their responsibility and intention to do what they say they will. The agency has become a permanent institution of the town, and will prove a valuable adjunct in removing so far as possible the bad debt element of the town.

Versatile Mr. Honeyman.

The New Jersey Law Journal has gone back to the editorial charge of A. V. D. Honeyman, of Plainfield, although E. Q. Keasbey and C. L. Borgmeyer will remain as contributors. The Journal is valuable to lawyers, as it gives early reports of New Jersey cases, and it is often interesting to laymen. Many similar publications are very profitable, but the Law Journal is probably not a gold mine. Mr. Honeyman has to run it, and no doubt he assumes the duty cheerfully. He has little to do being occupied only in running newspapers, job printing, politics, temperance, church affairs, special excursions, lectures, law publishing, office-holding and a few other odds and ends of employment.—Newark Call.

Taxation Without Benefits.

Residents in the neighborhood of Rock avenue in the borough desires The Daily Press to call attention to the wretched condition of that thoroughfare. They claim it is a disgrace. In connection with the above it might be stated that in the upper part of the borough there are places where in case of fire it would be impossible to reach, and there is no water at hand with which to extinguish it. The people in the locality are taxed just the same, and without this protection it hardly seems as though the tax rate should be equal to that imposed upon others who have this protection and good roads.

A New Game.

A variation of the regular bowling game that is rapidly becoming popular among the bowlers of the Crescent Wheelmen is the head pin game. There is considerable talk of getting up a tournament for March. The game is somewhat different from the regular game and more difficult although not as hard as "cocked hat." There are twelve frames and only one ball is rolled in a frame. If the head pin is not hit, there is no count, otherwise it is the number of pins upset. The highest possible score is 120.

NO REASON FOR THE ACT

A SOMERVILLE YOUTH'S PRECOCIOUS ATTEMPT TO END HIS LIFE.

A Revolver Was the Weapon, But It Was Pointed at an Angle and the Bullet Only Went Through the Skin.

There has been considerable conjecture over the reason of George Watson's suicide and many theories advanced. An attempted suicide that happened in Somerville Tuesday night is still more remarkable, however, in that the young man, who tried to shoot himself, can give no reason for the act.

The man who tried to end his own life so suddenly is a steady, quiet young fellow of about twenty years, named John Dow. He lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dow, at their home in Somerville. John Dow was formerly in the employ of William Hartgrob and then worked at the Somerville Woolen Mills as driver. He left the last place three weeks ago and since then has been doing nothing.

Last Tuesday night Mr. and Mrs. Dow heard the sound of a pistol shot in the direction of their son's room. They found him lying on the floor in an unconscious condition. A physician was called and it was found that he had shot himself in the forehead just above the nose. The revolver must have been pointed at an angle, for the bullet did not penetrate the skull, but glanced along it to the top of the head.

The young man is still suffering from the wound, but the doctor expects that he will recover.

Young Dow cannot give any motive for the act and temporary insanity seems to be the only reason. Dow has never suffered from a similar attack before. He has a number of friends in this city.

Cosgrove & Grant's comedians in "The Dazzler" will be seen at Music Hall next Tuesday evening. This famous organization has toured the country for the last five years, playing in every large city, and it is a company that returns each year to the big cities meeting with renewed favor. It has an elaborate, expensive and complete organization for the production of farce comedy, and it has attained a position second to none in its line. The piece is full of fun, good music and brilliant dancing, and the elegant costumes of the ladies add no little to the general brilliancy. Solos, duets and choruses of the latest and most popular music are intermingled with the fun of the comedians in a most artistic manner, the whole forming an evening's entertainment of exceptional variety and strength.

Augustin Daly's company is announced to appear here on the night of Monday at Music Hall, presenting Shakespeare's glorious comedy, "Mid summer Night's Dream," with all the original settings that made Mr. Daly's revival of it equally famous in New York and London. Its production in this town will be welcome news to many, and many will feel that there ought to be a distinct ovation manifested in some way. A recent observer of its performance said that the audience, after listening to the "Oberon" overture, settled itself comfortably to watch for the result, and to see whether Mr. Daly, who has done so much in his time, had also succeeded in the somewhat delicate task of bolting the pantomime and the mist weather shown us. After seeing the performance there is at least to be said one thing in the most emphatic of ways. Mr. Daly has provided the "Midsummer Night's Dream" with a sumptuous setting. In all that pleases the eye and the ear, too, there has been no stint; the royal raiment, the imposing scenery, and the selections from Mendelssohn's music are admirably suited to give to the public the sensuous beauty that the people demand nowadays.

SUED FOR DAMAGING A FARM.

Tenant White Accused of Having Denuded an Estate at Summit of Trees.

In the Union County Court Thursday a suit for $2,000 damages was begun against Wm. White, of Summit, by L. Aubrey Martin, executor for the Martin estate, in Summit. White is tenant on the estate, for which he pays $250 a year rent. It is claimed that on July 1st, 1895, White pulled up by the roots off the estate and converted to his own use 50 pine trees, 100 lilac bushes, 50 thorn bushes and 100 other trees, shrubs and bushes. The case will be tried at the next term of court.

Going in to Win.

The Rahway Democrats will probably make the following Aldermanic nominations for the spring election: First ward, James Syne; Second ward, George Oliver; Third ward, James Birkett; Fourth ward, Harry Belmer. The Republicans will in all probability renominate Thomas Jardene in the Second and William Howard in the Third. Bruce Vail, it is said, is slated for the Fourth Ward nomination. The Republicans in the First and Fifth wards have as yet given no indication as to who will be their standard-bearers while the same can be said of the Fifth Ward Democrats.

THE WOOING OF BETSEY.

BY ED MOTT.

"How they do it I can't imagine," said the man from over Sinnemahoning way. "How they just lay back and think it all up and then go and do it is a good many rods beyond me. Beats, I mean. Sinnemahoning bears. There are bears and bears, but when you come right down you've got to learn that are bears, they grow only on the Sinnemahone spread. They're always up to date. There are no back numbers among the Sinnemahoning bears. Say, say!

"Is there anybody here who knows Toby Groo—Toby Groo, of Lonesome Hollow? It doesn't matter. Only if anyone wants to buy a nice, snug little place, Toby Groo place is for sale. Easy terms, too. It was put on the market sudden, because Toby Groo went away sudden. All on account o' bears—Sinnemahoning bears. I met Toby when he was going away.

"'Toby,' said I, 'what's up?'

"'It's all up,' said he. 'All up with me!'

"'Meaning Betsey?' said I.

"'The same,' said he.

"'What did it?' said I.

"'Education,' said he.

"'Education?' said I.

"'There's nothing better to have in a district,' said he, 'than education, provided you keep it in bounds. It's all right and proper among the rising generation of human folks, but when you come to introduce it among bears you're carrying it too far. That's my opinion,' said Toby Groo. 'Education what does me up with Betsey. Education among bears' said Toby.

"'And a bear from the Sinnemahone; and when a fellow has the heart to leave the Sinnemahone country, you can make up your mind that he's done up bad. And the Toby Groo place is for sale. And what led up to it was this:

"'The Bricktons are great people over on the Sinnemahone, you know. Great people. Been there for generations. The greatest of the present generation is Betsey, although she isn't very big and isn't twenty years old yet.

"'Takin' her from the ground up,' as Uncle Jabez Fiddler puts it, 'an' considerin' of her pa owner's exemptionness, Sinnemahone can't turn out the ekal o' Betsey Brickton.'

"'I want to give you a pointer on Betsey, though, so that if any of you should be over Toby Groo's place and go over on the Sinnamahone and be somebody, you'll know how to act and keep out o' trouble. Betsey has got a red head. She's a amazing red head. None of your like that red head of Betsey's, and a good many other folks do, but Betsey thinks it's a drawback. She is sensitive about it to a degree. In the solid Sinnemahone tongues, that is setchy as nettles about it. And Betsey is so full o' snap and fire that it isn't safe to mention torchlights, or bricks, or anything of that sort around where Betsey is, for she takes it as a personal slur on her topknot, and the way she flares up and gives it to you is something to remember.

"'It's a cortion to peppersass!' Jabez says.

"'Everybody knows this, and is careful not to get Betsy's red head between them and her if they want to keep on the right side of her. Betsey Brickton is popular, though. So popular that there ain't a young chap on the Sinnemahone that wouldn't be happier than a bear in a bee tree if he could shine up to her and know that Betsey liked it. Young Betsey, they say, when she was the best catch for a girl of all the young fellows on the Sinnemahone spread. Not bad looking, and not much over twenty-two. But he wasn't overpopular. Never was. Uncle Jabez calls 'a leetle nigh in his dealin's,' and rather inclined to get the best end of a dicker, even if he had to stretch a point. All that, old Billy Brickton, Betsey's father, put into his head some time ago that Toby Groo's money would be a good thing to have in the Brickton family, and so he did his best to help Toby get on the right side o' Betsey. Toby being not only willing but more than eager. He was crazy after Betsey.

"'All the same Betsey didn't care for Toby not a little bit, nor for anyone else in particular. Toby kept plastering Betsey to marry him, and her father talked her almost blind about it, until one day, a month or so ago, after Toby had asked her for about the nine hundredth time if she'd marry him, she snapped out:

"'Yes!'

"'When?' said Toby, tickled all but to death.

"'When I find a bear that can spell my name!' said Betsey.

"Then Betsey laughed and laughed, for she judged that she had settled the business then and there, and Toby went away looking mighty glum and way down in the mouth.

"If none o' you fellows knows Barnaby Beestuffer, of Sinnemahone, there is a large waste place in your life. Barnaby Beestuffer is a bear, and whom all Sinnemahoning points with pride. He has genius such as could only have germinated, sprouted, grown and blossomed on the storied Sinnemahone. Barnaby has a little clearing, but he scorns toil, and devotes all his time to taming bears and snakes and coons and wildcats and porcupines, and such indigenous products of the Sinnemahone country, teaching them tricks and capers. About the time that Betsey Brickton told Toby Groo what'd have to happen before she'd marry him there was a show in the hall over to the county seat, and Barnaby went over to see it. One of the actors was an educated pig. It could play cards, spell out things by stringing little blocks on the floor with letters painted on 'em, and do lots of other amazing things. The spelling took Barnaby's eye more than anything else the pig did.

"'Pigs kin l'arn to do that, kin they?' says Barnaby. 'Then I'll bet a farm that b'ar's kin l'arn to do it, too, an' durn quick, an' I'll l'arn 'em!'

"When Barnaby got back home he started right in to teach one of his young bears to spell as well as the learned pig could. One day as he was practising his bear on a lesson, Toby Groo happened to be going by Barnaby's clearing. Barnaby was feeling pretty sore against Toby on account of a little dicker in steers they'd had a few days before, in which Toby had got a good deal the best of Barnaby.

"'What are you doing, anyhow, Barnaby?'

"'Givin' my b'ar his spellin' lesson,' said he.

"'Can you teach him anything you want to?' said Toby.

"'Bet ye I kin!' said Barnaby.

"'Could you teach that bear to spell Betsey Brickton?' said Toby, turning hot.

"Barnaby had heard all about the answer Betsey had given Toby, and knew at once what Toby's little game was.

"'Kin I larn that b'ar to spell Betsey Brickton?' said Barnaby. 'I kin for money.'

"'Can you teach that bear to spell Betsey Brickton for ten dollars?' said Toby.

"'I kin l'arn that b'ar to spell Betsey Brickton fer twenty dollars, spot cash!' said Barnaby.

"'In how long?' said Toby.

"'In two weeks,' said Barnaby.

"Toby tried to get Barnaby to do it for fifteen dollars, but Barnaby stuck out for twenty, and Toby made a bargain with him. When the two weeks were up Toby went over to Barnaby's and was delighted to find that the bear could lay out the blocks that spelled Betsey's name, and could do it in short order without a skip or a break.

"'He danced fer joy an' felt so ripplin' good,' says Barnaby, 'that I feel like kickin' myself all around my clearin' an' then rollin' 'round in a bullpen full of sunpimes cause I didn't sell him I'd het fer her five dollars more!'

"Next day Toby drove to the Brickton place.

"'Betsey,' said he, 'don't you want to ride over and see Barnaby Beestuffer's menagerie? It's worth seeing.'

"Betsey said she'd just as lief as not, and she got in the wagon and went along. She was tickled all to pieces at the cute things the animals and the snakes did, and Toby said:

"'That was pretty hard lines you held me to about marrying, wasn't it, Betsey?'

"'That so?' said Betsey, laughing. 'Oh, I don't know! I didn't want to hurt your feelings by saying "No," plump out!' said she.

"'I suppose you'll stick to what you said about marrying me?' said Toby. 'If you see a bear that will spell your name you'll stick to what you said?'

"'Certainly,' said Betsey. 'Why not?'

"Then Toby nodded to Barnaby and Barnaby nodded to the bear. The bear jumped for a pile of blocks that lay on the ground, and the next second put a big letter B at Betsey's feet.

"'I guess Betsey must 'a begun to smell a rat,' Barnaby says, 'fer when she see the letter B she sort o' turned pale.'

"The bear followed the B with an E and then dropped a T after the E, and kept on putting down letters till he had Betsey spelled out as proper as Betsey could have done it herself. Betsey got cold and shivery, and had to take hold of the fence to steady herself. Toby stood by, grinning and gloating. Then the bear brought out another B. The second name was begun right, and it kept on right. Betsey couldn't keep her eyes off the proceedings, although she saw the bear sealing her fate, letter by letter. B-R-I-C-K-T-O the bear hit down, and Betsey was just beginning to think she grabbed both hands on the fence, and Barnaby jumped to catch her if she fell.

"'Only one letter more!' Toby said, and the strain'll be over, Betsey. And then you and I'll get married!'

"The bear put down the last letter. It wasn't an N. It was a P. And there was spread out in a line of big black letters that any body with half an eye could read, 'BETSEY BRICKTOP!' Betsey's face quit being white in a second, and flashed as red, almost, as her hair was. She turned on Toby, and Barnaby says he's actually saw fire shoot out of her eyes. Nobody knows what she would have done to Toby, because he didn't wait to have it done. He jumped the fence and into his wagon, and away he went. And that is why, as near as the facts can be got at, the Toby Groo place is for sale, terms easy.

"They say, over on the Sinnemahone, that Barnaby Beestuffer, seeing a chance to get even with Toby on the steer dicker, had educated two bears and rung the wrong one in on Toby when the time came. Barnaby doesn't deny it nor admit it, but when anyone charges him with it he just sits and grins. But don't you wonder at those bears, those Sinnemahoning bears?"—N. Y. Sun.

He means that he and I are not of the same opinion, and this is his only way of putting it."

FASHIONS IN RINGS.

In Nero's time there was a fashion prevalent of wearing large rings, the setting of which was carved with the bust of the special divinity who was the wearer's patron.

Paradise rings were greatly worn in Italy during centuries ago. They were very wide and bore on the circumference representations of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden.

When the tomb of the great Emperor Frederick, who died in 1250, was opened in 1780, his coronation ring, set with a beautiful emerald, was still found upon his finger.

The ring of Edward the Confessor is preserved among the royal regalia of Great Britain. For many centuries it was used in the coronation ceremonies of the English kings.

In the Etruscan tombs of northern Italy gold rings have been found made in the shape of a cord, a large knot of intricate pattern forming the principal part of the ornament.

Mourning rings were greatly used in Europe during the 17th century. After the execution of Charles I. his sympathizers in England wore mourning rings in token of their grief.

The scarabaeus, or sacred beetle of the Egyptians, was a favorite subject for a setting in the early Egyptian rings. It was carved in stone, the work often being exquisitely done.

TWO BILLS INTRODUCED.

THE STATE CHARITIES' AID ASSOCIATION WORKING IN TRENTON.

The Union County Branch Meets Here and Transacts Business—They Will Push the Bills—Date of Meeting Changed.

The regular meeting of the Union County Branch of the State Charities Aid Association, was held in All Soul's church, Park avenue, Monday night.

The meeting was called to order by President H. B. Newhall. Rev. Hobart Clark, pastor of All Soul's church and secretary of the Union County Branch, then led in prayer. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

Samuel C. Blockwell, formerly of Elizabeth, tendered his resignation as a member of the branch. The resignation was accepted, as was also that of Mr. Kempshall. of Elizabeth. Miss Frannie L. Hawley, of Elizabeth, was recently elected a member of the Executive committee, and her letter of acceptance was read. Superintendent H. M. Maxson, of the public schools, sent a letter of resignation as a member of the Executive Committee on Children. His reason for resigning was that he was unable to be present at the meetings of the Aid Association as they met on the same night as the Board of Education. The resignation was accepted with much regret.

Mrs. Williamson, of Elizabeth, secretary of the State Aid Association, was present and made a few remarks on the bill which the societies have introduced into the Legislature, regarding the placing of children in the alms houses. An effort is being made to interest Governor Griggs in this measure, so that he will appoint a commissioner to look into the advisibility of the bill. Mr Hall was authorized to correspond with Governor Griggs on the subject.

The Rev. Mr. Atkinson, pastor of Trinity church, of Elizabeth, was elected a member of the branch and later on was elected vice-president, in place of Rev. Mr. McAllister, of Elizabeth. Rev. H. H. Sleeper, of Elizabeth, was also made a member of the branch. Prof. H. M. Maxson's resignation was again taken up, and by vote it was decided not to accept the resignation, as many of those present were in favor of changing the day of meeting. The change of date was left to the Executive committee.

There was considerable talk concerning the institution for the blind which the State Society is endeavoring to build at Englishtown. A bill to appropriate $40,000 for this purpose was drawn up, but the appropriation was cut down to $10,000, and great efforts are being made to secure the passage of the bill with the $10,000 clause to it. A telegram was sent to Hon. Mr. Frances, at Trenton, asking him to do all in his power to get the bill through. The bill came up for second reading in the Legislature today.

A short meeting of the Executive Committee was then held. The minutes of the former meeting were read and approved. The committee decided to change the time of meeting from the first Monday in the month, to the second Tuesday. The meeting then adjourned.

Mr. Smith's Engagement.

The engagement of Frank H. Smith, of Plainfield, N. J., and Miss Marietta Hunter, of this town, has been announced. Many people are popular with a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. Mr. Smith is paymaster of the Pennsylvania road at Plainfield. Miss Bentley is the daughter of Senator H. Court Bentley, who resides on School street.

The above is taken from The West erly, (R. I.,) Sun of a recent issue. Mr. Smith was born and passed his boyhood days in Westerly, and came to this city in 1889 with his parents, who reside at 441 Madison avenue. He is well know here and is an enthusiastic cycler, being a member of the Crescent Wheelmen, of this city, and a century medal hangs from his watch chain. Mr. Smith and his sister, Miss Ernestine Smith, have only recently returned from a visit to their former home in Rhode Island.

Property Transfers.

The following transfers of property have been recorded in the Union County Clerk's office from February 20th to February 26th, inclusive:

John Bess et ux. Plainfield, to Eliza A. Barnett, Brooklyn, lot East Fifth street; Plainfield to Bert. Rogers, N. J. Rice and Mary R. Loomis and husband, North Plainfield, to Minnie M. Simmons, Plainfield, lot Sandford avenue, $1; Minnie M. Simmons, Minnie E. Williams, Plainfield, lot Sandford avenue, $1; Charles Graves et ux. Plainfield, to Charles C. Graves, lot North avenue, Plainfield, $300; Aaron Reeves, Jr., Plainfield, to Thomas Newford, two lots, Aldene, $450.

A Change of Location.

C. Frank French, dealer in flour and feed, has left his place of business on Park avenue, near Fourth street, and takes possession today of the store formerly occupied by Randolph Thorn, tinner, on Park avenue, near the railroad.

A SAD MISFORTUNE.

Daniel O'Connor's Home Totally Destroyed by Fire Last Night.

An exceedingly pitiable sight was witnessed in what is known as Bull Frog city, Monday, when the home of Daniel O'Connor was completely destroyed by fire, together with all its contents. About 8 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. O'Connor and their daughter, came to town. Mr. O'Connor attended the meeting of a lodge of which he is a member, while Mrs. O'Connor and her daughter went to see a sick relative.

Before leaving the house the stoves were fixed for the night, and a small lamp was left burning in the kitchen near the window.

Edwin Vroom, who lives in the vicinity of Walnut street, noticed a blaze about 11:30 o'clock, and he sent in an alarm from Box 156 corner of Harrison and Cedar streets.

The fire alarm bell was rang by Marshal Wilson and in a short time the hose carriage carrying 1,000 feet of hose was at the scene of the conflagration But this was not sufficient and the carriage returned for 1 100 additional feet of hose. By this time the house was burning rapidly and the men were unable to save it. A new house, being erected by Jacob Elmer, next door, was saved by hard work.

By the time the 2 100 feet of hose was laid and water secured, the house was about destroyed and all the firemen could do was to confine the flames to the one place.

The fierce gale blowing at the time made the fire a most serious one, and the firemen deserve unbounded praise for their work.

When Mr. O Connor and family returned they discovered their loss and were nearly crushed with grief, for everything they owned, except the clothing they had on, was destroyed.

Mr. O'Connor had an insurance of $1 200 on the house and goods, which was held by the Franklin Insurance Company, of which M. M. Dunham is the agent.

It is a fact to be regretted that a few more hydrants are not located in this prrt of the borough, thus affording equal protection to the taxpayers. Great credit is due Augustus Fiering, John Pierson, D. C. Allen and William Pasch for the excellent hot coffee and lunch furnished the firemen.

The supposition is that the lamp was upset by the curtain blown against it by the heavy winds.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the National Bank of Plainfield, New Jersey, held on the morning of March 3rd, 1896, the following resolutions were unanimously passed:

"Whereas, God in His all-wise Providence has removed from our midst, our fellow director and vice president, Daniel F. Randolph, therefore be it resolved,

That we, the Board of Directors of said The First National Bank of Plainfield, New Jersey, do hereby express our appreciation of his sun, by Christian character, his sterling integrity, and his faithful service to the bank for many years past, both as director and vice-president, and also the sence of the loss we have sustained in his death.

Resolved, that we extend to his bereaved companion and family, our deepest sympathy in their great affliction.

Resolved that a copy of these minutes be pr sented to the bereaved family, and also engrossed in the minute book of this Board, and also published in the local papers.

By order and in behalf of the Board of Directors.

A Grand Rally.

A. D. Shepard, of "The Gables," who is spending the winter in New York, is the holder of one of the boxes in Carnegie Music Hall for the Presbyterian Rally to be held Tuesday night in the interest of Home Missions. Scott Foster, of Seventy-second street, New York, so well known here, is the holder of another box. President Cleveland will preside at the meeting

Arranged By Mr. Fitzhugh.

One of the selections to be rendered at the Choral concert next Thursday evening is a chorus harmonized from an old German folk song by Edward J. Fitzhugh. Mr. Fitzhugh has dedicated this chorus to the ladies of the Plainfield Choral Society. The ladies of the society have the honor of being the first to sing the chorus Progressiveness.

Neuman Brothers, the popular Watchung avenue grocers, have just received a handsome new delivery wagon, which makes the seventh. Hereafter orders, left personally or by telephone before 10 o'clock in the morning, will be delivered before noon.

A Successful Supper.

The ladies of the Christian Work Society, of Trinity Reformed church, are rejoicing over the fact that between $75 and $76 was realized at the supper held by them in the lecture room of the church on the evening of February 13th.

New Telephones.

The following new telephones have been put in by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company:—E. H. Ladd, Jr., Franklin place, 78B; O. T. Waring, Park avenue, 159.

J. W. Pierce, Republic, Ia., says: "I have used One Minute Cough Cure in my family and for myself, with results so entirely satisfactory that I can hardly find words to express myself as to its merit. I will never fail to recommend it to others, on every occasion that presents itself." L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front St.

CORSA REINSTATED.

After Being Twice Dismissed from the Street Cleaning Department.

A peremptory mandamus compelling Street Cleaning Commissioner George E. Waring, Jr., to reinstate Henry C. Corsa, of Plainfield, as district inspector in the Street Cleaning Department of New York, was handed down by Justice Truax in the Supreme Court Thursday.

The first meeting of the Executive Committee of the New Jersey Interscholastic Athletic Association, was held in Pingry School, Elizabeth, on Saturday. President Geo. P. Smith, of the Plainfield High School, presided, and the representatives present were Myers of Pingry; Cornwell, of the Plainfield High School; Schulz, of the Newark Academy, and Sandford, of the Stevens Preparatory School. The meeting was held to formulate athletic schedules, and make the preliminary arrangements for the spring meet Pingry, Stevens and the Plainfield High schools, announced that their membership would be permanent, and that they were ready to arrange for games. The Newark Academy stated that, as there had been some misunderstanding concerning the constitution and intentions of the association, it was undecided about continuing its membership. The Montclair High School and Rutgers Preparatory will remain in the association. It is understood that the Elizabeth High School will also be elected to membership. The spring meet caused considerable discussion, especially in regard to the place where it should be held. The Plainfield delegates were, of course, in favor of the Crescent Oval, but the others thought that the grounds of the New Jersey Athletic Club, at Bergen Point, would be more suitable. It was decided to make an effort to secure the latter. The games will be held on the first Saturday in June, and the events will be open only to members of the association. Each school may make as many entries as it desires, but can run only three in each event. Points will be scored in the usual manner—five for a first, three for a second and one for a third. The prizes will be gold, silver and bronze medals for individuals, and a cup or banner for the school scoring the greatest number of points. The events will be as follows: 100-yards dash, senior; 100-yards dash, junior; 220 yards dash; 440-yards run; 880 yards run; one-mile run; 120 yards hurdle; one-mile walk; putting 12-pound shot; high jump; pole vault; running broad jump; one-mile bicycle race. The association also decided to have a baseball league for the championship of the association A fine of $5 will be levied upon each team forfeiting a game. While no places were selected for the playing of the games the following schedule was adopted: Rutgers against Stevens, April 11th; Montclair against Plainfield, April 11th; Plainfield against Rutgers, April 18th; Pingry against Newark, April 18th; Montclair against Stevens, April 25th; Pingry against Plainfield, April 25th; Newark against Stevens, May 2d; Montclair against Rutgers, May 2d; Rutgers against Pingry, May 9th; Newark against Plainfield, May 9th; Montclair against Pingry, May 16th; Plainfield against Stevens, May 16th; Pingry against Stevens, May 23d; Newark against Rutgers, May 23d; Montclair against Newark, May 30th.

One of the most common parts of a bicycle to be bent or otherwise damaged is the pedal. Every time the safety falls over, no matter how easily, that part is subjected to a severe strain. The pedal spindle or crank usually suffers and is bent, preventing the pedal from revolving easily or not at all, and a tool to straighten it fills a long felt want. A patent for such a tool has been applied for by E. C. Higgins, of Bayonne The instrument is small, and is constructed of malleable iron with brass bearings. It is so made that the bent spindle is self centred and is forced back into shape by a powerful screw working in a sliding nut which allows the power to be applied to any part of the spindle. The end of the screw, touching the spindle, is provided with a soft steel head attached by a ball and socket joint and does not move when power is applied, thus avoiding injury to the spindle. The tool has been in practical use for several months and has proved very success ful.

A Rare Treat.

Mme. Szumowska, the pianist, who is to appear at the Choral Society's concert Thursday evening, the 5th inst., is the only pupil of the great Paderewski. Mme. Szumowska has attracted a great deal of interest in New York city, and her recitals have been very largely attended not only by amateurs, but also by prominent professionals: Miss Grace Haskell, a young, and promising soprano, will also assist.

Soothing, healing, cleansing, De-Witt's Witch Hazel Salve is the enemy to sores, wounds and piles, which it never fails to cure. Stops itching and burning. Cures chapped lips and cold-sores in two or three hours. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front St.

"Bright Eyes," the colored pugilist, who is booked to fight Walcott, another colored pugilist, has made a hotel near this city his headquarters for training. "Bright Eyes' is accompanied by J. J. Bates of Texas, as backer and manager. This is Mr. Bates' first trip east, and he expressed himself as greatly pleased with the attiveness of this city. Another of the party is Bob Marshall, the heavyweight pugilist of England, who is the trainer of "Bright Eyes." Marshall and Bates have been looking over territory near New York, but found nothing to suit them until they reached this city. The party were unanimous in declaring that the roads in and about this city were the best that they had ever seen. Gabe Brown, of this city, who formerly resided in Pittsburg, and who is known in sporting circles as "The Pittsburg Kid," has been engaged as the sparring partner of "Bright Eyes."

RESULTS OF ELECTION.

BOROUGH REPUBLICANS ELECT ALL BUT ONE CANDIDATE.

A Hard Fight in the Township and Each Party Captures One Good Office—The Vote Polled in Fanwood and Piscataway.

From The Press of March 11.

Taken as a whole, the election in the borough yesterday was quiet. What hustling was done was among the Republicans, and there is but little doubt that if the Democrats had stirred themselves to activity, they would have given their opponents a hot chase for victory. The only Democrat elected was David D. Smalley, for justice of peace. Considerable opposition was made against John McLaughlin, one of the Republican candidates for Councilman, because he is engaged in business in New York, and there was disposition on the part of a great many to elect only those who were actively engaged in business in the borough or city. George Kirch, his Democratic opponent, made an especially good run. The Farmer Orator, James E. Martine, could not repress his interest in the cause of Democratic success—even though the election was in Somerset county and he had no direct interest in the result. He was seen around the polls of the borough yesterday afternoon urging voters to sustain the Democratic ticket. Many people wondered if he would ever stop. The Farmer Orator remarks that he will stop when death so decrees. The results of the voting follow:

The election at Scotch Plains was a quiet one, although the fight was rather close especially for the offices of Freeholder and member of Township Committee. The Republican ticket was elected throughout, except in the latter case, where the Democratic candidate secured a majority of 1. The Republicans still retain a majority in the Township Committee, and secured the more important office of Freeholder, Robinson, the Republican candidate, receiving a majority of 36 votes in the whole township.

The Fanwood borough held its election after all under the decision of Judge Whalley given in the Supreme Court Monday night. Robinson was given a majority of 28 over Nichol, the Democratic candidate, while F. W. Westcott, Republican, was the only candidate for the office of Overseer of the Poor. These were the only candidates voted for. The registry list in Fanwood calls for 330, but only 236 visited the polls. The Scotch Plains registry board accepted ten borough votes that were offered by those who thought the election illegal at Fanwood.

In Bridgewater township the Democratic machine, William J. Logan, was returned by a large majority as Freeholder. Mr. Logan is one of the ablest officers that has ever represented the County of Somerset in that capacity and it is a credit to the voters of Bridgewater that they recognized Mr. Logan's ability. Mr. Logan would make an able Director of that County's Board of Freeholders.

John H. Sebring, Republican, was elected Town Committeeman of Piscataway township, Middlesex county, and Calvin Drake for Freeholder, with the rest of the Republican ticket.

Director John C. Staats, of Franklin township, was defeated yesterday for re-election in that strong Republican township, which he has so often represented in the Board of Freeholders, of Somerset county, as a Democrat.

The township election brought out many surprises in Westfield. Addison Clark, the Democrat candidate for Freeholder, who sought a re-election, was elected by nearly fifty majority. Samuel W. Reese, his Republican opponent, was scratched right and left, and his losses were surprisingly severe in the borough of Mountain Side, where he supposed he was very strong.

Irving Ross, the Democratic candidate for Town Clerk, was re-elected by a heavy majority, and Fred Decker, Republican, was elected Overseer of the Poor. The town on a normal vote is good for about 100 Republican majority.

George H. Embree, Republican, was elected member of the Township Committee by 62 majority over Mr. McGarragh, Democrat.

Wasn't Satisfied With the Check.

The appealed case of Moore against Hughes is being tried at the Circuit Court in Elizabeth today. Moore is suing for the complete payment for a brick wall and concrete foundation to the sash and blind factory at Cranford. Hughes gave Moore a check some time ago that was worded for payment "in full" but the check did not equal the amount due Moore, Moore is now trying to recover the balance. He is represented by ex-Judge W. J. Coddington, of this city, while Hughes' attorney is ex-Prosecutor W. R. Wilson.

Change in the Choir.

WHAT A WOMAN CAN DO.

REMARKABLY BRIGHT OBSERVATIONS BY MISS ELIZABETH U. YATES.

The American Woman is a Favored Person, But in the Affairs of State She is Helpless—Pointed Remarks Made.

One of the best lectures ever given in this city was listened to by a good-sized audience at Trinity Reformed church on Tuesday, when Miss Elizabeth U. Yates, of Maine, presented woman enfranchisement in a clear and forcible manner.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck conducted the devotional exercises, reading the fourth chapter of second Corinthians, after which he offered prayer.

Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson introduced Miss Yates who spoke in part as follows, on the subject "What Are We Coming To?"

"The woman question is more important and is claiming more thought than any other at the present time. Woman is the connecting link between man and angels, and some one has said that she is an angel. The American woman at the present hour is much favored, yet in one place, the affairs of State, she is limited and has at last come face to face with the fact that she is helpless. One class of people object to woman suffrage. They are narrow-minded and close their eyes against the light. They think it will hurt her individually. We find that women are voting in the west. For twenty-one years she has voted in Colorado and for six years, as a State, they have had full suffrage.

"The simple act of voting won't harm her. We still believe that Blackstone is the foundation of jurisprudence, and considering the element of goodness, women hold the balance of power. She is not perfect. She was created as a companion for man. Eve is not the only woman who has raised Cain in the world.

"I never knew one to propose a Panama Canal or a trip to the North Pole, but a woman did give her jewels that America might be discovered.

"In regard to power, she may not be equal as a whole to some men, but some of them can carry arms. If power is the desirable element let us have James J. Corbett for President and John L. Sullivan for Vice-President. It's not strength of arm but a mighty brain that counts.

"I have been in politics and know something of them, and both man woman should have equal freedom.

"A man once held a position as a typewriter, but a woman was secured for the place and he was discharged. He sought a place as clerk and another woman finally got that place. He then decided that he would paint church steeples, feeling sure that no woman would get that position.

"We women will let you paint church steeples. If it were not for women there would not be many of them to paint.

"The balloon sleeves, now the style, prevent women from standing shoulder to shoulder with men. The last step of evolution is woman suffrage and may we soon be able to see it taken."

As an offertory, Miss Bessie Blair rendered an excellent vocal solo, accompanied by Howard Case on the organ. The meeting closed with the singing of the Doxology and prayer by Rev. Cornelius Schenck.

John H. Van Winkle, Jr., and William Crawford very kindly acted as ushers.

THE GET-ONES DINE.

Seventeen Members Qualified and Succeeded in Getting One Member.

The banquet of the Get-One Club of the Y. M. C. A., was held last Monday in the small hall of the building. Seventeen members of the club were able during the last two months to secure one new member each, thus entitling them to a place at the table. The members present gathered around the table at 7:15 o'clock, and remained seated for over an hour. Curtis M. Thorpe presided, and everyone enjoyed the excellent repast, which was kindly donated and prepared by Mrs. Joseph Gwett, Mrs. E. M. French, Mrs. J. E. Manning, Mrs. E. F. Clawson, and Mrs. R. F. Murray. The Get-One Club will be continued, and at the end of another two months another banquet will be served.

DRAWN IN HARD LINES.

Dr. Riggs Says That the East is Drawn in Dissolving Views.

The University Extension course of lectures on the Eastern Question, which Plainfield people have enjoyed so thoroughly this winter, came to an end Tuesday. The twelfth and last lecture, delivered by Dr. James F. Riggs, was on the subject of Oriental Literature.

The east, said the lecturer, is the culmination of romance. The picture of the Anglo-Saxon is drawn in hard lines; the picture of the east is drawn in dissolving views. Poetic feeling constitutes a large element in all Oriental nations. Their lyric poetry is the most interesting. It breathes an earnest and mystical reverence for the powers of nature. The mind of the Oriental does not move in the same lines as that of the Occidental; in order to be interested in his poetry, you must first learn to think as the Oriental thinks.

Dr. Riggs read a number of selections from Eastern writers, beginning with a poem by Hafiz, a Persian poet, exquisite in sentiment, and so brief as to be epigrammatic. Very different was a proclamation of the Sultan, announcing the beginning of the fast of Ramazan, an inflated and involved piece of writing, laden with bambastic set phrases.

Several quotations from the Koran were very interesting, explained and enlivened as they were by pointed and characteristic comments from Dr. Riggs. One story, taken from the Hebrew Scriptures, was a most curious and absurb mingling of the stories of Abraham Gideon, and the three young men in the burning fiery furnace.

Specimens of Armenian and Bulgarian literature were also given, showing how in these people many of the old heathen superstitions still exist, side by side with Christian tenents.

The monasteries have been the seat of a considerable literary life. The monks, with little to occupy them, had plenty of time for story writing. If they were not quite pleased with some legend, they would make up a new one to suit themselves. For example, there is the extraordinary story of the Nestorian Tablet in China, which was evidently written to account for the fact that the specimens of that cross which were exhibited at the various monasteries were all of different kinds of wood.

The spirit of resistence to the Turks has gathered around it a distinct literature of its own. By these stirring war poems the frame of patriotism is kept burning in the hearts of the people.

MR. WHITNEY WRITES.

He Infers to James E. Martine That He is Not a Candidate.

A few days ago James E. Martine addressed a letter to the Honorable William C. Whitney, the text of which was as follows:

Hon. William C. Whitney.

My Dear Sir:—I take the liberty of sending an interview with myself. While thoroughly conversant with your recent letter as to a candidacy for the Presidential nomination at the hands of the Democratic party, I feel that you are too much of a patriot to decline or refuse a unanimous nomination (as it will be at Chicago), if I feel that the interests of our country and party alike demand this much of you.

Very respectfully,
J. E. Martine.

Yesterday Mr. Martine received the following letter from Mr. Whitney, which, while it does not evince a desire to become a candidate since he has already so stated, does not say that he would not accept the nomination if it was offered to him:

New York, N. Y., March 9, 1896.

J. E. Martine, Esq.,
Plainfield, N. J.

My Dear Sir:—I have received your letter of the 5th inst., also a copy of your interview published in the Plainfield Daily Press. Accept my thanks and appreciation of your very friendly expression as contained in both. I have, however, already spoken upon the matter referred to in public.

Very truly yours,
W. C. Whitney.

An Attempted Theft.

Mrs. D. A. MacPhie and her children, who are stopping temporarily on Westervelt avenue, were frightened very much Saturday night, when she thought that an attempt was being made by someone to enter the house with a view to robbery. Mrs. MacPhie heard several strange noises and she called upon E. E. Anthony, a nearby neighbor, and he searched the house, but was unable to find anyone about. A few things in the cellar were found displaced, which gave evidence that someone had certainly been around.

All last winter Mr. Geo. A. Mills, of Labanon, Conn., was badly afflicted with rheumatism. At times it was so severe that he could not stand up straight, but was drawn over on one side. "I tried different remedies without receiving relief," he says, "until about six months ago I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. After using it for three days my rheumatism was gone and has not returned since. For sale by Reynold's Pharmacy, Park and North avenue. T. S Armstrong, Manager.

THE DIFFERENCE.

The Difference Between Two Charitable Organizations Explained.

There seems to be a false idea in the minds of the people regarding the Relief and the Organized Aid Associations and a belief that two charitable organizations in Plainfield are unnecessary. The two societies are distinct in plan, purpose and work, and each does a work the other cannot do.

The Relief Association, as it always has done, gives relief to cases that have been previously carefully investigated. The families are regularly visited after aid is given, by "friendly visitors" to give advice and help and insure the necessity for further assistance. Aid given consists of food, fuel and clothing. Work is given to applicants, payment for which may be taken in food or other articles. Women are taught at the Relief rooms to sew, to make and repair garments, and it is proposed to extend the instruction to cleaning, laundry work and other labor that can be performed by persons desiring assistance.

The Organized Aid gives no relief but carefully investigates cases that have been brought to its notice. Investigation is made not only for its own needs but for the Relief and all other charitable organizations of Plainfield, of which there are about twenty. When a person asks for assistance the case is investigated, and if members of the family are connected with any of the city churches that church is asked if it will care for them and the same course is followed with the various benefit societies of the city. If these sources decline to give aid, then the applicants become the care of the Relief. This careful investigation often develops unworthy objects, as in a case recently discovered by the agent of the Organized Aid. A woman thinly clad was begging in the streets. Investigation brought out the facts that she had had a ten dollar bill in her possession within a few days and had a daughter willing and able to take care of her. The object of the Association being not to make paupers, but to teach the poor to help themselves, it seeks also to find employment for its applicants. The necessity for a paid agent is this very readily seen. No volunteer, no matter how much interested, can be expected to devote time and strength to this work to do it as it should be done, while a paid representative devoting all his time and energy to it can do the work understandingly and systematically.

LIBRARY APPROPRIATION FIXED.

The Board of Directors Fix $3,500 as the Sum Needed.

A special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Public Library was held at the Library last Tuesday. There were present Messrs. M. W. Tyler, J. W. Yates, J. Evarts Tracy, Rowland Cox, Henry P. Talmadge, William H. Larrabee, and William M. Stillman. President Mason W. Tyler, was in the chair. The minutes of the meeting of February 4th, were read and approved, and the minutes of the meeting of the executive committee of March 3d, were read. The following resolutions were then passed:

Resolved, By this Board, and the Board doth hereby determine that the sum or amount of $3,500 will be required in the year 1896, for the maintenance of the library and reading room, established and existing in the city of Plainfield under and pursuant to the act of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey entitled "An act to authorize cities to establish and maintain free public libraries and reading rooms," approved March 16th, 1878, and the act amending thereof approved March 4th, 1882.

Resolved, That the president of this Board forthwith certify to the Common Council of the city of Plainfield that the amount or sum of $3,500 will be required in the year 1896 for the maintenance of said library and reading room.

On motion, the president was authorized to procure plans and specifications for an addition to the library building, and also estimates on the same and present them to the Board at their adjourned meeting to be held two weeks hence.

The Board adjourned to meet on the evening of March 24th.

Enlarging the Bridge.

KEEPING UP COURAGE.

REGULAR SALVATIONISTS CRY THEIR HALLEJUAH JUST THE SAME.

Ensign Taylor Converses With a Press Reporter and Says That the Seceders Will Injure the Work of the Regulars.

Despite the loss of most of its members, the Plainfield Corps of the Salvation Army still carries on its work and Tuesday, Ensign Taylor and his wife held their first meeting in the regular army hall. With the few of the faithful soldiers that remained, Ensign Taylor held the regular street parade that usually precedes the meetings.

While waiting for the meeting to begin, the new commander, for such Ensign Taylor is, conversed with a Daily Press reporter on the present situation in Plainfield. "I don't blame them in the slightest," said the Ensign, referring to the seceders, "and I have not the least hard feeling against them. I think they were hasty in making their decision. They should have waited until they learned more about it."

He continued in the same vein, but was very positive that there was no ill feeling between the independent corps and the regulars. When asked what effect it would have on the work he said:

"It will hurt the work a great deal. It was a very unfortunate occurance, but the Lord says that all things work together for good, so this must be for our good also."

The work of the Army would, he said, be continued the same as before, and he did not feel discouraged in the slightest. His cheerful manner seemed to second his statement and, in the meeting that followed, he showed that he had lost none of his enthusiasm. Both the weather and the present circumstances of the corps tended to make the attendance at the meeting small, but the few remaining workers were earnest in their efforts. Ensign Taylor's immense guitar, "Big Ben," which is so well-known in Plainfield, was there, and the Ensign assisted in the music with it. Quite a number of visitors dropped into the meeting every little while to see how the corps got along since the secession of most of its members. They found the meeting conducted as usual, not as large a crowd in attendance, but with the same spirit prevailing.

SECEDERS AT ELIZABETH.

Three-Quarters of the Elizabeth Force Join the New Movement.

There has been a split in the camps of the Salvation Army stationed at Elizabeth by which more than three-quarters of the members have announced their intention of joining the movement started by Ballington Booth.

At a special meeting held in the Army's headquarters Monday night Lieutenant Noreross bid farewell to corps preparatory to leaving Elizabeth to take charge of a corps at Matawan. To this meeting none but Salvationists were admitted, but yesterday the facts were made public that fifteen of the twenty soldiers in the city had revolted and were going to fight hereafter under the new flag.

Lieutenant Noreross yesterday admitted that there were some revolters among the corps, but endeavored to make little of it, refusing to give the number or names of the deserters.

Not to be Trifled With.

(From Cincinnati Gazette.)

Will people ever learn that a "cold" is an accident to be dreaded, and that when it occurs treatment should be promptly applied? There is no knowing where the trouble will end; and while complete recovery is the rule, the exceptions are terribly frequent, and thousands upon thousands of fatal illnesses occur every year ushered in by a little injudicious exposure and seemingly trifling systems. Beyond this, there are today countless invalids who can trace their complaints to "colds," which at the time of occurrence gave no concern, and were therefore neglected.—When troubled with a cold use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is prompt and effectual. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Reynold's Pharmacy, Park and North avenue, T. S. Armstrong Manager.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

—English law takes no account of libels on the dead. Not so in France. A Parisian lady has just obtained a verdict against an author who published some defamatory statements of her grandfather.

—Before the coming of the whites to America, the Mississippi river was known under a different name every few miles in its course. Each tribe that dwelt along its banks gave it a name, and more than 30 of these local designations are preserved in the narratives of the early travelers.

—Excitement is enthusiasm is not always contagious. It worked distinctly the other way in the case of a resident of Bayside, Me., who recently was stopped on the highway by a party of sportsmen and made to wait with them an hour and a half, so that he would not scare away a deer which others of the hunting party were trying to drive out of the bordering wood.

—A late official report shows that, contrary to common belief, cases of religious persecution are rare in the Fiji isles. It also discloses the strange fact that more mental aberration is developed among the tribe of peddlers than among any other class, physicians and druggists coming next. Melancholia prevails largely in Ireland.

—The archer fish has a natural blow gun. This animal possesses the curious property of being able to shoot drops of water from its mouth with extraordinary accuracy to considerable distances. This is a singular faculty of use to the animal in securing its food. A fly or small insect passing over the water has very little chance of escape from the deadly aim of the archer fish. The drop of water brings down the insect, which is then incontinently devoured.

—Experiments are being made in Arizona in the establishment of carrier pigeon messenger service between remote mining camps and the nearest town or railway shipping points. So far as tried the service has proved successful and very valuable. The trails out from some of the large camps are long and difficult to traverse at times, and the carrier pigeons insure a great saving of time in exchanging communications.

—Five thousand horses in one bunch were rounded up on the Flathead Indian reservation in Montana a week or so since. So large a band of horses is rarely seen except on the few of the Indian reservations where there is an unrestricted range. For almost a week before the bunch was gathered in the Indians and half-breeds were scouring the valleys, canyons and mountain sides, driving every horse they found toward the common center, ready for the annual cutting out into individually owned bands.

HOWARD'S FIRST CLIENT.

He Came on Mighty Particular Business, But It Was Not a Divorce

When Representative M W. Howard, the populist member from Alabama, first hung out his shingle as a lawyer he was 21 years of age. His patience was nearly exhausted by days spent in vain waiting for his first client to come, when one day he heard a knock at the door. On calling "Come in!" a darky, known as Sam, stepped into the little office.

"What can I do for you?" the lawyer asked, as visions of his first fee came to him.

"'Scuse me, sah," said Sam, "but 'deed I wants to see you on partikler business."

Mr. Howard, thinking that the man most likely wanted a divorce, said: "Sit down and explain everything carefully."

"'Deed, sah, I would like to close de dore, fo' de bizness am mighty pertikler," said Sam. After having closed the door he took the proffered chair. Then he explained:

"Sah, I has got a gurl in Georgah dat I wants you to write a letter to fo' me."

"Do you love her?" asked the lawyer. "Do you want to marry her? Does she love you?" and many questions of a like nature.

To all these questions Sam replied: "Suttingly."

The replies being satisfactory, he proceeded to write the letter. After having finished it he read it to Sam to see whether it agreed with his ideas

"'Scuse me, boss," said Sam, scratching his woolly head; "'scuse me if I offer a sugghestah; I would like to put something else in dar also; something like dis:

De roses am red,
And de vylets bloo;
De pinks am presty,
And so is you.

And having put it in, Howard asked if that was all. Sam scratched his woolly head a minute and then said: "Boss, dar am one mo' thing dat ought to go in dar—dis: 'I hopes dat you will 'scuse de poor, miserable writin' and de bad spellin'.'"—Washington Post.

The Fagot Party.

If one has a wide fireplace and a number of friends who are good story-tellers, a fagot party may be a pleasant form of entertainment. Give to each guest a ribbon-tied bundle of fagots or bits of wood, place cozy seats about the fire and ask number one (the ribbons should be numbered) to throw her fuel upon the fire. As it burns a story is to be told, neither longer nor shorter than the time of its burning, and as the light dies out number two begins his tale. A room for a fagot party should be lighted only by candles and the firelight. Finish the evening with an informal dance, if your guests are of the dancing habit, and with a light and dainty supper, as most of us are of the eating habit.—N. Y. Post.

Couldn't Serve Him.

FASHION CHAT.

Waists of fancy velvet are worn with skirts of black and all colors that do not quarrel with the tints in the upper portion of the dress.

A pretty collarette is made of a frill of wide lace attached to a plain foundation. Over this a medallion lace is puffed and ribbon is crossed and tied crossed in basket fashion.

The tailor costume of black camel's hair, consisting of flaring skirt, fitted waist and short jacket, is considered an indispensable portion of the wardrobe of the well-dressed woman.

A waist-trimming is of galloon and velvet. Straight, square-cut tabs of velvet fall from a round, turned-over collar. These tabs are trimmed with two rows of galloon edged with lace, and spangled with sequins.

A great deal of ermine will be worn for dressy occasions during the season. As an opera-cloak, it is unapproachable, and when lined with white, cream, pearl, pink or blue satin or brocade, is simply the perfection of material.

A pretty theater dress is made of spotted silk and velvet. The skirt is cut plainly, the bodice is of velvet, very low-cut, and filled in with voluminous folds of chiffon held down by straps. Large chiffon bows are set on the shoulders.

While many authorities are claiming the decadence of ermine, it appears in many of the finest creations of the season. A shoulder cape of velvet has a collar of ermine covering the shoulders and a standing collar of velvet lined with ermine.

A theater jacket of velvet has appliqué in extremely fine jet and satin wrought over it. It is edged with beaded gimp, made on wires. This forms a glistening border for color to form a standing collar, and a narrow edging is pressed smoothly around the edge of the garment as a trimming.

Among the novelty vails are those that are drawn around the whole throughout, falling nearly almost to the waist. This is a revival of a very old fashion, and women with cedar closets and packing trunks are taking out the old vails worn by their ancestors when the fashion raged, many years ago.

DON'TS FOR THE SICK ROOM.

Don't be hurried and bustling and fussy about the patient.

Don't appear anxious, however great may be your anxiety.

Don't let stale flowers remain in the sick room.

Don't allow an accumulation of medicine bottles in sight of the patient.

Don't jar the bed by lifting or sitting upon it. This is always unpleasant to one ill and nervous.

Don't be unmindful of yourself if you are in the responsible position of nurse. To do faithful work you must have proper food and stated hours of rest.

Don't forget that kindness and tenderness are necessary to successful nursing. Human nature longs to be soothed and comforted on all occasions when it is out of tune.

Don't throw coal upon the fire. Place it in brown paper bags and lay them upon the fire, thus avoiding the noise, which is shocking to the sick and sensitive.

Don't neglect during the day to attend to necessaries for the night in the way of nourishment and drink; that the rest of the patient and the family may not be disturbed.

Don't light a sick room at night by means of a gas jet or lamp burning low; nothing impoverishes the air sooner. Use sperm candles or tapers which burn in sperm-oil.

Don't forget to have a few coffee grains handy to serve as a deodorizer when burnt on the coal. Bits of charcoal placed around the room are also useful in absorbing gases and other impurities.

Don't give a patient a full glass of water to drink from, unless he is allowed all he desires. If he can drain the glass he will be satisfied; so regulate the quantity before handing it to him.—Philadelphia Record.

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

No earnest thinker will borrow from others that which he has not already, more or less, thought out for himself. —Charles Kingsley.

True politeness is perfect ease and freedom. It simply consists in treating others just as you love to be treated yourself.—Chesterfield.

There are braying men in the world as well as braying asses; for what is loud and senseless talking and swearing any other than braying? — L'Estrange.

Consider how much more you often suffer from your anger and grief than from those very things for which you are angry and grieved. — Marcus Antoninus.

A man's fortune is frequently decided by his first address. If pleasing, others at once conclude he has merit; but if ungraceful, they decide against him.—Chesterfield.

IMPERSONAL POINTS.

A woman weighing 509 pounds died at New Middleton, Ind., recently. She was said to be the largest woman in the state.

Five tramps in Orange county, Cal., made a big mistake a few days ago. They pounced on a peaceable-appearing wayfarer and tried to hold him up. The traveler promptly produced a big revolver, made the tramps put up their hands in lively fashion, formed them in single file ahead of him, and marched them into the county jail. He was a policeman in plain clothes.

LONGFELLOW EVENING.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS ENJOY A PLEASANT TIME.

The Time Was Occupied With Reading From His Works and Illustrating Them With Tableaux.—The Participants.

It takes more than a wind storm to keep the loyal Seventh-day Baptists at home when the Ladies' Society for Christian Work of their church invites them to one of their pleasant little evening entertainments in the church parlors. So it was Thursday and the sociable was as great a success as any previous one.

The entertainment was called "An Evening with Longfellow," and consisted mainly of readings from his works and tableaux representing them. From 6 to 8 o'clock the guests were served with a light supper in the primary class rooms, and then adjourned to the main school room.

The entertainment then opened with a delightful violin solo by Arthur Mosher. Miss Mabel Maxson accompanied him. An interesting sketch of Longfellow's life was read by its writer, Miss Ernestine Smith, after which Charles Titsworth read Longfellow's first poem, and was followed by a bass solo, "The Bridge," by Robert Gorton. Next came the tableaux wh'e Miss Lulu Lewis read the selections that were illustrated. The first was "Mahoshoko and Wenona," Miss Ruth Maxson. Hiawatha's wooing was prettily shown by Miss Elizabeth Allis and Nathan Lewis, dressed in appropriate Indian costume. A male quartette composed of Louis H. Bond, Elmer E. Runyon, Robert Gorton and Arthur Titsworth, pleasingly rendered the selection "Stars of a Summer Night." "Evangeline" as a young girl was represented in a very pretty tableau by Miss Ethel Titsworth. As a nun, Miss Lou Clawson made a sweet "Evangeline."

The "Children's Hour" was the next poem and Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., was shown with the Misses Helle Rogers, Ethel Titsworth and Ruth Maxson gathered about him. Another pleasing violin solo by Arthur Mosher was followed by the reading of the "Village Blacksmith." The tableau represented the blacksmith, Robert Gorton, surrounded by his friends, the Misses Mertie Randolph, Flossie Gorton, Eva Rogers and Helen Rogers, and Stanley Mosher. Another short intermission and Robert Gorton, in his blacksmith's clothes, sang the "Armorer's Song" from DeKoven's "Robin Hood" with anvil accompaniment. Two demure young women in old fashioned black gowns and white caps represented the blacksmith's daughter and her companion in the church choir. Miss Bessie Titsworth and Miss Ida Randolph were those that took part in the tableau. That ended the programme and another installment of good things to eat were served. The committee that arranged the delightful programme consisted of Mrs. John Mosher, chairman, Mrs Henry Maxson and Mrs. Robert Gorton Mrs Gorton acted as accompanist. The refreshments were under the supervision of Mrs. J. P. Allis, Mrs. Charles Randolph and Mrs. L. T. Rogers.

Have Been Married Three Months.

A romantic marriage took place in Elizabeth last Thanksgiving Day, but it has only within the last few days been announced. Miss Martha Edgerton was the colored cook at the residence of Dr. Fritts, of Park avenue, and that night she was quietly married at Elizabeth to Joseph Ernest Ulrich Weaver, a young colored man of this city. It is only now that they have gained enough courage to announce the marriage.

Champion Big Baby at Elizabeth.

The wife of Charles Boehm, of Elizabeth, on Saturday gave birth to what is said to be the largest infant ever born in Elizabeth. It tipped the scales at eighteen pounds. It is a boy, and as there will not be any leap year in 1900, it will be eight years, if the child lives, before it will have another birthday.

Fire Gave Burglars a Chance.

The residence of J. J. Willis, at Garwood, was entered by burglars on Monday night. They ransacked the lower part of the house and carried away over $1,000 worth of silverware. The family had gone to a fire at some distance, leaving the house unprotected.

Thanked by the Women.

The W. C. T. U. have sent the following letter to Councilman George H. Frost:

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is gratified to learn of the attitude of opposition to the saloons, which your vote at the recent meeting of the Council evinces.

And the women of the community have been equally regarded by the other members of the Council, our organization would not contend in vain for the protection of our homes.

GIVEN A CANE.

Squaws of Iona Council Make a Gift to William Newcorn.

At the regular meeting of Iona Council, Degree of Pocohantas, last Friday, there was one adoption, and routine business was transacted. Representative W. A. Westphal made his report which showed that the membership in this tribe was 1,196; total wealth, $13,000; amount distributed to disabled members, etc., $25,000; number of councils in the State, 31; increase in membership during the year, 600; increase in councils during the past six months, 6. Mr. Westphal, on behalf of the sisters of the council, then presented William Newcorn with a very handsome gold headed cane and a large bouquet, the event being Mr. Newcorn's birthday anniversary. The latter accepted the gift in his usual happy manner, and thanked the ladies for their kindness. A collation was served at this time, and sociability occupied the rest of the evening.

THIS TELEPHONE WAS LOADED

William H. Luster, of Elizabeth, Receives a Painful Shock.

William H. Luster, a former secretary of the Board of Education, of Elizabeth, who is employed at the office of T. S. Thompson's coal yard, was knocked senseless Thursday as he was about to use a telephone.

Mr. Luster placed his hand on the receiver and was about to take it from the hook when he received a shock which hurled him against the wall on the opposite side of the room. His hands were badly burned, and he was unable to walk. He was taken to his home on Prospect street, where he now lies in a serious condition. The accident was caused by the telephone wire becoming crossed with an electric light wire.

Preparing for the Convention.

Rev. Titus E. Davis, of Bound Brook, the alert transportation manager for the Washington National Christian Endeavor Convention, has issued a bulletin setting forth the arrangements thus far made. He estimates that the cost of attending the convention need not exceed $22.50 from New York city. Mr. Davis has associated with him Rev. W. E. Davis, Rev. A. I. Martine, of Dunellen, and Messrs. F. N. Voorhees, Geo. Mollison, Thomas C. Whitlock. The committee have progressed in their preparations so far as to print the bill of fare at the N. J. Headquarters Hotel. There are to be three immense tents and ten of the largest churches of the city open to the convention.

Given an Hour to Leave Town.

There was a well-dressed, good-looking young man in the city court this morning charged with being drunk and disorderly in the ladies' room at the North Avenue station last evening. Detective Blackford arrested him. He said that his brother had been moving in Westfield and had given him some money which he drank up. The young fellow, who gave his name as Edward C Cadwell, was thoroughly ashamed of himself. The Judge suspended sentence and gave him an hour to leave town.

Westfield's Borough Projects.

The advocates of a Westfield borough government are making such indifferent progress in securing signers to the petitions, that they are directing their efforts toward inducing the borough of Mountainside to cooperate in procuring a single borough to include the entire township. To this plan the farmers of Mountainside are not altogether agreeable, as they withdrew in order to escape the sewer tax, and are not anxious to incur the liability again.

The Final Concert.

The final concert of the season to be given by the Choral Society will take place Thursday evening, May 14th. The society will present a cantata by Goring Thomas, entitled "The Swan and the Skylark," and the new oratorio, "The Transfiguration," by Cowen, (the first presentation in this country,) with orchestra and a full corps of soloists.

WHITNEY IS HIS CHOICE.

THE FARMER ORATOR PICKS OUT A PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATE.

Mr. Martine Declares That Whitney C. Whitney is the Man to Lead the Democracy to Victory in November.

James E. Martine, known all over New Jersey as the "Farmer Orator," was seen by a Daily Press reporter last night and approached as to his opinions of the condition of the Democratic party in the State and Nation. Mr. Martine is recognized as a shrewd political observer and as one of the most staunch and hardest working members of the Democratic party.

"What do you consider the prospects of the Democratic party this fall?" queried the reporter.

"I consider them good," said he with his well-known earnest manner of speech. "The Republican party are hopelessly divided on the money question; and the bosses will demand a high McKinley platform in the coming campaign. On this issue we will meet them. I do not believe that the business interests of this country are ready or willing to come back to McKinleyism; and labor organizations and trades-unions have educated their members that McKinley tariff means but high prices for necessary commodities, and continuing decreasing wages for working men. The fact remains, that under the McKinley tariff wages were reduced, while under the Wilson bill wages in scores of workshops and mills were increased. The Republican party have too long presumed that workmen were ignorant and could be stuffed with 'bunco.'"

"Who do you favor as a Presidential candidate?"

"By all means, William C. Whitney," he replied with a tone of enthusiasm. "He would be an ideal candidate; his record is clean; he is a man of great personal magnetism and character. With him as a candidate, and tariff for revenue only as the slogan, we would and could make a hustling campaign and would win."

"But what about his views on the silver question?"

"He is all right on that. He favors International Bi-metalism The grand progress of the United States, in fact, the world, would warrant that condition. All Democrats can stand on the platform of International Bi-metalism."

"How about the State of New Jersey?"

"New Jersey is Democratic. The record of this indolent, equivocating Legislature for the people's interest, and the zealousness and effectiveness of Bosses Sewell and Hobart, when corporation interests are at stake, are known, and shall be spread widely on the stump and at meetings this fall."

A Chance to Hear Miss Yates.

Miss Elizabeth Yates, who speaks next Tuesday evening in the Trinity Reformed Church, is national organizer of the Franchise Department of the W. C. T. U. This is probably the only opportunity one will have for hearing Miss Yates in the east for some months, as she has been engaged to lecture in the fifty-seven counties of California, on the amendment to the State Constitution for the enfranchisement of woman, and she leaves for the Pacific Coast as soon as her engagements with Union County are filled.

CRESCENT MINSTRELS.

SONS OF HAM GETTING READY TO GIVE A GREAT ENTERTAINMENT.

It Will Consist of a First Part, Olio, Sketch and Burlesque, Which Will Abound in Funny Actions and Talk.

Plainfield is to have an entertainment worthy of her and, like the Kirmess, it will be something to talk about and recall for many a day. This entertainment will be the minstrel show that the Crescent Wheelmen are to give at Music Hall on March 26th. Of course, only local talent will be present, but in Plainfield's eighteen thousand residents there are not a few who know how to entertain an audience. That has been conclusively proved before in other minstrel shows, but this one is going to excell all previous efforts of the amateur burnt-cork artists.

There will be the regulation first part, with interlocutor, tambo, bones, and a chorus of male voices. The chorus will consist of twenty-five of Plainfield's young men made up with burnt cork and dressed in the conventional evening suit. On one end William N. Runyon and James H. Rogers will make two excellent tambos, while George O. Stevens and Charles W. Runyon will occupy the other end. Solos by Elmer E. Runyon, William Thiers and Alfred E. Holmes will be interspersed with local hits, funny stories and jokes by bones and tambo, while William N. Runyon and George O. Stevens will be ready with several end songs. The overture of the first part will contain many of the popular airs of the day.

In the second part will be introduced the various specialties. George Taggart has been asked to open this part with one of his original monologues. Those who heard him at the minstrel show last year will know what to expect. Singing by a double quartette will follow. Elmer E. Runyon and Prof. W. E. MacClymont, who are in charge of the quartette, have been getting their heads together, and will produce music that has never been surpassed in Plainfield, that is, by a double quartette. The only suggestion of professionalism in the show will be in the mid-air performance, which will include acts on the trapeze and slack wire by Mr. Burke. Mr. Burke is a Plainfielder, but is an expert in his line, having spent some time with several different circuses. The surprise of the evening will be the next to make its appearance, for here the members of the entertainment committee expect to bring before the audience that night a wing dancer. This specialty is excellent, according to the few who know about it, and they say Plainfield people will be greatly surprised to find such an unknown expert amateur performer among them.

Fletcher Hallock will next discourse sweet music on his xylophone and mouthophone. His name is sufficient guarantee for the excellence of his selections.

No minstrel show is complete without a sketch by the "stars" of the company. And the "stars" of this troupe, for they have them and they are of the first magnitude, too, worthy of being called "planets," will give a humorous little act of their own creation. Will Runyon and George Rogers are the "planets" in this case and will dazzle everybody with their brilliancy. What they will say can be told much better after Thursday evening, March 26th.

Of course, the finale will be a grand hurrah by the entire company. It will go under the name of a burlesque bowling match, and the bowling contingent is expected to turn out in full force and cheer the teams of the Park Club and the Union Country Club on to victory in their match for the minstrel championship of Plainfield. That will end the show, but if the roof of Music Hall remains fast, after all is over, it will be surprising.

Church Destroyed by Fire.

The Church of the Holy Comforter in Rahway was discovered to be ablaze at midnight of Wednesday, and the high wind prevented the firemen from doing effectual work. The building was burned. A new $1,000 organ in course of construction was burned. The hydrants were frozen, and this also hampered the firemen in their work. The fire was caused by an overheated stove. The loss will amount to $8,000. The loss is partly covered by insurance.

New Building Proposed.

It is reported that Mrs. E. H. Hanigan, of the borough, has purchased the very valuable building lot on North avenue adjoining Dan S. Roberts' building, and owned by A. D. Thompson. The Press in glad that the lot has fallen into such good hands, as she is financially prepared to build it, and to put up a building that will be a credit to the street and also to the city. The Press trusts that it is a well-founded rumor.

James E. Martine to Respond.

James E. Martine will deliver an address at the banquet of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick in Quien's hall, Elizabeth, March 17th.

A GREAT CHARACTER.

Mrs. Florence Howe Hall's Lecture on General Francis Marion.

The last lecture of the course arranged by Mrs. Florence Howe Hall took place Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. C. Perkins, on Central avenue. About seventy ladies were present, who listened with interest to Mrs. Hall's lecture, which comprised a sketch of the French Huguenots and their early settlements in this country, together with a description of the career of the famous partisan leader of the Revolutionary War, General Francis Marion. This brave and noble-minded descendant of the Huguenots organized a band of devoted followers during the darkest days of the Revolution in South Carolina. They lived in the inaccessible swamps and struck terror to the hearts of the British by their rapid movements and sudden disappearance. His career was full of romantic incidents, while his unvarying clemency was only equalled by his bravery. The war in South Carolina was very bloody, and conducted by the British with great cruelty. Many inhabitants of the State were Tories, thus adding bitterness to the strife. Marion was of a most merciful disposition, full of resource and ingenuity. He armed his men, (who were all mounted,) with saws, which were taken from the saw mills, and made into swords, so great was the scarcity of weapons. Their privations and those of their leader, were extreme; cold sweet potatoes were often the only food, while their garments were worn and tattered from exposure to the elements. The name of General Marion is greatly beloved and revered in the South at the present time. His tomb in South Carolina was lately restored with appropriate ceremonies.

LAWYER BEFORE PREACHER.

Novel Claims Made in the Westfield Church Law Suit.

The now celebrated Grace church case from Westfield drew a large representation of Union County Episcopalians to the Court of Errors and Appeals in Trenton Thursday. Rector Jennings was represented by Craig A. Marsh, of this city, and seeks to show that this claim for salary due should have precedence over that of Alfred Mills, who holds first mortgage on the church property. Mr. Mills made the appeal. In either event the church will be sold to satisfy the claims, and the Westfield Episcopalians are desirous that the sale may be pushed, as they desire to get possession of it. To add to the complication, the rector has transferred his claims to William Harrison, who is said to be negotiating a sale with the Catholics if he wins the case.

CLERK MARTIN THANKED.

North Plainfield Township Board Regret H. J. Martin's Retirement.

The North Plainfield Township Committee held their final meeting for the year last Friday, to conclude the unfinished business on the table. Two deeds were executed, one for the division of the borough and township, and another for some property on Johnston's Drive, which was sold some time ago. Mr. Fountain offered the following:

Resolved, That the retirement of Horace J. Martin from the office of township clerk is a subject of deep regret to the members of the township committee, and no form of resolution can adequately express the high regard we entertain for him collectively and individually; that the thanks of the township committee are the public are due to him for the able manner in which he has performed the duties, and sincerely regret the circumstances that force his retirement; that he carries with him in leaving the position which he has so satisfactorily filled, the respect and confidence of every member of the township committee.

The resolution was unanimously adopted, after which the meeting adjourned.

High Order of Music.

A great treat is promised those who attend Monroe Avenue chapel, Friday evening, March 27th. The Syracuse University Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs will present one of their best programmes. The following is taken from the Cleveland (Ohio) Leader of a recent date: "The entertainments given yesterday by the musical clubs of Syracuse University were well patronized. That the people were pleased was evidenced by the frequent encores. The glee club's work was of a high order. The banjo and mandolin music was admirably rendered and very favorably received.

Failed to File the Registry Lists.

Previous to this year it was the law in the borough that the registry lists should be posted until election day. This year they were not posted and those in charge have failed to file the same with the borough clerk.

THE SECOND CONCERT.

HARMONIOUS MUSIC BY THE CHORAL SOCIETY LAST NIGHT.

Mr. Fitzhugh Demonstrates His Capacity as a Director—Enthusiastic Reception of Mlle. Szumowski, the Pianist.

Music Hall filled in every corner was the part taken by the Plainfield public in the second concert of the Choral Society given Thursday. It was a commendable role, just and inspiring. It expressed tacit approval of what the Choral Society had done in the past and was a tacit confession of faith in what it expected the society to do again.

E. J. Fitzhugh, the musical conductor, at whose entrance the society rose en masse, stands at these concerts like a magician between his performers and the audience. He lifts his wand up, down, right, left, pauses, dashes, pirouettes, and Presto! volumes of music rise and fall, are hushed to a breath of exquisite tenderness or swell into a grand diapason of song and victory.

The first number on the programme rendered was Dudley Buck's fine composition, "Hymn to Music." It is a grand invocation beginning

O Art! O Art! thou holiest temple of earth;
Upon thee through all ages doth the Master with hands silent folded.

The transitions from the gentle flute to the thunder's roll were well executed and throughout the concert the society sustained its reputation for force, precision, accuracy and high purpose to realize the best productions possible.

Jack Horner was a bright combination of lullaby music and boyish congratulation, gentle in the lullaby and hearty in the congratulatory parts.

Miss Grace Haskell, the soloist, met with a cordial reception. In the opening solo she won the admiration of her audience by her charming personality, her clear vocalization and her nicely-graded tone of production. The Sweetheart notes were like bird calls in their delicious melody and sweetness.

When the Choral Society gave the next number, "How Sweet the Moonlight," Mr. Fitzhugh, the musical artist, suggested to the present scribe (thanks to DuMaurier) the artist with pencil and brush. A skillful touch, up, down, across, this way, that way, a line, a curve, a vigorous stroke, a masterly dash and there was a picture of moonlight sleeping on the banks with exquisite tone colors and gradations of light and shade, with the real music creeping in our ears.

The moving of the Steinway extra grand piano into place by the Steinway Trio was the signal for the appearance of Mlle. Szumowski, the young Polish pianist, who has received her training from Paderewski, and is a worthy pupil of the famous musician. Her recitals display intelligence, deep feeling and wonderful technique. In her rendering of Variations from Haydn, one sometimes had the feeling that under her fingers the exquisite piano was singing or carrying on a musical discourse, all in harmony and matchless tone. Some critics have pronounced her too young to deal with Schumann's fantasia, but the present scribe (thanks to DuMaurier again!) thinks he doesn't know enough of music to endorse the criticism.

The recitative from Mendelssohn was given in the Society's best manner, as was the "Woodland Chase," a totally different number, with a pace of the break-neck, steeple-chase order.

Miss Haskell's "Villanelle," a country ballad, was full of charming trills and roulades and won for her an encore that won for the audience a dainty little song of "An April Day."

"The Merry Month" was a charming musical pastelle, to use the artistic figure, from a painter's standpoint.

The ladies chorus, "The Kirmess of Mast'r Andrea" was like a Kirmess, jolly with variations.

Especial interest attached to "The Little Sandman." It was a German folk song harmonized by Mr. Fitzhugh, and dedicated to the ladies of this Plainfield Choral Society. The simple bit of folk-lore runs through the composition like an under-current, producing distinctive harmonies unusual, but fascinating. It begins with wooing and ends with the sandman's visit and sleep won. The delight of the audience expressed itself in rounds of applause that compelled its repetition.

Mlle. Szumowski interpreted Chopin and Liszt in her second appearance. Both these composers are ardently loved by Paderewski, and the natural expectation that his pupil would interpret them with refinement, charm and rare excellence was fully gratified. The Rhapsodie Hongroise was followed by a storm of applause and the gifted young pianist was recalled several times, who responded with a bow of acknowledgement.

The songs until this time had been accompanied by Miss Jessie Utter whose rare playing always wins admiration. Now the song, "When the Bright Stars are Gleaming," was given by the Choral Society and Mr. MacClymont assisted Miss Utter at accompanist.

Eighty varieties of microbes, some entirely new, have been discovered by M. Van de Steen in Amsterdam drinking water. None of them are cholera bacilli.

A German antarctic expedition has been decided upon and $50,000 marks allotted to it. It will consist of two vessels, will last three years and will start south from Kerguelen island.

Kildare and Wicklow have been justly termed the garden of Ireland, for nowhere is nature more profuse in her display of the picturesque and the beautiful.

The nettle is put to a useful purpose in some parts of Europe by being converted into various textile fabrics. In Dresden a thread from it has been produced as fine and silky that a length of 60 inches only weighs 40 ounces.

Down to the depth of 200 fathoms where daylight appears, the eyes of a fish get bigger and bigger. Beyond that depth small-eyed forms set in, with long feelers developed to supplement the eyes.

Frederick Thompson, aged 75, sat in a bootblack's chair in a San Francisco street, and was having his boots polished, when a fatal attack of heart disease closed his career. The man had been dead three minutes before the bootblack was aware of the tragedy.

An interesting duel was witnessed in Pike county, Pa., not long ago. The duelists were prize rams, and their method of combat was unique. They would repeatedly back off from each other to a distance of about 40 feet, and then dash madly forward until their heads collided. This plan they continued until one ram dropped dead.

NOTES OF VENEZUELA.

Liberty of worship is guaranteed by law.

The standing army consists of a little over 3,000 men.

The republic claims an area of 622,807 square miles.

The constitution is modeled on that of the United States.

The emancipation of slaves took place on March 24, 1854.

The national militia consists of all males between the ages of 18 and 45.

From 1550 until early in this century the country was under Spanish dominion.

The coast of Venezuela was the first part of the American mainland sighted by Columbus.

The monetary system of Venezuela is that of the Latin convention, the franc being represented by the bolivar.

Don Guzman Blanco was dictator from 1870 until Februrary 20, 1873, when he was elected constitutional president.

It was not until 1845 that the independence of the republic was recognized by Spain in the treaty of Madrid.

In 1810 Venezuela rose against the Spanish yoke, and in the following year the independence of the territory was proclaimed.

The pure white population is less than three per cent. The vast majority of the people are negroes, Indians, mulattoes and zambos.

Elementary education is well provided for under the law. There are two universities, 19 federal colleges and various other public and private institutions for higher education.

HISTORY REPEATED.

From the date of the creation to that of the flood, the Hebrew version calculates 1,656 years; the Septuagint 2,262; the difference being 606 years.

Pieces of gold and silver used in table service 900 B. C. were found at Troy by Dr. Schliemann. One of these was about the size now employed.

The League of Armed Neutrality was a convention originally formed in 1780, between Russia, Denmark and Sweden. The states general subsequently entered this league, and it was also joined by the king of Prussia on May 8, 1871, and by the kaiser on October 9 of the same year.

Nova Scotia was discovered by Cabot, 1497. Hannibal Verrazanni, 1524, and named Acadia. Settled in 1622 by the Scotch under Sir William Alexander, in the reign of James I. of England, from whom it received the name of Nova Scotia. Since its first settlement it has been more than once conquered from the French, and was not confirmed to England till the peace of Utrecht in 1713.

ABOUT THE WOMEN.

One of the richest heiresses in the world is Lady Mary Hamilton Douglas, the 15-year-old daughter of the late duke of Hamilton, whose income is now about £160,000 a year, and will be well above £200,000 by the time she is of age.

Ex-Empress Eugenie has recently deposited her will with a prominent London attorney, in which, true to her pledge, she has left a legacy to each of the 5,834 male persons of France born on the birthday of her son, Prince Louis.

One of the maids of honor to the young empress of Russia was married a few months ago. On bidding her good-by the empress congratulated her warmly, adding: "I shall indeed be sorry to lose you, but I am so happy myself that I wish every one to be married, too."

TIPS ABOUT PEOPLE.

A monument to the late Bishop Wayman (colored) will be erected in Baltimore.

It is not generally known that the wife of Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador in Constantinople, is the lady known to the world as Violet Fane.

Capt. Thomas Morley, a survivor of the charge of the Light brigade, Libby prison and Ford's theater disaster, is living in Washington and is in good health.

Mrs. Mary Rochester (colored) died in Newcastle, Del., county almshouse a few days ago at the reputed age of 104 years. She had lived in that vicinity during most of her life.

Mrs. Samuel Craft, living near McGee's, Simson county, Miss., is just 47 years old, and has had 20 children, 14 of whom are living. This is considered something of a record in that section.

Sandow, the strong man, has a big brain as well as a big body. He is quite an ingenious fellow, and among his inventions are an improvement on the bicycle and a combination trunk and bathtub for travelers.

Dr. Thalburg, the physical director, and Miss Ballentine, the gymnasium director, at Vassar college, have forbidden the students there from engaging in long distance running matches. They say such contests are more likely to be hurtful than helpful.

Baring Gould, the novelist, lecturer and historian, is a keen antiquary. One who knows him writes that "he wallows in it. You should see him on Dartmoor with his shovels and wheelbarrows, unearthing some forgotten dominion. Then you should see the real man. Give him an old church register, and he'll spin you yarns about it by the hour."

RINGS AND RING LORE.

Cromwell's signet ring bore his crest, a lion rampant.

The finger ring was the earliest ornament adopted by man.

Every Roman freeman was entitled to wear an iron ring.

Wedding rings were used in Egypt 3,000 years before Christ.

Augustus wore a ring charm to protect him from thunderstorms.

Betrothal rings came into use in Europe as early as the ninth century.

The ring of Childeric is still preserved in the Imperial museum in Paris.

After Hugh Capet every French king wore a plain ring at the royal regalia.

Rings with bangles attached have been worn in India from the earliest times.

Chaucer in more than one place alludes to the thumb ring as common in his time.

Roman ambassadors sent abroad wore gold rings as part of their state dress.

Early Celtic rings were executed in interlaced work, often of very intricate patterns.

The state ring of the pope is set with a large cameo bearing a portrait of Christ.

The ring of the Jewish high priest was invested, by tradition, with many mystic powers.

Luther habitually wore a small ring, in which the setting represented a death's head.

In many female religious orders the ring is used during the ceremony of receiving a novice.—Globe-Democrat.

BITS OF HUMOR.

His Wife—"Algernon, run for the doctor, quick; baby's just suffering awful with the colic." The Artist—"Er—wait a minute till I sketch him. That is the very attitude I have been trying to get for my next magazine poster."—Indianapolis Journal.

Merchant (on discovering a man in his cellar)—"Who are you?" Stranger—"The gas man. I have come to see by your meter how much gas you have used during the last month." Merchant—"Ah, gracious me! I was hoping you were only a burglar!"—Le Progres de Bolbec.

A Sign.—"I am sure I do not feel a day older than I did when I came out," said Miss Sevenseasons, "and I didn't feel much any older. But of late I have noticed that the young men who are having trouble with their sweethearts all seem to drift to me to tell their sorrows."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

MINES AND MINING.

The gold exports from British Guiana for the first ten months of 1895 are reported to be 93,416 ounces, valued at $1,763,312.

A large gold-bearing vein is reported to have been found near Moose lake, 16 miles from Philipsburg, Granite county, Mon.

Advices from Juneau, Alaska, say that a good showing has been made in the Bald Eagle this summer, both in the mine and in the expense of handling and milling the ore, which has been greatly reduced.

A good strike is reported at the Thorpe mine at a depth of 300 feet. The ore is said to average $60 free gold, while the sulphurets are very rich. The mine is in Calaveras county, Cal., about one mile south of the Calaveras mine.

NATURAL MODELS.

The first needle was the bill of the tailor bird, which sews together leaves in order to make the nest and form a shelter over its young.

The common garden slug has the means of spinning a gelatinous thread by which he can let himself down from dangerous heights.

The swallow, in preparing its nest, drives its tunnel first upward and then downward, in order that the nest may be properly drained.

The flesh hook used by cooks to draw pieces of meat from the pot is obviously modeled after the claws of an eagle or other bird of prey.

ODD AND CURIOUS.

A woman of Bowling Green, Ky., with a family of 21 children, is suing her husband for divorce.

A rattlesnake 79 inches long and having 21 rattles was killed near Jefferson, Ga., recently.

The Journal of Fossil, Ore., advertises that it will take coyote scalps for subscription. The scalps are worth two dollars apiece in bounty in that region.

While a lawyer in Rumford Falls was marrying a couple the other day a man was waiting in the outer office to consult him in behalf of his wife for divorce.

An arctic owl, measuring a little more than three feet from tip to tip of its wings, was shot on one of the islands in the harbor of Portland, Me., a few days ago.

At an election in a masonic lodge in Richmond, Ky., a few days ago, J. D. Feeney, Jr., was made senior deacon, and his father, J. D. Feeney, Sr., was made junior deacon.

A red rabbit was caught near East Jaffrey, N. H., a few days ago. It is alive and on exhibition in that place, and the farmers living thereabouts say it is the first of the kind they ever saw.

For several winters a seal has visited the waters opposite Field's Point, R. I. It turned up again a few days ago. People who have watched it in successive seasons declare it is the same seal.

A splinter caused the death of Miss Florence Mack, of Detroit, Mich. The splinter passed under her thumb nail, leaving a piece a quarter of an inch long in the flesh. Lockjaw ensued, and four days later she died.

Live bees are sometimes shipped on ice so as to keep them dormant during the journey. This is particularly the case with bumblebees, which have been taken to New Zealand, where they are useful in fertilizing the red clover that has been introduced into the colony.

WELL KNOWN PEOPLE.

J. Milton Turner, ex-minister to Liberia, now in Washington, is said to be the finest negro orator in the United States.

Mavroyeni Bey, the Turkish minister at Washington, is a quiet, mild little man, who is a leader in the extreme of fashion and is fond of society.

Commander Miyaoka, of the Japanese legation at Washington, is one of the capital's most popular leaders of the germans.

Mrs. Anna R. Aspinwall, a wealthy and eccentric Pittsburgh woman who died in England last December, left almost her entire fortune of $3,000,000 to an orphan asylum in her home city.

Judge Culberson, the Texas congressman, was originally a criminal lawyer. He has defended 110 men charged with murder in the first degree and has never had a client sentenced to death.

Gov. Wells, of Utah, is a Mormon, and 40 of the members of the legislature are Mormons. The United States senators have, however, been selected one from Mormon following and one from the Gentiles.

Mrs. McKinley, wife of Ohio's ex-governor, has a pretty fad of making dainty bedroom slippers for her friends. During the long years of her invalidism she has made nearly 3,000 pairs of these slippers, every pair of which she has given away.

A pickpocket robbed Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward in Boston the other day, and when the thief was brought before his victim she said: "He doesn't look like a criminal. He has a good face, and perhaps he will give up stealing. I will not prosecute him."

SOLDIERS AND SAILORS.

British officers in Dublin must wear mustaches, by order of Lord Frank-Lieut.-Lieutenancy, the general in command.

Gen. Ruger, who was born in 1833, will reach the age limit and be obliged to retire from the army in about two years.

Jameson's raid has again brought out the defects of the small caliber bullet; one man is said to have had a hole drilled through his brain by a bullet and to be recovering.

An outbreak of typhoid fever among the officers of the garrison at Rennes, during one of the recent disturbances, has been traced to the ice used to cool the champagne at a banquet they gave recently.

Count Okuma, minister of finance in Japan for more than 25 years, has advised the mikado's government to invest one-half of the war indemnity received from China in the purchase of United States bonds and to set them aside as the nucleus of a war fund.

George W. Price, an old sailor, who is living at Providence, R. I., has made an invention whereby the pitching and tossing of a ship by means of a swinging cargo may be utilized to store up energy in the shape of compressed air which is to be used to propel the ship

TOLD BY THE EYES.

When the upper lid covers half or more of the pupil the indication is of cool deliberation.

Gray eyes are said by some physiognomists to indicate deceit and instability of character.

An eye the upper lid of which passes horizontally across the pupil indicates mental ability.

Gray eyes turning green in anger or excitement are indicative of a choleric temperament.

Eyes which turn green are generally to side, are frequently indicative of treacherous disposition.

Unsteady eyes, rapidly jerking from side to side, are frequently indicative of an unsettled mind.

Eyes of any color with weak brows and long, concave lashes, are indicative of a weak constitution.

Eyes that are wide apart are said by physiognomists to indicate great intelligence and tenacious memory.

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

The plight in which the Salvation Army has become involved is not a pleasant one for its admirers to contemplate.

It is reported that Charles Deshler will be appointed Postmaster at New Brunswick. It is understood that he has the recommendation of Senator Smith and Miles Ross.

The Republican Senators have held a conference and decided to adjourn the Legislature on Friday, March 13th, if the House is ready, but it is believed that the date will be changed to a week later, because the House is behind with its work.

From observation at a distance, it is evident that the feeling in Elizabeth is very bitter against J. Max Renier, editor of the New Jersey Herald, who was arrested last Saturday on twenty-six charges of criminal libel prefered by Mayor Rankin.

There will be no session of the Legislature tomorrow on account of the elections in most of the second-class counties. Both Houses will work hard the rest of the week, and it is possible that Wednesday a night session will be held to make up the time lost Tuesday. There is now every probability of final adjournment on Friday, March 20th.

In its amateurish and malignant efforts to criticise Mayor Gilbert, The News last night stated that Joseph Galbraith, who was appointed as a special officer by the Mayor, was a resident of Somerset county. This is an untruth. Mr. Galbraith has been a resident of this city for ten years, and for six years he has been a taxpayer. He lives at 508 West Fourth street. He has already served two years as a special officer.

Now is the time to obey the injunction: "Please remain seated in the cars until the train comes to a full stop at the station." A Newarker, who failed to heed that advice, was blown from the car platform twenty feet through the air. That was yesterday. To-day's dispatches tell of a similar misfortune of a New York woman, who was hurled from an express train on the Susquehanna Railroad, this morning. It is best to "lay low" while the wind is scampering through the heavens at the rate of a mile a minute, as it has been doing lately.—Newark Advertiser.

The Press trusts that the Plainfielders who attend the Board of Trade dinner at Elizabeth to-night will return home and indicate a little spirit in the direction of the local organization.—Plainfield Press.

A local Board of Trade can do much good if it has the right kind of men guiding it. For years a handful of Newarkers kept pegging away under discouraging circumstances. Their meetings were slimly attended, but the ideas and opinions enunciated were published in the local newspapers and eventually bore fruit. To-day the Newark Board of Trade is one of the most influential bodies in that city. Such has been the history in a lesser degree, perhaps, of the Boards in Jersey City and Paterson.—New York Tribune.

The merchants of Elizabeth are very anxious that the trolley road should be extended from that city to Plainfield, hoping thereby to attract many customers. A trolley line from New Brunswick to Metuchen, Perth Amboy, Bound Brook and Plainfield would be of immense benefit to local business men.—New Brunswick Home News.

Trolley lines are good things. They help the public and the public helps them. There is a piece of trolley road between Somerville and Bound Brook, and it is a part of the project to connect these two towns with New Brunswick. But it is already tied up with debts and injunctions. When a trolley line is started to connect Elizabeth and Plainfield, it will be completed, and all the towns along the line will be benefitted. But we do not want the famous county roads ruined by trolley roads, now or at any later date. —Elizabeth Journal.

Although the States of New York and New Jersey have willingly surrendered all claim to the Palisades of the Hudson, the House Military Committee has not been convinced of the necessity of expending several millions of dollars for a military park along the romantic river front. The sentimental considerations which have induced the appeal to the Federal Government to preserve the natural grandeur of the rocky wall have been apparently ineffective when addressed to the Committee on Military Affairs, which is naturally dominated by Chairman Hull, a representative from the State of Iowa. To secure the slope, and not the top here, is the present idea of the committee, a notion which leads readily to the suggestion already made in the House, that such matters should be looked after by the States directly interested.—Newark News.

Nothing makes a man feel sillier than to shake hands with a woman who pulls her hand away as though she had struck a snake.—Atchison Globe.

Clark township has the least expenses of any township in Union county. The total amount of their budget of expenses for the ensuing year is $1,200.

Governor Griggs, of New Jersey, has sent through the State Department at Washington, a letter of thanks to the American colony in Berlin for the resolutions passed at a meeting of the colony expressing sorrow and sympathy at the death of the late Hon. Theodore Runyon.

The Union county Republicans count on making a clean sweep in today's township elections for Freeholders, with the possible exception of Summit Township, and there a big fight will be made to defeat Freeholder Swain, Democrat. There are seventeen members in the Board of Freeholders, and of these all but four are Republicans. The Republicans have solid delegations from Elizabeth, Plainfield and Rahway, and control all the townships but Summit, Westfield, Clark and Union.—Newark News.

The trade unions have gradually learned that it is their wisest policy to admit women workers upon the same basis as men engaged in the same trade, and to insist that the women shall receive the same wages as men for the same work. Much remains to be done in this line, and while it is being accomplished let every working man also use his franchise to that end, insisting that women employed by the public shall receive as high wages as men when their work is equal. Let it apply to schools as to other employment. As long as injustice is done women who work, men need not expect anything better.—Newark Call.

A most ridiculous farce is being perpetrated every week in enforcing the Sunday law in some of our cities. In New York, Sunday, Feb. 16th, the proprietor of a barber shop concluded to shave himself, the shop having been closed to customers, according to the provision of the recent law. He called the boy to lather his face. A keen-eyed policeman discovered this wicked act, and demanding admission, proceeded at once to arrest the boy. After keeping him all night locked up as a criminal, the next morning the court dismissed the case. And this is typical of the farce which our city police and country spies are engaged. Under the inspiration of the promoters of the observance of the "American Sabbath," this beautiful work of legal Christianity is carried forward.—Sabbath Recorder.

A sentence of unusual, and apparently uncalled for, severity was meted out by City Judge De Meza on Mamie Clark last Saturday morning. Thirty days in the county jail—the institution where the scum of the community are harbored when they transgress the law—for a seventeen-year-old girl, who is headstrong rather than criminally bad, is not justice. While this young girl doubtless needed discipline more severe than her parents could visit on her to arrest her from a career not to be suspected as far as yet her faults were not such as to prompt the City Judge to incarcerate her in the county jail for the same length of time, and perhaps longer, than he would a hardened criminal for a breach of peace. What salutary effect a period of association with the class that are quartered in this institution can have on a girl still in her teens, is something that, perhaps, the City Judge is alone able to realize.

A measure has been introduced in the Assembly providing for the military instruction of all the boys of the public schools of the State over the age of eleven years. The bill contemplates the organization of the school-boys into an "American Guard," and provides that every organization of the guard shall be furnished by the State with books of instruction, uniforms, arms and such equipments as shall be suitable for the use of boys. Inquiry at the State School Department developed the fact that there are 1,754 public schools in the State, and more than 85,000 school boys between the ages of eleven and eighteen years. It is estimated that one-third of the boys would embrace the opportunity to be instructed in the tactics and wear a uniform. Thus the guard would be composed of about 28,000 school boys, and National Guard officers estimate the cost of equipping them at $616,000. The State authorities are almost unanimously opposed to the measure.

What Will Do It?

Medical writers claim that the successful remedy for nasal catarrh must be non-irritating, easy of application, and one that will reach the remote sores and ulcerated surfaces. The history of the efforts to treat catarrh is positive proof that only one remedy has completely met these conditions, and that is Ely's Cream Balm. This safe and pleasant remedy has mastered catarrh as nothing else has ever done, and both physicians and patients freely concede this fact.

LOYAL TO THE ARMY.

A LARGE CROWD ATTEND THE SERVICES OF THE SALVATIONISTS.

Adjutant Damon Gives His Version of the Trouble and Says That Commander Booth is Not in the Right.

Sunday will be known in Salvation Army circles in this city as a memorable one. The announcement made Saturday that a large number had seceded from the regulars caused a good deal of talk among all classes, who at once became interested in the movement of the two local armies.

The seceders met yesterday afternoon at 2:30 at Reform Hall, as announced, and when the meeting was called by Capt. Mimms there was a large audience present. Nearly all of those whose names appeared in Saturday's Press were there and there was an expression of jubiliancy on their faces. The meeting was led by Capt. Mimms in the usual way and no one present alluded in any way to the division of the army. A spirit of love was manifested and pervaded at the meeting. Afterward several were heard to remark that they were now working under the American flag and would not be dictated to by the English. The meeting throughout was successful.

A Daily Press representative called at Salvation Army hall later, and found an equally large crowd there and Adjutant Damon, of New York, in charge. There was fully as much interest as at the other meeting, and a large number of the old stand-bys were present. At the close of the meeting the reporter had an interview with Adjutant Damon, and found that he was perfectly willing to talk. In part he said:

"When the people and press of this country become acquainted with the facts in this recent unpleasentness they will not be quite so ready to side with Commander Booth. The trouble is that those who have seceded have not been willing to hear both sides of the story. On the 31st of January, Commander Booth wrote a letter to his father stating that he could not see his way clear to take another command.

"This was virtually a resignation His father then sent Miss Eva Booth here to try if possible to persuade her brother to reconsider his words. His brother, Brainwell Booth, also pleaded with him, but to no avail. He did not even answer his brother's letter. Then it was that Gen. Booth sent for him to come home, and placed Miss Booth in command of the American army. This action displeased her brother and he refused to return home."

"Why did Commander Booth refuse to obey?" was asked of him.

"That is something of which we have no knowledge, and the Commander will never tell," was the reply.

"Those who have seceded have not fulfilled their promise, when they took the oath of a soldier, but I believe that the army will be stronger than ever, and if there are ten corps that follow Commander Booth, the number will exceed my expectations. From all over the United States letters and telegrams are coming in at headquarters from the various corps, stating that they will be true to the army. If Gen. Booth's counsel and guidance has been wise since the formation of the army, we can trust him at this time and believe that he is right? I was a supporter of Commander Booth until I heard the true facts of the case on both sides, and now I am thoroughly convinced that he is in the wrong. It is exceedingly unfortunate that such a thing should happen, but I believe that we will be doubly strong from this time forth.

"I don't think the Plainfield Corps did right in holding a meeting while Capt. Saunders was away. Previous to her departure for New York Thursday night a meeting was held in which they declared their allegiance to the Army, and after she left they held a secret session and decided to secede. Captain Saunders was in New York getting the true facts to present to the Plainfield Corps and she knew nothing of their action until she read it in a Newark paper while on her way to Plainfield. Of course, she was helpless and could do nothing. It hardly seems right that they should take advantage of her absence to transact such business."

Capt. Damon led the meeting at Salvation Army Hall last evening and gave a talk on the matter, out of which the above is an abstract.

The seceders have laid aside their red garments and now wear dark uniforms.

The meeting at Reform Hall last evening was largely attended as was also the one in the Salvation Army Hall. At the former the local soldiers were in charge.

Capt. Saunders will remain at the latter place till Wednesday night when Capt. Mabel Wilson, of London, will take her place.

Adjutant Damon and wife will take charge of Corps No. 1 at Newark.

A RIGHT START.

The Child is Lucky Who Gets the Proper Kind of One.

Not Wealth or Position Alone Means "Starting Right"—Health Counts for Something.

When a child is born to very wealthy parents, we are inclined to say, "what a start in life it has." If it is a girl, the father may give a bridal present of a million dollars. If a boy, the father may take him in partnership, and give him many millions.

But what does all this amount to if the family history shows that there is a marked tendency to the development of serious disease? What comfort, if one expects that every slight cold may terminate in consumption; or every nervous pain indicate approaching nervous prostration, or even insanity? Wealth cannot make happiness when pain is present, and the shadow of approaching disease always hovering near.

Happy is the child who inherits a sound constitution. He laughs at a little cold, and does not mind a darning pain or two. But, alas, many of us inherit a tendency to weak lungs, an inability to endure exposure, or some weakness of the nervous system. Yet, with a perfectly sound ancestry, we may still suffer from all these and other complaints.

It is a great gift to have a strong nervous system. Neuralgia, sciatica, nervous dyspepsia, inability to concentrate the mind, sleeplessness, and nervousness are symptoms of weak nerves. Opiates and other narcotics, do not strengthen nerves; they weaken, debilitate. To be sure they may quiet a temporary pain, but the real cause, which is one of weakness, remains.

Weak nerves call for food and nerve tonics. The hypophosphites are generally acknowledged to be the best nerve tonics. They tone up the whole nervous system, and every part of the body responds. Cod-liver oil supplies a valuable food to all the tissues; while the medicinal agents which naturally exist in this oil exert their good effects also. Scott's Emulsion is a combination of the best cod-liver oil and the purest hypophosphites. It is called an emulsion, because the oil is emulsified or digested. Hence it is more acceptable to invalids, and all those who do not have very strong digestive powers. One dose of Scott's Emulsion will not quiet pain, but one bottle will often so strengthen the nervous system that no pain will be present to quiet.

Nearly twenty-five years ago the proprietors of Scott's Emulsion discovered a process of emulsifying Cod-liver Oil, so as to remove from it almost entirely its obnoxious fishy taste and smell, and at the same time increasing its food and remedial properties. They found also that by combining the hypophosphites with it that they added still further to its power.

Since that time thousands of imitations have come into the field, but the original has never been equalled.

FORMER PLAINFIELDER DEAD.

Randolph Waldron Succumbs to a Week's Illness in Brooklyn.

Randolph Waldron, formerly of this city, but late of Brooklyn, died at the latter place Saturday night, after an illness of one week with pneumonia. He is a brother of Craig Waldron, of this city.

Several years ago he was employed by Mr. Swain in the picture frame business, and later started in for himself. About three years ago he removed to Brooklyn where he continued the same business.

A week ago he was taken with a severe chill, and at once went to bed for treatment, and did not get up again.

He was well known in this city. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 from the home of his sister on West Fourth street. The Royal Arcanum, of which he was a member, will hold a service this evening in Brooklyn and tomorrow morning the body will be brought to Plainfield. A wife and three children survive him.

A MORNING RUNAWAY.

A Horse Creates Excitement After Being Frightened at a Trolley Car.

A trolley car frightened a horse on Somerset street on Saturday and the animal finally ran away, breaking one of the shafts and cutting himself. Peter C. Johnson, who lives on Plain*field avenue, near New Brooklyn,* drove to town this morning and after stopping at several places pulled up in front of Hann's carriage repository on Somerset street to allow a trolley car to pass. The horse became frightened and tried to jump over the shafts, Mr. Johnson held on to the reins until the horse became too free with his wheels and then let go. The equine ran as far as Front street and then stopped. During the excitement a shaft had been broken and the rough end had cut a gash on the hindquarters of the horse.

Finest in the World.

Three prominent Newark men, City Councilor Chandler W. Riker, Uzal McCarter and Mr. Tallor, visited the site of French & Vail's new hotel on the mountain Friday and all expressed themselves as delighted with the situation. Mr. McCarter even went so far as to call Johnston's Drive "the finest drive in the world." The three visitors will each take one of the six cottages which Messrs. French & Vail will erect on the drive.

SMOTHERED TO DEATH.

THREE-MONTHS-OLD BABY SUFFOCATED THIS MORNING.

The Dead Child Was Found by Its Horrified Mother at 7:30 This Morning —Was Alive Four Hours Before This.

*The little three-months-old daugh*ter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Hall, of 13 Steiger's alley, was found dead in bed Monday morning at about 7:30 o'clock by her mother. The baby, whose name was Ethel K. Hall, was found apparently peacefully sleeping and the only reason for the death seems to be that the child was accidentally smothered or strangled in bed.

Mrs. Hall nursed her baby at about 3 o'clock and then fell asleep. When found the baby's body was cold and its lips were blue. Mrs. Hall called her father-in-law, H. E. Forester, who lives near-by, at once.

Mr. Hall is employed by George O. Stevens as driver and coal-heaver. Mr. and Mrs. Hall have lived in their present home since September. The baby was born there and has always been in good health. They have another child, Roy, who is three years of age.

Dr. Simpson, city physician, was sent for, and will examine the child this afternoon to ascertain the cause of the death.

The parents are greatly shocked over the death and the manner in which it occurred.

AN INDOOR FIRE.

The Chemical Engine Again Demonstrates Its Efficiency for Quick Work.

Another indoor fire this morning gave the chemical engine a chance to show its efficiency and those who before had doubted its usefullness, were speedily convinced that it is a good thing.

The fire occurred in the house occupied by James Martin, colored, on West Second street, a few minutes before eight o'clock this morning. It was caused by hot ashes in a wooden pail. The pail was set against the side of the house, which is a frame one. A hole was burned through the pail and then through the clapboarding. The air spaces in the wall acted as flues and the interior framework was ignited along the first and second stories up to the small attic.

The stream from the chemical engine was turned into the burning space and the flames were soon extinguished, by the combined efforts of water and carbonic acid gas. The fire in the attic was entirely put out by the gas. The fire was a hard one to get at as it was in the wall. There was scarcely any water in the house.

The house was a frame two story one, owned by John French. The damage is estimated at about $100. There was no insurance.

The alarm was sent in from box 45 with the Potter Press works key.

POLICE DETAIL.

The Officers Will Alternate at Doing Night and Day Duty.

Chairman Barrows, of the City Police Board, has permanently settled upon the detail of the police force for day and night duty, and the plan will go into effect immediately. Captain Grant, of course will be on duty at day time, and Sergeant Kiely will have charge of the men at night. The day men will be Roundsman Fredrickson and Officers Saunders and Vanderweg. The night men will be, in addition to Sergeant Kiely, Officers McCue, Flannigan, Cooney, Post, Lunger, Myers, Hartpence, Flynn, Totten and the new man to be appointed. Roundsmen Fredrickson and Mattox will do duty on bicycles a part of the time. Both the roundsmen and patrolmen will take turns at doing day duty.

Florida—America's Re Verse—"Clyde Line."

Always anxious to give their patrons best possible facilities, the "Clyde Line" have built new, elegant, fast steel steamships to accommodate their continually increasing passenger traffic between New York and Jacksonville, Fla. These ships are *the largest, fastest, safest and hand*somest on the Atlantic coast, and will reduce the time twenty-four hours between New York and Jacksonville, Fla. The traveling public always appreciate the fact that by taking the "Clyde Line" they do not have to change between New York and Jacksonville, thus avoiding heat, dust and transfers incidental to all rail or other routes. Another Freight House Talked Of.

The Central Railroad Company have under consideration many important changes which they intend making at the Grant Avenue station, among which is the erection of a freight house. This is done with the idea of having one at each end of the town, easy of access to all.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE

ACTING UPON THE AMENDMENT CREATING A COURT OF APPEALS.

Adjournment Will Probably Take Place Next Week, Friday—The License Question to be Left Well Enough Alone.

On Saturday the committee of nine lawyers reported the Judiciary and Assembly district amendments to the Senate. The lawyers have been unable to agree on some points, and these will probably be two reports. There is an agreement on the point of creating a Court of Appeal, the members of which will not sit in any other court, but differences exist as to the means of getting it. There will be an amendment providing for Assembly districts in the counties having more than one Assemblyman, and the Court of Appeals will be authorized to intervene and review the apportionment law in order to prevent gerrymanders.

The anxiety of the lawyer Senators to agree on these amendments is all that has been keeping the Legislature together so long. It is practically agreed that final adjournment will take place a week from next Friday. Tomorrow the House will take a holiday because of the township elections, but will hold night sessions later in the week if "necessary to hurry along the work."

Monday the Joint Committee to revise the borough laws is in session to consider the work done by the subcommittee. Recent decisions by the Court of Errors and Appeals have upset the governments of nearly all the boroughs in the State, particularly of those organized during the past ten years. Senator Voorhees says many of them were organized only to permit the issue of bonds for local improvements. Legislation for the relief of these is imperative, and will be in the form of a general law dividing the boroughs into classes based on population. Those having a voting population of not over fifty, will be wiped out, and provision will be made for taking care of their obligations.

The Republican Senate caucus decided that it was dangerous to fool with the license question this year, and Senator Roger's bill compelling applicants for licenses to secure the endorsement of twelve property owners to be held up in committee. An attempt was made to compromise on six endorsers instead of twelve, but the saloon keepers would make no concession. They were reinforced by the Republican Assemblymen, who were afraid to go on record.

Gov. Griggs is expected to send in another batch of nominations Friday. He has seventeen appointments yet to make, including a clerk in chancery, keeper of the State prison, chief inspector of factories and workshops, a superintendent of public instruction and a Judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals.

CANDIDATES GALORE!

MANY JERSEY LEADERS WISH TO BE NATIONAL DELEGATES.

Reed in Good Shape and Harrison by No Means Considered as Being Among the "Has Beens"—Other Favorites.

Although it is a month yet before the Republican State Convention will be held to elect delegates-at-large to St. Louis, there is a pronounced activity through all sections of the State, says a despatch from Trenton to the New York Advertiser. Because of the fact that New Jersey has no favorite son of her own, friends of all the candidates have taken the license to come here and campaign. As a consequence it is more than probable that the delegation will be divided, with Morton and Reed in the order named having the call. McKinley has some friends, but not so many among the influential politicians as have his competitors.

The delegates-at-large slated are United States Senator Sewell, Garrett A. Hobart, Franklin Murphy, and John Kean. They are themselves divided. Kean in a sense is a Morton man, for he believes that a sound financial policy is the one great thing that the country needs, and that New York's Governor is the man pre-eminently qualified to inaugurate and sustain it.

Mr. Kean is a man of large wealth. He is vice-president of the Manhattan Trust Company, and is actively identified with many great financial enterprises. He was once an unsuccessful candidate for Governor, but failure did not sour him. What influence he can wield would naturally be for Morton.

Senator Sewell, in his habit of silence, is a first cousin to Matt Quay. He has not yet indicated exactly where he will be found. He has, however, long been a friend of Speaker Reed, and one of his most ardent admirers. At times friendship does not count for much, but, other things being equal, it is perhaps not doing him an injustice to say that he is for Reed.

Garrett Hobart is always a factor. He has said so many pleasant things about all the candidates that the par*ticular direction of his journeying is* not plain. The fact probably is that he has not himself come to any conviction. However, he is personally a warm friend of ex-Senator Thomas C. Platt, and all friends of Thomas C. Platt will it is understood, be requested by that gentleman to work for Morton.

McKinley's strength is with the people as a whole. He is signally lacking in the friendship of politicans who are potent, and that is a handicap which will undoubtedly tell against him. Strange as it may seem, a popular vote taken at the present time would demonstrate a remarkable showing for General Harrison. There are thousands who insist that his letter of declination does not in any manner either destroy or impair his availability as a candidate and that his declination to go as a delegate from Indiana may be constructed into the assumption of a position of a position that he wishes in no way to be held responsible for any action of the convention, even if it should nominate him.

Either Morton or Reed, it is believed, could carry this new Republican State in the fall. The administration which Governor Griggs is giving is clean cut, wholesome, efficient and economical and by comparison with those of his predecessors will be no small factor in holding the people to the allegiance which they accepted last autumn. The Legislature, as well, is making a record and is wisely refraining from taking undue partisan advantage.

A Salamagundi Party.

Miss Edith Pruden entertained a few friends at her home on East Second street Friday evening. The first part of the evening was spent in unraveling the mysteries of a giant cobweb and then a salamagundi party occupied the attention of the guests. In the latter, Miss Alice Jenkins won first prize while Miss Eva Jenkins secured the booby prize. Refreshments and conversation concluded the evening's pleasure.

BOTH SIDES HUSTLING.

REGULAR AND SECEDING SALVATIONISTS ARE ACTIVELY AT WORK.

The Leaders of the New Movement Refute the Statements of Adjutant Damon—Announcements Made for This Evening

The strife and split in the Salvation Army circles has stirred both the regulars and seceders to unusual activity and each side is endeavoring to draw the biggest crowd. The regulars still hold their quarters in the Elkwood building and the new movement are holding meetings in Reform Hall. The seceders have become known as the Independent Corps of Salvationists. The leaders of this movement furnished The Press the following today for publication:

"Independent Corps of Salvationists.

Capt. Simms, formerly in command of Salvation Army Corps of this city, has been temporarily appointed to command the Independent pending the consolidation of the benevolent organization of the new movement by Commander Ballington Booth. Meetings every evening this week at Reform Hall at 8 o'clock. Come and God bless you."

The regular corps also furnished a notice for publication, which is as follows:

Ensign Taylor, better known as the Golden Minstrel, with his wife, takes charge of the Salvation Army Corps today. They will make their first public appearance tonight. They go from here to Plainfield audiences. Don't fail to come. Big Ben will be on hand.

The following communication has also been received in reply to the statements made in the interview of Adjutant Damon published in The Press yesterday:

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Please permit the use of your columns to refute some statements made to your reporter by Adjutant Damon of the Salvation Army, detrimental to the character and principles of those who, after long and earnest searching for the entire truth in the matter, have acted in accordance with their convictions.

The subject of withdrawal from the Salvation Army was never discussed in any meeting, public or private, but was the outcome of earnest and faithful prayer. Feeling ourselves led by God, without whose guidance we should have refused to act in the matter, we called for an after meeting to follow our regular one of last Friday evening. In response, twenty-three or twenty-four members remained. The object of the meeting was then made known. After the matter had in turn by nearly all present been laid before the Throne of Grace we were led to withdraw from the Salvation Army.

A telegraphic despatch was sent to Capt. Saunders notifying her of said action at 7 o'clock Saturday morning. So undoubtedly she was notified, and did not, therefore, get her first information from a Newark paper for these two reasons: First, dispatches are invariably promptly delivered, and second, no Newark papers were notified, for could have been in time for the morning publication.

The question was asked in our soldiers' meeting last night if any comrade remembered having "declared their allegiance to the Army," and not one can recall such a declaration, or any subject or remark that could have led to such a statement, at that or any other meeting.

It is imputed to us that we have violated our oath to the Army. We fail to see how in any manner we have done so. We sincerely regret to have been so falsely represented, but the character and integrity of our members is an open book to the citizens of this city. We are led to this action on our part by the heartfelt belief and assurance from God that it will redound to His honor and glory and to the Salvation of souls, which after all is the one and only object we have in view. Led by the Spirit of God and upheld by the prayers of the Christians of Plainfield, we are with brotherly love to all, yours in Christ,

Alexander Grant,
G. R. VanNest, Sergeant Major.
Treasurer.

WHIST.

MR. REED STIRS THEM UP.

HIS RESOLUTION IN THE ASSEMBLY CAUSED LOTS OF TALK.

Proposition for a Delay in the Equal Taxation Bill—Mr. Reed Says That the Republicans Were Tangled Up.

Equal taxation caused a bitter fight in the Assembly Monday. There was a hearing in the afternoon at which Thomas N. McCarter, for the Lehigh Valley Railroad; James Buchanan, for the West Shore and Ontario and Western terminal; and Assemblyman Queen and Henry W. Conliet, spoke for the bill. Their arguments were in the main the same advanced at the previous hearings.

When the House was called to order last night Mr. Reed, of Somerset, offered a long preamble and resolutions that the Governor be authorized to appoint a commission of five to consider the matter and report at the next or subsequent Legislature.

Mr. Reed, in advocating his resolutions, said that the committee had given hearings every week at which the people of Hudson county had made statements which had been denied by the railroads and the railroads had made statements which had been denied by the people from Hudson. In the tangle he thought that the best thing that could be done would be to appoint the Commissioners and let them impartially investigate the subject and tell the House what should be done. He declared that there was politics in the bill, and that it was introduced to injure the Republican party.

Mr. Queen made a long speech. He *said that the gentleman from Somer*set did not understand the situation. He said there was politics in it. "There is so much politics in it," he said, "that the committee has held the bill for weeks. Four times the committee has promised me to report this bill, and each time they have postponed the hearing on the pretence that other railroads wished to be heard. I have counted just sixty-two railroad systems in this State which have not yet been heard, and if each is to take a week it will take sixty-two weeks more to dispose of the question.

"If the gentleman from Somerset had attended the hearings on this measure he would have become thoroughly acquainted with the subject. He would have learned from the *arguments of the attorneys for the rail*roads all he wants to know. If this committee from which no bills like this ever return will report this bill and it is advanced to third reading and then is killed. I will vote for this Commission."

Mr. Robertson admitted that Hudson and Jersey City need relief, and was willing to go to their aid, but the House should be fair to the other counties of the State as well. He claimed that the commission should be appointed, and that it was fair for Jersey City and fair for the railroads.

Mr. Roll said that the resolution was a good one. He had attended all the hearings and was still at a loss to know what to do. He had heard it stated that Jersey City must have relief or she would be bankrupt. He wanted to know why it was that when the Democrats had the power they did not pass this bill. He claimed that it was a move to injure the Republican party, and he was afraid if it passed it would bring about a State tax in two years.

Speaker Derousse cut off further debate by putting the question. It was lost by a vote of 14 to 41. Messrs. Bullock, of Passaic, and Bowers and Flummerfelt, of Warren, voted with the Hudson men. Mr. Queen changed his vote to aye, and then moved to reconsider. Mr. Cagney moved to lay that upon the table. The Speaker put the motion, and, much to the disgust of the railroad people, declared the motion to table carried, which took the motion for the commission with it.

The Governor sent in his first vetoes last night. One was against the bills extending the operation of the Martin act to all assessments for water rents and improvements, because it was not in accord with the purpose the framers of the Martin act had in mind.

Two other permits recognizances for inn and hotel licenses to be taken before a Master in Chancery or Supreme Court Commissioner. This the Governor said afforded a good illustration of that kind of useless legislation to which he referred in his inaugural.

The bill sanctioning the lease of the Greenwich Lake road to the Erie came up. Senator Voorhees moved that it be laid over. The spruce young representative of the Erie road was on the floor directly behind Mr. Voorhees.

"You had no business to make that motion," said the young man. This nettled Senator Voorhees, and he immediately moved that the floor be cleared. The motion was carried, and the floor was cleared of more than one hundred persons. The offending young man was well out of the chamber before the motion was carried.

Senate bills 37 and 60, which repeal the charter of the West Jersey Game and Protective Association, also provides for licensing non-resident gunners, and appoints ten game wardens in each county to see that all game laws are observed, came up on final passage.

The bill was championed by Senator Stokes and Mr. Johnson opposed it. The bill passed.

The House Committee on Corporations yesterday afternoon listened to arguments for and against Assemblyman Roll's bill, which provides that the granting of the right to construct trolley lines on highways shall be taken from the township authorities and vested in the freeholders. It is aimed at Montclair, whose township committee has thus far baffled all efforts of the traction people to get into that town.

An English dealer in stamps has laid away 100 8½ pence Nova Scotia stamps in a safe deposit vault, not to be opened for three years. Then he expects to reap a reward of perhaps 1,000 per cent. on his original investment of $15. This beats gold mining.

Victor Robert, of Paris, has paid $30,000 for the collection of postage stamps—all new—of Count Primoli, Princess Mathilde's nephew. The stamps were valued one by one; Moldavia's, $1,000; Reunions, $1,000; Tuscany, three lire, $600, and so on. M. Robert is a famous "timbrophile."

A two-shilling stamp of the 1883 type, printed in light emerald-green, on white paper, watermark "V & Crown," was issued in Victoria on August 25, and withdrawn on the 20th of the same month, owing to its color being so much like the current nine pence as to cause mistakes.

The Transvaal republic is about to issue a commemorative penny stamp. It is not stated what the stamp is to commemorate, but as the issue is to be limited to one year, it is quite certain that the republic can rely on the sale of several millions to the dealers, quite irrespective of what may be sold for postal purposes or private collection in the country.

TO GO BY THEMSELVES.

PLAINFIELD SALVATIONISTS WITHDRAW FROM THE MAIN ARMY.

The Action Taken by the Soldiers Last Night—Treasurer VanNest Give the Reasons for this Radical Movement.

The trouble in the Salvation Army over the recalling of Commander and Mrs. Booth has been becoming more and more general, until Friday most of the members of the Plainfield Corps of the Army which has hitherto pursued "the even tenor of its way," declared their independence of the main organization.

At the close of the regular Salvation Army meeting last night twenty five of the members of the corps, all those that were present, gathered together at the call of Sergeant-Major Grant to to talk over the question of secession. Treasurer G. H. VanNest acted as chairman of the meeting. Acting-Lieutenant Banker was present, but the commanding officer, Captain Saunders, was out of town. After a long discussion it was decided that they should declare their independence which it did almost unanimously. They will not follow any special man

Treasurer Van Ness was willing to talk on the subject and said that the reason for the secession, putting aside all prejudice on account of Commander Booth's recall, was that the International Headquarters wished to bind them to things that they could not do.

Mr. VanNest stated they would not go under the lead of ex-Commander Booth for the present, but it is generally understood that later on they will unite with the American side of the Salvation Army when the plans become more fully known.

To disabuse the minds of those who think that the corps seceded to identify themselves with Commander Booth the following declaration, unanimously adopted last evening, will explain itself:

We, the undersigned, as soldiers of the Plainfield Corps, do hereby withdraw and declare our independence, still holding our vows to God that we will follow where He may lead.

The above is signed by the following: Alex. Grant, sergeant major; G. H. Van Nest, treasurer; W. L. Sharkey, penitent form sergeant; Sister Banker, lieutenant; Sister Grant, junior sergeant; and the following as soldiers: Sisters Sharkey, Van Nest, Van Horn, May Christofferson, Nellie Christofferson, Coriell, Billett, Herlich, Weigman, and Brothers Martin Cronce, J. K. Miles, R. Coriell, Herman, Agene; Sister Myrix, and Brothers Pangborn and Thomas, recruits.

AN UPROAR AT TRENTON.

Speaker Derousse's Peculiar Decision on a Railroad Bill.

The House of Assembly was thrown into an uproar on Friday morning by a decision of Speaker Derousse, who attempted to decide in the affirmative a motion upon which the House had voted at least four to one in the negative. An appeal was taken, the Speaker's ruling overturned, and in the confusion that resulted the Speaker adjourned the House. The fight was over the bill introduced by Mr. Queen, of Hudson, the Democratic leader, which permits juries in suits for damages to take into consideration in making up their verdict the mental sufferings of the widow, widower, or next of kin, as well as their financial loss.

The bill was championed by Messrs. Queen and Walling, Democrats, and Skinner and Codington, Republicans, and was opposed by representatives who spoke for the railroad and trolley companies. Mr. Skinner referred to the grade-crossing accident at Avondale a few years ago, in which two women and three children were killed. The husband and father was permitted only to show the loss of services of his wife and the estimated loss of services of the children, and the jury returned a verdict of $1,400. After a long discussion, the bill passed by a vote of 30 to 6.

Mr. Robertson, the Republican leader, changed his vote to the affirmative and moved to reconsider, and a motion to table was made and put. The vote was almost unanimously in the negative, but the Speaker declared it carried. A derisive chorus greeted the decision, and an appeal was taken and sustained by a vote of four to one, and the House was adjourned.

During the noon recess the friends of the bill discovered that it removed the limitation which requires all damage suits to be brought within twelve months after the accident, and at the afternoon session they consented to a reconsideration of the vote and the bill was sent back to committee.

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

MAYOR HEGEMAN SPEAKS PLEASANTLY OF THE RETIRING OFFICERS.

Contract for Building the Fire Tower Awarded to W. T. Kirk—The Name of Emily Street Changed to Lincoln Avenue

There was little business to occupy the attention of the members of the Borough Council at their meeting last Friday. All the members were present except Mr. Valiant.

The minutes of the last regular and adjourned meetings were read and approved.

The clerk's report was as follows:

E. P. Stevens and other residents of Grandview avenue asked for a crosswalk at the corner of the above street and Watchung avenue. It was referred to the street committee.

H. A. McGee and other residents of Washington Park asked council to lay sidewalks in the vicinity of Rockview Terrace and the Brooks property. This matter was left as unfinished business. On the recommendation of the No. 1 Engine Co., E. J. Smith, of Manning avenue, was confirmed a member of the company.

The usual batch of claims including the salaries of borough officials were presented and ordered paid.

Mr. Peck stated that the contracts for the erection of the fire tower had been been prepared and later offered a resolution that the Mayor and Clerk be authorized to sign such papers with W. T. Kirk, the contract or, for the erection of the same. It was adopted. He further stated that a little more time was needed in deciding about the bell for the tower. His report was received and filed.

Mr. Smith said that in regard to the council changing the name of Stone street, he had not yet been able to learn whether the street had ever been accepted by the city. The matter was laid over for investigation.

Mr. Howell called up the ordinance changing the name of Emily street to Lincoln place, and on motion it was adopted on the first reading. The change will take effect April 1st.

On motion of Mr. Lounsbury, the Council will meet again Monday evening, March 16th.

In conclusion, Mayor Hegeman arose and made a few complimentary remarks in regard to Councilmen Smith and Howell's retiring from the Council. He thought it was the least the Council could do, was to unanimously thank the retiring members. Mr. Smith had only been in the Council one year, but had done efficient work which was heartily appreciated. Mr. Howell, although not having much to do, deserved credit for what he has accomplished. He expressed himself as being regretful that they were about to retire and thanking them for their work, officially bade them good night.

Council then adjourned to meet Monday evening, March 16th.

A PROSPEROUS SOCIETY

MISSIONARY WOMEN ELECT OFFICERS AND HEAR AN ADDRESS.

Their Work is Confined to the Home Field and In It They Are Accomplishing Much Good Work—Officers.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church, which was held in the chapel Thursday afternoon, was one of the largest and most successful ever held. The president, Mrs. Israel C. Pierson, was in the chair, and the regular order of business was transacted.

The society decided to renew their pledges in support of teachers and schools in the home field for another year. One is for $500, and the others for smaller amounts. These are distributed chiefly among the Mountain Whites, Indians and Mormons of the West. The reports of the officers for the past year gave evidence of a steady growth in every department.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, Mrs. I. C. Pierson; vice-president, Mrs. S. R. Struthers; secretary, Miss Mary W. Ketcham; treasurer, Mrs. William Myers; secretary of literature, Mrs. H. R. Halloway. The executive committee will be appointed later by the president.

The feature of the meeting was the address by Miss Jones, of College Settlement, New York. She has been in Plainfield before, and many remembered her excellent addresses. Her remarks yesterday were principally about her experience among the Mountain Whites, Indians and Mormons. In speaking about some of the western schools, she said that the pupils were exceedingly studious and anxious to learn. At one school where there were nine pupils, seven of them had not missed one day during a year. There was a time, she said, when the Indians laughed at the white man's queer mannerisms, but now they are ashamed of themselves, and are very anxious to be educated, and today one-eighth of them wear American clothes and speak English; one-seventh of them read English; one-tenth of them are church members, and one-fifth of them are independently engaged in business. Their development has been symmetrical, and of a most encouraging nature.

Miss Jones then spoke of the Mormons. She said that today there are 300,000 converts to the faith. Utah came into the Union practically as a Mormon State; Idaho was controlled by them, which knowledge effectively that it is possible for Mormonism to live on American soil. Recently 100,000 acres of land was purchased for the purpose of erecting a college under that faith. There is much work that we can do, she said, to lead these people from darkness into light, and she urged that each one become more zealous in this grand work for Christ.

The meeting adjourned about 5 o'clock, when tea was served. The table was very prettily decorated and Mrs. Frank S. Martin poured chocolate. She was assisted by Mrs. L. C. Rice, Mrs. G. P. Mellick, Miss Walz, Miss Halloway, Miss Cahoone, Miss Anna Miller, Miss Gertrude Baker, Miss Anna Cook, Miss Clara Frost, Miss Miriam Bowen, Miss Mabel Pierson and Miss May Evans.

A very pleasant social time was enjoyed by all, and everyone extended a vote of thanks to Miss Jones for her interesting talk.

OPPORTUNITY TO GET A HOME.

Plainfield Real Estate Company Offers Advantageous and Reasonable Terms.

The Press calls the attention of its readers to the ad of the Plainfield Real Estate Company on another page of this issue. Never before has the people of Plainfield had such an opportunity to buy a home and they should take advantage of this liberal offer. The houses offered for sale are thoroughly well built in every particular by responsible builders in Plainfield and under the supervision of architects who are well-known in this city. The rent asked each month is no more than you pay for the same house and get no credit at the end of each year. It will take four years to pay for a mortgage and get a deed, then the expenses will be trifling compared to your rent.

In conversation with the officers of the company they say that they are willing to make any reasonable terms possible to afford the community an opportunity to own their own homes. The prices asked are very reasonable, it seems, and you ought to give this your careful attention. It is only five minutes from Grant Avenue station, where you have all the advantages of the express trains to New York. The trolley road bounds the property, affording quick service to the centre of town.

It is only a few minutes from one of the best public schools. The location is one of the healthiest in the city, the soil being dry and porous and protected from the northern winds by the Orange range of mountains.

—The Thursday Evening Music Club will hold a musical at the home of Miss Bowers, of Franklin place, on Thursday evening, March 12th.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labelling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

A BUTTERFLY SOCIABLE.

Endeavorers of Congregational Church Have a Pleasant Time.

A butterfly sociable was given last night by the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Congregational church. A pleasant little informal entertainment by the Junior Endeavor Society filled the first part of the evening. First was a vocal solo, Mrs. Knapp's "Jesus' Jewels," sung by Miss Agnes LaBoyteaux, with violin obligato by Miss Nella B. Whiton. It was a sweet little song, very sweetly sung, and the little girl was so heartily encored that she was obliged to repeat it.

Miss Eva Wilkins next played a piano solo, "Vale March," by Van Baar, in a very spirited manner.

Then came a vocal duet by Harold Nomer and Edwin Weseman, Mrs. Stowe's "When Storms Are Raging," with violin obligato by Miss Whiton. The young voices harmonized very nicely, and their singing showed careful training.

The programme closed with a recitation and Delsarte drill. The recitation, "Star-spangled Battle Flag," was by Miss Amy Emmons, a pupil of Miss Addie Parker Jackson, and Misses Caroline Fuller, Agnes LaBoyteaux, Hattie Messersmith, Ethel Weseman, Miriam Sherwin and Nellie LaRue accomponied it with appropriate motions addressed to the large flag which was draped around a picture of Washington at one end of the room. The pretty little girls, daintily dressed in white, made a very sweet picture.

At the close of the programme the guests became interested in the other attractions of the sociable. Butterflies of every color of the rainbow decorated the room and found ready purchasers. A Scripture cake and its recipe were also on sale, and one of the parlors was arranged as a lunch room, where coffee and buckwheat cakes were served, "making the butter-fly" in a very literal sense.

A large number of guests enjoyed this pleasant sociable, which was arranged by a committee from the Young People's Society, composed of Miss Adeline B. Parsons, chairman, Miss Stella Winckler, Miss Mary E. Robinson, George Fuller and Robert C. LaBoyteaux.

More Room Needed for Cars.

Contractor Doremus, of Newark, has received the contract for building an addition to the Plainfield street railway car house. The extension will be 65 feet long, and will be made to accommodate the extra cars that will be used when the tracks are extended. The work on the building will probably be started this month, as the extra room will be needed at an early date. Mr. Doremus was in Plainfield yesterday making arrangements to start the work.

Entering His Ninety-First Year.

Dr. H. G. Stephenson, of West Fourth street, who had a serious fall about a month ago, injuring his hip bone, and the sciatic nerve on the left side is still very lame. The doctor will enter the ninety-first year of his age on Monday next, and everyone of his many friends extend their hearty congratulations to him in his advanced age.

KEEP OFF THE COUNTY ROADS.

A Correspondent Tells of Another Good Route for the Trolley.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—The question of a trolley between Plainfield and Elizabeth has been frequently brought before the public during the last few months by the different papers published along the line, though nothing definite regarding the route to be followed has been suggested.

The opinion, so far as my observation goes, seems nearly unanimous that the system of county roads, of which we are so justly proud and which has cost the county so much money, should not be ruined by having car tracks laid along them.

This can be easily avoided by starting from Elizabeth on the south side of the Central Railroad, following South avenue through Roselle, Cranford and Garwood to Westfield, there crossing the Central tracks below the grade and following North avenue to its intersection with the old bed of the Central, about one mile east of Fanwood, thence over the old Central roadbed, now known as "Midway," into the heart of Plainfield. This route would not in any way interfere with or injure the macadam county road and would be over roads now little used by the public, giving easy access to the inhabitants along the entire line.

The consent of property owners could also be much more easily obtained, which is another point in its favor.

Progress.

WOMEN OF NERVE.

They Went About Town Telling a Plaintive Tale to Get Money.

Among the strangers visiting in this city is William Brace, a cowboy from Buffalo Bill's famous troupe. Last Saturday two women came up to him with a plausible story of how a friend was very ill at New Brooklyn, and they had no money to pay for their stage ride. The kind-hearted Westerner gave them the required amount, twenty cents, then he watched them. After a long walk they ended up in a saloon, and Brace returned with his faith in human nature lowered several degrees. He spoke of the incident to Percy C. Ohl.

Later in the day, the two women appeared in the neighborhood of the Babcock building and worked their game on a number of prominent Plainfielders. Mr. Ohl happened to come along and they stopped him with a piteous tale. They wanted Mr. Hubbard, whom one of them claimed to know, and said that he would lend them the money. But, as it was Saturday, Mr. Hubbard was, of course, not visible. They asked Mr. Ohl for the money. In a quiet way he related the experience of his friend, Mr. Brace, but before he could finish it, two women with very frightened expressions on their faces fled in the opposite direction. Nothing more has been heard of them.

Why Call Us Windy?

William S. Potter, the Legislative correspondent, has sent us Fitzgerald's Mannual of the New Jersey Legislature, for which we return thanks. It is a most handy and complete volume. By the way, we notice that Plainfield has at last found a place on the State may. We are glad that the "Windy City" has at last been found.—Somerville Democrat.

THE CHEMICAL AT WORK.

NEW FIRE DEPARTMENT ACQUISITION GETS IN SOME GOOD WORK.

First Real Test for the New Machine Given at the McNamee Fire This Morning.—Only 200 Gallons of Water Used.

The chemicol engine had a chance to distinguish itself on Thursday and it worked to perfection. Dominick McNamee and family, of 518 Arlington avenue, corner of West Sixth street, were just sitting to breakfast, about 7.45 o'clock, when a colored woman rushed into the house screaming at the top of her voice. It was finally learned that the house was on fire, and calling to his family to send an alarm, Mr. McNamee went upstairs to find one of the front bed rooms a mass of flames. In the mean time, Jack Kreitling, who had seen smoke coming from the roof, had found John Naegle and secured a key to box 35, from which an alarm was sent in.

The chemical engine was the first to arrive and the hose was run up into the burning room. Then was the efficiency of the new apparatus manifest. In less than ten minutes the fire in the room was completely extinguished without the use of the floods of water that usually do more damage than the flames themselves. The small attic was burning fiercely but the stream of carbonic acid gas and water soon extinguished that also.

The house was a frame one with slate roof. Under the slate was a layer of wooden shingles and they still continued to burn. The slate was removed and the chemical stream below and the ordinary water above, soon put out all the burning shingles.

A crack was discovered in the chimney, between the roof and the attic floor, and it is supposed that the heat from the stove in the second floor bedroom ignited some of the floor beams. The front bedroom on the second floor caught from those and all the wood-work in the room was badly charred before the firemen reached the scene. All the furniture in the room was destroyed. The fire did not do any other damage on the second floor, while the absence of water, after the fire was over, was especially noticeable.

Chief Doane estimate that the fire had been burning nearly five hours before it was discovered. He says that it would have required 10,000 gallons of ordidary water to put the fire out. As it was, less than 200 gallons was used in the house.

There was another fire in the same house last evening about 7:30 o'clock. The chain that supported the hanging lamp in the sitting room suddenly gave way. The lamp was broken by the fall and the oil that ran out over the carpet ignited. Mr. McNamee extinguished the flames after the carpet and floor was partially burned. No alarm was sent in for this fire. After two fires, about twelve hours apart, Mr. McNamee feels rather tired. He is employed in New York by Harvey Fisk's Sons.

The house was owned by Mr. McNamee and was insured for $2,000 and the furniture for $400. The damage is estimated at $400 to house and $120 to furniture.

EPWORTH ENTHUSIASM.

Young Christian Workers Get Ready for the District Conference.

The Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue chapel held a special meeting in the chapel last Friday, previous to the District Conference which will be held at Perth Amboy at an early date.

It is the custom of each chapter in the district to hold a meeting just before the conference, for the purpose of arousing an enthusiasm and zeal.

Mr. Potter, president of the district, was detained at home for some reason and those present were disappointed in not being able to hear him.

Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of the chapel, took charge of the service and after singing a few hymns, several earnest prayers were offered. Mr. O'Donnell made a few remarks, in which he urged that each one take a greater interest in the league work, hoping that the coming conference would result in the accomplishment of much good for each chapter and for the district. The remarks were helpful to the present.

Several present also made a few remarks right in line with the subject brought out by Mr. O'Donnell. The date of the conference has not yet been set by the committee having the matter in charge, but it gives promise of being one of the most successful ever held.

Several Plainfield members have been assigned to take part on the programme.

Keeps His Identity Concealed.

Of late several residents of the East End have been greatly annoyed by being followed by an unknown man. Those who were followed have tried, without success, to get near enough to the man to identify him. Not long ago mention was made in The Press of a young lady of the east end being approached by a colored man. The man has not as yet spoken to any of those he followed, but simply dogs their footsteps.

THE LEGISLATURE.

House Passes the Bicycle Path Bill for a Path from Trenton to the Sea.

The Republican Assemblymen held a caucus Thursday morning and agreed to resist any attempt to force the Queen equal taxation bill out of committee until after Thomas N. McCarter has had an opportunity to speak upon it next Monday afternoon. The caucus also decided not to hold a session of the House next Tuesday, in order to give the country members an opportunity to vote at the township elections.

The Senate adjourned yesterday afternoon until Friday, when another session will be held in order to show the lower House that it is working for an early final adjournment. The House committee took no action on the adjournment question.

The Senate killed the bill making it a crime to sell as sterling silver, articles made of silver and alloy, and passed bills giving to a widow the personal estate of her husband after all debts are paid; giving veterans of the war preference as employees on all public works; permitting Asbury Park to raise by taxation moneys to pay for music on the beach, and prohibiting the establishing of new cemeteries in Newark or Jersey City without the permission of the Board of Health.

The House passed Bullock's bill requiring all corporations, excepting railroad companies, to pay their employees semi-monthly, and doing away with the "store order system" in operation in the South Jersey glass manufacturing districts. This is the same bill passed by the Legislature last year, and which was mysteriously mutilated before it reached the Governor, after the Legislature adjourned.

The Francis Bicycle Path bill was also passed. It authorizes townships to raise money to build bicycle paths between three and six feet wide, and is intended to promote the building of a bicycle road between Trenton and the seashore towns. The Reed bill, requiring trolley companies to pay for franchises through cities and towns $4,000 per mile for single track and $8,000 for each mile of double track, was defeated.

BLASTED HOPES.

Assemblyman Reed Didn't Do What He Claimed He Could.

Assemblyman Reed has lost one prospective vote in Warren township, and this is how it happened:

In the Republican Convention last fall he said he was a farmer and could husk corn as good as any man and if anyone wanted to see him do it just send him word and he would be right there and bring his husking peg with him, all ready for business.

So the Mt. Bethel Old Maid sent him word to call and try his hand at her corn. Then she baked a big apple pie, got a pack of cigarettes and a bottle of soda water, so that Mr. Reed could have some suitable refreshments while he was at it.

Then she waited and waited until the late flood carried her corn down the Dead River, and now she says that if she should ever live to have a on he shall never, no, never vote for Charley Reed!—Bound Brook Democrat.

Numerous Attractions.

The following is an alphabetical list of attractions offered by the Y. M. C. A. to $2. $5 and $8 members: Athletics, amusement room, Bar bells, baseball, basket ball, baths, Bible classes (three), bicycle room, bicycle runs, book-keeping class, bowling alleys, boys' department ($3), buck; Circulating library, chest weights, committee work, class work (physical), commercial travelers ticket, course of entertainments; Debating society, dumbbell exercise; Educational classes, entertainments; Football; Games, gymnastics, German class, Get-One Club; Horizontal bars, horse; Indian clubs, indoor shot; Juniors department; Kicking pan, Lectures, library, literary society, lockers; mechanical class, medicine ball, music; Parallel bars, parlor, partial payments, physical examinations, physical training, plunge bath, punching bag; Reception rooms, receptions, rowing machine, running track; Shorthand, shower bath, social gatherings, Spanish class, spring board, star course, swimming tank, symphony; Talks on Christian athletics, transfer to other associations, travel ring rings, trick rings; Vaulting bar; Wheelroom.

Elders Selected.

The consistory of the German Reformed church met in the church Wednesday evening, and decided to hold the annual meeting of the congregation, Wednesday evening, April 1st, at which time officers for the ensuing year will be elected. The following persons were nominated for the position of elders: Peter Doerinyer, John Becker, Sr., Augustus Wolff and W. Mohwinckel. Their names will be presented for election at the April meeting, when the finance committee will make their annual report. Deacons will also be elected and considerable other important business transacted.

HAND-PICKED HUCKLEBERRIES.

Jersey Legislators to Depose the Pinchawker and Coal Scuttle.

The Assembly only was in session on Friday, and spent more time in discussing Farmer Wildes's Hand-picked Huckleberry bill and a Republican caucus bill changing township boundary lines in Hunterdon county so that the Republicans may gain a member of the Board of Freeholders. Both were passed.

Mr. Wildes explained that huckleberry and cranberry picking was the only source of revenue to many families in the Burlington county "pines."

The shipments of huckleberries from New Egypt station to New York in 1894 were sold for $20,000, and at Cookstown 400 bushels a day were shipped for four weeks of the season. The women and children have been doing the picking, and Mr. Wildes said there was one woman down there who had raised fifteen children, all of whom had served their time in the barrens picking berries.

A few years ago a pinchawker invented a machine to do the work. It was fashioned something after the shape of a coal hod or scuttle, and with it the pinchawker would operate on the upland or low bushes, scooping off green, red, and ripe berries, leaves and branches. The huckleberry season in the "pines" lasts about six weeks when hand picking is followed, but the machine destroys the bushes so that the season is shortened to a few days. For picking the swamp or high-bush berries, the machine operator has a large basket-like arrangement fitted about him, and, going under the high bushes, he clubs the berries, leaves and branches off into his basket, besides ruining the bushes and interfering with the work of the hand pickers. The result is that the berries are crushed and dirty, and consequently deleterious to health. The machine pickers were ready to give up their machines if there was a law passed that would compel all to do so. Such a law was passed several years ago protecting cranberry pickers when the industry was threated by the machine operators.

After Mr. Wildes' explanation the Assemblymen offered many ridiculous amendments to the bill, one by Mr. Bowers, suggesting that the hand-pickers be required to undergo an examination by a Board of Huckleberry Commissioners, and be compelled to wear antiseptic gloves in order to protect the health of the consumers. Subsequently all the amendments were withdrawn and the bill was passed.

The House also passed the bill prohibiting the sale of liquor within one mile of Asbury Park, Ocean Grove, or any camp meeting resort. Bills were introduced prohibiting the giving or selling of cigarettes to any person under 21 years of age, under penalty of $20 fine, and abolishing the distinction between attorneys and counselors at law.

RELIGION IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Charges That a Catholic Girl is Discriminated Against in New Brunswick.

A discussion as to the merits of two young women teachers, one a Protestadt and the other a Roman Catholic, caused considerable excitement at a meeting of the Board of Education, of New Brunswick, Wednesday evening. When Dr. A. V. N. Baldwin, chairman of the Teachers Committee, recommended Miss Edith Voorhees, of South Plainfield, as a teacher in one of the public schools of that city, Charles Deshler declared that religion had been made a factor of the recommendation, and offered an amendment to appoint Miss Annie Gerety in stead of Miss Voorhees. Mr. Baldwin protested that Mr. Deshler was in error, and a sharp interchange of words followed.

Mr. Deshler's amendment was lost, and by a vote of 10 to 3 Miss Voorhees was appointed.

LIBRARY WILL BE ENLARGED.

Governor Griggs Signs the Bill to Make the Improvements.

The bill introduced into the Assembly permitting the proposed enlargement of the Public Library was signed by Governor Griggs Thursday. The pen with which he affixed his signature will probably be sent to the Librarian.

The improvements will be made to accommodate the Babcock scientific library, an acquisition which greatly increases the scope of work of the library.

An Afternoon of Whist.

A very enjoyable informal whist party was given by Miss Etta Bush yesterday afternoon at her home on West Seventh street. The first prize was won by Miss Long. Miss Daisy Elsberg won second prize. The consolation prize was taken by Miss Hasbrouck. After the game had been concluded, dainty refreshments were passed and a friendly chat enjoyed. Those present were the Misses Long, Miss Daisy Elsberg, Mrs. C. R. Thiers, Miss Helen Hasbrouck, Miss Bessie Brower, Mrs. Will Worth, Miss Leonard, Miss Bowers, and Miss Emily Oakley, of Rutherford.

DANIEL'S WIFE.

BY MRS. M. L. RAYNE.

"WHAT DOESN'T COME TRUE?" ASKED LORETTA.

"I AN'T say I believe in superstition myself."

"Nor me. Though I've seen the time when I wouldn't look over my left shoulder for fear of seein' the new moon."

"But you can't change the law of the universe to suit yourselves, an' I for one know that a dog howlin' is a sure sign of death."

"It takes a lookin' glass once and didn't have no luck for a year."

"Now, I don't b'lieve in any of them signs, but if I spill the salt I'm bound to get into a quarrel with a neighbor. Either here or to fair."

"If a fork drops from your hands and sticks in the floor it's a sure sign that somebody's coming. And you can tell by the way it slants where he's coming from."

"Hush! Here's Daniel's wife comin' in from the kitchen. Don't let her hear you."

They were a company of plain country folk who had assembled at a neighbor's deathbed, that of a decrepit old man, Uncle Abner Field, who had just passed away. He was feeble and childish, but as a relative of their young neighbor, Daniel Field, he commanded some respect. For himself he was covetous, grasping and ill-tempered, and as no one cared to have him about he lived alone in a tumble-down house, which Daniel's wife—poor Loretta Price, that was—took pity on him and invited him to make his home with them, Daniel agreeing to everything that she suggested.

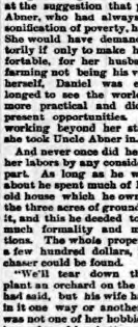
It's too dreadful to have the old man living and dying alone there when we have a room to spare and a bite and sup for him. He's your own flesh and blood, Daniel, and we must do as we would be done by," Loretta had said.

Of course the people who attend to everybody's business but their own said that Loretta expected to get something for her goodness, but she laughed at the suggestion that poor old Uncle Abner, who had always been the personification of poverty, had any money. She would have demanded it peremptorily if only to make him more comfortable, for her husband was poor, farming not being his vocation. Like herself, Daniel was educated, and longed to see the world, but she was more practical and did not disdain present opportunities. But she was working beyond her strength before she took Uncle Abner in.

And never once did he try to lighten her labors by any consideration on his part. As long as he was able to be about he spent much of his time in the old house which he owned, as well as the three acres of ground pertaining to it, and he dealt with Daniel with much formality and many specifications. The whole property was worth a few hundred dollars, if ever a purchaser could be found.

"When I tear down the house and plant an orchard on the land," Daniel had said, but his wife had no interest in it one way or another. More land was not one of her hobbies; less would have pleased her better.

Now Uncle Abner was dead, but in dying he had evolved a strange and portentous omen from the realms of superstition. He had lain for many hours in an unconscious state, with all the friends and neighbors of the family gathered about him, as the custom obtains in rural districts, and several times he had actually ceased to breathe



"WHAT DOESN'T COME TRUE?" ASKED LORETTA.

—when in one of his returns from the border land, he opened his eyes and looked upon the forms of those about him, then said, in his shrill voice:

"Daniel's wife!"

Loretta stepped hastily to him, and took the cold hard hand in her soft warm palm, but with those words he ceased to breathe. There was no more coming back—Uncle Abner had gone the way of all flesh since Adam, and the only one to shed a tear for him was she whose name was last on his lips, in that form of address customary with him.

But the effect of his words on all gathered there, excepting Loretta herself, was most remarkable. They left the deathbed with precipitate haste, and grouped together in the other room began to talk in hushed tones over Uncle Abner's last words and to discuss their different forms of superstition which had proceeded so far as the spilling of salt, when Loretta herself appeared among them, and immediately became an object of the greatest interest.

"Don't take it to heart," suggested one.

"He just wanted to see you," remarked another.

"It doesn't always come true," said one neighbor in a tone that indicated exactly the opposite of what she expressed.

"What doesn't always come asked Loretta, who did not catch the drift of their vague insinuations.

"Why, you know," stammered an old lady who was rather afraid of Daniel's wife, who was considered very clever, "when folks are a-dying, it is said that the last name on their lips will be the next one to go; it's said to be a sure sign, 'cause the dying have dying knowledge; but I daresay he had forgot something he wanted to say to you, Loretty."

"If that's all, you needn't worry about me," said Loretta, quickly. "I shan't die till my time comes, and that won't be set by Uncle Abner, I'm very sure."

"N—o," said another of the company, "but the dying are often gifted with prophecy knowledge. There was my husband's sister's second son; he died out in California just the same time to a minute that his mother died here, and he said her name with his last breath —he knew."

"Yes—maybe," said Loretta, "but we'll eat a warm supper now, and you'll all feel better, and"—with decision—"we won't talk about Uncle Abner's last words any more."

This only added fuel to the suppressed flame, but at least the friends were polite enough not to talk about the matter before Loretta. They carried it to their homes, and discussed it there, and talked of it at the general store on Saturday nights, and it was not long before Daniel's wife was looked upon as a doomed woman.

Did she know it? Yes, Daniel himself told her of the reports, and they laughed over them together. Loretta declared three was not a grain of superstition in her nature, and she would not die any sooner for being "called."

When we say we have no superstitions we deceive ourselves. It may not be in your way—or ours—or yours —but in some way it is full of superstition. You laugh at the potency of the new moon seen over your left shoulder, but you will stand an hour on the walk rather than cross between the rear axles of a funeral procession. I smile at your superstition, but if I met a black cat on the threshold of a journey I would postpone the journey.

Daniel's wife was not superstitious, but from the hour of old Abner's death she began to pine and fail in flesh and spirit. She knew it was foolish, but she heard that rasping voice calling her everywhere, and at all hours "Daniel's wife!" "Daniel's wife!" and in the night she would rise hurriedly from troubled slumbers and go over the house as if in obedience to the "call," and return pale and trembling. She could not abandon baking face and hands, while Daniel slept on undisturbed by her waking idiosyncracies.

But he, too, saw that his wife was affected by the strange happening, and to divert her mind and give her something else to think of, he suggested tearing down the old house, and planting the new orchard.

She assented indifferently. Farming was not to her taste, but she loved her husband and tried with wifely interest to take part in all his schemes. So a couple of neighbors were invited to assist, and the great, old, farming contraption, and the old-fashioned window casements and the doors were removed, and soon a sound of ripping and tearing saluted Loretta's ears. It brought the picture of the old man, and his last cry; she could hear it as distinctly as if he were in the next room. Often in the night when she heard it in dreams she awakened with a cry that caused her husband still alive, a breathing, hoping, loving woman, not a clod out in yonder place where he lay. She loved life even under its present disappointments, for always while there is life there is hope.

"Daniel's wife!" That was no ghostly voice, but a real living cry from warm lips. Other voices took it up, and Loretta hearing the call ran out into the yard, where she saw her husband waving a paper he had and men running toward her with curious little parcels in their hands, and one and all they shouted: "Daniel's wife."

What could it mean? Loretta tried to explain it half a dozen times before she could "sense" it. The poverty-stricken old man, Uncle Abner, had died enormously rich, and the house was his bank. It was filled between the walls with a lining of gold and silver, and deeds of vast possessions that no one had ever heard of, and there, too, was a will written on a letterhead to save paper, but duly signed and attested, and it left everything, silver, gold and lands, to Daniel's wife.

If the bad news of his "call" had given her joy, the news of his wealth flew faster. More people knew Loretta than Loretta knew. The golden lever moved off the incubus of superstition with material haste. There is nothing supernatural about gold or silver or bank bills.

And Uncle Abner's "call" proved the open sesame to all the joys of the world for Daniel's wife.—Detroit Free Press.

TIGER LOOSE IN A DAIRY.

Surprise of a Thirsty Bull When the Big Cat "Woughed" in His Face.

There was considerable excitement at Mysore recently. One of the maharajah's tigers got loose and was not recaptured for over 48 hours. Allowing tigers and other wild animals to escape out of confinement seems a common event in Mysore. During the time of the late maharajah one got out of his cage in the menagerie, and also during his father's reign a tiger loafed all over the fort a whole day, going in and out of people's houses, but strange to say, on none of these occasions has anyone been injured.

The tiger in the present instance is one which is kept by his highness' dairy to keep away the "evil eye" from the cattle. He was netted for Lord Lansdowne to shoot when his excellency visited Mysore a few years ago and is a splendid brute. The dairy is a very large yard, with open sheds all round, in which the cattle are tied, the tiger's cage being close to one end and a fountain near the other. The tiger got out about seven p. m. and calmly strolled around, the place being full of cattle and people at the time; but, fortunately, he had no desire whatever to taste shall-fed flesh and blood, although he passed within a few feet of the cows and the men, and after examining them all quietly lay down by the fountain.

By eleven o'clock a couple of elephants brought down the nets and a cordon was run around the place, preventing the tiger escaping or getting at the cattle, when two rather amusing incidents occurred. A cow managed to get into the yard, and after the tiger had come out for some time rushed into a part of the net closest to the tiger; and for some time struggled frantically to get loose. Every one fully expected that the cow would kill the tiger, finally, however, a number of men went out and held the wretched animal down and removed the net. Hardly was this over when a splendid stud bull got over a part of the net which had fallen down, and after it rushed the tiger, which, as soon as the cow had done, rushed right up to the fountain and dipped his nose into the water. Evidently he had no idea the tiger was there or he would never have gone up in the style he did. However, after drinking, he looked up, when the tiger, who could not have been more than a few feet away, "woughed" in his face, and the way that bull went away after that did one's heart good to see. There were two grand opportunities for witnessing "how the tiger seizes his prey," particularly as there were several sportsmen about, but unfortunately it was not to be.

After worrying the poor brute for two days and two nights, during which time he got into the net once, he quietly walked into his cage and was shut up. The cool and indifferent way in which Bengal tigers, or Royal Tigers, with their fearfully and wonderfully made hundooks, walked up and down past the tiger was most amusing. What they would have done in the event of the tiger making for one of them it is hard to tell. The claws have grown into the pads of the tiger, and the wretched animal seems to be suffering great pain. Had it not been for this there would doubtless have been a very different tale to tell.—Asian.

SOURCES OF CONTAGION.

The Breath of Sick Persons Laden with Disease Germs.

A little girl, six years of age, was taken by her mother into a street car. The car was crowded, and a delicate-looking man lifted the little one to his knee. She sat there a moment, then slid down and clung to her mother's skirts.

After they had left the car, she said: "Mamma, I couldn't sit there; that man breathed in my face most awful."

For days afterward she complained that she could not get that dreadful taste out of her mouth. In due time she was attacked with typhoid fever and died.

There was no question whatever in the mind of the physician that the man who took the child up was in the first stages of typhoid. Believing that this disease could be transmitted by the breath, he took pains to make experiments. A sufferer from typhoid breathed a number of times into a glass vessel containing sterilized water. From this water cultures were made, and the true typhoid bacilli developed in enormous quantities.

It is generally supposed that typhoid is due to contaminated water, but experiments of this sort have made it certain that the breath, especially if thrown suddenly and forcibly by coughing, is likely to be laden with the deadly germs. Indeed, physicians are becoming well satisfied that the lungs are constantly at work trying to extract from the blood and throw off all poisonous ingredients. This being the case, those who inhale the breath of a person suffering from almost any disease are liable to receive the germs and become infected with the same malady.—N. Y. Ledger.

OBSERVATION ON CHINA.

A Retired Missionary Talks Interestingly to Trinity's Endeavorers.

Every seat was occupied in the Sunday School room at Trinity Reformed Church last Monday, when a special Christian Endeavor service was held. Miss Ella C. Benedict presided and after the hearty singing of two favorite hymns, all joined in the responsive reading of Second Corinthians, Eleventh Chapter, 22-28 verses inclusive. A quartette consisting of L. A. Hummer, Charles Hummer, Horace J. Martin and Ezra Loomis, then rendered a pleasing vocal selection. This was followed with prayer by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, after which Miss Benedict in a few well chosen words introduced Rev. Mr. VanDyke, a returned missionary from China. She said the event was of peculiar interest from the fact that the speaker was a classmate of the pastor, Mr. Schenck. Mr. VanDyke is a thoroughly interesting speaker and held closely the attention of every one present. His text was taken from the Second Chapter of the Gospel of John, the fifth verse: "Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it." He then spoke in part as follows: "I hope you will take this text and keep it close to your hearts. All missionaries feel that this command is a personal one. If the power of Christ can overcome the troubles in China, it can overcome your troubles here. The peculiarities of the Chinese language are not easy to overcome. In fact, it will almost knock you off your feet.

There are two distinct parts, the reading and the speaking. In the latter there are 40,000 characters. The hieroglphics used by the Chinese are especially odd. To represent peace they draw the roof of a house with a woman under it. For discord, the drawing is the same, only an additional woman is placed under the roof. The same picture is used to express home, with a woman and a pig under the roof. One beautiful symbol is their representation of glory and beauty, for which they use the sun and moon, and another of of especial note is their expression of love, which is done by using the characters for heart and perfect. And surely love proceeds from a perfect heart. The spoken language is very difficult owing to the many different dialects. There are eight different tones in a word. A missionary once made a grave mistake by telling her cook that four dead men were going to dine with her, instead of saying that four men were going to dine with her. They dread death very much and escape any expression of its meaning."

Mr. Van Dyke then briefly related some of the peculiarities regarding superstition and the position of woman. He told many interesting facts concerning these two important subjects in the Empire. Women are of no account and in some districts one-third of them are killed in babyhood. One woman very proudly said that she had killed five babies.

He said that the Empress-Dowager was now reading a Bible which had been presented to her, and that the Emperor was also reading a Bible which he had purchased. These things were very encouraging.

He said that the letters C. E. stood for China Evangelized and all should strive to that end."

At the close, Miss Benedict thanked Mr. VanDyke for the society for his interesting address. The quartette gave another excellent selection. Rev. Mr. Todd pronounced the benediction and the meeting closed. A short time was then spent socially, when all became better acquainted with each other.

A High-Handed Action.

The most high-handed and outrageous perversion of trust and confidence was displayed in the decision of Speaker Derousse of the New Jersey Assembly on Friday last when he presumed to set aside by his fiat a vote largely in majority to the contrary. The bill under consideration would affect the railroad and trolley companies, and was to their advantage to defeat the measure. Truly the organization of the present Republican Legislature is in the interest of the corporations of this State.

THE MARCH WIND.

I love the wild March winds,
As they roar from the north thro' the pines,
Surging to the main, striving to regain
The ice-bound caverns of their Arctic reign;
With fierce blasts fleeting to their wintry lair
Ere the balmy breath of springtime comes.

Wild and weird wind, in my wood haunt,
Thy is the March music I love to chant:
Whisper soft 'neath the pine bough
Of flower and song-bird mated thy song;
Tho' fierce thy blast, mated thy plaint,
Than vestal hymn or prayer of saint.

CALLS OUT A PROTEST.

A Citizen Makes Pointed Comments on the Mamie Clark Case.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:

Kindly accept my thanks for your timely remarks on the action of City Judge Demeza in the Mamie Clark case. If ever a public act needed scoring, this case certainly demands it. The differences of the sisters is reprehensible enough, but the City Court made matters ten fold worse. What in the name of common sense will thirty days in an old bastile do to reclaim a wayward child. If the child is wayward (which I greatly doubt), the best and most Christian act the Judge can do is to dispatch the Chief of Police to Elizabeth and return the child to her home. Some one has said:

Be kind to the erring, the meek, [weak
'Tis the coward alone would trample the
Ye know not how deeply the past they deplore
In charity cover their sins evermore.
Return the child to her home.

A Statement From Mr. Clark.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—There seems to be a misconstruction of Judge DeMeza's action in sentencing my daughter to the county jail for thirty days, and many seem to think that he did so without just cause. This is not so. She was sent there by the City Judge upon the earnest solicitation of myself and family in order to detain her from the wrong life she was starting to follow, while arrangements were made to have her placed in some school of correction where she would be subject to the discipline which neither myself nor family were able to administer to her, owing to her willful disposition and the bad influences which she was subject to. I did what I thought was best for her, and it seems to me that the criticism of Judge DeMeza that he was unduly harsh in the sentence, is uncalled for.

An Opportune Lecture.

The lecture which the Grace P. E. Church Guild is arranging for next Saturday afternoon will be an interesting event. Miss Marguerite Lindley will talk on bicycling, illustrating her remarks with life-size posture drawings, skeleton, wheel and rider. Music will be one of the features and the room will be elaborately trimmed with college colors. The patronesses are as follows: Mrs. Marion Ackerman, Mrs. Charles Buell, Mrs. Bronson, Miss Baxton, Miss Lizzie Cook, Mrs. Rowland Cox, Mrs. Charles S. Case, Mrs. Simeon A. Cruickshank, Mrs. Harry Depew, Mrs. Edgerton, Mrs. Eaton, Mrs. Erick Erickson, Mrs. E. L. Finch, Mrs. Howard Fleming, Mrs. Hastings, Mrs. Louis Howard, Mrs. Charles Huntington, Mrs. Kleincke, Mrs. Lawson, Mrs. Lapsley, Mrs. W. E. Lowe, Miss Morris, Mrs. Mayer, Mrs. Minford, Miss Newton, Mrs. W. T. Pelletier, Mrs. J. W. Reinhart, Mrs. C. E. Ryder, Mrs. E. M. Rodman, Mrs. Randall, Mrs. R. M. Stover, Mrs. James Scott, Miss Tweedy, Mrs. L. G. Timpson, Mrs. D. T. Van Buren, Mrs. George W. Van Boskerck, Mrs. A. J. Woodruff, Mrs. Henry Wheeler, Mrs. Wills, Mrs. O. T. Waring.

Mrs. Chapman's At Home.

A pleasant "at home" was given Thursday afternoon and evening by Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Chapman at the home of L. W. Serrell on West Front street. A large number of guests were present both afternoon and evening, and the event was a charming one in every respect. Mrs. Chapman was assisted in receiving by Miss Ella Serrell, while Mrs. Harold Serrell and Mrs. H. R. Phillips presided at the table. They were assisted by Miss Margaret Harold, Miss Phillips, Miss Florence Serrell, and Mrs. Chapin, of Brooklyn.

Mail Carriers on Bicycles.

The bicycle has already entered one department of municipal government in the form of the mounted policemen, and now another innovation is announced along the same line. Postmaster Hetfield has made arrangements with Frank L. C. Martin, whereby he will furnish the whole post office staff with Cleveland Swell Specials. All through the summer and when the weather is good the city mail will be delivered by the flying wheelmen.

Settling a Church Insurance.

The Presbyterian church at Bound Brook, which was burned in the large fire last month, is to be rebuilt at once. The insurance companies offered to settle for $8,000, but the trustees were not suited and turned the matter over to the appraisers who settled the amount of insurance at $4,750.

Death of Mrs. Agans.

Mrs. Mary Agans died at the home of her son-in-law, John Wyman, 309 West Seventh street, Saturday. There will be a short funeral service at Mr. Wyman's residence tomorrow morning at 11:45 o'clock and at the North Branch church at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

PLAINFIELD TO BE ILLUSTRATED.

The Central Monthly to Devote Several Pages to Local Interests.

The Central Monthly which is established under the auspices of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey, in the interests of the towns along its lines, will give in the April number several handsome views, illustrations and descriptions of Plainfield and its surroundings. In order that the city may be most effectively shown both by pen and pencil, Henry Osbourn, the editor, and George C. B. Hartt, the art superintendent, accompanied by their wives, are stopping for a week or ten days at the Revere House.

It is understood that in addition to the centre double page, which will compose a plaza view in fine art work, there will be four or five pages more devoted to picturesque locations, handsome residences, etc. Commercial interests will not be overlooked, and the whole will form an elegant illustration and description, that will tend very materially to advance the best interests of the city.

This move on the part of the railroad company, which is warmly endorsed by many of the leading citizens, will undoubtedly receive unanimous approbation and co operation. That these two gentleman are competent to carry out the intentions of the railroad company is fully proven by the March number of The Central Monthly, which has already been noticed in The Press.

SELLING GOOD THINGS TO EAT.

The Lunch Box Sociable of the Odd Ladies Was a Success.

A meeting of the Odd Ladies was held on Tuesday in Red Men's Hall, West Front street, which was fairly well attended. The meeting was a short one, and at the conclusion a number of visitors arrived and then dancing was begun. After dancing had been going on for considerable time, the auction of lunch boxes began. Genial Bob Mattox, whose fame for this kind of business has extended far over the land, was the noisy auctioneer. But he kept business on the move, and his witty and timely remarks kept all in a roar of laughter. In fact, he made business so good that the Odd Ladies cleared expenses off the sale of lunch boxes alone. As soon as the contents of the boxes had been partaken of dancing was resumed to the music furnished by Naylor. Mrs. James Radin was floor manager.

The committee in charge, to whom the success of the affair is due, consisted of Mrs. Cox, chairman; Mrs. H. W. Angleman, Mrs. Page, Mrs. Perry and Mrs. Randolph.

For a Gold Standard.

Henry Hentz, chairman of the special committee on sound financial legislation of the New York Chamber of Commerce, recently reported the following:

The Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York believes that the time has now come for a movement on the part of the commercial bodies and all men, whether engaged in farming, manufacture or trade, who are interested in commercial prosperity in the United States to remove from political agitation the question of the permanence of the standard of value upon which all of the business of this country is transacted. It invites co-operation to this end, in an effort to create a strong public opinion in behalf of an unequivocal declaration for the gold standard by conventions of both of the great parties in favor of the maintenance of our existing standard and of the elimination of all doubtful expressions in respect to the reopening of the mints of the United States to the free coinage of silver.

The time is past, if it ever existed, for any halting, doubtful phrasing to express the meaning of political parties upon this important subject. We must have no platforms that can be interpreted to mean one thing in one part of the land and another thing in another part of the land.

It is important to every business man, producer and wage earner to put a stop to the enormous cost to the Government and to all of our people resulting from the continuance of the agitation in favor of the free coinage of silver, which stands in the way of a revival of confidence and national business prosperity. Therefore, we ask all citizens to unite in a vigorous effort to urge the selection of delegates to the political conventions of both great parties who will authorize in their platforms utterances in favor of the maintenance of the present gold standard of value. The time is short and action ought, therefore, to be all the more prompt and determined.

A Change in the Time Table.

A new time table will take effect on the Jersey Central Railroad Sunday. There will be several important changes, especially in the Blue Line trains.

Taken in Time.

Hood's Sarsaparilla has achieved great success in warding off sickness which, if allowed to progress, would have undermined the whole system and given disease a strong foothold to cause much suffering and even threaten death. Hood's Sarsaparilla has done all this and even more. It has been taken in thousands of cases which were thought to be incurable, and after a fair trial has effected wonderful cures, bringing health, strength and joy to the afflicted. Another important point about Hood's Sarsaparilla is that its cures are permanent, because they start from the solid foundation of purified, vitalized and enriched blood. But it is not what we say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story.

Statistics of the Red Men.

At the Council fire of Miantonomoh Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., held Friday evening, Representative D. C. Allen made a report of the proceedings of the Great Council of New Jersey. Several pertinent facts of interest to Red Men were given as follows: Total membership in New Jersey, 18,000; amount disbursed for relief during the year, $100,000; amount of receipts, $175,000; total wealth, $279,000. During the year six tribes were instituted, and all the tribes are in a healthy flourishing condition.

SCHOOL SOLONS CHOSEN.

S. B. JOSEPH RETIRED FROM THE BOROUGH SCHOOL BOARD.

A Lively Time at the Annual School Meeting.—Point Raised That a Vote on an Appropriation Was Illegal.

North Plainfield is at present passing through a most lively experience, in the way of municipal affairs. Fully awake to the duties of the hour the citizens turned out en masse last Tuesday and attended the School Board election. Some had their own ideas, while others, coming without this necessary item, borrowed from their neighbors.

Hugh B Reed was chosen chairman and Charles H. Lyman, secretary. The latter read the call of the meeting which was for the purpose of electing three school trustees and making the customary appropriations for school purposes.

President S. St. John McCutchen and District Clerk S. B. Joseph, of the School Board, presented their annual reports.

The President's report was in part as follows:

During the year there has been a natural increase in the membership of the school, which we note regret as a necessity, the enrollment down to the first day of January, being 78 against 70 enrollment at the corresponding date of a year ago.

As at the close of the course of the Plainfield High School, extends over four years; the first two years of which we cover in our own course, so that all graduates enter the third year of the High School, having gone two years of High School work with us.

We found, however, that our graduates going into the High School were at a disadvantage because Latin was taught in the High School, in the first two years, and that our pupils entering, after those two years, without having studied Latin were much handicapped.

At a very inconsiderable expense to the district we secured the services of William F. Henderson, and organized for him a class in Latin. The class is made up of pupils taken from our highest two classes; the study being voluntary on their part. The class started twenty-three in number. Five have dropped from it, eighteen remain and are doing good work.

The school building is giving satisfaction. The time is approaching when, for the preservation of the property, the building and particularly the roof should be painted, and the interior plastered walls painted up. We have ascertained that the cost of this will amount to about $900.

The system of furnishing school books and supplies seems to be working well, the scholars generally take good care of the text books and there are few cases in which we think we can expect. To continue this system for the coming year we estimate $650 as about the amount that will be needed for this purpose from year to year.

It seems to be the judgment of the trustees expressed in interviews that in any official way that the Board is unnecessarily large, and might wisely be reduced upon the theory that a smaller number would be charged with full responsibility, can work to better purpose than a larger one with divided responsibility. The system is as yet young, however, and a longer experience of it may show a merit which does not now appear for this reason, and for this reason we suggest that no definite action is expected upon the general subject of the present school year, the trustees make no recommendation in the matter and present it, as we do, simply for your consideration.

The trustees have under the law, the legal right to expel from the advantages of such young pupils, but hesitating to resort to a harsh compulsion, and prefer, by pressure of moral opinion the influence and authority of parents and guardians to secure a proper attendance upon school.

The report of the district clerk showed that $9,957.50 had been expended for teachers' salaries, $647.82 for repairs. $974.75 for school supplies. The total expenditures for the year were $22,845.45.

The following were then nominated for school trustee, the first three being elected: S. St. Overton, 107; A. V. D. Honeyman. 92; G. M. Fountain, 91; S.B. Joseph. 36; George T. Rogers, 25.

It was a surprise to some that S. B. Joseph was not re-elected, but to some others it was not.

Next came the appropriations, which were as follows:

Teachers' salaries, $10,750; janitor, $750; clerk, $150; fuel, $550; building repairs, $650; incidentals, $250; painting, etc., $900; expected from State, $6,500; text books and school supplies, $750; amount thought to be necessary, $8,250.

The result was that 42 votes were cast in favor of the above and 48 against it. The question then arose as to what should be done, and by a vote it was decided to vote a second time. One amount named was $7,500 and another $8,000. For the former 33 votes were cast and 13 for $8,000. There were two votes cast for no money.

The item of $900 for painting was explained in detail by S. B. Joseph, who said that he had obtained approximately the cost of painting the building and repairing it.

There is now a question as to whether the second vote on appropriations is legal, and is it possible that a special meeting will be called for that purpose.

Ex-Councilman W. C. Smith thought it was unfair to vote the second time on account of a number having gone home after the first ballot.

F. D. Long and J. D. Anderson served as tellers during the evening.

All last winter Mr. Geo. A. Mills, of Labanon, Conn., was badly afflicted with rheumatism. At times it was so severe that he could not stand up straight, but was drawn over on one side. "I tried different remedies without receiving relief," he says, "until about six months ago I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. After using it for three days my rheumatism was gone and has not returned since. For sale by Armstrong's Pharmacy, Park and North avenue.

FUN BY THEMSELVES.

A STAG DINNER INDULGED BY COUNTRY CLUB MEMBERS.

Stories and Jokes Mixed With the Dinner, and Impromptu Remarks and Pithy Observations Topped it Off.

A number of the members of the Union County Country Club enjoyed a subscription dinner given at the Casino last Tuesday. The dinner was a very successful one in every way and time flew by unheeded as stories, jokes and reminiscences passed around the board while Max Wiertz and his corps of waiters served the repast. When the last course was over and cigars and cigarettes had been passed around, Samuel St. John McCutchen, as toast master, addressed his fellow members. His humorous remarks and bright sayings prepared the way for the other speakers. As is usual with after dinner speeches the remarks were, like Grantland, filled with "an infinite deal of nothing."

Major Gilbert was the first to speak. His quite manner made the bursts of humor that filled his talk all the more enjoyable. North Plainfield's ex-mayor, W. L. Saunders, defended his side of the brook with a witty speech, calling forth loud applause by his stories. Charles C. Burnett was next supposed to tell what he knew about bowling, but he didn't.

Instead he bowled his listeners over with funny stories and witticisms, but still managed to stick to his subject. E. C. Perkins ended the informal speech making by dwelling at length on the club of which they were all members, and recalling incidents of the past and suggesting ideas for the future.

Prof. Marsh, a Hungarian magician, was then introduced and began his share of the entertainment by removing a flask and pack of playing cards from Mayor Gilbert's coat. He then proceeded to "mystify his audience and the men, from whose keen eyes nothing can escape on 'change, sat bewildered as cards deliberately changed in full view at the command of this master of sleight-of hand. His tricks were all excellent and his wonderful power of naming cards, even those that were thought of by his audience was greatly enjoyed. He closed by breaking an egg into a borrowed hat and cooking it with a match until it became a pancake. He then drew from the hat a great quantity of narrow strips of paper from which he produced a live goose.

The committee in charge consisted of Clifton Wharton, Jr., and J. Parker Mason. Among those present were: Messrs. Streuli, Brown, De Witt, Reinhart, Wharton, Jackson, Burnett, Herring, Stolle, Mason, Perkins, Tracy, Dumont, McCutchen, Gilbert, Coe, Saunders, Waring, Endicott, Cock, Pope, Murray, Smith, Bushnell, Pond, Kirchoff, Schipper, Baker, Fleming, Sykes and Ivins.

MISSIONS NEEDED IN THE WEST.

Mrs. E. B. Horton Talks Interestingly at Trinity Church Last Night.

Mrs. E. B. Horton, of Cranford, secretary of the Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed church, addressed a fair-sized audience in Trinity Reformed church last Tuesday on Home Missions. Rev. Cornelius Schenck conducted the devotional exercises after which he introduced Mrs. Horton.

By the aid of a large map of the United States the speaker gave a highly interesting descriptive talk of her work in the west. During the past year she has traveled considerably in the west and was able to speak from experience. She exhibited a small American flag, which is her constant companion. She said Chicago is not considered west any more. Omaha is called the Gateway City, and after passing that point one reaches the west. She spoke of the vast need of work in that section of the country, and related many pathetic incidents where people who are suffering from want of the Gospel and the necessities of life. She said there is a wonderful work to be done in almost every section of the west, and she urged all to do more in the future.

A very interesting formal discussion of the subject followed, and many questions on the work were answered by Mrs. Horton.

At the close of the lecture by Mrs. Horton, coffee and wafers were served by Mrs. J. Fred MacDonald and Mrs. Frank Church, during which a social time was passed.

SLUSH FOLLOWS SNOW.

IF AIR SHIPS WERE IN USE IT WOULD BE NICE OUT-OF-DOORS.

Gutters Turned Into Ponds of Nasty Water Through Which Pedestrians Wade—Aftermath of the Big Storm.

Another day of slush and water under foot and a clear blue sky overhead began Wednesday, but according to Farmer Dunn's predictions it will end with a storm that is now approaching from the southwest. Yesterday would have certainly been a delightful day if air ships were in general use, but at present the American people have to rely on other means of locomotion.

The streets were in bad condition despite the efforts of Street Commissioner Meeker's men to make them passable. The warm sun played havoc among the heaps of dirty snow along the streets and dirtier slush and water resulted. The slush blocked up the outlets and the gutters were turned into small ponds of which the pedestrain had to beware unless he cared to wade over his shoetop in cold muddy water. Some storekeepers placed boards over the crossings nearby. The sleighing, which was good yesterday morning, was rapidly spoilt and bare spots were visible all along the principal thoroughfares. It froze again last night and straw rides and sleighing parties were numerous. Several started from this city. A large hayrick with a load of twenty young people from the city and borough went to Springfield and partway to Summit. The sleighing was fairly good outside of the towns and the party had a gay time.

A crowd of students came over from the Rutgers Preparatory School at New Brunswick in a large sleigh, under the charge of a professor. They came by the way of New Market and sang, gave their various yells and tooted horns and bugles all the way over.

The professor needed fifteen different pairs of eyes to look after his charges, for there was a general scattering when they arrived here. After doing the town in fine style the party returned by the way of Metuchen. They attracted considerable attention by their uniforms and gay red sweaters.

BAD PAIR SENT TO JAIL.

Mike McCarty and Harrison Randolph Have Justice Meted Out to Them.

Two offenders, Mike McCarty and Harrison Randolph, came up for trial before City Judge DeMeza Monday afternoon. They are the same men whose disorderly conduct in this city was spoken of in The Press some time ago, and the statements of the Press regarding their disreputable character were borne out by City Judge De Meza who reprimanded them severely, saying that they were a disgrace to the city.

The cause of their arrest was a scrap Monday night. Barney Tracy, the would-be murdered man, rushed the growler for McCarty and Randolph until he became tired and then they started after their own liquor. Randolph, the colored man, went to the bar and thought some one had insulted him. He came out and McCarty was the first man he noticed and McCarty received a stinging blow in the face. A lively time followed until Patrolmen Cooney and McCue marched the scrappers off to the lockup.

McCarty was sentenced to pay $5 or take twenty days in jail while his African companion was fined $8 or had to spend thirty days in jail.

Neither of the offenders were in the best of financial condition and both were sent to jail to serve out their well deserved sentence.

FOR SELLING OLEOMARGARINE.

Two Elizabeth Dealers in Court and One Pays $100.

For some time Deputy Internal Revenue Collector John T. Brennan has been quietly waging war against the dealers in oleomargarine in Elizabeth and in Rahway. Tuesday Noble Beatty and John Orr, two Elizabeth grocers, were on trial in the district court for selling oleomargarine without a license. Beatty settled his case, it is said, by paying the $100 fee, and Judge Gilhooly reserved decision in the other case.

Now Be Nice.

Plainfield is extending its trolley system. The system, when complete, will not only run back to the mountain and the famous "Johnston's Drive," but will take in the villages of Fanwood, Westfield and Elizabeth. All of which proves that Plainfield is not asleep, even if her head is a little large.—Elizabeth Journal.

POET AT THE FESTIVAL.

NOT IN BODY AND SOUL BUT AS REPRESENTED BY TABLEAUX.

Longfellow Was the Bard Portrayed and Many Pretty Pictures Were Presented.—Other Features of the Event

Holidays are always welcome, especially if they come as they did at the First Baptist Church Tuesday. The Sunday School room, where the "Festival of Holidays" was held, was crowded from an early hour until late at night. The gay throng with its many pretty faces and charming gowns enlivened the scene and made it more attractive than ever.

The booths were well patronized and then the procession of visitors stopped and everybody sat down to enjoy the entertainment.

The programme was an "Evening With Longfellow," and opened with the recitation of Longfellow's first poem by little Jerry Manning. A contralto solo by Miss Hardenberg followed and then the first of the tableaux was shown. Miss Bocap read portions of Longfellow's works describing the tableaux.

The first four were from Evangeline. Miss Elsie Brokaw made a very pretty "Evangeline," and was alone in the first tableau. "Evangeline" and "Gabriel," William Thiers, were shown in the next, and their parting was the scene of the third. "Evangeline" as a nun, was represented by Mrs. Harold Sorrell. Lucius H. Bigelow, Jr., was the hero of the "Children's Hour," and his tiny invaders were the Misses Kathey Bocap, Carrie Moore and Gladys Bigelow. After a tenor solo by Elmer E. Runyon, "Hiawatha's Wooing" was illustrated. Howard Case represented that worthy brave, while his fair *squaw, "Minnehaha," was Miss Eliza*beth Ailbs. In the next tableau the wedding feast was shown and included, besides the former, the Misses Sussie Woodland, Alice Needham, Nora Williams, Margaret Harold and May Stelle.

Miss Hardenberg sang another delightful solo, after which came the "Village Blacksmith" in the shape of Robert Gorton. The choir, in which his daughters sang, was composed of Miss May Clawson, Miss Bertha Needham, W. O. Chapman and Lucius H. Bigelow, Jr. The programme closed with the "Armorer's Song" from the opera "Robin Hood," which was sung by Robert Gorton with anvil accompaniment.

AN UNPREMEDITATED BATH.

A Pondville Man's Uncertain Legs Carry Him to the Gutter.

Policeman Post, whose beat takes him through Pondville, saw a resident of that section making his way homeward Monday night in a manner which indicated that the latter had imbibed a trifle more than was good for him. The policeman followed him to see that he got home all right. The man was on the wrong side of the street for his house, and started to cross the street. When he struck the gutter he went down into a pool of water fully a foot deep. He plunged around in it for awhile and then regained his feet and walked a chalk line to his house, having been sobered up amazingly by his chilly bath.

Ladies' Aid Society Elect.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of Warren chapel was held yesterday afternoon in the chapel. The reports were very encouraging and showed the society to be in a flourishing condition. It was decided to send a box to a missionary in Michigan. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Miss Sarah Randolph; first vice-president, Mrs. J. O. McKelvey: second vice-president, Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman; secretary, Miss Margaret Swain; treasurer, Mrs. M. B. Gilles.

Simon S. Hartman, of Tunnelton, West Va., has been subject to attacks of colic about once a year, and would have to call a doctor and then suffer for about twelve hours as much as some do when they die. He was taken recently just the same as at other times, and concluded to try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I took one dose of it and it gave me relief in five minutes. That is more than anything else has ever done for me. For sale by Armstrong,'s Pharmacy, Park and North avenue.

Justice Nash's Court.

The case of Randolph against Arthur, demand for premises, was settled in Justice Nash's court. Justice Nash has issued summons in the case of Hibbits against Kaeding, demand for premises, returnable on March 23d.

THIS PEERLESS DOMAIN.

JAMES E. MARTINE'S ADDRESS FULL OF HEARTY PATRIOTISM.

The Farmer Orator Thrills the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick With His Toast to the United States of America.

The banquet of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick at Elizabeth Tuesday was largely attended and was an elaborate and pleasant affair all the way through. City Clerk James Manning, of Elizabeth, was toastmaster. Among those who responded to toasts were James E. Martine of this city, F. C. Marsh, Judge Gilhooly, John Matthews, Frank Dunn and Mayor John Rankin, of Elizabeth. Mr. Martine was the first to respond and spoke on the "United States of America." He spoke as follows:

No tongue can tell its glorious future nor sound for humanity too well its claims. Peerless domain of individual, independent States; integral parts of the greatest, grandest Republic and Government God's sun ever shone on. A Government that in the life of nations is but just merging into manhood. From a mere handful of weak colonies, almost within the life of man, we number to day 70,000,000 of people. A mixed race, blended in one, forming a people whose accomplishments and achievements in science, literature, art, mechanics. Aye! civilization, have made us the pride and admiration of the civilized globe.

A Government whose touch is so light as to be scarcely felt, and yet affording to the most humble citizen security in life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Blessed land!

A Government for the people and of the people, where their will is supreme and their flat, as expressed through the ballot law, as has been fitly said: "Let fall your ballots thick as snow flakes on the sod, for they will wield a freeman's will as lightning wields the will of God."

A Government wherein is vouched safe to every citizen that boon and blessing of free religious thought and political liberty. With these broad beneficient blessings it becomes the prime duty of every citizen to take a lively interest in the affairs of State. I have no place for a man without opinions and convictions of public questions, and less for one who, having convictions, has not the courage to espouse and defend them. An adopted citizen who is recreant to his civic trust and self imposed obligation as a citizen of the United States is a worse enemy to freedom's cause than a traitor on the field.

Bank, an arch-enemy, is he to this great and grand Republic, and to the cause of humanity and liberty, that would bring into politics religious hatred and race prejudice.

This glorious inheritance, the gift of our fathers, is ours—ours to enjoy, ours to preserve, and ours to transmit. This may be accomplished through diffusion of public knowledge and official honesty. The commonwealth requires the education of the people, as the safeguard of order and liberty. To this end the newspaper is the great agency, and a potent aid is the printing press—Godspeed the revolutions of its cylinders, that their leaflets of knowledge and information may be multiplied as thick as leaves in autumn, and through this diffusion of knowledge may Kings, Queens, Emperors and Czars only be known in history. Selfish ends and individual aims must be set aside for the public weal and good. Special fostering—taxation of the masses for benefit of classes—will breed discontent, disaster, disruption, decay, and ultimate ruin.

Matchless land, stretching from the broad and turbulent Atlantic to the quiet Pacific, and from Niagara's mighty cataract on the north to the warm waters of the Gulf of Mexico. Within this embrace has nature's God blessed us with soil and climate, that well and bud into blossom flora of surpassing beauty. Our fields and granaries feed our own people, and save from starvation the hungry millions of the old world. Our mountains fairly groan with undeveloped resources, that rivals the wealth of the Orient. Across this peerless domain are belted and interlaced great bands of steel, forming the greatest railway system on the globe, over which literally pour a tide of trade and commerce, flooding fabulous wealth and riches into the lap of the world. With all this, what is our mission? While avoiding entangling alliances, it should be to extend and urge on through all proper and moral means home rule, and the broadest liberty to the citizen everywhere, consistent with good government.

And this much I feel I may say, without touching on politics, whether it be Grover Cleveland, Wm. McKin-

RUMPTY DUM SECURED.

A BASE DRUM TO BE PRESENTED TO LOCAL VOLUNTEERS TONIGHT.

Scott Press Works Employes Realize the Essentialness of Noise and Have Bought the Instrument to Make It.

Commander Booth in outlining the plan of campaign for God's American Volunteers said that an especial effort will be made to reach the wage-earning and artisan classes. When he visits Plainfield Thursday night he will be welcomed by a large delegation of artisans. The employes of Scott's Press Works are all enthusiastic supporters of the new movement. The Volunteers made an appeal a few days ago for money with which to purchase a bass drum. The employes of the press works learned of it and volunteered to raise the necessary funds and buy the drum themselves. They have secured it and will present it to the Plainfield Post at the meeting in Music Hall tonight. Seats have been reserved for them in the orchestra circle and parquette. This will be the first demonstration of the kind in the history of God's American Volunteers.

Captain Mimms has completed all arrangements for the big meeting. Five thousand circulars announcing the "Battle of Plainfield, to be Fought Thursday Night" have been distributed throughout the city.

All the local ministers have been invited to attend and several of them will accept the invitation. The soldiers have each secured souvenir badges bearing the pictures of Commander and Mrs. Booth, and will wear them tomorrow night. Permission has been secured of Mayor Gilbert to hold street parades and open air meetings, and the "Volunteers" will avail themselves of it not only to-morrow night but in the future also.

Commander Booth and Major Glen will formally accept the soldiers as a post in God's American Volunteers, and will present them with a handsome banner, the first in the new movement. In his address which will follow the presentation he will explain briefly the objects of God's American Volunteers and of the Defender's League, which is composed of friends and sympathizers. Two local ministers have already become Defenders.

MUSIC IN PERFECT HARMONY.

Delightful Entertainment Given at the Y. M. C. A. Hall Last Night.

Music hath charms to soothe the savage beast," but not beasts alone, for those who were present at Y. M. C. A. hall Tuesday and heard the Amphion Ladies Mandolin and Vocal quartette perform, were charmed to a surprising degree by the excellent music rendered. Not a single tune, vocal or instrumental was rendered, but what the harmony was perfect. There was a good sized audience present and they frequently showed their appreciation of the efforts of the entertainers by frequent outbursts of applause.

The quartette was composed of Lavinia Sutcliffe, first soprano, guitar; Juliet L. Underhill, second soprano, mandolin; Isabelle F. Mundell, first alto, mandolin; M. Louise Mundell, second alto, mandolin. The programme consisted of eleven numbers and encores were given to nearly all of them.

Begging Impostors.

The Organized Aid Association desires to warn the people of Plainfield against persons begging from door to door. As many impostors are about it is best to take the names and, if possible, a description of the parties, and write Mrs. Woodruff, agent of the association, corner of Park and North avenues. At present there are two persons, a man and a young girl, going about soliciting aid, who have been investigated by this association and are proved to be unworthy.

Not to be Trifled With.

(From Cincinnati Gazette.)

Will people ever learn that a "cold" is an accident to be dreaded, and that when it occurs treatment should be promptly applied? There is no knowing where the trouble will end; and while complete recovery is the rule, the exceptions are terribly frequent, and thousands upon thousands of fatal illnesses occur every year, hastened by a little injudicious exposure and seemingly trifling systems. Beyond this, there are today countless invalids who can trace their complaints to "colds," which at the time of occurrence gave no concern, and were therefore neglected.—When troubled with a cold use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is prompt and effectual. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Armstrong's Pharmacy, Park and North avenue.

It not only is so, it must be so, One Minute Cough Cure acts quickly, and that's what you want to go. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front St.

HOW LEM ROPED THE B'AR.

EM CHILDRESS is renowned as the man who wears the biggest pair of spurs in Grant county—a considerable feat. Also as the man who roped the bear. This story is to be about the roping of the bear, which incident made much talk even in this land of daredevil, hard-riding cowpunchers.

The celebrated Lemuel is a long-legged and good-natured Texan. He is foreman of the L. C. ranch and he delights in a bear hunt rather more than anything else. Lemuel was born on the panhandle, and had his early education driving cattle over the big trail and dodging Comanches. He killed his first Comanche at the tender age of seventeen with a double barreled shotgun. He has been riding and sleeping under his saddle blanket these thirty years, and he has a fashion of wearing out three horses a day.

But as to that bear: Thomas Lyons, the manager of the Lyons & Campbell Cattle company, is one of the most enthusiastic bear hunters in New Mexico, and he would as soon think of starting after a grizzly without his Winchester as to leave Lem behind. Last November his outfit was up in the Mogollon mountains on a bear hunt, near the mouth of Sapillo creek, in a horribly rough country, they found where a huge grizzly had killed a bull, almost taking the beast's head off with one swipe of his paw. It is the habit of the grizzly to thus kill a cow, devour as much of the carcass as it wishes, then go away, bedding somewhere in the neighborhood, and returning from time to time to feast again upon the cow. Also it is the habit of bear hunters, knowing all this, to bury a forty-pound steel trap in the sand near the carcass, with the expectation that the bear will step into it and be thereafter considerably hampered in his movements. This is what Mr. Lyons did on this occasion. He set his bear-trap near the dead bull, and to the chain of the trap he attached a twenty-foot sapling, of exceeding toughness. This was done in the evening. The next morning men and dogs set out from the camp, expecting to find the trap sprung. It was sprung, but not by the big grizzly. During the night an impudent little four hundred bear, a common black bear no bigger than a yearling heifer, had come along and struck his foot into the trap. Of course bear, trap, sapling and all had disappeared, but between them all they managed to leave a trail as plain as the stage road. So off went the dogs and after them the hunters, tearing over rocks and through brush that nothing but a New Mexican horse could crawl through at a walk. The bear had taken right down Sapillo creek, which here runs through a deep "box" canyon—that is, a cleft in the mountain side with almost perpendicular walls. The dogs—Tom Lyons has a ferocious pack of bear dogs—overtook the beast three-quarters of a mile from the place where the trap was set and they went at him in fine style. The uproar and scratching of rocks, the snarling of the bear, and the noise of the dogs were something tremendous. There is no use trying to tell about that—description would be wasted on anyone who never saw Tom Lyons' dogs "worolling" an active and somewhat ill-tempered bear. They say it was a right pretty fight.

The situation was this: The wall of the canyon here, rocks and precipitous, ascends in huge steps—"benches," they call them. This bear was twenty or thirty feet up the wall on one of these benches with the dogs worrying him. On the next bench only a few feet away the delighted Childress sat watching the circus—he had dismounted and clambered to this place afoot. In the bed of the creek below was the rest of the party, every man trying to see all of the fun he could. Nobody was in a hurry about shooting the bear, for it was only a cheap black bear—good practice for the dogs.

From here on perhaps I would better let Lem tell the story just as he told it to me the other night while we were squatting by a camp-fire up Davis canyon after a hard day's ride looking for bear sign. Lem was putting in the time sorting frijoles to cook over a night and he told the story with great delight. I report it faithfully word for word—barring of course necessary expurgation where Mr. Childress' language grew too warm for publication. He is apt to grow more or less vivid in his talk when he gets to talking about bear—especially about this particular bear. Said Lemuel:

"I was settin' up on the bench jist above Mr. B'ar watchin' the dogs goin' at him an' havin' whole lots of fun. Mr. Lyons and the boys down in the creek the boulders see every well, so Mr. Lyons he yelled to me an' he says: 'Rope him, Lem, so we kin pull him down an' have some fun with him.'

"'I ain't got no rope,' sez I.' So then Arthur Clark he throwed me his rope an' I made a throw at Mr. B'ar; he shook it right off jes' like this." Lem made a dab like a man trying to kill a mosquito on the back of his neck. "Then I tuk in my rope an' I made a big loop and throwed it all over him. He couldn't get away from that, an' I shore had him.

"'Throw the rope down to us, Lem,' sez Mr. Lyons, 'so's we kin pull him down.'

"Well, I clumb down to do it—that put me on the same bench with Mr. B'ar. The rope was too short for them fellers to reach, though, an' they couldn't pull him down. I yelled for 'em to throw me another rope. Then while we was a-consultin' roun' Mr. B'ar moved out. He seed me an' he come right to me. That thar b'ar, he was considerable in'ated from pullin' that trap aroun' and from the dogs a-worryin' him, an' he looked plenty mad now I tell you. My six-shooter had flopped out of my holster when I clumb down the bench, an' I didn't have no gun nor nothin'. Thar was a space between me an' the cousin'

EDITOR LANE'S STORY.

THE SUMMIT RECORD MAN TELLS WHY HE LOST HIS POSITION.

Intimates That It Was Because He Hostiled for His Father-in-law in the Recent Senatorial Contest in Kentucky.

Thomas F. Lane returned to Summit Thursday morning after a visit of four weeks to Frankfort, Ky. In response to an inquiry of the Newark News as to his removal as Chief of Division in the Treasury Department at Washington, Mr. Lane said:

"I have no disposition to enter upon a discussion of the reasons for my removal. If Mr. Carlisle's statement of them satisfies him they ought to satisfy me, as I do not believe public office is a hereditary right or traditional privilege and I have at all times believed that no man should hold office against the desire of the official who appointed him.

"So far as the case appears on the surface, however," continued Mr. Lane, "I obtained permission in October for a trip to Europe. An important libel suit against me was unexpectedly ordered to trial and I remained to defend it. My original absence was to be with pay. In January I went to Europe without pay and at a suitable opportunity the Secretary removed me. When I returned in February the Secretary offered to withdraw the order of removal and accept my resignation. This, however, I did not choose to assent to as I preferred to let the order of removal stand. My removal took place on January 21st, nearly two months ago."

The date of Mr. Lane's removal was the day the first ballot was taken in the Kentucky Legislature for United States Senator, of which Secretary Carlisle received the votes of three bolting Democrats, who refused to vote for Senator Blackburn, Mr. Lane's father-in law.

PASSING OF THE TALMAGES.

Dan Talmage Was a Well-Known Man in This State.

The recent failure of Dan Talmage's Sons, the large rice traders, is not only a financial calamity, but a matter of more than passing interest to New Jersey, Dan Talmage lived at Bound Brook, in Somerset county. He was a Democrat of the most pronounced type during the war, and barely escaped spending a few days in Fort Lafayette because of his utterances. He started the rice business and made money, and on his death left it to his sons. John F. Talmage, the eldest, was head of the firm. They are gentlemen of the highest character, and all who know them personally will regret the business misfortunes which have overtaken them. The Dan Talmage homestead at Bound Brook, a very beautiful place known as "The Evergreens," is now occupied by Mr. George LaMonte, who once ran for governor of New Jersey on the Prohibition ticket, and who has been known for many years past as having one of the finest herds of Guernsey cattle in the State.—Elizabeth Journal.

DRAGGED BY HER PONIES.

Narrow Escape of a Westfield Girl While Out Driving.

While out riding in her sleigh drawn by her team of ponies, Thursday afternoon, Miss Nellie Drake, of Westfield had a narrow escape from injury. She had just passed under the railroad bridge, to the west of the Westfield station, when the driving seat slipped from its position and she was thrown forward. She was caught in the sleigh and reins and dragged for some distance. James Fogarty, of Westfield, and Dr. J. H. Lawlor saw the accident happen and ran after the ponies. Mr. Fogarty caught them, while Dr. Lawlor extricated Miss Drake from her perilous position. She was not injured, but somewhat unnerved by the shock.

Miss Drake is the daughter of Alfred Drake, a prominent citizen of Westfield, and attends school at the Seminary in this city.

To Continue the Lectures.

At the close of Prof. James F. Riggs' lecture on Tuesday night, Prof. Bevier presented the details of the University Extension scheme and explained it. Those present then determined to organize and Isaac L. Miller was elected chairman. A committee was then selected to arrange for the permanent course next year and was given power to enlarge itself. The committee consisted of ex-Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, A. H. Atterbury, Mrs. Struthers, Miss Newton, Miss Scribner and Mrs. Robert Lowry.

ACTIVE MISSION WORKERS.

Annual Meeting of the Foreign Missionary Societies Held.

In spite of the inclement weather there was was a very encouraging attendance of members at the annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue and First Presbyterian churches held in the former church Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Ford, as secretary, prepared and read one of the best reports ever listened to by the society. It gave a detailed account of what had been done during the past year, and showed that the work had progressed favorably. It included the work performed by the Sunshine, Boys, and Young Ladies Mission Bands. Owing to the absence of the treasurer, her report was not read.

By a unanimous vote Mrs. Isaac P. Miller was placed in charge of the Boys' Mission Band, and an effort will be made to accomplish much good.

Under the direction of Mrs. S. R. Struthers, the Misses Demarest and Miss Clawson rendered a very pleasing vocal selection, which all appreciated.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Milliken, Crescent Avenue church; vice-presidents, Mrs. Petrie, First Presbyterian church; Mrs. Yerkes, Crescent Avenue church; secretary, Mrs. Ford, Crescent Avenue church; treasurer, Miss Dietrich, First Presbyterian church; superintendents of collectors, Mrs. Groendyke, Crescent Avenue church; Miss Petrie, First Presbyterian church.

At the conclusion of business, tea was served. Mrs. George Mellick presided at the table, assisted by Mrs. Gibbs, Miss Petrie, Miss Wood, Miss Davis, Miss Hartley and Miss Halloway.

SHE PUTS OUT "JOHN L."

A School Teacher Ejects a Troublesome Pupil.

Scudder's School is located between Rahway and Westfield, on the Westfield road, and is presided over by Miss Emma Thompson, daughter of ex-Freeholder William J. Thompson, of Clark township.

Among the pupils is a boy known for his fighting ability as "John L." His name is Walter Thompson, and he is fourteen. He is not related to the teacher.

Young Thompson has been causing trouble of late in school, and Monday afternoon Miss Thompson ordered him to take his hat and coat and go home. He refused to go, and showed fight. She seized him and they struggled until "John L's" head was in contact with an iron foot of one of the desks. Blood soon flowed freely from a scalp wound. Miss Thompson at last got him into the street and then left the school.

While the scuffle was going on the other pupils stood perfectly quiet. Afterwards they went on with their studies.

GIRL PALLBEARERS.

The Late Miss Shay's Companions Carry Her Remains to the Grave.

The funeral services of the late Miss Mary Elizabeth Shay, were held from her home, 25 Linden avenue, Friday morning at 9:30, and from the St. Joseph's R. C. church at 10:30, where requiem mass was said.

Rev. Father Malloy officiated and preached an excellent sermon. There was a very large attendance of relatives and friends, including the Children of Mary. An imposing sight were the six pallbearers chosen from the Children of Mary, who wore the white veils with the ribbons and bonets. They were: The Misses Kittie Cooley, Nellie Begley, Kittie Egan, Alice Kennedy, Katy K and Katy Duffy.

The floral tributes consisted of a large handsome pillow from the Children of Mary, a wreath and several choice bouquets.

Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

HOT SUPPERS WANTED.

Fire Laddies Anxious for Something to Eat After Active Duty.

The regular monthly meeting of Alert Hose Company was held last evening. The question of uniforms was discussed and it was decided to order sets of rubber coats and boots, appropriately lettered, to be carried on the hose cart, instead of having any uniforms.

One of the members brought up the question of having a hot supper after the night fires. Some thought the members should pay for it while others favored taking the necessary funds from the company's treasury. One member suggested that meal tickets be provided for a company restaurant to be run in Driver Township's flat. No definite action was taken.

A Patriotic Subject.

James R. Martine has been invited to attend the annual banquet of the Friendly Sons of America of Elizabeth on St. Patrick's day and will respond to the toast of "The United States of America." There is but little doubt but what he will do ample justice to the subject.

MUST TAKE THE COMMANDS.

Members Are Not Deserting the Army as Fast as Anticipated.

The wholesale defection from the ranks of the Salvation Army that was threatened when Ballington Booth resigned his command does not seem to have materialized, says the New York Advertiser. As a matter of fact, a revulsion of feeling has set in among soldiers and officers alike. Though they were at first inclined to resent what was presented to them as unwonted interference, they have since realized that their duty as soldiers and officers of an organization controlled by rules and regulations no less stringent than those which prevail in the armies of nations compels them to submit to the orders of their superiors, no matter what their individual opinions may be.

According to the latest statistics, the American Salvation Army consists of about 600 corps. There are 2,100 commissioned officers and 30,000 soldiers. The territory includes all the United States, with the exception of the two Dakotas, the State of Washington and Montana, which were attached to the Canadian Army. From all that can be learned Ballington Booth has succeeded in inducing only 350 soldiers to desert their standard and enroll themselves under his banner. It cannot be learned that an officer of importance has joined forces with him.

Though the organization has remained intact since Commissioner Eva Booth took command, the present arrangement is only a temporary one. A detailed account of the trouble which has occurred, including Ballington Booth's contemplated movement to form an independent organization, has been forwarded by Commissioner Eva to her father, General Booth, of London. As yet nothing but cable dispatches have been received from General Booth, and the Commissioner is anxiously awaiting orders by mail. It is expected that they will be received some time next week.

So far the Independent Corps of Salvationists, as the seceding members of the local Salvation Army Corps are called, have continued their work with their accustomed regularity. They have not held any street parades, but meetings have been held every night so far this week and will be held tonight, tomorrow night and all day Sunday.

The meetings are conducted on the same lines as those of the Salvation Army, but the uniforms are conspicuous in their absence.

ALL ABOUT THE ARMENIANS.

Christian Endeavorers Hear Papers About Those Much-Talked-of-People.

The subject of the missionary meeting held Thursday by the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Park Avenue Baptist Church was "Armenia and the Armenians," and the service proved a very interesting and instructive one. The meeting was led by Miss Adelaide Runyon, and a carefully prepared program was given. The first paper was read by Miss Emma Virginia Fish, who told in a very interesting manner of the people and their mode of life. "Their religion" was the subject of a short talk by William Stimpson, who traced the ancient history of the Armenians back to very early times, and then described the present state of the church and the work of the missionaries. Wesley Brokaw read the closing paper, describing "The present situation," vividly picturing the sorrowful condition of the people, and telling of the great need for the doing of relief work among them. At the close of each paper, short items on the same subject were read by members of the society.

A quartette, "Over the Ocean Waves" and a tenor solo with quartette chorus "Send the Light," were sung by four members of the Young People's Society, Mrs. Wheaton S. Lowry, Miss Adelaide Runyon, William Stimpson and Wesley Brokaw.

GRAND OFFICERS PRESENT.

District Meeting of the Knights of Pythias at Scotch Plains Last Night.

The Knights of Pythias of this district, which includes Plainfield and Scotch Plains, held a meeting last night in the rooms of Goodwill Lodge at Scotch Plains. Members of that lodge, of Perseverance Lodge, Unity Lodge and Crescent Division were present. The guests of the evening were Past Grand Chancellor Ralph Donath, of Jersey City, Grand Chancellor Hitchcock, of Jersey City, and Grand Vice-Chancellor Rockfellow, of Somerville. The second rank was conferred on one candidate, and important business of the order was transacted. The evening closed with a bountiful collation and speeches by the grand officers and several of the local Knights.

Material for the Trolley Extension.

Several car loads of rails, spikes, etc., for the trolley extension have arrived and will be unloaded near the Scott Press Works. As soon as the weather moderates work will probably be commenced on the work.

DIPLOMATIC TANGLES.

Uncle Sam Has Several on Hand Just Now.

An Argument for the Introduction of Reforms in the Country's Diplomatic Service—America's Sympathy with the Persecuted Armenians.

[Written for This Paper.]

Recent events in the history of the United States have impressed upon the people the necessity of establishing a regular diplomatic service. As long as the Washington government was able to keep out of foreign entanglements, it was well enough to honor prominent citizens by appointing them ministers and ambassadors to foreign capitals, but the development of American trade and American enterprises has thrown upon us responsibilities of which our forefathers never dreamed. Many of the diplomatic entanglements of the past few years, which, by force of circumstances, the congress had to take official notice, could have been straightened out by ambassadors trained in the arts of diplomacy and possessing a true sense of the dignity of their government. The idea here advanced may be a new one, but as soon as properly presented to the people of the country it will be a popular one. For, say what critics will, diplomacy is an intricate profession, and its mastery requires years of experience and contact with the representatives of other nations. We demand that a common country lawyer should pass an examination—and then we do not employ him until he has had years of practice—and yet we intrust state affairs of importance to rich merchants and retired capitalists, whose only claim to preferment is that they can spend money lavishly while they are out of the government. This state of affairs has been as amusing to foreigners as it has been humiliating to thoughtful people here; and had it not been for the sound common sense of our presidents and secretaries of state in conducting our foreign affairs would, long ago, have become the laughing stock of the world.

Had it not been for our untrained diplomatic service, Lord Salisbury would never have dared to address his insulting communication concerning the Venezuela boundary dispute to Secretary Olney. It is true, in this instance, he received a Roland for his Oliver, but that was due entirely to the patriotic courage of President Cleveland and the patriotic response of the congress; the American representatives at London and Caracas had absolutely nothing to do with it. Whenever the United States asserts its dignity, foreign powers are quick to heed its warnings; and had we had an ambassador with real plenipotentiary powers stationed at London, Great Britain would never have pressed the Venezuelan claims. Ever since President Cleveland's message has been digested by Salisbury and Chamberlain, they have tried to crawl out of the hole in which their insulting impetuosity has placed them; and the new governor of British Guiana, Sir Augustus Lawson Hemming, has done everything in his power to preserve order in the disputed Venezuelan territory. Meanwhile the Venezuelan commission has begun its impartial task of fixing the boundary, according to law, history and equity; and no one, either here or in England, doubts that its findings will be recognized by Lord Salisbury, no matter what the London papers may say to the contrary. The fact that the dispute with Great Britain over the Venezuela squabble is further emphasized by the fact that President Cleveland has written a vigorous note to President Crespo, urging him to preserve order in Venezuela on pain of losing the friendship of this country.

As regards the slaughter of Armenians, the United States senate has put itself on record on the side of humanity. Senator Cullom's resolution, which demands decisive action by Great Britain, Russia, France, Germany, Austria and Italy to stop the Armenian massacres and pledges the president the support of congress for the most vigorous action, has its take in protecting American missionaries and naturalized American citizens as well as in securing redress for injuries inflicted upon American property, is a bugle-blast for freedom and the emancipation of a downtrodden race. The Cullom resolution is a document worthy of praise; but had our minister at Constantinople possessed discretionary power he could have done much more to alleviate the sufferings of American missionaries than he was able to do in the existing condition of our diplomatic service.

Unless the partition of the Turkish empire be taken without delay by the treaty powers, the United States may yet be called upon to seize a Turkish harbor for the purpose of collecting damages incurred by American missionaries during the slaughter of thousands of helpless men, women and children. Reliable data recently received at Washington place the number of Armenians slain by the Turks at 35,000, and nearly 400,000, out of a population of 600,000, are reduced to the verge of starvation. To these unfortunates Clara Barton has undertaken to carry relief; and should one hair of this noble woman's head, or that of any of her self-sacrificing assistants, be violated, the people of the United States would insist upon the demolition of the Turkish ruin. And what a glorious thing it would be if the Starsand Stripes should wave above the Crescent and the Star; twin insignia of Moslem barbarism and cruelty!

Joseph Chamberlain, British secretary of state for the colonies, would like to see the United States set in concert with Great Britain in the case of Turkey; but his proposition, suggested in a speech at Birmingham, does not meet with American approval. We have the power and the means to fight our own battles, and no amount of "soft soap" can make us forget the Venezuelan dispute. If Mr. Chamberlain thinks that stale platitudes can lessen our devotion to the Monroe doctrine, he confesses a wrong conception of American character.

The great governors of Europe have looked on—and smiled—while thousands of poor creatures, whose protection was guaranteed by Turkey in the Berlin treaty, were being murdered or outraged. Russia, in whose dominions lives Magrditch Khrimian, the spiritual head of the Armenian church, has refused to heed the appeals of this venerable patriarch. Great Britain has sulked, and Austria has played a waiting game. The three of them, together with Germany, France and Italy, afraid of doing anything businesslike. Heaven forgive them—they cannot agree upon a division of the "sick man's" estate!

DR. LEANDER STARR JAMESON.

Archbishop Khrimian was born at Van, one of the towns recently destroyed by the Turks. In 1870 he was elected patriarch of Constantinople, but ten years later was exiled to Jerusalem by the sultan, because he spoke too freely about the outrages committed by the porte against his people. In 1885 he was elected head, or catholicos, of the Armenian church, and established his residence at Etchmiadzin, in Russian Armenia. He has journeyed repeatedly to St. Petersburg to press the case of his spiritual subjects, but owing to political conditions his missions have always proven futile. He has great admiration for the United States, and would not be surprised to see the day when relief shall come to his oppressed brethren from across the Atlantic.

Another diplomatic game, which we are now engaged in, is not quite so creditable to the United States as it might be. I have reference to the imprisonment of American citizens by the Boer government. Instead of placing this cause in the hands of a disinterested government, Secretary Olney requested the British colonial office to protect their interests. This was an affront to President Kruger, more particularly because that official had dismissed all Americans from custody on parole, with the exception of John Hays Hammond, a California mining engineer, who took a most active part in the Jameson raid against the Boers. What disposition may be made of him depends probably upon the punishment the British government may mete out to Dr. Jameson. The attorney general of Great Britain will attempt to have Jameson indicted under the foreign enlistment act of 1870, section 11, which forbids persons "to prepare or fit out any naval or military expedition to proceed against the dominions of a friendly state. The penalty, upon conviction, is a fine not exceeding $25,000 and imprisonment at hard labor for a term not exceeding seven years. It is questionable whether a jury can be found in England which will find an indictment against Jameson, who is quite a popular hero. This may anger the Boer government and cause it to proceed vigorously against the conspirators in its power.

In this necessarily brief account of current diplomatic questions I have shown, I think, that whenever our country has gained glory it has been through the president or congress. Our diplomatic service has, in every instance, proved inadequate and insufficient. Therefore, while the congress is in session, why not have a discussion of needed reforms?

A BUFFALO STAMPEDE.

An Indian Chief Saves a White Boy from Being Crushed to Death.

A number of the bulls began to bellow, and to throw dirt with their hoofs. Their noise and stir started a herd from the nearest hill, and we saw a host of them come tearing down the slope, with long, lunging jumps, some of them flinging their heels and tails high in the air, jumping sideways and bawling in a mad, freakish way, just as cattle sometimes plunge down a hill half in play, half in a state of nervous excitement. There was now a perfect bellowing and thing, and clouds of dust were rising on all hands. The chief motioned to me to shoot.

I carried a short, thick-barreled buffalo-gun—it was before the days of the breech-loaders which threw an ounce and a half slug. I aimed at a bull some 50 feet away, who offered a broadside shot in his pawing. The heavy ball knocked him off his feet, and the next moment he was at the last gasp.

The chief also fired his rifle, with what effect I did not see, for our shots did not startle even the nearest animals, so great was the noise of their own bawlings, and so thick the cloud of dust they had raised. And now there seemed suddenly to have possessed the whole herd, for a great crowd had pressed down out of the ravine, and hundreds were plunging down the hill. Charles S. Day received the biggest plurality given to any candidate in Piscataway township on Tuesday.

Secretary Lamont has approved the plans of the New York and New Jersey bridge, and the company has an disputed authority to span the North river.

The thing which will be the most interesting in the National conventions is not who will support the favorite sons but who the favorite sons will support.

Governor Griggs is confident. He says that the Republicans will nominate the next President of the United States. But it would not do for him to say anythings else.

Rhode Island is a little State, and the Democrats, as if to be entirely consistent with its geographical limitations, have nominated a man by the name of Littlefield for Governor.

The Raines license bill in New York State having been made a party measure in the Legislature, there is but little doubt but what Governor Morton will sign it. It is a bitter pill for Republicans in the big cities, however.

The overwhelming plurality which Irving I. Ross, local editor of the Westfield Standard, received in the election last Tuesday for township clerk of Westfield, shows the popularity of Mr. Ross.

That astute political prophet, Freeholder, editor of the New Jersey edition of the New York Press, proclaims that Garrett A. Hobart is set lously a possibility for the Vice Presidential nominations on the Republican ticket.

George M. Titus, of Newark, has been appointed chief of division in the Register's Office of the Treasury Department, to succeed Thomas F. Lane, of The Summit Record. The Press is not aware of the reasons for Mr. Lane's retirement, but it does know him to be a fighting Democrat.

The hat-raising device which has just been patented at Washington, ought to be welcomed by the crowds of commuters who struggle to the Jersey ferries every evening with a huge bundle in each hand, and likewise to the busy bicyclist. The average man would get into trouble if he used it.—Evening Sun.

As an assurance of efficient service the Borough Common Council can do no better than to reappoint James K. Arnold as their clerk. Mr Arnold is well acquainted with the duties of the office, and has pleased those with whom he has had dealings in an official way. During his term of service he has made no mistakes for the Council to rectify, which is sufficient evidence that his mind is well informed as to the exact duties he has assigned to him. Mr. Arnold is not seeking a reappointment, but the interests of the borough will be best served by his selection.

To circumvent the Sunday "blue laws" of New Jersey, the barbers of Newark and Jersey City have had a bill passed permitting them to keep their shops open until noon on Sunday. Those failing to close at that time are liable to a fine of $25 for each offence. The law only becomes active in localities where the Governing Boards pass a permissive ordinance. The bill is intended as a protective measure against a class of barbers who in the language of a supporter of the bill, "work day and night, eight days in the week." The bill will not affect the tonsorial artists in this city or borough as the Councils of both municipalities have decreed that the barber must rest one day in the week.

The total number of votes in the Republican National Convention of 1892 was 908. Since then Utah has been admitted to Statehood, adding four votes, making 910. In the call for the convention this year Chairman Carter, of the National Committee, directed all Territories seeking Statehood to elect four delegates-at-large, the question of their admission to be decided by the convention. If Arizona, New Mexico and Oklohama each elect four delegates-at-large, and they are all admitted, the total number of votes in the St. Louis convention will be 922. In the Democratic National Convention of 1892 there were 910 delegates, and under the two-thirds rule 604 votes were necessary to a choice. Cleveland received 617½ votes on the first ballot. The addition of Utah to the list of States will add four delegates this year, making a total of 914, and 610 will be necessary to a choice if the two-thirds rule is maintained.

Attention to most things these days means intention.

Ideas are the factors that lift civilization. They create revolutions. There is more dynamite in an idea than in many bombs.—Bishop Vincent.

The Assembly has non-concurred in an adverse report by the committee on railroads and canals on the bill providing that trolley companies shall furnish waiting-rooms at all transfer stations in cities.

The Perrine comet switched off before it struck Mother Earth, but the McKinley boom whisked into New York and brought up against the Morton adjunct with a dull thud that has stirred the political bones. The Ohio man is making a hot canvass.

The Assembly has passed the bill requiring all trolley cars to have vestibuled platforms, and thereby did a humane act. The motorman should be protected from the wild winds of winter and the hot rays of Old Sol in the summer.

The bills fathered by Assemblyman Reed may not have nine lives, but they certainly have more than one. The yellow envelope bill, which was thought to have met its fate in the Senate's adverse vote on Thursday, has been ordered reconsidered.

Senator Hill is not a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination, though he puts faith in the old axiom that "all things come to him who waits." The Senator will no doubt support William C. Whitney, with Senator Morrison as a second choice.

The action of Judge VanSyckel in reducing the bail required for the release of Editor Reiner, of the Elizabeth Herald, justifies the stand taken by The Press that $13,000 was excessive and out of reason in fairness and justice. The amount is now a reasonable sum.

Contests will be made in nearly every Congressional district in the State by both Democratic and Republican politicians for the honor of serving as delegates to the National Conventions. It is an honor, however, that is followed up, if not preceded, by a liberal outlay of money.

The resignation of Hon. E. F. C Young as chairman of the Democratic State committee leaves vacant an important post in the Democratic politics of New Jersey. The Press ventures to suggest as a fit selection for that responsible position, Hon. W. J Keyes, of Somerset county, a gentleman of character, dignity and personal honesty.

There is no likelihood that the Senate will pass Assemblyman Walling's bill reducing by 25 per cent all State salaries over $3 000. Some salaries are too high, but whatever scaling down is done should be governed by a consideration of the work and the responsibilities involved.—Tribune.

The Democrats in Rahway are considering the approaching charter election on April 14th. Republicans are also debating what can and should be done to bring about a change in the management of local affairs. The indications are that whichever party puts up the better men will be successful regardless of party affiliations.

Wednesday, March 25th, was agreed upon at an Assembly conference yesterday afternoon for sine die adjournment, and Senator Voorhees says the Senate will probably concur. Night sessions will be held by the House Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week, and the adjournment until Monday will follow in order to give the Borough Commission an opportunity to make a report.

The New Jersey editor of The Tribune asserts that the trolley road magnates *have a powerful lobby and un*limited purse at Trenton to influence legislation in their favor, writing with reference to Assemblyman Roll's bill, which empowers Boards of Free*holders to grant* rights of way. The Tribune injects this ugly jab:

If the trolleys succeed in their designs on the lawmakers, they can laugh at the united sentiment of a whole town or borough, and "work" the Board of Freeholders. To pass a law permitting such an outrageous violation of the principle of home rule would be nothing short of a political crime. The trolley agents are hopeful, however. Out in the excitement and hurly-burly of this, the last week of the session, they can smuggle through a bill giving them what they want. They are alert, energetic and resourceful, and it will require the utmost watchfulness to defeat their scheme.

James E. Martine is not dismayed by the apparent indifference of William C. Whitney towards accepting the candidacy for the Democratic nomination of President. The Farmer Orator is a man who always looks at the bright side of things, but uses his shrewd political intuition in forming opinions. Mr. Martine is confident that Whitney will be the nominee of the National Convention. Concerning Mr. Whitney's position the Newark News published the following yesterday:

A gentleman, who enjoys the friendship of William C. Whitney, L. C. Benedict and others in that coterie, has told the News emphatically that from recent conversations with several of the cabinet—including Whitney —he is of opinion that Whitney will be put forward at the last moment as the administration and New York man for the Chicago nomination. He says that Whitney will be very low till then. But he says that there is very little doubt of this but only being put forward, but of his getting the nomination. This is interesting because it shows what some of Whitney's close friends are thinking of.

Miss Mary F. Philbrook, who enjoys the distinction of being the first woman in law in the State of New Jersey, is making another important stride for her sex by urging the passage of an act to enable women to become Masters in Chancery, and it is quite probable that she will succeed. If she does, then she will have the powers of any attorney, being in turn not only an attorney at law, but a notary public, commissioner of deeds, and soon to be a master in chancery. In two more years she will present herself for examination as a counselor, and it is probable by that time she will have enacted a law to enable women to sit as Supreme Court Commissioners. Such a law would vest her with certain judicial powers.

In his first annual message to the Borough Council, Mayor Hegeman evinces a close acquaintance with the needs of that municipality. During the year that he has been in office he has personally investigated the various departments over which he has control, and has acquired an insight into their workings that has especially enabled him to act intelligently and with discretion in the discharge of his duties to the taxpayers and residents of the borough. *Perhaps the most noticeable improve*ment made in any department has been on the streets. Mr. Hegeman went into office pledged to see that the wretched condition of the roads and sidewalks should be remedied, and that he has kept these pledges is evidenced in many places where work of a practical nature has been done. Much has been done, but there is more still, and the plans which the Mayor entertains will probably be marked to a large degree by accomplishment before another year passes. His announcement that he will soon appoin a special committee to consider the question of a sewerage system shows that he realizes what the rapid growth of the municipality means in the way of modern improvements, and that it is nearing the time when some action must be taken for the disposal of sewage. While his suggestion with reference to the placing of signs on street corners is not of vital importance, yet it shows his careful attention to the details of government, and faithful is a suggestion which the Council would do well to comply with at an early date, the needs of which has often been spoken of by the Daily Press.

FAILED TO CLEAN THEIR WALKS.

Street Commissioner Meeker Enters Complaint Against Many Property Owners.

Street Commissioner Meeker has begun a crusade against the property owners who do not clean off their sidewalks and gutters according to the city ordinance, which gives them four hours after the first snow following the storm in which to remove the snow, slush or ice. The fine for such an offense according to the ordinance shall not be more than $5. The same ordinance also gives the Street Commissioner authority, twenty four hours after the storm, to have the sidewalks cleaned at the expense of the property owners.

Thursday's storm left about four inches of snow on the sidewalks. In most cases it was cleaned off soon after it fell, but in front of some vacant lots and empty houses it was allowed *to remain. Some residents also for*got about the ordinance and neglected to clean off the snow.

Street Commissioner Meeker has been on the lookout and this noon filed complaints against twenty-five residents of the city.

Officers Chosen.

At the annual meeting of the Seaboard Sanitary, Garbage, Cremating and Refuse Utilizing Company held Saturday at the Grenada hotel, the following Board of Directors were elected: Dr. John T. Fritts, Seymour G. Smith, Plainfield; Cornelius *Berrien, Montclair; William J. Fan*ning, New York; William T. Tiers, Samuel G. DeCoursey, George E. Bartol, Philadelphia. The officers elected for one year were as follows: Dr. J. T. Fritts, president; C. Berrien, vice-president; W. J. Fanning, treasurer; S. G. Smith, secretary.

Railroad Accident Cases Getting Well.

Miss Giles, who was recently injured in the railroad accident at Stelton, is still confined in the hospital at New Brunswick. Her condition is much improved, and the physicians say that in a few weeks she will be able to get up. The hip fracture is mending nicely. Ralston Dunbar has improved so rapidly that he was able to leave the hospital today. His brother Nelson is still confined and has a high fever. Erysipelas has also set in and his condition is not favorable.

Probable County Physician.

The next physician of Union county for three years, from present indications will be Freeholder Frank W. Westcott, of Fanwood, who once before held the office.

An Interesting Speaker.

Mrs. E. B. Horton, secretary of the Woman's Board of Domestic Missions, Reformed church, has generously consented to address a meeting tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock in the lecture room of the Trinity Reformed church, and the Ladies' Christian Work Society of the church have decided to serve light refreshments to all who attend at the close of the meeting. No admission fee will be charged, but a collection will be taken. Mrs. Horton is an exceedingly interesting speaker and all who listen to her address tomorrow evening will be highly entertained.

A Moulder Burned.

Jacob R. King, a moulder in Scott's printing press works, was quite seriously burned by hot iron Saturday afternoon while at work on a casting in the factory. The moulten iron ran into his shoe top and settled in the toe. Before King could unlace the shoe, his foot was badly injured. He borrowed a pair of William Scribner's shoes and was able to walk to his home on Netherwood avenue, where he is now confined. Mr. King has just finished a four years' apprenticeship, and is unfortunate in his entry into the field of journeyman labor.

Died Suddenly at the State Hospital.

James Watt, aged sixty-six years, who has been confined in the State Hospital at Trenton for the past eighteen years, died very suddenly Saturday evening of apoplexy. His son-in-law, George W. Squires, of Somerset street, brought the body to Plainfield last evening. Mr. Watt was a Scotchman, and was a resident of Somerville for twenty-five years. One daughter, Mrs. G. W. Squires, survives him. Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from Warren chapel.

Great Musical Organization.

KING WINTER IN GLORY.

A MANTLED CLOAK OF WHITE COVERS THE EARTH TODAY.

Biggest Snow Storm of the Season Came Yesterday and Last Night—No Serious Damage Can be Observed Thus Far.

From The Press of March 16th.

King Winter has certainly made some mistake in his calculations, for here, almost at the beginning of spring, there comes a taste of real winter. This anniversary of the blizzard last Thursday was a surprise but the snow that began to fall yesterday and that continued all night until nearly a foot of the frozen vapor covered the ground, was a much greater surprise. The snow that fell yesterday afternoon made the sleighing very good last night, but the storm showed no sign of abating and kept right on.

There was scarcely any wind and the mercury remained close to the freezing point all night so the storm was not a severe one except for the unusual amount of snow. The snow was light and feathery and gathered on the trees and anywhere else it could catch. Everything wore a coat of white and the barren and bleak appearance of the town was changed to a white robed fairyland.

The usual damage that follows in the wake of the blizzard was not to be seen. The trains were only delayed two or three minutes behind their usual time, and part of that was caused by the change in the schedule. There was a strange looking crowd that assembled at the station this morning. Some wore boots, some big Arctics, while many had the bottoms of ther pants strapped or tied down to keep the snow out. The railroad cars also presented quite a wintry appearance.

As soon as the daylight had fairly arrived, a veritable army of boys and men, colored and white, started out, armed with shovel and broom, to do battle with the steadily falling snow. Many householders preferred to wait until the storm was over before having their walks cleaned, but in the business streets all was animation.

Several straw rides have already been planned for this evening, and the livery stables are busily preparing for the great demand for sleighs that is sure to come unless warmer weather and a heavy rain immediately follows the snow.

Out in the country in the vicinity of Oak Tree a number of trees have been broken by the overwhelming weight of the snow.

All this morning the mercury slowly rose until it passed the freezing point and started above it. The dry snow of the night and early morning became more moist, until at noon hail began to fall, and the hail gradually turned into a cold rain. This is all according to Farmer Dunn's prophecies, but if the rain increases in force the probable results are not the most cheerful. The thick layer of snow on the roofs, with the increased weight of the water, would make lively times for plumbers and tinners, and if the snow should melt rapidly the flood of last month is likely to be equalled if not exceeded.

William VanWinkle, the Somerset street grocer, did excellent service in the borough this morning with his sidewalk snow plow and horse. The residents in front of whose homes he cleaned the walks appreciate his efforts exceedingly.

The heavy storm yesterday did not prevent good attendance at the various churches. In the morning most all of the churches were well filled, and in the evening the number present at each was very encouraging to the pastors and workers. Many of the church attendants, however, remained at home to shovel the snue in sling and reading. Last evening at one Plainfield home, the entire family held a service of their own, and it is safe to say that many others did likewise.

Supt. John Adleman, of the street railway, and his efficient corps of men, did good work yesterday and last night in keeping the tracks clear, and thus giving travelers excellent service. The cars were kept running until 12 o'clock last night, and from that time till nearly 2 o'clock the scraper attached to horses was used. Between 2 and 3 o'clock this morning cars were brought out and run from that time on. Thus it is that today people are enjoying the benefits of the car service. The cars are run in pairs, thus securing more power.

Weather Observer Neagle says that there is now fourteen inches of snow on the ground. Four and a half inches fell during the storm of Thursday, and nine and a half inches yesterday and today.

THE RISKY PARLOR MATCH.

The Head Flew Off and Ignited a Curtain, Causing an Incipient Blaze.

A fire alarm, sent in from box 35, Saturday evening about 8:15 o'clock, attracted a large crowd to the corner of Watchung avenue and East Front street only to find that the fire was already extinguished. George M. Rittenhouse, of East Sixth street, was just turning that corner when he saw the front second story windows on Mrs. Mary Stiles' residence, at 311 East Fifth street, suddenly filled with flame. He called in Neuman Brothers' grocery store that there was a fire and in company with Compton Vail and Adam Seales, two of the clerks, Mr. Rittenhouse hurried to the scene and assisted the occupants of the house in extinguishing the fire. Harry Milligan, another clerk, sent in the alarm.

The fire was caused by the head of a match, which was being lighted, breaking off and flying into the window and igniting the curtain. The damage was trifling.

The house was insured through W. A. Woodruff and within two hours after the fire, the small loss was adjusted by Mr. Woodruff.

HOW TO RIDE A BICYCLE.

Miss Marguerite Lindley's Interesting Lecture Saturday Afternoon.

That the bicycle has won the hearts and attention of the people was clearly evidenced Saturday afternoon, when a large number of enthusiasts gathered at the Casino to hear Miss Marguerite Lindley lecture on "Bicycling." The stage was very attractively arranged with wheels, both ladies' and gents', including a tandem. Surrounding them were neat decorations of college colors, including Yale, Harvard and Princeton. Miss Lindley was heartily received and spoke in part as follows:

"The time has come when the bicycle should be built for the rider. The very peculiar construction of the organs of the body demand this. Over exercise causes many ills, and a wheel not built for the rider is almost as dangerous. We often wait till our health is gone, then we are willing to do anything to regain it. Walking as an exercise no longer attracts, and the wheel comes to us with untold advantages. We are all too closely confined and need more fresh air. Socially the wheel is a great thing. We Americans are too stiff, we pass people in walking and only know them by name, but the wheel bids fair to bring us closer together socially. We should be careful in riding to secure the right posture. Scorching may do for the child, but not for us older people."

Miss Lindley explained posture through the use of a skeleton body, and described thevarious influences of it.

Continuing she said, "I like men, and I don't want it understood that I am finding fault with them, but I like them better when they stand erect. Let us tell them how much we like them and thus win their confidence. Some riders in scorching give one the idea that there is a vacum in the stomach, but such is not the case. If the vacum is anywhere it's in the head. That position is what makes physicians object to the wheel. Women should be independent enough to decide what to wear and not let her dressmaker do it for her. A wheel should be built fit to ride, then let all Christendom ride, Dr. Stimpson, of New York, appoves the duplex spring saddle, thus avoiding the narrow compression, which is an evil."

At this point, Miss Barrus, of New York, and Miss Lindley's niece, Miss Lindley Sumner, gave examples of the Swedish movement for bicycle riders, which developes every part of the body.

In speaking of dress, the speaker said that "art should be used. Don't think anything will do. Plain dress is the most advisable, and it should be long enough so that the wearer will not feel conscious of it. Knickerbockers should not be thought of, as the American woman is not ready for that dress yet. We have got to protect this pastime. There is no excuse for a woman being masculine."

Miss Lindley dwelt at length on the proper saddle to use, claiming that those now in use were exceedingly harmful.

At the close of the lecture Mrs. Anthony, of New York, gave an exhibition of riding on the Upright wheel, on which she is an expert.

Through the courtesy of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company an attractive line of Cleveland and Crescent wheels were loaned to decorate the stage.

THE END NEAR AT HAND.

THE LEGISLATURE WILL ONLY LAST TWO WEEKS LONGER.

Much Important Legislation is to Be Considered in That Time—Are Likely to Pass the Judiciary Amendments.

Ex-Judge Fort, of Newark, has been assisting the Senate Judiciary Committee in preparing the Constitutional amendments, and says they will be ready by Wednesday, and that the committee will recommend the set prepared by the nine lawyers selected by the Senate.

The Judiciary amendments, he says, are almost identical with those unanimously recommended by the Constitutional Commission of 1894, and which were ignored by the Legislature last year. While there is a considerable sentiment in favor of the Corbin amendments providing for one court of fifteen judges with equity, law, and appellate jurisdiction, it is believed the committee amendments will be adopted.

The Republican Senators are displeased over the action of the Assemblymen in deciding to continue the session until March 25th. They wanted to end it on next Friday at the latest, and they express the opinion that the events of last week in the House show that that body is rapidly getting beyond control.

This was shown by its action in turning down its committees and ordering them to report bills. Half-a-dozen members have filed notice of intention to try and get bills out of committee tomorrow night, and in the present humor the House may adopt the resolutions when presented. The Railroads and Canals Committee has been holding up important bills, some of which were introduced in the second week of the session, and the majority has grown suspicious that Chairman Lower is trying to usurp the powers of the House and decide which bills ought not to pass. This suspicion has considerable to do with determining the date of adjournment, which was fixed for a date that will give time to rescue the bills from Lower's hands and consider them on the floor.

The House this week will begin work on appropriation bills. The Deficiency bill is ready, and it contains several items that will receive opposition on the floor. It is announced that the House bill making a horizontal reduction of 25 per cent. on the salaries of State officers who get more than $3 000 a year will not pass the Senate, as it is clearly unconstitutional. Under its provisions it would go into effect on August 1st, except so far as its affects the salaries of the Governor, Chancellor, and Supreme Court Justices, who are specifically protected by the Constitution.

It is said that the New Jersey courts have decided that no public officer's salary can be reduced during his term, and this prevented the Senate last year from passing the bill putting Chancery Clerk McDermott and Supreme Court Clerk Lee on a salary.

The most important work the Legislature has to do is to pass a law governing the organization of boroughs and relieving those that have been wiped out by the recent decisions of the Court of Errors and Appeals. There are said to be over 100 of these, most of them in the northern part of the State; more than a dozen of them have a voting capacity of between sixteen and seventy-two. A number of the seaside resorts are affected by the decisions. The joint committee is at work on a general law which will divide the boroughs into three classes, and require action by the Legislature in fixing the boundaries of the municipalities, instead of leaving the question to the decision of the County Judge. Provision will be made for the payment of bonds on boroughs wiped out. The smaller boroughs will not be reincorporated.

The House expects to adjourn over from Wednesday afternoon until the following Monday to give some of its committees to finish up business.

Shot a Winged Chicken Thief.

Dennis Gavin shot a large chicken hawk in the rear of his place on Greenbrook road a few days ago. The hawk measured three feet six inches from tip to tip. Mr. Gavin first saw the bird when it was attempting to carry off one of his chickens. The fowl was a large one and the hawk was forced to come to the ground, giving the indignant owner of the chicken a chance to give the intruder a taste of cold lead. Frank Hedden is now having the hawk stuffed and will add it to his collection.

A Watchful Track Walker.

Track walker Higgins, of the Central Railroad, prevented what might have been a serious accident on last Friday evening. He discovered a break in one of the main line rails. These rails are all connected with the block signal service, and if there is a break in them the red light appears on the tower nearest the break. It is supposed that the cold weather frosted the steel, thus causing the break. The passing of a train might have caused the rails to spread and result in a terrible accident.

BALLINGTON BOOTH TO SPEAK IN MUSIC HALL THURSDAY EVENING.

The Local Salvation Army Secessionists to be Reorganized Under the New American Movement on That Date.

Commander Ballington Booth will visit Plainfield on Thursday night in the interest of "God's American Volunteers," as the seceders from the Salvation Army will be called in the future. Music Hall has been secured for the occasion and Captain Mimms, who is in command of the local Volunteers, is making extensive preparations for the distinguished leader. The Commander will on that night formally accept the Plainfield seceders as a recognized post in the new organization. He will present them with a handsome American flag and the colors of the movements.

If the weather permits a large street parade will precede the meeting, which will be led by Major Glen, assisted by Adjutant Hartwright and other staff officers. The Volunteers are to be organized on military lines.

The Commander having decided to adhere, as closely as is consistent with the spiritual side of the organization, to the rules and regulations of the regular army of the United States, the uniforms, it is said, will be patterned after those of the United States troops, the fatigue costume being chosen as the most serviceable in every way. What the the woman's uniform will be has not yet been made public.

At the conclusion of the meeting in Music Hall, Orange, Sunday afternoon, a lady ascended to the platform and introduced herself as a sister to the late General Grant. She offered Commander Booth an autograph letter of the General's to be sold at auction, the proceeds to be devoted to the cause. Major Glen immediately became auctioneer and knocked the letter down to ex Mayor Stillman, of Buffalo, for $50. Mr. Stillman, who is a personal friend of Commander Booth, and who has been spending the last few days with him, promised to advertise the autograph in Buffalo, and sell it over again, and the proceeds to be used in the same manner. The hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, and Commander Booth was enthusiastically welcomed by the people of Orange. When Major Glen made an appeal for funds to defray the expenses of the new headquarters and the band, post, the audience responded with a collection which amounted to over $90. Eight members were secured for the "Defenders' League."

Commander Booth addressed a meet in Newark Friday, while Mrs. Booth and Staff Captain Patti Watkins were in Cooper's Union, New York city.

The seceders from the regular army will hold a meeting in Reform Hall next Sunday, to be led by Capt. Mimms.

BOMBARDMENT OF SIN. CONVENTION DATE SET.

THE DEMOCRATS WILL MEET IN TRENTON, MAY 7TH.

E. F. C. Young, Chairman of the State Committee, Resigns Owing to Business — Possible Delegates-at-Large.

The New Jersey Democratic State Committee met Saturday afternoon in Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City. Chairman E. F. C. Young presided, and there were present Richard V. Lindabury, of Elizabeth; Rufus Blodgett, of Long Branch; Oliver H. Kelly, of New Brunswick; Harry B. Paul, of Camden; Wm. J. Keys, Gen. Richard Donnelly, of Trenton; Eckard Budd, of Burlington; Judge Howard Hayes, of Newark.

The first matter taken up by the committee was the date of the convention for the election of delegates to the Chicago convention in July. After some discussion May 7th was selected. The place will be the Taylor Opera House in Trenton.

Chairman Young then tendered his resignation. He said his business engagements were such that he could not give the duties of chairman the attention they deserved. The committee was loath to accept the resignation, and only did so at the urgent request of Mr. Young.

Messrs. Blodgett, Lindabury and Budd were appointed a committee to select Mr. Young's successor.

The committee spent some time in discussing a suggestion made by Mr. Lindabury that some steps should be taken to bring the county, city and township committees in closer touch with the State Committee. He suggested that some plan be adopted whereby the local executive committees could be elected directly by the people and the heads of the county committee be members of the State Committee.

He said that in his journeys through the State last fall he noticed in many of the counties that there was no relation at all between the local and the State committee, and both were working independent of each other, with anything but satisfactory results. The discussion was purely informal and no definite action was taken on the subject.

There was little if any gossip among the members as to who will be the candidates. It was said that ex-Senator Keys, of Somerset, would try for one place. Mr. Young may be one of them, and even Mr. Blodgett is said not to look unfavorably upon the possibility of representing his State in the National Convention.

DR. BARTON'S PATIENT.

ND you don't even know her name!" said Mrs. Renwick. "My dear Kenneth, there never was anything so ridiculous."

The captain of artillery shifted his feet to a more comfortable position on the sofa.

"Of course I know her name," said he; "and a very pretty one it is. Perry—Miss Perry."

"But who is it you are talking about?" said pretty Joyce, who had been preparing a mustard paste for her brother's chest.

Capt. Renwick answered promptly: "My sweetheart!"

"Kenneth, don't be ridiculous!" said his mother, somewhat tartly.

"The sweetest, prettiest blossom in all the Adirondack wilderness!" pursued Kenneth. "The fairest of—Catnip tea! I declare, Joyce, I won't drink it. What do you take me for?"

"It's the best thing in the world for a cold on the chest," said Mrs. Renwick. "Oh, if you had only kept away from that camping party!"

"I mistook her for the boatman's daughter the first time," said Capt. Renwick. "She—"

"Kenneth, don't talk—please don't talk!" urged his mother. "It's the worst thing you could possibly do, with your lungs all congested, and—"

"But I must talk!" said the captain. "Consider, mother, Joyce hasn't heard a word about it. She only came last night. Fancy, Joyce, my being fool enough to mistake her for a boatman's daughter!"

"Why, aren't boatmen's daughters as nice as ladies as a rule?" said Joyce, readjusting her apron ribbons.

"Oh, but this boatman lives in a perpetual state of shirt sleeves!" said Renwick; "and he is a living fountain of tobacco juice and talks abominable grammar through his nose. And his wife is a low class of Meg Merrilies, who takes too much bad whisky whenever she has an opportunity. How I ever made such a blunder I can't imagine. But Jenkins sent me up to the lake head to hire a boat, and when I saw her sitting there among the water lilies, I jumped at once to the conclusion that she was the boat to hire. 'My good girl,' says I—fancy my idiocy! —'if you will just row me up to Needle point, and call for me again in the evening, I'll give you a dollar.'"

"And she?" said Joyce.

"Rose up, of course. I wish you could have seen the way in which she handled the oars. But it was Dolph, the tobacco-soaked old boatman, who called for me at sunset. 'Why didn't you send your daughter?' says I. 'It wasn't my darter,' says he; 'it was Miss Perry.' Well, then, I met her at the picnic. We talked together half the evening. She is as beautiful as she is graceful, and as intelligent as she is beautiful."

"Did you apologize?" asked Joyce.

"Of course I apologized," said Capt. Kenneth. "And we had a good laugh over it. She had been after waterlilies, she said. She paints 'em in water colors. I am to look out when they are finished. Joyce, you must know her. She is a beauty. And she dances like a sylph, and sings like Patti, almost."

"Nonsense!" said Joyce. "A farmer's daughter, seen through the big end of the opera glass! You were always a victim to delusions, Kenneth."

"My dear Joyce, I assure you—"

"Children, children!" remonstrated Mrs. Renwick, piteously, "do have a little common sense. Kenneth, you know you ought not to talk. Joyce, don't you hear how hoarse your brother is? If pneumonia should set in after this exposure—"

Capt. Renwick made an expressive grimace. Joyce looked a little apprehensive.

"Mamma," said she, "you always were a pessimist. It's only a cold that ails Kenneth."

"But it is settling on his lungs, my dear," said Mrs. Renwick, plaintively. "And out here in the wilderness there isn't even a drug store short of fifteen miles. Oh, dear! Oh, dear! why did I ever allow myself to be persuaded to come to the Adirondacks?"

"The scenery, mamma!" said Joyce, soothingly.

"But one can't eat and drink scenery. And this woman knows absolutely nothing about omelettes and French coffee, and she never broiled a beefsteak in her life until I showed her how. As for her soups, they are simply uneatable. And the beds are as hard as the rocks in Plattsburg, and the mosquitoes are unendurable!"

"All these are trivial annoyances," said Capt. Kenwick, skillfully confirying to tip over the catnip tea. "To me, the Adirondacks are the garden of the world! I shall never be willing to go anywhere else in the summer. And she says it is even finer here in the winter, with the trifling exception of a little solitude."

"Kenneth," cried his mother, in agonized accents, "you must not talk!"

"My dearest mother, I am all right if you only won't fret!" declared the prodigal son.

But Capt. Renwick's eyes were unnaturally bright, the hot flush of fever burned on his cheek, and his breathing was alternately hurried and laborious.

It was undoubtedly the fact that he had taken a severe cold during the camping-out expedition from which he had just returned, and that this cold had been proof, so far, at least, against all the remedies Mrs. Renwick had used.

"Oh dear! oh dear!" sighed the mother. "Why doesn't the doctor come? Joyce, look out of the window! See if there is any sign of him."

"The doctor?" ejaculated Capt. Renwick, raising himself on one elbow among his pillows. "You don't say you have sent for a doctor?"

"Why, of course I have!" said Mrs. Renwick—"for Dr. Barton, from Nyleeburg."

"A snuff-taking old fiend who will dose me with calomel, and experiment on me with every one of the hundred-year-old drugs in his saddle bags!" cried the captain. "I won't see him!"

"Dear Kenneth!" pleaded Joyce.

"My son!" sobbed Mrs. Renwick.

"No!" ejaculated Kenneth. "I'll be hanged if I do! I despise doctors, anyway! And what sort of a medical man do you imagine would perch himself up here on the boughs of these everlasting pines?"

"Kenneth, you must see him!" said Mrs. Renwick.

"Mother, I won't," stoutly declared the rebel.

"But what will he think?"

"What he pleases. It will matter little to you or me what he thinks," said Kenneth. "All I know is that he shan't cross this threshold. Give him his fee and tell him to go!"

Mrs. Renwick and Joyce looked despairingly at each other. Undoubtedly the captain was master of the situation. If he chose to set the doctor and his fallipots at defiance, what was to be done?

At that moment, however, there was a slight rustle downstairs.

"The doctor has come!" cried Joyce, excitedly, "with such a pretty little horse and phaeton. Oh, Ken, I'm sure he isn't old, and he doesn't take snuff. Oh, I'm so sorry I didn't catch a glimpse of him."

"He has come, has he?" said the captain. "Then tell him to go about his business."

Mrs. Ogden, the fat landlady, put in her head at this juncture.

"Please, mem, the doctor," said she.

"Tell him—" hoarsely shouted Kenneth, flinging the pillows right and left.

But before he could complete his sentence the door opened and a tall young lady, in a blue cloth ulster and a pretty plumed hat, came in, with a flat morocco case in her hand.

"Miss Perry!" he exclaimed, staring at her from the sofa, with a face suddenly lighted into new brightness and enthusiasm. "How kind of you to remember me! You are acquainted with my mother, are you not? Joyce, this is Miss Perry."

The tall young lady looked composedly around her.

"I am sorry to hear of your illness, Capt. Renwick," said she. "We must see what we can do for you."

"But," added Kenneth, stretching his neck to get a look at the door, which was still slightly ajar, "where is the doctor? They told me he was coming up."

The beautiful lady sat down and gently took Kenneth Renwick's wrist in her delicate fingers.

"I am the doctor," said she. "Have the goodness to remain quite still for a few moments while I ascertain the pulse and temperature."

Capt. Renwick was struck dumb. An electric thrill seemed to dart through every pulse and vein. But Joyce's eyes sparkled, and the dimples came out around her mouth.

"I AM THE DOCTOR."

"You!" she cried. "A doctor?"

Dr. Barton nodded, still intent on the enameled face of her watch.

"Pernella Barton. They call me Perry for short, Capt. Renwick always called me Miss Perry. I don't believe he knew I had any other name."

"And you are really a doctor!" said Joyce. "Oh, Kenneth, how fortunate!"

Dr. Barton examined her patient's tongue, listened at his lungs and made some abstruse hieroglyphics in her note-book. Then she measured out some gray powders in infinitesimal papers, and left her directions in the most business-like way in the world.

"I shall look in again this evening," she said. "It seems to be nothing more than a severe cold. But I do not intend that it shall gain any headway."

"I put myself entirely in your charge," said Capt. Renwick, with a contented air. "I'm perfectly certain that I shall get well."

"I thought you were going to send the doctor about his business," maliciously whispered Joyce.

"But I didn't know what sort of a doctor it was," retorted the captain.

But Kenneth did not get well after all. Dr. Barton proved a true prophet, and soon dispelled the heavy cold. But Capt. Renwick had yet another ailment in the region of the heart.

"Mother," he said, coolly, "wasn't I right? Ain't she lovely?"

"The sweetest girl I ever saw," Mrs. Renwick warmly answered; "and the most talented."

"And if, mother—"

"You will be the most fortunate man in the world," said Mrs. Renwick.

Capt. Renwick made the best use of his time, and, although Dr. Barton's vacation was over, she lingered still at picnics, and in the pearly shadow of water-lilies he still continued to make many appointments for seeing her; and when he returned to the Seventh Artillery he was an engaged man.

"And after the first of November," he says, "Dr. Barton will be my family physician for life."—Saturday Night.

GROWING AND WORKING

THE TWO PRINCIPAL ELEMENTS OF AN ACTIVE YOUNG CHURCH BODY.

Annual Business Meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist Church Held Last Evening.

The annual meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church was held in the lecture room of the church last Friday, with President John G. McLoughlin in the chair.

Secretary J. Henry Crane read the minutes of the previous meetings which were approved, after which the reports of the various committees were presented.

For the lookout committee, J. Herbert Case reported. He stated that the society had great cause for encouragement. During the year eight active members were added to the roll. Miss Alice G. Woodland, chairman of the prayer meeting committee, reported that good work had been done in that department. Miss Grace Yerkes, for the social committee, presented a report in which was stated that the committee had tried to carry out its objects. Not many socials had been held, but all had been very successful. One social was held when only eight persons were present, but a young man was quoted as saying it was the best he had ever attended.

Miss Florence I. Marsh, chairman of the music committee, noted many improvements in this department. Credit was given R. W. Barnes, violinist, W. N. Runyon and Clifford Braider for substantial assistance during the year. She urged that new singing books be secured, and offered the plan of each member purchasing their own book and leaving it at the church for use.

R. W. Barnes, for the press and welcome committee, reported efficient work in this department. Henry Crane was given credit for valuable assistance. Miss Laura J. Runyon, treasurer, reported that $195.11 had been received and $194.22 expended, leaving a balance of 89 cents in the treasury.

The report of Miss Emily Coriell, corresponding secretary, was an excellent one in every respect. One of the best reports given was that of the secretary, J. Henry Crane. It set forth concisely, but in detail, what had been done during the year, and urged all to do more this coming year. The society has lost two members by death. At present the enrollment is 87 members, 72 of whom are active.

Samuel Case, chairman of the nominating committee, stated that the committee had been unable to decide on a person for president, and submitted the following nominations: Vice-president, Charles Conover; corresponding secretary, Miss Emily Coriell; recording secretary, Miss Florence I. Marsh; treasurer, Miss Susie Woodland; chairman of prayer meeting committee, Miss Grace Yerkes; lookout committee, J. Herbert Case; social committee, W. N. Runyon; music committee, L. H. Bigbow, Jr.; missionary committee, Miss Alice G. Woodland; welcome and press committee, J. G. McLoughlin; flower committee, Miss Bertha Needham. The above were elected unanimously.

J. Henry Crane was then nominated for president, and received the entire vote of the society. After a few remarks by the president and ex-president, the meeting closed.

TO REVERT TO THE STOCKHOLDERS.

The Townsend Sanitarium Company Will Not Keep the Netherwood Hotel.

The Netherwood hotel, lately called the Townsend Sanitarium, will soon revert to its original owners, owing to the inability of its recent purchasers to make the necessary payments. The Sanitarium people, however, spent several thousand dollars in making interior repairs in the structure and it has been greatly improved. J. Fred MacDonald will endeavor to rent it to some hotel man for the summer season.

The True Facts.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Your communication signed X Rays, does not state the whole facts in the case of Fanwood election. The borough voters went to the primary at Scotch Plains for the purpose of participating in the nomination of freeholder which they were perfectly justified in, and entitled to do.

It appeared by a newspaper report that the Borough Acts were unconstitutional, and upon the advice of Senator Voorhees and the Counsel for the borough and township, the names of the borough voters were sworn to as being entitled to vote in the township. On March 9th, after the decision had been read at Trenton, and upon the advice of members of the Joint Committee to revise the Borough Laws, a communication was written to the registry board asking to have the names of borough voters taken from the registry list of the township as the place for them to vote was within the borough limits, the borough being a de facto government.

True Facts.

TALK OF CONTEST AT FANWOOD.

The Fanwood Election is Causing a Great Deal of Talk.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—A very important question concerning the election held in Fanwood township on Tuesday, March 10th, is creating a large amount of discussion among the residents, the Borough of Fanwood being the factor of the contention. It appears that after the Supreme Court decision concerning the constitutionality of boroughs, the officials of the borough, upon legal advice, had their registery list sworn in before the township registery board as voters of the township. On March 7th the voters from the borough attended the primary and participated in nominating the township ticket. On March 9th, the borough officials received notice that there had been a decision given in the Supreme Court that their proper place to hold election was in the borough. The polls were opened on election day in the borough and election was held, and no action was taken to withdraw the sworn registery list from the township registery board. About a dozen of the borough voters who had concluded that the borough election was illegal, voted at the township polls, and the township election board deciding that they could not bar them from voting, as they were registered on the township list.

The problems are: Was the township primary legal? Was the borough election legal? Did not the swearing in of their registery list before the township registery board prevent them from holding an election in the borough? Providing the borough election was legal, would not the township election be illegal for permitting non-residents of the township proper to vote for the township officers?

It is admitted that the borough voters were entitled to vote for the freeholder, but no other township official. There is some talk of contesting the election, and it should be done by those who are interested in the welfare and good government of the township, and thereby remove a legal blur on the good name of all concerned.

A Card.

If from our lips could go to each of you, our friends, the thankful feeling of our hearts for your many acts of kindness and words of loving sympathy, you would then know something of our appreciation. You have "Done unto others." May the Heavenly Father, whose disciple our darling mother was, send an kind hearts to "Do unto you" in your hour of sorrow.

Somerville's Post-Office Contest.

The report that Frank T. Ross has received the appointment of postmaster at Somerville, seems to be a false one, as no appointment has yet been made. The fight for the position has narrowed down to a three cornered one, the contestants being Walter Durling, James T. VanDerveer and Frank T. Ross. Let the fight be a fair and open one with no mud-slinging, as some have attempted to do.—Somerville Democrat.

Recruiting for the New Movement.

John A. Hull, of 129 Grove street, denies the Daily Press to state that he has been authorized by Ballington to receive names and subscriptions for the recruiting of the Defenders League, the new auxiliary. Anyone desiring information in regard to the organization can obtain it by seeing him any evening or by writing to him at the above address. He reports great success in recruiting for this new society.

Affiliated With Other Clubs.

The Woman's Parliamentary Club at its meeting March 12th, joined the organization of the "American Institute of Civics." This action will add the systematic study and reporting of current events, to the present study of parliamentary law and usage. At this meeting also the club was received into the State Federation of Clubs, and several of its members will attend the next Federation meeting in Trenton.

Odd Cause of Death.

Mrs. Bargos, of Cranford, whose house was struck by lightning and burned last Saturday, died Thursday of pneumonia contracted by exposure when carried from her burning dwelling. She was a widow, forty-three years old.

The Station Will be Moved.

During the year the Central Railroad Company will build a handsome passenger station in Elizabeth near Division street, after which the Spring Street station will be abandoned. This will be a great accommodation to that section of the city, and the means of stimulating building there.

To Become Odd Fellows.

The Victor Wheelmen have decided to give up their present organization and form a secret society of Odd Fellows. There will be an outside degree for wheelmen who do not wish to join the lodge. A meeting will be called at an early date to take preliminary steps towards organization.

FUNERAL OF MRS. BULLOCK.

Last Sad Obsequies Over the Remains of a Christian Woman.

Friends and relatives of the late Mrs. Lydia J. Bullock gathered at her late residence, 334 East Sixth street, Thursday afternoon to attend the funeral services that were conducted by Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D. Rev. Dr. Richards spoke very feelingly of the beautiful Christian life that had passed away and of her motherly love and kindness as exemplified in her life, typifying in a way, the motherly love of Mary for her son Jesus. He told of the beauty, sweetness and strength of her Christian character as seen by himself and others that knew her.

During the services a quartette composed of Miss Eleanor Demarest, Miss Bessie Blair, Ira W. Travell and Elmer E. Runyon, sang very expressively, "Abide With Me," and "Asleep in Jesus."

Three children are left to mourn the loss of a loving mother, a kind friend, a wise counselor and a Christian whose faith filled out her life. They are Miss Noel J. Bullock, principal of the Franklin School, Marion L. Bullock and William Starr Bullock.

PLEASANT SOCIAL.

Mrs. Henry DeMott Entertained Missionary Workers of Grace M. E. Church.

A successful social was enjoyed last Friday at the home of Mr. and and Mrs. Henry DeMott on Somerset street, under the auspices of the Woman's Home Missionary Society of Grace M. E. church.

The programme was as follows: Reading, Miss Emma Stevens; vocal solo, Miss Alice DeMott; piano solo, Miss Libby Joseph; vocal solos, Miss Lizzie Hoagland and Miss Belle DeMott; reading, Miss Taft; vocal selection, Miss Edith Kline, Misses Alice and Jennie DeMott; vocal duett, Mrs. Elmer Winckler and Miss Libby Joseph; vocal solo, Miss Kizzie DeMott.

The collection for the society amounted to $33.50.

Those present then joined in playing the latest games, after which refreshments were served by the following committee: Mrs. William Langer, Mrs. Henry DeMott, Mrs. Andrew Lutkins, Miss Van Cleef and Mrs. Herbert Randolph.

A Correction.

It is quite a common failing for people to use the incorrect word "preventative" for the proper word "preventive," which prompts us to remark that the surest preventive to permanent defects of vision is timely examination of the eyes. Such examinations, together with expert advice as to treatment of the eyes, are free to you at Collier's, 103 Park avenue.

Capitalists Here.

A meeting of New York, Philadelphia and Plainfield capitalists was held at the Hotel Grenada this afternoon, when the garbage cremating process of Seymour G. Smith, of this city, was considered and the advisibility of pushing it on the market considered.

The Sewers Being Examined.

A thorough examination is being made of the sewers, but so far they have been found in perfect condition.

A LEAP YEAR SURPRISE.

A Novel Social Event Arranged For Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Anthony.

One of the most novel events of the season was the leap year surprise party given to E. E. Anthony, of Westervelt avenue, last Friday. It was arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Anthony's lady friends, and they invited their gentlemen friends. At the proper time they went after the gentlemen and provided them with boquets, consisting of a numerous variety of vegetables.

They met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Love, on East Front street, and proceeded to the home of Mr. Anthony. When they entered the house, the latter was thoroughly overcome. The evening was one of unbounded pleasure to all and leap year games were a feature of the event.

The refreshments were furnished by the gentlemen and were served during the evening. The latter were obliged to act the part of ladies and they carried their parts exceedingly well. Those present were: the Misses VanAistyne, W. F. Dunn, A. Holder, J. Holder, Vail, Stack, Sheppard, Crawford, Ross, Anthony, Mrs. Love, and Messrs. VanFleet, L. Holder, Love, Sheppard, Reed, Fenner, L. Wilson, M. Wilson, Crosson, Ross, Anthony, and S. E. Dunn, Mrs. A. J. Moore, Miss Martha Anothony, Miss May Anthony.

After the affair the ladies escorted the gentlemen to their homes. The whole event was a great success and it is likely will be repeated.

Dr. Parkhurst Disclaims the Letter.

The telegram supposed to have been sent by Rev. Dr. Parkhurst to John M. Reiner, who is in jail at Elizabeth, is now said to have been a hoax. Chief Tenney, of Elizabeth, called on Dr. Parkhurst yesterday and he disclaimed sending any message of sympathy to the imprisoned editor. There was no indication yesterday that Editor Reiner had secured the $13,000 bail.

To Branch Out Extensively.

The well-known and progressive firm of Marsh, Ayres & Co., who have been located at 141 East Front street for some years past, have rented the store on Park avenue now occupied by G. Q. Parker, the furniture dealer, and will occupy it as their paint store about April 1st. The firm will make extensive additions to their stock after the removal, which will consist of fabrics for decorations in Carlo lattice, yacht canvas and plain, tinted and figured burlaps.

A Home Dance.

An evening social and dance was held at the residence of James Owen Smith, of 333 Watchung avenue last night. About thirty-five couples attended. Dancing was the principle feature and continued until long towards daylight this morning. The music was furnished by Prof. Naylor.

Daughters of Liberty Adjourn.

The State Council, Daughters of Liberty, ended its annual session at Newark, Tuesday, by electing as National representatives Sarah Hied and H. F. Wilcox, of Long Branch, Sarah Burton, B. Yard and A. Woolman, of Newark, and Mrs. Reimann, of Trenton. The next session will be held in Jersey City, March 10th, 1897.

A VILLIAN IN THIS PLAY.

SUCCESSFUL MELO-DRAMA TO BE PRESENTED BY LOCAL TALENT.

The Shamrock and Rose to Be Given by the Dramatic Association of the Catholic Club Next Tuesday Evening.

St. Patrick's Day will be celebrated in Plainfield this year by another production at Music Hall by the Dramatic Association of the Plainfield Catholic Club. The great success of "Confusion," which was given last January, has encouraged the amateur Thespians to renewed efforts and the new play promises to be even better than the last. Its title is "The Shamrock and Rose," and the play is a very appropriate one for the occasion, the scene being laid in Ireland at the beginning of the revolution of 1798. It differs from "Confusion" in that it is more in the melo-dramatic style than the comedy. There is a strain of humor running through it, however, but pathos is mingled with it while the excitement of the revolutionary spirit pervades the entire play. The cast is as follows:

Squire Fitzgerald, Roses father ..... C. J. Guines
John Desmond, an outlawed patriot ..... Mat. J. Cashin
Shaun Carey, a spy ..... W. J. O'Brien
Captain Beck, } ..... } C. J. Ward
Lieut. Douglass, } the King's } T. J. Comerford
Thornberry, } Troops } J. J. Higgins
Barney O'Grady, an Irish Bouchal ..... C. J. Ward
Rose Fitzgerald, the "Rose of Wicklow." ..... Miss Etta Blatz
Nano Desmond, John's sister ..... Miss Alice Keeler
Ileen O'Rourke, Barney's "Sheelah" ..... Miss Maude Doorey

The plot is a simple one but very interesting and offers many chances for the actors to display their talents. John Desmond and Captain Beck are both in love with Rose Fitzgerald. Both she and her father, the Squire, favor the suit of Desmond, the hero of the play. Desmond is outlawed but manages to visit his love. Beck looks on with jealous eyes and when he learns of Desmond's visit through his spy Shaun Carey, tries to capture him. The first act is laid in Squire Fitzgerald's home in Wicklow. Desmond arrives and hides, and then Captain Beck demands that Desmond be turned over as a prisoner. The Squire and Beck clash and finally the latter murders the Squire in his own home. Desmond is finally captured and condemned to die, but escapes through the aid of Douglass who is in love with Desmond's sister. Rose is abducted and Captain Beck seems to be successful but Desmond wins at last and Beck is shot by one of his own men by mistake, the shot being meant for Desmond. And, of course, everything ends as it should.

There are four acts, the second including four scenes, and the third two scenes.

Quite a number of musical selections are happily introduced and include solos, duets and selections by a male quartette, composed of T. J. Comerford, R. Wright, F. W. Wharton and M. J. Cashin. The costumes will be appropriate to the time of the play. The stage director is C. J. Ward and the musical portion of the programme is under the direction of M. J. Cashin.

MADE A STRONG ARGUMENT.

Dr. Lewis Appeared at a Congressional Hearing in Washington.

Rev. A. H. Lewis, of this city, was one of the prominent speakers at the hearing before the judiciary committee of Congress Thursday at Washington, when the matter of inculcating a portion of the Bible into the Constitution of the United States was brought up. Before going to the committee hearing Dr. Lewis accidentally met Rev. Jenkins Lloyd Jones, of Chicago, who is an old friend of his, and who was in Washington for the same purpose that he was—to oppose the use of the Bible in the Constitution. They made a strong team for the opposition. The proposed amendment is as follows:

We, the people of the United States, acknowledging Almighty God as the source of all power and authority in civil government, our Lord Jesus Christ as the Ruler of Nations, and His revealed will as of supreme authority in this affairs, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and to our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

Dr. Lewis opposed the amendment on the broad ground that he did not wish the question of religion brought into politics and be kicked about as a football from ward primaries to national conventions.

After the hearing was over Dr. Lewis was personally complimented by Congressman Updyke, of Iowa, for the strong points he made. It was generally under stood that the amendment would either be reported adversely or killed by the committee. Dr. Lewis returned home this morning.

RETURNS FROM THREE COUNTIES.

How the Election Went in Union, Middlesex and Somerset.

The Tribune Wednesday published the following:

Elizabeth, March 11th—Complete returns from the Union County elections show that the next Board of Freeholders will stand 5 Republicans to 3 Democrats, a Republican gain of one. In Union Township, where the Republicans claimed Ogden Woodruff's election, his Democratic opponent, James A. Barnett, won by 12 majority. The Republicans gained on their vote in every township except Westfield and Springfield, and in each of these places a local fight over Freeholders had much to do with reducing the party vote.

Somerville, March 11—The spring election in Somerset county have resulted in a series of surprises. John C. Staats, the popular Democratic director of the Board of Freeholders, who was believed to be invincible, was defeated in Franklin township by C. G. VanCleef, Republican. James B. Smith, the strong Republican candidate in Bridgewater, was defeated by W. J. Logan, Democrat, by a large majority. The Republican have gained one member in the Board of Freeholders, but the Board is still Democratic by two majority. The townships of Bernards, Bedminister and Warren elect the entire Democratic nominees. In the township of Bridgewater the Republicans elect the justices of the peace and the majority of the township officers. The taxpayers' ticket was elected in the borough of Bound Brook, against the opposition of the independents. One justice of the peace was elected by the Democrats in the borough of North Plainfield, and all other borough officials were elected by the Republicans. Returns from all other townships show a complication of political results, due to a large independent vote, which gives a balance to neither political party.

New Brunswick, March 11—The Democrats made gains in Middlesex county yesterday. Next year's Board will contain nine Democrats and ten Republicans, with one Freeholder to be elected in Perth Amboy in April. If he is a Democrat the Board will be deadlocked Trolley to this City.

City Counsel Riker, of Newark, representing several capitalists, has been examining the project of a proposed trolley line to Plainfield, says an Elizabeth despatch to the Newark Advertiser, and says that he is willing to guarantee the securing of the $275,000 of $300,000 it will take to build it. He appears enthusiastic regarding the scheme and says that if the right of way can be obtained and proper franchises secured in Elizabeth, Plainfield and the towns between, he sees no reason why the plan would not eventually prove very profitable to the originators, as well as to the business interests of Elizabeth. The Elizabeth Board of Trade will doubtless do all in its power to further the scheme.

A Valuable Acquisition.

A collection of "Facsimiles of royal, historical, literary and other autographs in the Department of Manuscripts of the British Museum," has been presented to the Plainfield Public Library by Mrs. Edward D. McCarthy, of this city. It is a really valuable and very interesting collection, containing autographs of Katharine of Aragon, Queen Elizabeth, Mary Stuart, Charles I., Oliver Cromwell, General Gordon, Queen Victoria, John Keats, Charles Dickens, Robert Browning, and many other noted men and women. The collection will be placed in the reference department of the library, where it may be seen during library hours by any who are interested.

Justice Nash's Court.

Justice Nash has issued summons in the following cases: Randolph against Arthur, demand for premises, returnable on March 16th; Rockfellow against Hurlbut, on contract, returnable on March 20th; Bolce against Randolph, on contract, returnable on March 13th. Judgment was rendered in the case of Coggswell against Baldwin, on contract, in favor of the plaintiff for $57.95 and costs. The execution was issued and the levy made. Judgement was also rendered for the plaintiff for $29.15 and costs in the case of Tunison et als. against Feller.

Faster Time Than Ever.

On Monday, March 16th, the Royal Blue Line will begin running a train between New York and Philadelphia in one hour and fifty minutes, leaving New York, foot Liberty street, station Central Railroad of New Jersey, at 4:30 p. m. A corresponding train will leave Philadelphia, Reading Terminal, at 8:20 a. m.

To Talk Town Improvement.

The Rasores has sent invitations to the six other women's clubs of the city and the borough to meet with them on Tuesday morning, March 17th, a 10 o'clock, in the lecture room of the Y. M. C. A. building to listen to a paper on "Town Improvement" by Mrs. Willis Smith, of Madison avenue, who was formerly president of the Montclair Town Improvement Society.

HE TALKED TOO MUCH.

A Prisoner Makes Disparaging Remarks About the City Judge and Receives a Heavy Sentence for His Actions

A man with his face badly cut and bruised wandered down Somerset street Thursday afternoon. He had just left the borough behind him when he met Patrolman McCue. An over supply of liquor was very apparent and the individual felt in an ugly mood. The policeman came in for his share of verbal abuse and he immediately arrested the offender. The language of the prisoner was not the most choice, and he continued to address improper remarks to both Patrolman McCue and Sergeant Kiely. At the jail he gave his name as Patrick Murphy, and two flies and an awl were found in his pockets. This morning he was brought before City Judge DeMeza.

He was by occupation, he said, a painter, but had been mending umbrellas, which was his reason for carrying the tools. The police had seen him before and say that he knows more crooks than any other man in this part of the country. He said he had not been here before for five years, and when he left afterwards he declared that he would give Plainfield a wide berth in future travels. He was very impudent in his replies to the Judge, and, when led back to his cell after being sentenced to 60 days in jail, he started on a tirade of abuse against the judge, the police, and the city in general. One of the policemen heard him and Judge DeMeza increased the sentence to 90 days in jail and a fine of $100.

NEW JERSEY LEGISLATURE.

Erie Track Elavation Gets a Setback in the Senate

The bill confirming the lease of the New York and Greenwood Lake Railroad to the Erie Company, which has been held up in the Senate by friends of track elevation in Jersey City, was released yesterday and passed by a vote of 15 to 2. It had been amended by Senator Voorhees by striking out the name of Erie and inserting in its place the words: "Any foreign corporation owning property along the Hudson River and owning the terminal facilities thereon."

The Senate spent the greater part of the afternoon considering the repeal of the "Dunn five counselors act," which enables anyone who has served six months in a lawyer's office to take the examination for admission to the bar upon the certification of five counselors at law that he is specially fitted to enter the profession. The law was passed fourteen years ago through the efforts of ex-Congressman John T. Dunn, who was refused by the Supreme Court permission to take the examination because he was a house painter, and was pursuing an occupation that rendered it doubtful that he had a good knowledge of law.

The repealer was supported yesterday by nearly all the lawyers in the Senate, but it was creating a lot of inefficient lawyers, who, by reason of their lack of legal training, got their clients in trouble. Ex-Judge Walling and several laymen opposed the repealer, and it was defeated by a vote of 11 to 7.

The Equal Taxation bill was not reported yesterday, an agreement having been made between its friends and opponents that it is not to be reported until Mr. Queen, its introducer, is present.

The House passed the bill prohibiting trolley roads from carrying freight or express matter.

The Senate killed the Rogers bill, requiring twelve freeholders to sign all applications for saloon licenses. It was recommitted to the Judiciary Committee, in accordance with the Republican caucus decision.

WORKS OF SCHUBERT.

The Thursday Evening Musical Club Enjoy a Pleasant Evening.

The meeting of the Thursday Evening Musical Club, which took place last evening, was one of the most enjoyable on record. The main part of the programme was devoted to the works of Schubert, and was as follows:

Trio—"Serenade" ..... Miss Bowers, Miss Mary Ketcham, Miss Dewey
Piano Duet ..... Miss Cowperthwait and Miss Collier
Vocal Duet—"Hunting Song" ..... Mrs. Collier, Miss Bowers, Miss May Ketcham, Miss Dewey, Messrs. Angleman, Clawson, Traverd and G. Lyon.

Miss Fitter, Mr. Petrie and Mr. Davis.
Solo ..... Robert Gorton
Selection ..... Double Quartette

The Club will be entertained at its next meeting by Dr. and Mrs. Clawson.

University Extension Examinations.

Prof. James F. Biggs will conduct the examinations of his class in the University Extension course on next Monday evening. They will be held in the Guild room of the Grace P. E. church, beginning at 8 o'clock.

MINISTERED TO POTENTATES.

Death of Dr. Fauvel, the Famous French Physician of Royalty.

Dr. Fauvel, who recently died at Paris, had the greatest practice, perhaps, in the world, of any doctor in his special branch—the treatment of throat diseases. He once said that to him was mercenary. Specialists can ask what fees they like. Fauvel's fee for looking at a throat in his own consulting-room was 50 francs. He found to attend upon an infirmary, where he treated poor people for nothing. Innumerable were the singers and public speakers whose voices he saved. Among his patients were Gambetta, Queen Isabella, the emperor of Brazil the king of Roumania, Thiers (who had an extremely delicate throat), Emperor Napoleon, Princess Clotilde, the comte de Paris and the late empress of Russia. Dr. Evans had not more first-class improper remarks to both Patrolman McCue and Sergeant Kiely. At the jail he gave his name as Patrick Murphy, and two flies and an awl were found in his pockets. This morning he was brought before City Judge DeMeza.

He was by occupation, he said, a painter, but had been mending umbrellas, which was his reason for carrying the tools. The police had seen him before and say that he knows more crooks than any other man in this part of the country. He said he had not been here before for five years, and when he left afterwards he declared that he would give Plainfield a wide berth in future travels. He was very impudent in his replies to the Judge, and, when led back to his cell after being sentenced to 60 days in jail, he started on a tirade of abuse against the judge, the police, and the city in general. One of the policemen heard him and Judge DeMeza increased the sentence to 90 days in jail and a fine of $100.

OLDEST EX-SENATOR.

George Wallace Jones and His Eventful Career.

He Was the First Senator from the State of Iowa, and a Great Friend of Daniel Webster and Other Famous Statesmen.

There is good ground for the belief that the human race is longer-lived than it was a few generations ago. A statistician recently offered, as evidence of increased longevity, the fact of some prominent men of to-day, notably some members of the United States senate who participate actively in national affairs at an age at which, 50 years ago, they would have been deemed ready to be laid on the shelf.

Another notable example, says the Illustrated American, is General and ex-Senator George Wallace Jones, of Dubuque, Ia., who is now in his 92d year. Gen. Jones was born at Vincennes, Ind., April 12, 1804. He was a frontier lad, yet he was early alive to the fact that his part of the country was not always to remain the frontier. He was graduated from Transylvania university, where he was a classmate of Jefferson Davis; at the same time Zachary Taylor and Lewis Cass were students at Transylvania. After graduation he entered the legal profession, and not long afterward formed a business partnership with Daniel Webster, with whom he purchased the site of the present city of Madison, Wis. The spirit of the frontiersman was in his veins, so he moved westward in the early thirties, and was one of the congressional delegate from the Territory of Michigan in 1833. He was largely instrumental in securing the division of which came the territories of Wisconsin and Iowa, and he held many important offices in the new region.

Gen. Jones was the associate in congress of James K. Polk, Alexander H. Stevens and Abraham Lincoln, and, after being elected the first United States senator from the new state of Iowa, sat in the upper house with Thomas H. Benton, Charles Sumner, Stephen A. Douglas, William H. Seward and James Buchanan. He was a warm personal friend of John C. Calhoun, Martin Van Buren, Henry Clay, Andrew Jackson, John C. Fremont and Franklin Pierce, and his intimacy with such men, and his native diplomacy, as well as his interest in and knowledge of the needs of the new northwest, made him of great service in furthering many measures for the development of the new empire of the west. He was aide-de-camp to Gen. Henry Dodge in the Black Hawk war, serving through that campaign, but had earlier served his country in the field, for while a mere boy he was a drummer in our army on the Canadian frontier during the war of 1812-1815. During his seat in the senate in 1859, he became minister to the United States of Colombia; a notable event in Washington, before his departure, was the dinner given in his honor by William H. Seward.

The prominent politicians of half a century ago had some social duties which their modern successors would scarcely know how to perform creditably. For instance, Gen. Jones acted as second for Jonathan Cilley, of Maine, in the celebrated duel in which that gentleman was killed by William J. Graves, of Kentucky. He was also chosen as "best man" in 12 other projected duels, in seven of which he was called upon to act as combatants in exchanging shots. In 1837 he had a "little affair" of his own of this nature at St. Louis, where he was challenged by Lieut. Williams, of the regular army, after a discussion in which he grew out of the attempt of the lieutenant to remove the glasses with which Gen. Jones had been serving some ladies with refreshments. The lieutenant, learning that Jones was a dead shot, withdrew the challenge, and the affair of honor stopped at that point.

On his 90th birthday, April 12, 1894, the state of Iowa tendered Gen. Jones a public reception at Des Moines, the capital of the state. The governor presided, and the legislature, in a body, the executive council, the judges of the supreme court and many of the distinguished citizens of the commonwealth attended.

In person Gen. Jones is of commanding figure, and remains a remarkably handsome man. Aside from somewhat defective eyesight, he enjoys excellent health. He has seldom slept more than six hours out of the 24, and not been sick in bed a single day since the year 1827, though up to that time his health was so poor that he was not expected to live long. He has played an important part in the advancement of the west, for which he will be long and gratefully remembered.

Sea as a Producer.

The sea is infinitely more productive than the land. It is estimated that an acre of good fishing will yield more food in a week than an acre of the best land will yield in a year.

THE HOME-MAKING PROBLEM.

By Teaching the Girls a Reform in Housekeeping May Be Wrought.

Mrs. Etta Morse Hudders holds a new key to the domestic problem. "It is education, of course," she said the other day. "But it is the education of our future, rather than our present servants. It concerns itself with the children, those who have nothing to unlearn and no bad habits to get rid of, whose minds are still pliable and impressionable. For years I have found it an utter impossibility to teach a full grown woman how to hold a broom properly, and not one full grown woman in a hundred holds a broom properly. She presses upon it and holds it sideways and digs the dirt up out of the carpet in a manner as revolting as it is impotent. What she should do is to hold the broom straight up and down, and sweep with short, light, quick strokes and never dig at all. It's just the same way with hundreds of other domestic details. Women are not only hopelessly ignorant of them, but apparently are incapable of mastering them unless the training begins at an early age. My plan proposes to establish cooking schools in all the thickly settled districts of the city, in which school children may be taught not only how to prepare foods in the best way, but how to buy in order to attain the greatest amount of nutriment at the least cost. The practical force of the plan is at once apparent, as an article of food is one of the main factors in the new life in homes.

"My 'domestic problem,' however, I do not alone mean the 'servant problem.' That is, indeed, a portentous question, but not so portentous nor so important as the domestic question. When the latter is solved it will mean reform in a hundred ways. More than half the trouble of this world comes from women not knowing how to be homekeepers — housekeepers, enough precious few of them are qualified for that — but persevers and cheerishers of the home. This is true of all classes of society, but especially of the poorer classes. Give a working man a good home and inducements to spend his evenings there and he will be much less likely to frequent the liquor saloon. That treads close upon the heels of the temperance question. Why, the more practical manner than most answers to it do. But the wife must know how to provide and prepare the dinner, and also how to insure the evening's comfort. All this seems home-making, an accomplishment that is, unfortunately, much out of fashion, but which is the keystone to nothing less than national prosperity. This is the object of our plan—home-making. Of course, great and imperative need is funds. The manufacturers have already donated enough appurtenances to equip several kitchens, but we want to employ the most competent teachers and that costs money. In time, we hope that the same plan will be adopted by other cities. Every community must see the value of promoting the home spirit, and that can only be done by making homes attractive. Why, at present, the average child of the slums doesn't know the meaning of the word home."—N. Y. Sun.

AFTER A BARGAIN.

The Cloth Was Not What She Wanted, But It Was More Marked Down.

It was evident that she was troubled.

"I think I prefer this," she said, indicating a roll of cloth on the counter, "only it has been marked down from twelve to ten cents a yard?"

"Yes, ma'am," replied the clerk.

"It's really what I want," she continued, "but this," and she indicated another roll, "has been marked down from twelve to ten cents a yard, as I understand you."

"Yes, ma'am."

"Then I should think the other ought to be down to nine and a half cents."

"That would be cheaper than we can afford to sell it, ma'am."

"But you have taken two and a half cents off the price of the other and only two cents off this," she protested, taking up the first roll again. "That makes the other the better bargain."

"As a pure matter of cents, perhaps—"

"I'll give you nine and three-quarter cents for it."

"We cannot sell it at less than ten cents, ma'am."

"I'd rather have it than the other, but—"

"It's very cheap at ten cents a yard, ma'am."

"I suppose it is, but it isn't as good a bargain as the other."

"I can't make it any less."

"Then I suppose I will have to take the 12½ cents goods and it seems a shame when it would rather have the other. You may give me ten yards."—Chicago Post.

An Astronomer.

Mrs. S.—By the way, I hear Jupiter—the evening star—is worth seeing just now. Can either of you girls tell me where to look for it?

Bertha—Yes; I can. It's exactly two yards and a half to the right of the Great Bear.

"Two yards and a half! What on earth do you mean?"

"Well, I've measured it carefully with my umbrella."—London Punch.

Not Laying.

"Can I get some eggs from your hens, little boy?"

"Nope, 'm; our hens have gone dry."—Judge.

MAYOR HEGEMAN'S SAY.

MAKES OBSERVATIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS FOR THE BOROUGH.

He Says That He Will Soon Appoint a Special Committee to Look Into and Report About a Sewerage System.

The following is the annual message of Mayor Hegeman to the Borough Council:

To the Council of the Borough of North Plainfield:

Gentlemen:—At this time, the beginning of the Council year, I would call to your attention various matters of interest to you all as pertaining to the welfare and progress of the borough.

During the past year the work done by the Council through its several committees has been of a very satisfactory character, especially in so far as the progress made in the direction of good sidewalks, there having been laid during the year over twelve thousand feet of stone walk on the streets and avenues of the borough, and a very small amount of this was laid by the authorities, as our citizens responded promptly when called upon to make these improvements. Our roads have had careful attention given them, and they are generally speaking in good order, with the exception of some of the macadamized streets which are in need of top dressing to bring them up to the high standard which we wish them to maintain. The macadamizing of Harrison street should be completed just as soon as the condition of the ground will permit. Greenbrook road from Grove to Somerset streets should be permanently paved, as it is the only thoroughfare to a populous portion of the borough, and its present condition is very bad.

The project of opening Watchung avenue, which I brought to the attention of the last Council, has been so far carried out that the Commissioners appointed by your body for the awarding of damages have so far prosecuted their work that they are about ready to report to your Honorable Body, and I would urge that you make every possible effort to push this most desirable improvement to a speedy and successful termination.

It has not seemed expedient for us during the past year to take any active steps towards the immediate introduction of a sewerage system, but let me impress upon you all the vital importance of this subject in its bearing upon the growth and prosperity of our town. Roselle, Cranford, Westfield and the City of Plainfield have all put in, or are now engaged in putting in sewers. We must do likewise, but when we do, let us have the best, at the least possible cost consistent with high-class work. I shall in due time appoint a special committee to take this matter up with a view of placing the subject before our people for their consideration.

Our Fire Department is in good condition, but I feel the necessity of again bringing to your attention the urgent need of the formation of a hose company in the vicinity of Harrison street and Greenbrook road, two recent fires in that neighborhood have proven the necessity of such action, such a condition as exists in that neighborhood should not be tolerated as the safety of our citizens and their homes are at stake.

In connection with the absorption of the North Plainfield Electric Light Company by the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company, we have been forced to abandon our steam gong for fire alarm purposes, to take the place of this we have about entering into a contract for the erection of a fire tower, fifty-five feet high, next to the property with a twenty-five hundred pound bell. We are convinced that this will prove more efficient as a fire alarm than the old gong of necessity abandoned.

The health of the borough during the year has been fully up to the average. Your Board of Health has accomplished much in the purification of Green brook, which has been a disgrace to our town, and a menace to health.

The peace and quiet of our town has been well maintained. I would urge even greater care and watchfulness in this direction, and suggest the adoption of a system whereby our residents can communicate with the borough officers in the case of prompt assistance in case of need.

Our finances at the present time are in excellent shape, it was possible to make a reduction in the tax rate for borough and street purposes of $4,000, and I hope to see other reductions made when the budget is made up for the year in August next.

The interest of the taxpayer should be kept constantly in mind, and your expenditures made with a due regard to economy, consistent with efficient service in all branches of borough work.

I would bring to your attention the absence of suitable signs to mark our streets and avenues, a stranger coming to our town must be at no little loss to know how to find the street he seeks, such a condition has no right to exist, and this improvement I trust will be accomplished at a cost within the reach of all, and certainly necessary.

In closing, I would request and urge confirmed action in the matter of new sidewalks. Much has been done, but much remains yet to do before our citizens can walk with comfort on the entire length of our principal streets. Until this end is achieved, do not rest in your efforts for good work.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

B. A. Hegeman, Jr.,
Mayor.

Simply There as an Authority.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Will you kindly allow me to correct part of the statement in your issue of yesterday. I did not say that the first thing done was to "stick a sharp instrument into the heart," nor did I say that "many people believed to be dead were alive when the cruel instrument of the incompetent embalmer was thrust into their hearts." I was simply called before the committee to describe the methods in use by professional embalmers, which I did to the best of my ability.

Respectfully,

Mrs. Ira F. Riker.

A Priceless Thing.

Good eyesight is priceless. Many people do not realize this, or seem to appreciate it until they are in imminent danger of losing this precious sense. Cheap and inferior glasses are positively injurious. Leech, Stiles & Co. make only the best. If you are in need of glasses call on their specialist, who will be in Plainfield at 107 East Front street, on Thursday next, from 10:30 a. m. to 5 p. m.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A SUCCESSFUL PRESENTATION.

The Dramatic Society of the Catholic Club Please a Large Audience.

The Dramatic Society of the Plainfield Catholic Club could not have selected a more appropriate piece than "The Shamrock and the Rose" for presentation on St. Patrick's Day, as was evidenced Tuesday by the large audience in Music Hall. The characters, plot, scene and action of the drama aroused the enthusiasm of many an auditor who had experienced on the Emerald Isle in their earlier days incidents which were typified on the stage, and when the villian was balked in his mercenary intentions or the hero scored a telling point, and right triumphed over wrong, their fervor took form in a vigorous clapping of the hands.

The cast of characters and plot of the drama have already been printed in The Daily Press. The company as a whole showed careful training, and had their lines memorized so that performance was not marred in effect of realism by the prompter. The leading role was impersonated by Matt. J. Cahlin, who acted the part of the persecuted patriot, with earnest voice and easy stage presence. M. J. Winn was a gruff, scheming villian, who stopped not even for murder to accomplish his ends while W. J. O'Brien, as his tool, had the most despicable character of the drama, but it was a piece of character acting that reflected favorably on his histrionic ability. Charles J. Ward was the jolly Irish lad who always looked at the bright side of things, and with Irish wit, song and dance, carried the audience with him. Miss Etta Blake, in the leading feminine role, played with sincerity, while Miss Doorey, as a colleen, was a counterpart of Mr. Ward's character, and played with the abandon necessary to make a success. Miss Alice Keeley was good in the emotional part. Other characters of the piece were taken by C. J. Guinee, T. J. Comerford and M. J. Higgins.

THEATRICAL.

"Fritz in Love," the name of the new play, which "Our Fritz" produces at Music Hall next Wednesday night, is described as the most notable and ambitious effort of Mr. J. K. Emmet's career, affording this pleasing comedian ample scope for the display of his many talents. The author shows in the serene and gentle "Fritz" in the usual lovable and kindly light, surrounded by that radiant bouquet of rosy faces—the children, those tiny ideals of this imaginative Teuton's happiness. "Fritz in Love" unfolds a very interesting and pretty story. It is interspersed with sparkling comedy, music and dances. The company supporting Mr. Emmet is an exceptionally good one, the members are Miss Annie Mortland, Mrs. Hattie F. Neffies, Miss Grace Pierrepont, Miss Blanche Chatfield, William T. Doyle, Jas. H. Griffith, C. B. Sinnott and Florie Loeber.

Manager Doris certainly could not have selected a better location than Broadway and Twenty-ninth street, New York, nor a prettier or cosier playhouse for his continuous vaudeville than the charming little Gaiety. Located right among the high-priced houses, in the midst of the residence portion of the Metropolis, and convenient as well to the various lines of cars and depots.

Henry C. Bowen's Will.

The will of the late Henry C. Bowen, the founder and owner of The Independent and father of Henry E. Bowen, of Watchung avenue, this city, was filed for probate in Brooklyn yesterday. A trust fund of $30,000 for the widow is provided, and a like fund of $10,000 for each of the children. The Independent, including the plant connected with it, is left to the executors in trust, with directions not to sell during Mrs. Bowen's life, but with authority to organize a corporation, if that course be deemed desirable. The income from the paper is to be divided equally between the mother and children during her life, and at her death it, with all the residuary estate, is to be divided in equal shares among the children and their heirs.

MORE MONEY NEEDED

Young Christian Workers Meet and Talk of Ways and Means.

The executive committee of the local union of Christian Endeavors consisting of representatives from all of the societies, met at the Y. M. C. A. building last Monday and discussed means and methods for securing more money for the work. Several suggestions were presented and the representatives were urged to lay their several societies of the needs and secure larger contributions. The date of the annual meeting of the local union was set for Thursday, April 9th, and an effort will be made to secure State President Dr. French, of Newark and Dr. Brett, of Jersey City, as speakers for that occasion. The place of holding the meeting has not yet been decided.

Westfield's Common Scold Again.

Miss Jacques, of Westfield, who was convicted of being a common scold last fall, and who was let off with a reprimand on promise of keeping the peace, is again complained of by the neighbors. A few evenings ago Town Committeeman Endicott and Judge Connell were attracted by sounds of an affray at the Jacques place, and upon entering, it is said, found Miss Jacques and her sister engaged in a violent altercation, their aged parents trembling with fear, and the air "blue" with expletives. A warning was given. Miss Jacques is a woman of fine intellect and finished education, prominent in temperance and charitable work. Her friends look upon her as probably mentally deranged.

—The choir of the First Baptist church, under the direction of C. W. McCutchen and Organist E. J. Fitzhugh, have commenced the rehearsal of the Easter music.

MORE MONEY NEEDED

Young Christian Workers Meet and Talk of Ways and Means.

The executive committee of the local union of Christian Endeavors consisting of representatives from all of the societies, met at the Y. M. C. A. building last Monday and discussed means and methods for securing more money for the work. Several suggestions were presented and the representatives were urged to lay their several societies of the needs and secure larger contributions. The date of the annual meeting of the local union was set for Thursday, April 9th, and an effort will be made to secure State President Dr. French, of Newark and Dr. Brett, of Jersey City, as speakers for that occasion. The place of holding the meeting has not yet been decided.

Westfield's Common Scold Again.

Miss Jacques, of Westfield, who was convicted of being a common scold last fall, and who was let off with a reprimand on promise of keeping the peace, is again complained of by the neighbors. A few evenings ago Town Committeeman Endicott and Judge Connell were attracted by sounds of an affray at the Jacques place, and upon entering, it is said, found Miss Jacques and her sister engaged in a violent altercation, their aged parents trembling with fear, and the air "blue" with expletives. A warning was given. Miss Jacques is a woman of fine intellect and finished education, prominent in temperance and charitable work. Her friends look upon her as probably mentally deranged.

ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

YOUNG CADETS HEAR OF IT FROM THOSE WHO WERE THERE

The Lecture Entertainingly Given By Rufus K. Case, and the Incidents of the Campaign Illustrated By Scenes.

A portion of the history of the late unpleasantness, as some persons desire to call the War of the Rebellion, was vividly portrayed on canvas last Tuesday at the First Baptist church. It was termed the "Campaign of the Army of the Potomac," and a number were present who recalled many of the scenes shown.

The lecture was given under the auspices of the Baptist Boys' Brigade, Co. B., Third Regiment, of the above church, and the auditorium was well filled with people, principally the younger generation.

The programme opened with patriotic selections on the organ by Howard Case. As a march was being rendered the Brigade marched into the church in true military style, and it thrilled the hearts of all to see the young cadets enter with such manly bearing. A stack of muskets and a profusion of red, white and blue bunting added not a little to the enthusiasm of the event. After prayer was offered by Dr. D. J. Yerkes, Miss Grace Overton gave a stirring recitation entitled "Bay Billy." President L. H. Bigelow, Jr., then announced that under the direction of Rufus K. Case the pictures illustrating the "Campaign of the Army of the Potomac" would be given.

The speaker then stated that the campaign lasted from March, 1861, to 1865, and was a most notable one in many respects. Pictures were then shown of Generals McDowell, McClellan, Burnside, Hooker and Grant, and in connection with each Mr. Case gave the history of the campaign as it had to do with the leaders. Many amusing and touching incidents were related that were impressively received by the audience. When the picture of Gen. Grant was shown the audience gave unbounded applause.

Points of great interest were brought out by Mr. Case, who speaking from personal experience, was able to talk intelligently on the subject. The frequent hearty applause gave unmistakable evidence of the appreciation of the audience.

At the conclusion of the first part, ex-Sergeant Wilson and Frank Carver rendered two patriotic selections on the fife and drum. The singing of "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," by the audience, preceded the offertory, the proceeds of which will be devoted to purchasing uniforms for the members of the brigade. A recitation, "The Pride of Battery B," by Miss Amy Emmons won hearty applause.

The story of the Civil War was then concluded with the surrender at Appomatox and disbandment of the armies in 1865, and was full of interest to all. The entertainment concluded with the singing of "America" by the audience and an organ postlude.

Mr. Case was very kindly assisted by John Naegle, who manipulated the lantern in his usual faultless manner.

Below are the officers and members of the brigade, which was organized September 30th, 1895: Advisory board, Rufus K. Case, president, E. Bonny, George H. Batchelor; L. H. Bigiow, Jr., president, C. M. Evans, secretary and treasurer; first sergeant, Fred. C. Bonny; second sergeant, Harry V. M. Vetterlein; first corporal, J. Allie Wilson; second corporal, Andrew Mulford; third corporal, Douglas Drake; privates, Lucius H. Bigiow, third, George L. Bird, Eddie Bellis, Willie Coddington, Winfield S. Chase, Arthur V. Drake, Lewis W. Drake, Philip E. Drake, George J. Eagel, Jr., Elmer Hoffman, Aubrey B. Hull, John A Hull, Jr., Harry T. Joseph, Cyrus H. Kinsman, Rufus C. Larew, Louis S. Milligan, Louis A. McLoughlin, Alfred B. Marsh, Grover Marsh, William Edw. Neal, George Myers, Willie Mundy, George W. Pope, Charles C. Roeap, Floyd F. Sprague, Fred. M. Slater, Frank G. Shepherd, John P. Van Horn, Charlie Wilson.

Simon S. Hartman, of Tunnelton, West Va., has been subject to attacks of colic about once a year, and would have to call a doctor and then suffer for about twelve hours as much as some do when they die. He was taken recently just the same as at other times, and concluded to try Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says: "I took one dose of it and it gave me relief in five minutes. That is more than anything else has ever done for me. For sale at Armstrong,'s Pharmacy, Park and North avenue.

METHODIST WOMEN MEET.

Two Methodist Societies Elect Their New Officers.

The Woman's Foreign and Home Missionary societies of the First M. E. church held two very interesting meetings in the parlor of Vincent chapel Tuesday afternoon which were well attended by the members. They were the annual meetings for the election of officers, and outside of that the business was of a routine nature.

The Foreign Missionary Society election resulted as follows:

President, Mrs. M. L. Winter; vice-presidents, Mrs. Anson Sperry, Mrs. H. A. McGee; corresponding secretary, Miss Rachel Day; recording secretary, M. B. Sharp; treasurer, Miss Susan E. Jackson.

The Home Missionary Society officers are as follows:

President, Mrs. D. L. Davis; first vice-president, Mrs. P. M. French; second vice-president, Mrs. J. C. Peck; third vice-president, Mrs. J. Wier; corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. E. Horne; recording secretary, Mrs. N. W. Pike; treasurer, Mrs. J. W. Jackson; assistant treasurer, Mrs. Geo. R. Cornwell; librarian, Mrs. John McNaughton; mite-box secretary, Mrs. I. L. McVoy.

Mrs. A. McGee was elected president of the Ladies' Aid Society unanimously.

STILL ON THE WAR PATH.

Street Commissioner Meeker Keeps Right on With His Sidewalk Crusade.

Street Commissioner Meeker is on the war path again, and another batch of complaints were made this morning. They were almost altogether against non-residents, the owners of empty houses and vacant lots, who had forgotten to make any provision for the removal of snow.

There were several who were ordered to appear in the city court yesterday morning, but failed to put in an appearance. Unless some good reason is given to the City Judge, those who failed to appear are likely to find the matter more serious than they anticipated. Warrants will be issued for their arrest and they will await the pleasure of the court in the city lock-up, unless they can secure bail.

Not to be Trifled With.
(From Cincinnati Gazette.)

Will people ever learn that a "cold" is an accident to be dreaded, and that when it occurs treatment should be promptly applied? There is no knowing where the trouble will end; and while complete recovery is the rule, the exceptions are terribly frequent, and thousands upon thousands of fatal illnesses occur every year ushered in by a little injudicious exposure and seemingly trifling systems. Beyond this, there are today countless invalids who can trace their complaints to "colds," which at the time of occurrence gave no concern, and were therefore neglected.—When troubled with a cold use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is prompt and effectual. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale at Armstrong's Pharmacy, Park and North avenue.

Burns are absolutely painless when DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is promptly applied. This statement is true. A perfect remedy for skin diseases, chapped hands and lips, and never fails to cure piles. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

SWISS LOVES TO FIGHT.

AN INTERESTING LECTURE ON SWITZERLAND AND ITS PEOPLE.

Prof. Maxson Talks of the Ruggedness of a Small European Country, Whose Independence No One Ever Questions.

The last of the Y. M. C. A. star course of entertainments was held in the Y. M. C. A. hall Tuesday. Those that were present heard a very interesting lecture on "Switzerland and Its People" by Prof. Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of the Plainfield public schools.

Mr. Maxson began his lecture by speaking of the secluded position of this little republic in the centre of the great empires of Europe, its varied climate, of the different religious beliefs of its people, there being three State religions, and the five different languages that are spoken within its borders, none of which are Swiss. He then told of the history of the little country, beginning with its occupancy by the Romans, and passing through the oppressions of the Austrians. The story of William Tell and the other legendary heroes and their wonderful deeds of valor, were referred to.

"It is said of them," remarked Mr. Maxson, "that after their love of money came their love of fighting." He told of how they fought the foreigners, then among themselves, and at last hired themselves out to other nations whose love of fighting was not so great. The famous Swiss Guards that stood so bravely for the French at the commencement of the French Revolution, and were slaughtered almost to a man before they would yield, were spoken of. The present constitution of the Swiss cantons forbids this hiring out to other nations, and the only place where a Swiss guard is to be found outside of their native country is in the confines of the Vatican at Rome, in the service of the Pope.

In Switzerland every man serves as a soldier one or two months in a year until he is thirty-two years old. The military spirit is even carried into the schools. There has been and are other republics in Europe, but none like Switzerland. There are others as small, but the European nations do not think them worth the trouble of capturing, while Switzerland they cannot get, although many countries would like to and have already attempted it.

One cause of the bravery of the Swiss may be that they are constantly in danger. Mr. Maxson told of some of the difficulties and dangers that the Swiss encounters in growing and cutting his crop of grass. Not only does he stand face to face with death, but he is in a continual struggle for existence. In and around the towns, factories have been built, but outside of those, pastoral pursuits are the only occupations, while the cows are guarded and cared for with great attention. There is an intense local patriotism. The Swiss swears allegiance to his State first, and then to his country. It is a life of honest simplicity, there is no duty too menial, and no one is not willing to bear his or her share of the burden. We might not appreciate it with our refined taste, but it is the abode of concord.

The difference between the Swiss and American republics was next spoken of, and how in the former the legislative branch is all powerful. The head of the executive branch is a council of seven, somewhat similar to our cabinet. The two legislative bodies are equal in power, and the members are paid $4 a day, and then only when they answer to the roll calls of the day. "So," said Mr. Maxson, "it is needless to say that in Switzerland, Tom Reed would find his occupation gone." Then followed a sharp arraignment of the present political methods. Mr. Maxson severely criticized the present situation in New York State, and spoke with disgust of a State that is run by a citizen from down town New York office, while the people have nothing really to say.

All last winter Mr. Geo. A. Mills, of Labanon, Conn., was badly afflicted with rheumatism. At times it was so severe that he could not stand up straight, but was drawn over on one side. "I tried different remedies without receiving relief," he says, "until about six months ago I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. After using it for three days my rheumatism was gone and has not returned since. For sale at Armstrong's Pharmacy, Park and North avenue.

A PLAINFIELDER CHOSEN

CHARLES J. BAXTER TO BE STATE SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS.

Mr. Baxter is a Man of Experience in Educational Work—Appointed Because He Had Ability For the Position.

The name of Charles J. Baxter, of Plainfield, was sent by Gov. Griggs to the Senate at Trenton Tuesday, as his nomination for the office of State Superintendent of Public Instruction, to fill the unexpired term of Addison B. Poland, of Jersey City, resigned. After filling the office for one year, Mr. Poland was offered the position of vice-superintendent of the New York city schools. He accepted and resigned from the State superintendency. A new man was necessary to fill the office for the remaining two years of the term.

"Although I had heard of the resignation of Mr. Poland," said Mr. Baxter to a Press reporter Wednesday, "I had no idea of trying for the position. I went up to Sussex county where I found that I was being actively boomed as a candidate. I did not think much about it at the time and when I was asked if I would accept it, I replied that I would but would not enter in a wild scramble for it."

His name was ably supported by Assemblymen W. R. Codington and the other Assemblymen from Union county. Outside of those, only educational influences were brought to bear in his behalf.

Mr. Baxter will hold the office for two years, and as his term will expire while Governor Griggs is at the State House, he will probably be re-appointed.

The State Superintendent of Public Instruction is secretary, ex-officio, of the State Board of Education, President of the State Association of School Superintendents, a member of the State Board of Examiners and of all the county and city boards. He has supervision of all the schools receiving any part of the State appropriation; he apportions the State school funds to the different counties, and acts generally in a judicial capacity, subject to the ratification of the State Board of Education. His office will be at the State House.

Charles J. Baxter was born at Glenwood, Sussex county, New Jersey, on November 23d, 1851. He attended the district school there until he was twelve years of age, after which he went to work on his father's farm, continuing his studies by himself and with the help of an uncle who had graduated from Lafayette College and then lived on the next farm. On his eighteenth birthday he started his educational work as a teacher in the district school at Frankfort Plains, N. J. After twelve years of teaching in several district schools, Mr. Baxter was appointed principal of the Franklin Furnace district school. He gradually improved the condition of the school until it was converted into a high school. Two pupils went to West Point during his superintendency, one on a competitive examination with college men.

A number of graduates entered the leading colleges of the east, while a small army of teachers were turned out under the competent instruction of Mr. Baxter, for the graduates were able to win the first-grade county certificate. Mr. Baxter's old position is now held by a young woman, who was one of his former pupils and graduated from the school. Mr. Baxter received the highest salary ever paid to a teacher in that county.

After leaving Franklin Furnace, about seven years ago, he moved to this city so that his children, two girls, might enjoy the advantages of the far-famed Plainfield public schools. Since his resignation as principal of the Franklin Furnace school, Mr. Baxter has been connected with the Provident Life and Trust Company, of Philadelphia.

In politics Mr. Baxter took some share as a Republican when a young man, but as he grew older, his educational work absorbed all his energies. In 1875, he was nominated and renominated as county school superintendent of Sussex County by the State Board of Education, but was rejected by the Democratic Board of Freeholders, because of his party affiliations. This started the agitation which resulted in that power being taken from the Board of Freeholders and given to the Board of Education.

Mr. Baxter now lives in a pleasant house at the corner of Putnam avenue and Richmond street, with his wife and daughter, Adelaide. Another daughter, Katherine, who graduated from the High School in 1894, is studying at Vassar College.

NO MONEY FOR THE CHURCH.

Tip, the Bootblack, Says That He Needs All His Money for Himself.

An indignant colored woman made a complaint on her husband a short time ago on the charge of calling her names, refusing to support her and abusing her. The couple, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Thompson, appeared in court Tuesday afternoon. Thompson is better known to the citizens of Plainfield as "Tip, the bootblack," and the mirror-like shines that he gives his customers, despite the fact that he has only one arm, are the wonder of everybody.

His wife told her story which was that her husband refused to give her money for food or even for medicine when she was ill. He called her abusive names, so she said, and finally deserted her for another woman.

Thompson admitted that they had quarrelled about money matters and that he would not give her any money. His reason for this was that he bought all the household supplies himself and when he gave her money she gave it to the church. He thought that all the money he had he needed to support himself and family.

The trial was rather a damp one as Mrs. Thompson wept continually. Thompson paid a fine of $5 rather than go to jail for twenty days.

A PLEASANT SOCIAL.

The Endeavorers of the Crescent Avenue Church Arrange a Programme.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Crescent Avenue church held a sociable last Monday in the parlors of the church. The attendance was all that could be desired, every available seat being occupied. Mrs. Frank Smith, the well known eloqutionist, rendered several excellent selections. Alfred Holmes gave several baritone solos in a very acceptable manner. An instrumental quartette of violins and flute, consisting of Gilbert Lovell, Charles Davis, Lindley Hillmann and Walter Serrell, favored with several selections, which were enjoyed by all. At the end a collection for the work of the society was taken up.

Mrs. Ballington Booth's New Uniform.

When Mrs. Ballington Booth makes her next public appearance she will wear the uniform of a Volunteer. It consists of a severely plain skirt, three yards in circumference, and a waist of dark blue jacket pattern, with three box pleats down the front and back. Over the jacket Mrs. Booth will wear a coat, something the shape of a man's long sack coat. The garment will fit closely about the hips. The sleeves will be tight-fitting and as Mrs. Booth expresses it, without a crease or wrinkle. Illusion will be worn at the neck and wrists instead of collar and cuffs.

Wheelmen Discourage It.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—In reply to the article in yesterday's News on "Speculating in Seats," I wish to say that while one or two instances of the same have been brought to the attention of the entertainment committee, such speculating is entirely unauthorized by the committee. While we cannot control the individual action of ticket purchasers, the public are assured that every member of the committee discourages the speculation charge and will use his influence to abate it.

The New Woman.

The Thursday afternoon meeting at 3:30 in the W. C. T. U. rooms will be of unusual interest this week. Mrs. Whitehead, County Superintendent of Good Citizenship and Franchise, will read a paper on "The New Woman," and every member is urged to be present and bring her friends. Tea will be served and an opportunity given to meet Mrs. Whitehead socially after the programme, which is in charge of the County President.

The Bridge Finished.

The new bridge of the Philadelphia & Reading railroad over the Raritan river, near Bound Brook, has been completed, and yesterday morning trains began running over it at usual speed. The enlargement of the span by 70 feet now allows the water to flow off the low lands west of the bridge.

Worthy People.

The Organized Aid Association reports that they have on their lists names of fourteen women and twelve men, all worthy, seeking work. Work for women can be given, and in a limited degree for men if there were funds to pay for it.

MAY NOT ADJOURN TODAY

SEVERAL IMPORTANT MATTERS TO BE ACTED ON BY LEGISLATORS.

The Bill Repealing the Elective County Judiciary Law Passed by the Senate —An Act to Protect the Oyster Trade.

There is considerable uncertainty about the Legislature adjourning today, as there are several important matters yet unacted upon. The Republican Senators were in caucus nearly three hours last night considering the Appropriation bill and the constitutional amendments.

An agreement was reached on the former, but there was such a difference over the amendment reorganizing the higher courts that the caucus decided to dispose of the amendments in open Senate. They will be taken up today. At midnight the Senate was still in session disposing of bills.

Both Houses spent the day in disposing of bills, and many of general interest were passed. The Senate was engaged for two hours in discussing an oyster bill which prohibits any person from being employed in gathering oysters until he has been for six months a resident of the State. It will pass the Senate today.

Senator Stokes told the Senate that New Jersey's oyster trade was worth $2,000,000 a year, which was more than the value of the State's wheat crop, and that at the rate the planters and owners were going the oyster business would be ruined in a few years.

Among the bills of importance passed by the Senate were these:

Repealing the Elective County Judiciary law of last year, which was declared unconstitutional.

Allowing women to be appointed masters in chancery.

Authorizing erection of an armory at Newark at a cost of $2.0.000, half to be appropriated each year for two years, but work not to be begun until the appropriation is actually made.

Requiring all lights in places of amusement to be protected by globes.

Fixing the municipal elections in Newark and Jersey City on the second Tuesday in April.

In the House, when Mr. Cagney attempted to get his dollar gas bill out of the hands of the Municipal Corporations Committee, Chairman King told the House that the committee received the bill only Monday, although it was introduced over a month ago. Clerk Parker explained that the bill had been lost in the safe and was not found until Monday. Under the circumstances the House refused to order the bill out of committee, and it is dead for this year.

Among the bills passed by the House were these:

Requiring manufacturers who make goods for the wholesale trade, to pay their employes every two weeks.

Prohibiting menhaden fishing within three miles of the shore, except under license from the Fish and Game Commissioners.

The Supplemental Appropriation bill, carrying appropriations to the amount of $146,000.

Giving to the widow of an intestate all his personal property when he has no children.

Of Interest to Endeavorers.

Rev. A. M. Sherman, of Morristown, has recently designed and published a medium-size illustrated wall pledge for Endeavorers. In the centre are pictures of Dr. and Mrs. Clark, Secretary Baer, Treasurer Shaw, and Robert Ross, the Christian Endeavor martyr. There are also pictures of places of interest associated with the movement.

A leaflet has been issued by Revs. Charles Roads and Charles A. Oliver, giving the history and method of Christian Endeavor evangelistic work. It is a valuable summary and all societies should procure copies. The leaflet is published by the United Society.

Eloped and Were Married.

Mrs. Oscar Felter, of Branch Mills, Monday afternoon notified the authorities at Westfield that her younger sister, Sarah, had left her home early in the morning and she feared that she had eloped with a man named Al. Day, of Westfield. Mrs. Felter has had the care of her sister for several years, and was greatly worried about her sister's disappearance. The couple were traced to Rahway, and later were found at the residence of Day's father in Westfield. The girl showed a marriage certificate signed by an Episcopal minister at Rahway. As the girl is over eighteen years of age that settled the matter.

An Easter Monday Tea.

Cards are out for a tea to be given by Miss Lulu Lewis, daughter of the Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, of Central avenue, on Easter Monday. The tea is given in honor of the Misses Tracy, of West Eighth street, who are spending the winter in New York.

WHITE HOUSE DINNERS.

They Are Elaborate and Expensive State Affairs.

An Apocryphal Story About Mrs. Morton and an Ignorant Guest—How a Western Man Got Along Swimmingly.

[Special Washington Letter.]

The state dinners which are given by the president of the United States, in the white house, are elaborate and costly affairs. The president on such occasions invites all members of his cabinet, with their wives and daughters, to dine with him. The president and his wife, with their guests, enter the state dining-room at eight o'clock in the evening, and they usually remain at the table for an hour or more. The time is occupied not alone in eating, but in gossiping and nibbling at the numerous dainties which are brought in by courses and removed from time to time by quiet, expert, experienced waiters. The great dining-room is decorated with flowers from the white house conservatory, the table is adorned with floral designs, and everything that wealth can procure for adornment and pleasure is skillfully arranged by artistic fingers.

The president similarly entertains the members of the diplomatic corps in the state dining-room once every year. These gentlemen are ambassadors, envoys and ministers from all of the nations of the world, and they are accompanied by the ladies of their families. These state dinners are so named on account of their official character; but affairs of state are never discussed on such occasions. It would be bad form to "talk shop" at such a distinguished social gathering.

Every time to time the president also gives state dinners to members of the senate, members of the house, the supreme court, and the leading bureau officials who rank next to the members of his cabinet. He also gives public receptions to the army and navy officers, and to citizens of the United States who desire to pay their respects to their chief magistrate.

During the winter and spring until the Lenten season begins there is a continual round of dinner parties given in Washington by men and women who are leaders in the social swim. The vice president entertains the same functionaries who are banqueted at the white house. The senators, representatives and justices of the supreme court give elaborate dinners; and all of them take place at night under the gas and electric lights in the palaces of the the patricians of our republic. It never costs less than $500 for the dinners which are used upon each occasion, while sometimes more than $1,000 has been expended solely for floral decorations for one evening.

One evening when the wife of Vice President Morton was giving a select entertainment she was horrified by the action of one of her guests, who, though a man of political prominence, was not acquainted with the use of modern dollies, which are intended for decoration, and not for utility. She had just imported a set from Paris, and each of them was hand painted in water colors. On the evening in question, they were displayed for the first time at the most select finger bowls. Imagine the surprise of Mrs. Morton at seeing her guest, so famous as a legislator, and yet so ignorant of social amenities, coolly dip his fingers deep in the water and wipe them with the greatest nonchalance upon one of her precious new works of art on flimy bolting cloth. The costly little dolly was a wreck, and the entire set was spoiled; but Mrs. Morton was so polite and well bred that she took her own dolly and used it in the same manner. Her other guests knew better; but they followed the example of Mrs. Morton, in order to save the misguided statesman from the mortification of realizing the grave error which he had committed. His wife soon heard of the matter, and it is presumed that she gave him a severe curtain lecture; for, a few weeks later, a handsome set of imported doilies was sent to Mrs. Morton with the card of the statesman upon the package. No word of explanation was ever said or written, and the incident was thus closed.

A similar story is related of an incident which occurred when William C. Whitney was secretary of the navy. His wife was a philosophical woman, and when a guest of hers smashed a most precious teacup, she calmly picked up another and fractured it, saying: "Aren't they absurdly brittle?" But, of course, she was too well bred to make any other remark, and was obliged to content herself with mournfully describing the melancholy incident to sympathetic lady friends who realized what an embarrassing situation the lady was in when her elegant and dainty teacup was clumsily broken. People who are not familiar with the ways of the world of wealth and fashion are more at ease at supper tables; but well-bred men and women would almost allow their houses to be torn down over their heads, rather than to say or do anything to show their resentment or annoyance.

The man who used Mrs. Morton's dolly for a napkin had his counterpart in the almost mythical fellow who drank the water from his finger bowl and afterwards remarked that he thought it was "very weak lemonade."

In the Irish parliamentarian who saw people in London nibbling their celery, and whispered to his wife: "Luk at the people atin' the white boays."

A western senator gave a "stag" party to the gentlemen in congress from his own state. Among other things he had Rochefort and other imported cheeses; and after the party adjourned one of the congressmen remarked to a colleague: "I s'pose the senator must have been mortified if he noticed that all of his cheese was spoiled. I ate some of it just for appearances, but it nearly made me sick It was awful stuff, and the smell was very rank."

At big dinner parties it is well for a novice to watch what other people do, and follow their example. In that way mistakes may be avoided. There are so many new things being invented constantly for adornment and use by the social leaders that one must be going into society all the time in order to keep the run of them. A paper published here recently printed what was claimed to be a true story concerning a new member of congress who had been a farmer all his life, but who managed to get through a state dinner without making any blunders, because he carefully watched the others, and did exactly what they did with every utensil and with every edible. From the outset he was very much interested in a tiny silver hay fork at the side of his plate, the likeness of which he saw the other people use for their raw oysters. He did the same and was so far all right, helping himself to salt with a very small gold spade provided for the purpose. It reminded him of the tool he had employed many a time to dig potatoes with, save for the metal. The potatoes themselves, mashed, he was presently helped to a portion, and he found that his fellow-guests utilized an instrument, the like of which he was also supplied with, to push the vegetable upon their fork. Subsequently he learned that the instrument was called a "pusher," but at the time it seemed to him nothing more or less than a diminutive hoe, in the exact shape of which it was undeniably constructed.

HE CLAIMED THE CHEESE WAS SPOILED.

But there was one utensil that made him extremely nervous, inasmuch as he could not imagine for what purpose it was intended, and he was carefully guarding himself against a possible error, when of course after course he watched his fellow guests to see when they would bring the curious tool into play. It was not, however, until the asparagus came on that he saw an eminent diplomat who sat opposite him, pick up the silver hay rake from beside his plate and employ it to convey the vegetable to his mouth. It is said that he afterwards remarked to a friend: "If we're going into farming for a dinner table, why don't we have a threshing machine to make the beefsteak tender and a mowing machine to clear off the crumbs?"

That man was new to all of the pomp and dazzle of society at the national capital, but it is safe to assume that he will never destroy a dolly nor whatever any costly chinaware, nor mistake a napkin for a handkerchief and carry it away from the table in his pocket. He keeps his eyes open and keenly observes others. When he has perfectly learned the aphorism to "do as Romans do, when in Rome."

Although affairs of state are never considered at state dinners, very many important national matters are discussed and settled at private dinner parties, where three or more leading members of a great political party gather around a table in the dining-room of a senator or cabinet minister and discuss subjects of grave moment while they eat and drink and smoke their cigars. It was in Senator Gorman's dining-room one night in June, 1893, that the fate of the original Wilson bill was determined. And, in 1890, Senator Sherman of New York, secretly invited "just a few senators" to dinner one evening, cautioning each one to say nothing about it, as it was to be "a strictly private and select affair." It was a genuine surprise party to every senator, for, when all were assembled, every republican member of the senate was present. The newspaper men knew nothing of it. And it was then and there that the republican senatorial programme was agreed upon with relation to the McKinley bill. SYRYN D FAY.

PRETTY CHIP CARVING.

Fascinating Fancy Work for the Ladies.

Sharp Tool and a Piece of Soft White Wood the Only Material Needed—The Carver Can Chip in the Drawing-Room, so Clean is the Work.

The maiden of this end of the century has added a new accomplishment to her repertoire of arts and sciences.

It is chip-carving, the most delightful and "ladylike" work imaginable; a veritable fancy work, which one can take up as easily as a bit of knitting or embroidery. It has the advantage of wood carving, which requires such a vast paraphernalia before one can begin operations, and is so noisy in the doing that one's companions must be in long suffering—or deaf.

English girls are devoted to chip carving, but the art originated in Germany. In the neighborhood of the Black forest one can pick up delightful specimens of the work. Tidy tops, bookracks, picture frames, footstools, in fact, anything fashioned of wood is eligible for carving. White wood is the best for the purpose, and afterward it can be stained in any color—a black one is easily made—but the carving to perfection, or white enamel paint is pretty.

A novice might begin with a bookrack, one of the miniature kind which holds half a dozen or so volumes and stands on the library table. This, made of white wood, can be bought for exactly 90 cents. The two ends are all that require carving.

The pattern, which is usually one of geometrical design for chip carving, is easily what they did with every utensil and with every edible. From the outset he was very much interested in a tiny silver hay fork at the side of his plate, the likeness of which he saw the other people use for their raw oysters. He did the same and was so far all right, helping himself to salt with a very small gold spade provided for the purpose. It reminded him of the tool he had employed many a time to dig potatoes with, save for the metal. ONCE IN TWO YEARS.

PROPOSED BIENNIAL SESSIONS FOR THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

But the Amendment is Framed So That the Present Republican Majority Would Hold Over—Other Legislation.

In the State Senate Thursday morning Senator Johnson offered an amendment to the Constitution providing for biennial sessions, which will be considered by the Senate today, or on Friday, with the other amendments. It makes the term of the Governor four years after the expiration of the term of the present Governor. The terms of the Senators are extended to four years, and of the Assemblymen to two years. The Senators in office when the amendment goes into effect are to serve out their terms. The amendment adopted last year ended the terms of all Senators in office in January following the ratification of the amendment, and as they were nearly all Republicans they were unwilling to take chances on regaining control.

Thursday afternoon Senator Voorhees reported from the Judiciary Committee the amendments forbidding legislation legalizing lotteries, bookmaking, pool selling, or other gambling; forbidding the appointment to office during the recess of the Legislature of persons whom the Senate refused to confirm, and providing for dividing the larger counties into Assembly districts.

There is a coolness existing between the Senate and the House over the refusal of the former to return the bill repealing the Westchester Game Society charter and requiring nonresidents to procure a license to hunt game in the State. It passed the House Thursday without opposition, and was returned at once to the Senate. This morning Mr. Robertson, of Passaic, wanted it reconsidered, as he had discovered, he says, that it required a separate license fee for each county. When he discovered that it had gone back to the Senate he offered a resolution for its recall, but the Senate by unanimous vote refused to honor the request. Senator Stokes, who introduced the bill, says that the Game Warden of Passaic county is trying to kill the bill, which has been before the Legislature for the past ten years, and has always been defeated by lobbyists, who carried their opposition so far as to defeat for re election members who voted for it. The bill will go to the Governor and the opposition will try to head it off there.

The Senate passed bills making it a misdemeanor to steal electricity from the wires of electric light and power companies; making a general revision of the corporation laws, and requiring thread manufacturers to label or stamp upon spools or packages the quantity thread they contain; and imposing a penalty of $5 for each spool or package without such label or stamp, and a like penalty on dealers who sell unstamped or falsely marked spools or packages. The House passed bills fixing the second Tuesday in April as the date for municipal elections in Jersey City and Newark; the Jersey City Park bill; compelling trolley roads to maintain waiting rooms and transfer stations; fixing at two cents the toll on all ferries between Jersey City and New York.

At the evening session Speaker DeRousse announced that mistakes had been discovered in the vote in the Two Cent Ferriage bill, the clerk having failed to correctly record the members. He ordered another roll call, when the bill was defeated by a vote of 37 to 25. A motion to reconsider was defeated. The vote announced in the afternoon was 32 to 20, and friends of the bill intimate that the Speaker's action last evening was unfair.

The Coddington bill, imposing a penalty of $20 fine on any one who gives or sells cigarettes to any person under the age of 21 years, passed the House last night.

Here's a Sly Game.

A new bunco game, new at least in the neighborhood in which it has been successfully worked, is costing farmers and country storekeepers a good deal of money. The swindler claims to be a Treasury detective looking for counterfeit coin. He asks the farmers and storekeepers to submit their coin for his inspection. He puts on the silver dollars a chemical solution which turns them black, declares them spurious, and takes them with him.

He also impressively warns his victims that they are liable to arrest for having counterfeit money in their possession, and causes them to keep very quiet about the matter, thus helping him along in his work of bunco.—Somerville Messenger.

Prayer Instead of Dancing.

A sleighing party of friends of Alexander Noe, of Oak Tree, near Rahway, surprised him Tuesday evening at his farm. Musicians were along for dancing. At Noe's farm the party was transferred into a prayer meeting, and several were converted. The party did not dance, but had a good time.

LENTEN SERMON.

St. Mary's Church Filled Last Night to Hear Rev. Father Brothers.

The fifth sermon in the Lenten series was delivered on Thursday in St. Mary's church before a large congregation. The speaker was Rev. W. A. Brothers, of St. John's church, Paterson. His subject was "The Justice of God." The subject, he said, admitted of a very wide scope, but he would confine himself to the justice of God as dealt out to people in this world. He started from the time of Noah when God, in his justice, deluged the earth because of the wickedness of the people, and no one saved but Noah and his family. The speaker also told of the justice of God as exercised in the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah, which He said He would save if ten just people could be found. A search was made, but it proved fruitless, and the destruction of the cities followed. The spot is marked today by the Dead Sea, a living monument of the justice of God. The speaker then went on and told of the destruction of Jerusalem, another instance of the justice of God, because of the ingratitude of its people. Father Brothers is a forcible speaker, and handled his subject in a masterly manner. Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament followed the sermon.

WHAT AUNT ANNA SAYS.

The Old Maid Philosophies On Passing Topics of the Day.

Aunt Anna says:

I see Mr. Bullock's bread bill has passed the Senate. It should have been a meat bill. It seems to say how much bread shall weigh. We don't want heavy bread, do we?

I see House Bill 236 provides that all huckleberries shall be picked by hand. Goodness! let them try it.

I see by the Elizabeth Journal that Mr. Egenolf and young Ben. Campbell are spoken of as Democratic candidates for Mayor of Elizabeth. Well! they ought to be good fellows, but I don't know.

I see that in Quebec a Judge gave damages of $2 against a man for kissing a girl against her will. Patience! If I couldn't get more than that I would let him do it again and double the collection.

I heard Marshall P. Wilder the other night and they tell me he got one hundred dollars for the lecture as a humorist. Why my brother is better than him, but Col. Waring conldn't stand his wit. I wonder what the Colonel and Madam Carre would have done with Charlie Lyman.

BURGLARS IN A POSTOFFICE.

They Bored a Hole in the Safe, But Were Frightened Away.

When Allen C. Fitch, one of the clerks employed in the postoffice at Westfield, arrived at the office Friday morning he found that burglars had forced the door of the office with two large wrenches, such as are used by railroad men in tightening bolts on the track.

The burglars had bored a hole in the safe close to the combination lock with the intention probably of blowing it open, but it is thought that they were frightened away before they could accomplish their purpose. There was nothing of any value in the safe at the time, as the money and postage stamps are kept in it, but in the safe of the National Bank, which is next to the postoffice. The men then stole a horse and wagon and drove to Rahway, where they left the team in a yard.

Endeavor and Epworth League Relations.

"The question of the relations of the Christian Endeavor and Epworth League Societies has been assisted very much by the action of the joint committees of the two societies recommending that all members of the Epworth League who adopt the pledge and consecration meeting of the Endeavor Society be admitted to all unions without change of name; that all Endeavorers in the Methodist church become members of the Epworth League, and that all members of the Epworth League who desire affiliation be regarded as members of the Endeavor Society. In addition to this it is recommended that the two have common devotional topics. The report is signed by President Clark and several trustees of the Endeavor Society and by Bishop Fitzgerald and others on the part of the Epworth League."

A Good Motto.

The March bulletin of the Missionary Department of the Christian Endeavor society, of which Miss Alice B. Speer, daughter of this city, is superintendent, has been sent out to the chairmen of the committees. The motto for the month is "Watch and Pray." Prayer is to be offered for a blessing upon all missionary literature.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

MARRIAGE OF MISS JENNIE SMITH TO EDWARD S. WEAVER

The Event Solemnized at the Home of the Bride's Parents on John Street by Rev. Cornelius Schenck.

A pretty home wedding took place last Friday at 7 o'clock, when Miss Jennie Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Smith, of 494 John street, was united in marriage to Edward S. Weaver, of West Second street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Cornelius Schenck.

The bride was gowned in white satin, trimmed with lace, and carried white roses, while the bridemaid, Miss Anna H. Slater, of Phillipsburg, wore a gown of white India silk, trimmed with ribbons, and carried pink roses. The best man was Frank Jones, of 33 Chatham street.

Congratulations followed the ceremony, after which supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Weaver received a large number of useful and ornamental presents, including a collection of silverware.

At a late hour they left the house amid a shower of rice, for their new home, 311 New street, which was ready to receive them. The guests present at the wedding were G. B. H. Weaver, Mr and Mrs. Irvine Weaver and son, of Somerville; Miss Smith, of Newark; Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Merrill, of Dunellen; Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Davis, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Titsworth, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Hodge, Miss Carrie Weaver, Mr. and Mrs. John Poole, Miss Hattie Powelson, Miss May Hubbard, Mr. and Mrs. Stewart and son, Miss Webster, Miss Terry and Wm. Newman.

THE PRODIGAL RETURNED.

Nineteen-Year-Old Boy Who Knows What Home is After He Left It.

Frank Marsh, aged nineteen years, son of Randolph Marsh, of 310 Plainfield avenue, returned home last evening after a week's absence. He ran away several days ago and intended going to Florida, but owing to the heavy weather he only reached Philadelphia, where he managed to stay a few days. When he returned he was very penitent and was glad to get back to a comfortable home. He promised to do better and his father agreed to keep him as long as he keeps his word. This is the second time the boy has left home, and this last experience no doubt taught him that a good home, with comforts, was more to be desired than a shiftless life, roaming about aimlessly without good parents and a home.

To Tell How to Earn Money.

The Advance Circle, King's Daughters, of the First Presbyterian church, are arranging for an event to be held at the home of Mrs. Howard Pope, West Fifth street, Thursday evening, April 2d. The members are expected to earn a dollar, and at that time they will tell in verse how they secured it. A programme will also be arranged for the occasion.

WASN'T THE RIGHT ONE.

YOUNG LAD CHARGED WITH STEALING COAL PROVES HIS INNOCENCE.

But Willie Was Suspicioned Because He Ran When He Saw an Officer—What His Mother Had to Say About It.

A number of arrests have been made lately of trespassers on the railroad property, and on Thursday Willie Drake was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza on the charge of trespassing and stealing coal.

Detective Blackford testified that he saw young Drake on a coal car shoveling off coal on March 13th, and that the lad ran when he saw him. Blackford produced the shovel and a bag in which to carry the coal that he said Drake left behind. Mrs. Drake and the prisoner both swore that the latter had not been there at the time mentioned. Mrs. Drake, in her anxiety to secure the release of her son, told who she thought the real offenders were.

Drake was arrested by Blackford on Somerset street after an exciting chase.

"Why did you run away?" asked the Judge.

"I didn't know what he wanted me for," pleaded the small prisoner.

"Why were you afraid," interposed Sergeant Kiely, "when you had not done anything?"

"Oh," exclaimed his mother, "you know Willie is always afraid of a policeman."

The Judge did not think that the evidence was sufficient to hold the lad and so dismissed the complaint with a warning.

As the lad and his parents passed out of the court room Mrs. Drake turned with a smile to Detective Blackford and remarked "Thank you", while the detective continued writing in his note book.

CENTRAL RATES JUST AS CHEAP.

Local Merchants Cannot Get Freight Rates Any Cheaper Than Now.

Speaking with reference to the talk of establishing a transportation company between this city and South Plainfield to haul freight from the Lehigh Valley Railroad, an official of the Central freight department in this city this morning said to a Press reporter that the comparison made was misleading. The Central has a varying rate for freight between New York and this city, which is as follows: First-class, seventeen cents; second-class, fifteen cents; third-class, thirteen cents; fourth-class, nine cents; fifth-class, eight cents; sixth-class, seven cents. The great portion of bulky and heavy freight, such as groceries, dry goods, etc., is carried under the fourth-class rates, which are nine cents. Under these conditions it would not be a saving for merchants to enter into the proposed arrangement, and, in fact, would necessitate an increased expenditure for transportation, with far poorer facilities.

Died in Africa.

The news has just reached this country of the death in South Africa of Rev. Giles Van Der Wall, D. D. He was the first pastor of the Reformed church at East Millstone, Somerset County, from 1856 to 1858. It was also his first charge, and during it the first house of worship was erected. In 1861 he was called to the Dutch church of Bloemfontein, South Africa. After serving them about nine years, he was called to a very large church at Paarl, of the same region, where he labored about twenty-five years, and died at the age of sixty-eight.

Two Days Late in Getting Home.

Bert Blake and Abbett Cain, of Grandview avenue, went to Adamsville Sunday to see friends. When they started for home Sunday night, they found the snow too deep for them. They arrived in this city on Tuesday.

STOLE LOOSE CHANGE.

A BOROUGH MEAT MARKET BROKEN INTO LAST NIGHT.

Smalley Brothers' Place Entered and $4 in Cash and a Quantity of Meat Taken—Entrance Through a Window.

The meat market of W. L. & J. M. Smalley, on Somerset street, was entered by thieves some time during Thursday, and the money drawer broken open and röbbed of about $4 in cash. A quantity of meat was also taken. The thieves entered the yard in the rear from Race street, and made a small hole in a pane of glass in the window, thereby being able to push back the catch which fastens the window. Then they had a very easy time in getting what they wanted.

When W. L. Smalley opened the shop this morning the first intimation he had of the theft was when he saw the money drawer lying on the floor with the contents removed. The firm is not able to tell how much meat was taken as it was all placed in the ice-box when the store was closed last night.

W. L. Smalley lives in the same building on an upper floor, but he heard no noise during the night. The case has been placed in Chief Marshal Wilson's hands, and it is thought that the thieves are known.

AN ACT OF HEROISM.

Dr. Shaw Risks His Life to Extinguish a Dangerous Fire.

At the risk of his own life Dr. Shaw was last night the means of extinguishing a fire in the home of Mrs. Whitney, at 310 East Sixth street, which, if it had gained much headway, would have proved a difficult one for the fire department to cope with. Dr. Shaw called on Mrs. Whitney and her daughter shortly after 8 o'clock, and after he had been there for a few minutes was asked to extinguish an extra lamp that was burning in the sitting room. This he did, and for minutes after Mrs. Whitney, her daughter and Dr. Shaw conversed pleasantly, when suddenly the lampshade, which was of a flimsy material, burst into flames.

Realizing that a serious fire might result if the flames were not suppressed immediately, the Doctor started to take off his coat to smother the flames, but on second thought grabbed a small mat and caught the burning lamp and shade. The mat, however, was not large enough to completely envelope the flames and they severely burned the Doctor's hands and face before he got to the door. But he pluckily held on and pitched the burning material into the snow in the front yard. In carrying it he set fire to the portierres between the rooms and a rug on the floor. As soon as he had disposed of the lamp he rushed back into the house and extinguished the other flames.

John Brooks, superintendent of the Potter Press Works, who resides at 517 Watchung avenue, was notified of the trouble, and turned in an alarm from box 25, but by the time the fire department had arrived the fire was out.

Dr. Shaw dressed his own wounds immediately, and though they will not leave permanent scars, it will be some time before they heal.

The house by the fire was about $50. The house is owned by W. R. Codington and insured for $2,000.

His Eye Filled With Powder.

James Voorhees, of Clinton avenue, sustained a very severe and painful injury to his left eye, yesterday, while at his home. He thought he would take a look at his gun, which has been lying idle all winter, and see if it was in good condition. To do so, he discharged the gun. The shell exploded and a quantity of powder entered his left eye, causing a burn across the sight. He suffers considerable pain but it is not likely that he will lose his eye sight.

Warren's School Election.

The annual school election of Warren Township was held Tuesday afternoon in the school house at that place. J. G. Cooper was chairman, and Howard Toms, secretary. Phil. Voorhees, Aug. Shoemaker and Henry Nuse were elected trustees for three years. A careful estimate was made regarding the amount thought necessary to run the school for the coming year and $400 was decided upon by a unanimous vote.

It is a significant fact that a number of important pieces of legislation proposed at Trenton this winter have already been adopted by the local authorities, notably the one prohibiting trolley roads from carrying freight and the restrictions surrounding the applications for liquor licenses.

MUST SHOVEL OR SUFFER

INDIGNANT PROPERTY OWNERS IN THE CITY COURT THIS MORNING.

Arraigned on the Charge of Violating a City Ordinance in Not Cleaning Their Walks of Snow—The Sentences.

The strict enforcement of the city ordinance regarding the cleaning of the snow and ice off the sidewalks under the penalty of a fine for not doing so, is making lively times for the Street Commissioner and the city court. Several days ago Street Commissioner Meeker filed complaints against twenty-five different people for not cleaning off their sidewalks. The offenders were ordered to appear before City Judge DeMeza this morning and most of them did, either personally or by representatives.

There seemed to be a general ignorance regarding the fact that a fine was required, most of them thinking that if they did not clean off the sidewalk the Street Commissioner would do so and send them the bill. All those who appeared personally pleaded guilty, some at once and others after considerable argument. Eight prominent Plainfielders were given a choice between paying a fine of $3 or spending ten days in jail. They all paid their fines at once. Several of the names had been taken off the list as they had proved to the Street Commissioner's satisfaction that they had received no notification. Three other prominent offenders who were unavoidably absent were ordered to appear for trial on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

The trials were held in the city court room in the Serrell building. Most of those that were arraigned for the offence were highly indignant at the entire proceedings, and the much-abused Street Commissioner had to take most of the blame.

"I hope he knows his business," exclaimed one particularly indignant individual, "but I don't believe he does. I wanted the Street Commissioner to have his men clean off my sidewalks, they are all prepared, and then I would pay him for it."

The Judge explained that the city's employes would clean off his sidewalks, but he would have to pay a fine. The reading of the ordinance changed the indignant individual's opinion and he wanted to know what the fine was before he pleaded. The Judge refused to tell and remarked that it depended on the merits of the case. The man finally said "guilty," and his fine was $3.

Perhaps the complaint fell hardest on Hamilton Probasco, a colored man.

He evidently believed that it was an outrage, and that no free and lawful citizen should stand it so he objected vehemently. His ire rose higher as he realized that his objections were of no use, and he admitted that he did not shovel the snow off his own property, but, because he removed it for others, he thought that he should be excused.

"I donated it for the city, you know," he remarked.

"Three dollars or ten days," said the Judge. "Are you going to pay the fine?"

But Probasco thought that he was being unfairly treated and said so, and refused to tell whether he would pay or not. The Court motioned to a policeman to remove the objector. The thought of ten days in the county jail with him turns pale as the muscular hand of the officer was felt on his shoulder, and he was glad to sink into silence. After a time he concluded to pay the fine, and while he was handing it over to the Judge he remarked, "Where's your town squire? I want to protest this case. I'll carry it to the Mayor's Court and then to the Supreme Court."

Another citizen remarked, after he paid his fine: "I'll go out there to shovel snow and catch cold, I'll send you the bill." He did not say what the bill would be for, however.

John Delaney asked the Judge whose duty it was to clean off the street crossings. The reply was that the city should clean them. Then, asked Mr. Delaney, why can't we make a complaint against Street Commissioner Meeker for not cleaning them? Judge De Meza said that one might be made out and sent to the committee of the Common Council.

Sweetheart Dead and Didn't Know It.

A man residing in Missouri wrote to some Plainfield friends a few days ago inquiring about his sweetheart, who, he wrote, was working for a family in this city. At first it was thought that she was not known here, but investigation proved that she had died some time ago. The man was notified, but seemed unwilling to believe such a statement. He wrote again, but as it is almost certain that the woman to whom he referred is dead, there is nothing left to do in the way of assisting the man to find his sweetheart.

The majority of Plainfield clergymen are in favor of the marriage license bill now before the Legislature. One prominent minister this morning stated that the opposition of the Camden ministers was based solely on the fact that the enactment of the bill would cut off the large fees which they make from Philadelphia couples who cross the river to escape the Pennsylvania license law.

A STRONG RIGHT ARM.

WORTH OF THE EPWORTH LEAGUE TO THE CHURCH TALKED OF.

A Number of Societies in This Vicinity Rally in Grace M. E. Church—The Speakers and What Was Said

The Epworth League is undoubtedly the right arm of the Methodist Episcopal church, and the frequent social gatherings held under the auspices of the league are productive of much good. Those who attended the rally in Grace M.E. church Friday evening were convinced of one fact, namely, that in union there is strength. There was a large number of Epworthians present, including members from Dunellen, Scotch Plains, First M. E. church and Monroe Avenue chapel. Owing to the fact that many of the visitors did not arrive till late, it was 8:45 when the exercises commenced. Charles Hummer, president of the league, was in charge, and most ably did he look after his part of the affair. After the singing of a hymn, Dr. C. R. Barnes offered prayer. Rev. Herbert Randolph was then introduced and spoke in part as follows:

"I am not going to weary you with a long speech, neither am I going to verify Tennyson's poem 'Men may come, and men may go, but I go on forever.' I, a man once addressed a Sunday-school. He started in at the Garden of Eden and never stopped till he reached Revelations. In the meantime every scholar was sleeping soundly, and at the close of his lengthy discourse he exclaimed 'What shall I say next?' He repeated the sentence, whereupon a little girl in the rear of the room called out 'Please sir, won't you say Amen?'

"The great motto today is 'get there.' It is used by business men and everybody. A great feature in our church is sociability, and we will make it warm for you if we have to do so."

The speaker related several amusing incidents which were well received. After an excellent violin solo by Dyckman Winckler, accompanied by Miss Alice Carroll, Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, of Monroe Avenue chapel, responded to Mr. Randolph's remarks, an abstract of which follows:

"There are people who are too pious to enjoy a rally, but I doubt if they live in Plainfield. We are here with a spirit of rallyship. I came to have a good time. If you want to witness true fellowship you should see two persons suffering with the same kind of rheumatism. If we expect to associate with people in the next world, we should be willing to do so here. I am glad to be here and I believe that we want the kind of religion that will make us enjoy living better. May God bless the receiving chapter. We are with you and will stand side by side."

W. J. Tallamy, the favorite tenor soloist, followed with a choice selection and was obliged to respond to an encore.

Mr. Hummer announced that owing to the absence of the banjo players, who were to have been present, that number on the programme would be omitted.

"A recitation, "The Inventor's Wife," was most admirably rendered by Miss Lizzie Hoagland. In response to an encore she gave "A Woman's Pocket."

Another very pleasing number was a contralto solo and violin obligato by Miss Grace Carroll and Dyckman Winckler. They were also obliged to acknowledge an encore.

Another tenor solo by Mr. Tallamy was heartily appreciated and he very kindly favored the audience with a second selection.

A recitation by Miss Emma Stevens and another violin solo by Dyckman Winckler closed the programme, after which cake and lemonade was served by the young ladies of the church. A very pleasant social time followed which brought to an end an evening of genuine pleasure.

The suggestion of a borough resident that a pamphlet be issued each year by the Board of Education giving in detail the expenses of the schools, is good so far as it goes. But the pamphlet usually goes into the waste basket in the ordinary household. A pamphlet, of course, would relieve the Board of Education from any charge of neglect in not providing the public with the exact condition of the department over which they exercise control, but the publication of these same facts in the two-newspapers of Plainfield would be the most practical and efficacious method of disseminating the knowledge. Newspapers are read by the people, while pamphlets are simply received by them. There is some difference between receiving and reading.

There is a probability that the eighth district Republican convention for the election of delegates to the National convention will be held at Elizabeth, April 17th.

Of the twenty-five counties that have held Republican conventions in South Dakota, twenty-one have declared for sound money. All of them have advocated the nomination of McKinley for President.

THE ERRATIC BICYCLE.

BY LUKE SHARP.

HAVE, at various periods of my life, endeavored to teach a two-wheeled machine to carry a man with something like dignity and stability to himself. In fact, if it did not wish to wobble over the whole earth in the space of ten seconds. My first efforts were made more years ago than I care to estimate, on the ordinary bone-shaker of commerce, a two-wheeled vehicle with hickory spokes in the wheels. If I remember rightly, I broke up the machine, and abandoned the attempt.

Never shall I forget my amazement when I saw a human being for the first time on one of those wheels which we now call the ordinary bicycle. It seemed to me then anything but ordinary. In due time I tackled one of these machines at a riding school, and the result of this wonderful conflict I wrote up in these pages years ago. The result was that in a certain number of rounds the machine floored me every time, drawing first, second and third blood. As I had some work to do in this world I again abandoned the attempt, not wishing to break myself into little pieces. On various occasions since then I have endeavored to train up a bicycle in the way it should go, but always without success.

It is an amazing thing, then, that a sedate, middle-aged man should try to do what he had invariably failed to accomplish in his youth. In looking back to see what was responsible for this amazing outbreak on my part, I think the man most to blame is that celebrated dramatic author, Mr. Bronson Howard. Yet Mr. Howard has always been exceedingly kind and genetle with me, as, indeed, he is with everyone, and I have often wondered why he endeavored to lure me on to the top of a bicycle. Perhaps it is that Providence does not intend any man to be entirely good, and as anyone who is acquainted with Mr. Howard has never any fault to find with him, it may be that his leading of a man toward feats of bicycular eccentricity takes the place in Mr. Howard's nature that revenge, envy and all uncharitableness occupy in the souls of the rest of us.

However, at first I practiced on a tricycle, and used to cover amazing distances on that remarkably sane machine. Once when in Honolulu, with nothing to occupy his mind or his muscles but a bicycle, it happened to be unemployed at that particular time, Mr. Howard tumbled about the land of the Sandwich islands, and nearly got himself clung into the Pacific on two or three occasions, but he persevered and finally conquered the two-wheeler. Since then he has been bragging about it and inviting me to take trips with him to various interesting portions of the earth.

So I said to myself that if a mere dramatic author had brains enough to ride a bicycle, surely a talented newspaper man could do the same thing.

A friend of mine in England said that the real way to acquire the bicycle habit was to get a machine of my own.

"As long" said he, "as you simply depend on hired machines you won't learn, because you have nothing at stake, but once you spend your money for a first-class bicycle you are then compelled to learn, or else there is so much cash thrown away."

This seemed very reasonable, so I pondered upon it and then bought the biggest book on cycling that is published, a very expensive book, one of the volumes of the Badmington Library, edited by a real lord, and illustrated by a prince—a prince of the brush—named Joseph Pennell, who is a cycler himself, and he draws very alluring pictures of the machine. I studied up this volume and was amazed to see how easy it was to ride a bicycle. I then took the advice of my friends as to which particular machine to buy. It gives several pages in a description of a particular safety, and I learned that that machine had none of the vices which were so prominent in those bicycles with which I had heretofore been brought into contact. On this one it was impossible to take a header. The machine also would not slip sideways in the mud. It had numerous other advantages, for a list of which I refer all inquirers to the cycling volume of the Badmington library.

So I had a wheel made to measure—for they measure you for a bicycle in England just as if you were getting a pair of trousers made—and the other day the machine was delivered in good shape and I pitched up in front of it.

At the back part of my house there is a somewhat large lawn that costs me ever so much a year for having a lazy man with a lawn mower go over it two or three times a month. I thought I would make things interesting for this man the next time he came with his lawn mower by practicing over the grass with my new bicycle.

The machine was a beautiful one, nickel-plated everywhere that nickel would stick on it, and as light that you could easily pick it up in one hand, grasping it by the backbone. It seemed almost too pretty for a rough and tumble fight, even on the velvety lawn, and I had some thought of putting it back in the brown paper again and hiring a second-hand machine to learn on, but as it was guaranteed to hang together under almost any circumstances I concluded to go ahead with it. I put my left foot on the step that extends out from the hub of the hind wheel, and hopping with my right foot pushed it ahead of me. The machine behaved beautifully, but perhaps that was because I hopped the whole length of the lawn and had not the courage to jump up into the saddle. On the next round my natural bravery returned to me, and I raised myself above the machine as best as down somewhat emphatically and not too comfortably. The wheel seemed to be amazed at this, for with a large space in front of me unoccupied, it promptly dashed over the border to the left, then, with a wild swoop to the right, fell and landed me in a rose bush. Nothing seemed to be broken except the bush, so I tackled it again and again and again. The result of the first morning's work was that I could place myself in the saddle and trundle along the lawn hanging on like grim death to the handle bar, but without daring to put my feet on the pedals.

I discovered more different muscles in my own body than I had any idea I possessed. Every bone and sinew ached, not with the falls, for I had been singularly lucky in that respect, but with the exertion of hopping along after the machine, and springing into the saddle and straining every nerve to keep the combination from going over.

How to make too long a story of it, I may say that for three days the machine and I discussed this matter, and every two minutes I tied it out on to the lawn. I seemed at first to know less about balancing myself than I had done when I quitted the business the day before. Perhaps during the night the machine had thought up some new tricks.

At last I rose up very early one morning, long before the season-ticket man began to pass my house to go to the railway station, for his London train. I felt that the lawn was getting too small for me. I could now work the pedals reasonably well, and stagger about the place from one end to the other of the grass plot, but I could not turn around, for when I attempted to do so the machine would swoop like a hawk into one of the flower beds or into a convenient piece of shrubbery.

Our neighborhood is a quiet one, and the streets at most times is not so busy as the Strand. I expected to have it all to myself in the early morning out, but in this I reckoned without the milkman. I had no idea before that the multitudinal milkman was such a fiend in human shape. He drives a vehicle modeled after the old Roman chariots, and he drives at a rate of speed that is positively amazing. The moment I got on my bicycle in the road some accursed milkman would come tearing up, and taking it for granted that I knew all about bicycle steering would hold his slightest attention to me. Consequently I came within an ace of being smashed up into pieces on several occasions, and after steering my machine up on the sidewalk and into the area I got out of his way I used language that I knew must have turned most of the milk in that neighborhood sour.

One morning, thoroughly discouraged with the business, I got out on the street a little later than usual, so as to be rid of the milkman. One peculiarity of the bicycle seems to be that although you are reasonably successful on your last interview with it, the next you seem to have to begin all over again. This particular morning I was more than usually discouraged and had practically made up my mind to sell the machine. All at once I found myself in the saddle and realized that I had run along several rods without any serious wobbling. On and on we went with a delightful sense of smoothness, ease and exhilaration. I turned in to the main coaching road with my heart in my mouth but my feet still on the pedals, and I steered clear of the milk wagons. There was now a straight stretch ahead of me for miles on a smooth and excellent road.

"Surely," said I to myself, "the time is come when my neck is to be broken. This docility on the part of the wheel can lead to nothing but disaster." Nevertheless on and on we went, and after travelling now about a mile and coming to a wide part in the thoroughfare, I took a sweep around with amazing success and traveled back again. It seemed to be an unbelievable thing, but actually I had succeeded in teaching that bicycle how to carry a man as a man should be carried.

McKinley seems to be strong with New Jersey Republicans.

This is the last week of the Lazy Legislature. It cannot be judged so far by what it has done.

Whether or not oleomargerine makes money for its producers it makes talk for Legislators.

The Tribune states that difficulty is being experienced to get a competent man to take the State School Superintendency at a salary of $3,000.

There was a refreshing originality and recognition of the eternal fitness of things in the case of Cherokee Bill when he was having the noose adjusted around his neck, and he said: "I came here to die, not to talk."

Owing to the low price of gas in Milwaukee, 80 cents per 1,000 for fuel purposes, that city uses more artificial fuel gas, in proportion to its size, than any city in the United States. When will come the time that the people of this city will be thus blessed?

When John Kean hears of the selection of Senator Voorhees as Clerk in Chancery he will more thoroughly understand how and why he was beaten for the nomination in Union county, and thereby in the State, remarks the Trenton True American.

James E. Martine is being urged to go to the National Democratic convention at Chicago, as a delegate from this Congressional district, but the Farmer Orator has not yet decided one way or the other. But he is a Whitney man all the way through.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders are faithful to their constituents, even unto details. They have adopted a resolution recommending the Prosecutor of Pleas to offer a reward of $100 for the arrest and conviction of any thief who shall hereafter steal any horse or mule in the county.

Even the New Brunswick papers refer to it as the "old town," and The Home Newa is frank enough to print the following:

New Brunswick is the most modest city in the world. She seems to retire while the gas is burning, but puts it out at 12 o'clock precisely, and when there is a total eclipse of the moon time, she just stumbles around without one gas or electricity to protect her pretty feet from her rough sidewalks.

The apportionment of delegates to the Republican State Convention to be held at Trenton on April 16th is as follows: Atlantic, 19; Bergen, 30; Burlington, 37; Camden, 64; Cape May, 8; Cumberland, 27; Essex, 157; Gloucester, 20; Hudson, 105; Hunterdon, 17; Mercer, 56; Middlesex, 26; Monmouth, 41; Morris, 30; Ocean, 13; Passaic, 58; Salem, 17; Somerset, 17; Sussex, 13; Union, 42; Warren, 17.

Now the Chancery Court clerkship has been practically settled in favor of Senator Foster M. Voorhees, of Union—says the New York Journal—all eyes are turned in the direction of the State Prison keepership, and the influential position of Chief Labor Inspector. J. Hart Brewer, of Trenton, a man who has sacrificed much for the Republican party; ex-Senator Willetts, of Cumberland, who has't the backing of his senatorial representative; Mr. Stokes, and "Bob" Carson, twice postmaster of New Brunswick, are the men whose names are most mentioned in this connection. Thomas McGowan, of Essex, is spoken of as a likely successor to the Factory Inspectorship but, as there are upward of 300 applicants to select from, there is no telling where the lightning may strike.

One of the bills passed by both Houses of the Legislature imposes a fine on any one throwing in the streets broken glass, bottles, metal, loose stones, earthenware or other substance likely to cause injuries to travellers, carriages or bicycles. The fine is to be $5 if a bicycle tire is punctured and $10 if any person is injured. The purpose of this bill is an entirely commendable one. People who throw into the streets objects that might puncture bicycle tires, or injure the feet of horses, ought to be punished for it. But they ought to be punished even if no tire is punctured, no horse lamed, no person injured. The penalty should go with the act. As the bill stands it will bring assured punishment to the person who throws tacks or broken glass on a street and leaves his card with it, or stands around waiting to give his name and address to the first bicycle rider whose tire is punctured.—Newark News.

The Assembly bill prohibiting the sale or gift of cigarettes to any person under the age of twenty-one years, enlisted the active support and voice of Assemblyman Codington yesterday, who pointed out the evils of cigarette smoking. Along the same line of discussion Assemblyman Reed assumed the role of the little joker and said the cigarette habit was responsible for the defeat of a popular Union county man (Senator Voorhees) for the Gubernatorial nomination and had landed him in the Senate of New Jersey.

The Booth family have been inconsistent on all sides during the Salvation Army trouble. They are examples of "do as I tell you to do, not as I do."

The township elections in this State may mean that Democrats are receiving their own, or merely that politics have given no place to personal popularity, but the fact that the Democrats did gain in important districts is indisputable, and offers encouragement to the party, and to the independent voters who have seen the perils of good government from the recent overwhelming majorities of the Republicans.—Newark Call.

The essential feature of the anti-cigarette bill which Mrs. Coard of this city, was striving to have the Legislature pass, has been reported by the Senate leaders in changing the age to whom it shall be lawful to sell from 21 years to 16 years. Mrs Coard stated to The Press a few days ago that her aim was to have the law made so that no dealer would be permitted to sell cigarettes to any but those of mature age, who could judge of the evil consequences of indulging in cigarette smoking. The amendment of the Senate, therefore, nullifies her proposition.

The Joint Committee on Revision of Borough Laws have prepared a report, one important passage of which is as follows:

We believe that there are many boroughs in this State which have no sufficient excuse for existence, which were prompted by some local desire for extravagant improvement, or were part of a speculative scheme to encourage the sale of real estate, or were the outgrowth of sectional feeling or jealousy, which found too easy a vent in the facility of the present general law for the creation of a new municipality. We have not thought it advisable, however, to question in any way the existence of any of these boroughs, or in rehabilitating them to make any provision beyond that contained in the acts and those that ought not. It will be sufficient, we trust, to guard against the increase of such boroughs.

What will Cleveland do after his retirement? Why, Grover's a great friend of the poor and foe of the monopolists has become so "well fixed" that he doesn't need to do anything.—Hunterdon Republican.

The habit which prevails among certain newspapers, Democratic as well as Republican, of speaking in a disparaging and slighting manner of public officials, is one that needs correction. Those whom the people select to fill offices of trust and responsibility are entitled to public respect until some overt or secret act makes clearly manifest the fact that they no longer merit the public confidence. When this condition is reached such a traitor should be removed by law from the office which he has disgraced and dishonored.—Hunterdon County Democrat.

The efforts being made to get the Garden State Poultry and Pigeon Society to bring their annual show to Plainfield next December should be aided by every progressive person in the city. The exhibition would bring a large number of strangers to this city, and besides the money they would spend while here, there is also the fact to be taken into consideration that some of visitors would no doubt be favorably impressed with the town as a desirable residence place, and that that impression might take form in the purchase of property, and a decision to make their home here. Conventions and public events are good things for any town to seek for.

A Birthday Surprise.

A birthday party was tendered little Gracie Gaddis, of 8 Regent street, Saturday afternoon, between the hours of 2 and 5 o'clock. A most pleasant time was had by the little ones.

The following little people were present as guests: Misses Carrie Eagel, Carrie Wiess, Minnie Eagel, Hattie Gaddis, Lillian Voehl, Tina Voehl, Tillie Uhrhahn, Lillie Van Winckle, Hattie McLoughlin, Maggie Gaddas, Addie Carney; Masters George Eagel, Davis Wiess, Geordie Gaddas, Harry Gaddas, Andrew Flemming, John Carney.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

MAKING GOOD BOROUGHS

LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE RECOMMENDS THE LAW OF 1878.

All Boroughs Created Under the Unconstitutional Laws Are Now De Facto Governments—Other Business.

Gov. Griggs Friday sent to the House two more vetoes; one of the bill repealing the law requiring insurance brokers to obtain licenses from the Banking and Insurance Commissioners. The Governor says agents are required to take out licenses, and there is no good reason why brokers should be exempt.

Besides, the law is just and furnishes a safeguard about the insurance business, and turns in a revenue of $3,000 a year to the State. The other veto is of the bill requiring the Freeholders of Hudson county to construct sidewalks on both sides of the County Boulevard. The boulevard, the Governor says, is fourteen miles long, and was built at the public expense.

Now it is proposed to make the public pay for the sidewalks without any contribution from abutting property owners whose lands have received special benefits. The universal rule is that sidewalks are the special care and charge of the property owners, but he would consent to a bill requiring them to pay one-half of the $250,000 which the improvement will cost.

Many bills were passed and three were introduced from the Joint Committee to revise the borough laws. One legalizes all the de facto borough governments recently declared unconstitutional by the Court of Errors and Appeals, and confirms and validates all acts and ordinances passed by such boroughs. Present officers of such municipalities are continued until next spring, when their successors are to be chosen. The other two bills provides that boroughs and villages and cities and towns must hereafter be incorporated by special act of the Legislature. The bill to defray the incidental expenses of the Legislature was reported in full.

The Senate defeated the proposed marriage license law by adopting the adverse report of the Revision of Laws Committee. The Anti-cigarette bill was amended by Senator Voorhees so that it shall forbid the sale or gift of cigarettes to persons under 16 instead of under 21 years of age. The Jury Commission bill was amended so as to apply only to first and second class counties.

Nearly the whole of the session was consumed in discussing the merits of the bill making it unlawful for trolley companies to carry freight. The larger counties want the bill passed, and the seashore and rural counties are opposed to it. The discussion tonight was on amendments offered by Senator Bradley to exempt from the bill roads which are now carrying freight, and also all roads which shall secure the consent of the owners of a majority of the property along the line of the roads. The bill was finally laid over, as it was discovered that the printed copies differed from the official engrossed copy. Senator Voorhees reported the proposed amendment to the Constitution giving women the right to vote at school elections.

The Oleomargerine bill was taken up on final passage, when Senator Daly consumed considerable time with dilatory motions, and the Senate adjourned at midnight without taking action.

THE WOODEN WILL CONTEST.

Relatives of Uncle Peter Trying to Prevent His Bequests of Money.

The Peter Wooden will contest was brought up in the Orphans' Court of Somerset county this morning before Judge Bartine. The contestants are Mrs. Dickinson, Mrs. Rachael Smalley and others, who allege that undue influence was brought upon "Uncle Peter" when he made the bequests to the Seventh-Day Baptist church and Alfred University. The executor of the estate, William M. Stillman, is represented by Craig A. Marsh, while the contestants are represented by W. R. Codington and Judge DeMeza, of this city, and Meehan & Steele, of Somerville. James B. Spicer and Joseph A. Hubbard were the witnesses to the original will and J. Oakley Sodyne and William A. Coddington to the codicil which was added in 1890, and they testified to the fact this morning. William A. Pangborn also gave testimony as to the date of Mr. Wooden's death. The case was then adjourned to next Monday.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier and building up medicine leads everything ever produced. It is positively the best. Others may make the same claim. But there's this difference: We prove it. Not by words, but by Merit. Not by what they say, but by Hood's Sarsaparilla. It has what Sarsaparilla does. Cures unequalled in medical history. It positively, perfectly and permanently cures when all other medicines fail. That the keen discrimination of the people recognizes its merit and the cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla, is shown by the fact that they Sarsaparilla and Hood's Sarsaparilla are the acknowledged standard blood purifiers. It wins confidence everywhere because the statements in its advertising and testimonials are verified by all who take it. No other medicine has ever received such praise, or so many voluntary testimonials of wonderful cure. No other medicine possesses the peculiar combination, proportion and process used in preparing Hood's Sarsaparilla, and which give it merit peculiar to itself. This is the secret of its wonderful cures. It has a record and a reputation, derived hold upon the confidence of the people. This is why it cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Catarrh, Rheumatism, all Humors, Kidney and Liver troubles, Dyspepsia, That Tired Feeling, builds up the nerves, creates an appetite and strengthens the whole system. VOLUNTEER STAFF OFFICER.

Major Patty Watkins Will Oversee the Post in This City.

General orders No. 1 were issued from the headquarters of the American Volunteers Saturday. The most important section to Plainfield was as follows:

"Major Patty Watkins will assume command of the New York city and New Jersey battalion, comprising eleven posts or companies. Major Watkins will visit the respective posts and will at once arrange for the presentation of the colors of the Volunteers and the National colors."

Within a week most of the officers will appear in their new uniforms. A corset, which will appear upon the outside of officers and the lower portions on the new uniforms and will also be worn as a badge, has been chosen.

It is a shield surmounted by a spread eagle and surrounded with a ribbon. On the shield is a five-pointed star and the inscription "For God and Country." On the ribbon beneath the shield is "The Volunteers."

Commander Ballington Booth, through Lieutenant-Colonel Glen, declared positively that he will never accede to any proposition which may be made him by Gen. William Booth or any representative of the Salvation Army. All negotiations with London are forever closed. The troops who were mobilized two weeks ago are now formally organized and tonight will be in the thick of battle. Eleven companies, commanded by competent officers, have already secured armories in as many towns, and thirteen more posts will be formed as soon as suitable headquarters can be secured.

The executive committee of the Interscholastic Athletic Association met at the home of George P. Smith, of the High School, Saturday. The following baseball schedule was adopted:

April 18—Montclair High School against Plainfield, at Plainfield.
April 19—Pingry against Newark Academy, at Elizabeth.
April 22—Montclair High School against Stevens Institute, at Montclair.
April 25—Plainfield High School against Pingry, at Plainfield.
April 26—Stevens Institute against Newark Academy, at Newark.
April 27—Stevens Institute against Plainfield High School, at Hoboken.
May 16—Montclair High School against Pingry, at Elizabeth.
May 23—Plainfield High School against Newark Academy, at Newark.
May 25—Pingry against Stevens Institute, at Hoboken.
May 27—Montclair High School against Newark Academy, at Montclair.

The next meet of the State Meet to be held on the grounds of the New Jersey Athletic Club, Bergen Point, Saturday, June 6th, were adopted as follows:

100-yards dash; 100-yards dash, for boys under 15 years; 220-yards dash; 440-yards dash; 1-mile run; 220-yards hurdle, 12 hurdles, 2 feet 6 inches; 1-mile walk; high jump; running broad jump; putting 16-pound shot, 12 pounds; throwing hammer, 12 pounds; 1-mile bicycle race.

Officials and Badges—George P. Smith, Plainfield.

Medals—W. Cornwell, Plainfield; C. T. Myers, Pingry.

Printing—C. T. Myers, Pingry.

Programmes—G. G. Standford, Stevens Institute; H. Schultz, Newark Academy.

The committee on medals was given power to expend $195 for medals, making an average of about $15 for each event. It is expected that there will be eighty entries.

LAST DAYS AT TRENTON.

THE LEGISLATURE WILL PROBABLY ADJOURN SOME TIME THIS WEEK.

The Judiciary Amendment May Cause a Hitch, Though, if a Long Discussion Ensues—A Presidential Canvas.

The legislative session will end on Wednesday afternoon, says the Sun, unless the Senate becomes involved in a long discussion over the constitutional amendments. The one reorganizing the higher court will cause the differences, if any. The Hon. Cortlandt Parker, one of the oldest and foremost lawyers in the State, is opposed to any change in the construction of the courts, which, he argues, have been satisfactory for half a century; but if a change must be made, he favors the amendment suggested by the commission of 1895, making the Court of Errors and Appeals to consist of the Chief Justice and two oldest associate Justices, the Chancellor and two oldest Vice-Chancellors. Senator Voorhees, chairman of the judiciary committee, and Frank Bergen, one of the committee of lawyers, want the Collins and Corbin amendment, providing for one court of fifteen Judges in three divisions with appellate, law, and equity jurisdiction. Senator Johnson, another member of the judiciary committee, and eight members of the lawyers' committee, favor the amendment suggested by the Constitutional Commission of 1894, providing for a separate Court of Errors and Appeals, to consist of the Chief Justice and four associate Justices.

All of the lawyers agree that the lay Judges should be abolished, and that the Vice-Chancellors should be made constitutional officers, so that they may have enlarged powers. For nearly a quarter of a century there has been a demand for changes in the composition of these courts, but all efforts at agreement have been unavailing. For months it has been known that the amendment adopted last winter was satisfactory, and yet only within the past week or two has an effort been made to draft one that will be satisfactory. None of the amendments has been considered yet in either House. This condition has led to charges being made that the Republicans do not want to agree, but are seeking to prolong the controversy in order to avoid putting into effect the anti-race track amendment. According to the authors of these charges the Republicans want to wait until the clamor against the race tracks has been allayed, when they will pass laws that will permit racing, but with restrictions against the practices such as at Guttenburg, Clifton and Gloucester.

To the Assembly districting, the biennial sessions and the anti-race track amendments, and to the one prohibiting the appointment to office during recess of persons whom the Senate has refused to confirm, there is little, if any, opposition, and there is among the laymen in the Legislature a disposition to adopt them, and give the lawyers another five years in which to agree on the judiciary amendments. The joint committee appointed to revise the borough laws has been unable to complete its work, and the Legislature will pass a law legalizing the organization of those boroughs whose governments have been declared unconstitutional by the courts. During the summer the committee will meet and perfect a general law for the government of boroughs.

The sentiment among the Republican Senators and Assemblymen appears to be that New Jersey's vote in the national Convention may go to McKinley, as his recent successes in the Western States have given his candidacy a decided boom in the manufacturing districts. Gen. Sewell's advice that an unpledged delegation be sent to St. Louis will be followed, and the politicians believe that this means that Senator Sewell will endeavor to have Garret A. Hobart made the nominee for Vice-President, with either McKinley or Allison for first place. It was said in Trenton last week that Elias S. Ward, of Newark, had decided not to contest for one of the places as delegate at large, but would be chosen as one of the delegates from the Sixth District, whose Convention will be held on April 17th, the day following the State Convention.

DARE NOT TACKLE THEM.

POWER OF THE LIQUOR FORCES OVER THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

Rev. W. F. Cooley Says That People Who Want to See Reform Should Have the Spirit of the Puritans of Early Days.

A very interesting and stirring good government address was delivered Thursday before the Young Ladies' Society of Christian Endeavor, of the Congregational church, by Rev. William Forbes Cooley of Chatam, Secretary of the New Jersey Congregational Association.

Mr. Cooley read as his text Matthew 6:10; "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in heaven;" and said, in part:

"What do we pray for in these words? God may show himself as king of the earth? Yes. That men may become his subjects? Yes. But especially that his law may prevail in the world. This puts a double duty upon us: to do God's will ourselves, and to have it done in the world. As Christians we pray, and therefore strive, to have God's will done by men, as individuals, in business, in society, in the state. My theme comes under the last head. This is not something outside of the province of religion; whether God or Beelzebub rules in the states affects Christian vitally.

"To put a corrupt man in office is to undo the work we are trying to do in Sunday Schools and Christian Endeavor societies. The dram-shop is something that hinders the church in its work of saving souls. So it is a religious question we take up to-night and one in which we ought to be deeply interested.

"The Northern New Jersey Conference appointed a committee to see what could be done to mitigate the dram-shop evil. A county option bill was presented to the Legislature, but it was reported to be impossible to pass it. Ten years ago a bill had been passed, and the following year the liquor forces rallied, and wiped the Republican party out of existence, and they staid out for several years. I cannot altogether blame them for being afraid to try it again. The situation, then, is that the liquor power has such a hold in New Jersey that the Legislature does not dare to beard it.

"Why have the liquor forces such power? Through the division of the righteous forces, entirely. The task which is before us is to arouse the people, and unify public sentiment, until each county, etc., has the choice to keep or to abolish this open sewer and cesspit of moral disease. Most of the politicians, I think, would be glad to turn the whole matter over to the people. Righteousness will prevail when the people ask for it.

"What can you do about it? The men can vote, of course. Watch your representatives, and sustain them when they do well. Write to them in behalf of the bills you want passed. Agitate for moral advance; talk and distribute reform literature. In this work the ladies can help. They can also join the W. C. T. U., to help in the good it is doing, and to keep it out of ruts.

"I have spoken tonight to the children of the Puritans, on a Puritan topic. We need that the spirit of the Puritans should prevail more in our State. The old Puritans made mistakes, to be sure, but let us try to catch their earnest and devoted spirit, and do our duty as well as they did theirs."

JOLLY TIME HAD THEY.

A CHRISTENING PARTY GETS TOO GAY AND TWO OF THEM ARRESTED.

Warned Twice by Roundsman Frederickson to be Quiet, but They Took No Heed of It, and Were Finally Raided.

Paradise Alley, as the police rather unappropriately term Cottage place, was the scene of a christening Thursday and the gay time finally ended in an encounter with the police and a scene in the city court.

The house where this joyful event took place was occupied by Joseph Damuski and family. All yesterday afternoon the guests gathered from far and near. Beer flowed while one of the company furnished music on an accordion and everybody took their hand at dancing. The foreigners forgot for the time that the American continent was the scene of their actions, but had a good "old country" time.

Boundsman Frederickson heard the noise down on Washington street and went up to discover the cause. He dispersed a crowd of curious onlookers who had been attracted by the racket, and then cautioned the host and his guests to make less noise.

Boundsman Mattox also visited the scene and found that it more than equalled the famous christening of "McSorley's most beautiful twins," handed down to fame in that well-known ballad.

At about 7 o'clock Mattox heard the disturbance from afar and gave the disturbers another warning. It did not do any good, however, and the roundsman reported to Sergeant Kiely at headquarters. The sergeant, accompanied by Boundsman Mattox and Special Officer Carney, visited Paradise Alley at about 8 o'clock.

The feasters evidently expected an official visit for they locked all the doors and barricaded the windows. Sergeant Kiely demanded an entrance and was finally admitted. When inside the house, he ordered the disturbers to cease their noise. He was informed, however, that they would do as they pleased inside the house and "it was suggested that the officer might be assisted in leaving the house. The beer was just enough to excite everybody and the owner of the house, Michael Ettinger, was particularly worried. The inmates tried to shut the door on the officers, but without success. Sergeant Kiely then ordered Ettinger to leave the house and that man did not think the occasion merited such a remark. At last, after considerable forcible expostulation, Kiely and Mattox removed him and also arrested the excited host. They were locked up over night.

This morning Ettinger and Damuski were arraigned before City Judge De Mun on the charge of being drunk and disorderly and resisting an officer. Ettinger was the first to be tried. He has the appearance of a typical German Socialist, with his long beard and shrewd face. When asked what he had been doing, he exclaimed: "I don't know what I be doing! I was not drunk. I am not guilty, but I will plead guilty so that I can go back to my work."

He then told his story in a dramatic manner.

"He pulled me along like a horse," he said excitedly, as he told of how Kiely arrested him. According to his story he had been very quiet and had tried to go after his wife and children to take them home. The policemen gave their testimony as did several of the neighbors and the case appeared a very strange one against Ettenger.

"Ten dollars or thirty days" said the Judge.

Ettenger stood still for a short time and then jumped forward and began pecking under the desk of the judge and of the Chief of Police.

"What's the matter, "asked Sergeant Kiely, "do you see a mouse?"

"No," exclaimed the prisoner striking a dramatic attitude, "I am looking for justice."

The Judge called him to order with a warning to behave himself in court.

Then Damuski was brought to the bar but he looked blankly at both the Judge and Sergeant Kiely when they tried to question him.

He was a Slav and a Mrs. Williamson, who was in the audience, agreed to act as interpreter. Damuski laid all the blame on Ettenger and declared he had done nothing. The evidence was too strong and he was given his choice between a fine of $10 and thirty days in jail.

Ettenger paid his fine while Mrs. Damuski hurried out of court to see if she could raise the money in any way for her husband.

A PASTORAL SURPRISE.

Queen Esther Band Make Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Randolph a Present.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Randolph, of Grace M. E. church, were tendered a dinner by Mrs John H. Carney, of Craig place, Saturday evening, after which a most complete surprise was tendered them by the members of the Queen Esther Band, who had gathered at the residence of Mrs. Jacob Voehl, of Somerset street, and in a body marched to 40 Craig place, and were silently admitted by one of their members. They were escorted upstairs unbeknown to Mr. and Mrs. Randolph who were being entertained in the parlor below. The young ladies each grasping the efforts of their labors for many days, headed by their president, cautiously marched down the stairs and into the parlor, when Carrie Pangborn most gracefully presented the following well chosen remarks:

"Mrs. Randolph, before you stands the members of the Queen Esther Band, and as you are about to leave us will you accept the efforts of our little Band as a fond remembrance of the high esteem in which you are held by our members."

She presented to her a handsome patched quilt, beautifully arranged by their little hands. In the centre could be seen many little hearts, around them entwined the names of the following members worked in the centre patch:

Carrie Pangborn, Nellie Vermeule, Jennie DeCamp, Nellie Valiant, Tina Voehl, Winifred Carroll, Sadie Winckler, Ada VanHorn, Edith Conover, Anna Kirch, Mabel Wright, Addie Carney, Agnes Morse, Mabel Stevens, Mary Hoagland.

To Mr. Randolph they presented an elegant autograph album with each of their autographs therein. To say that they were surprised would but faintly express it. The balance of the evening was delightfully spent in playing games, after which light refreshments were served, and all returned to their various homes with well wishes for Rev. and Mrs. Randolph.

CONSOLIDATIONS MUST COME.

Ex-Mayor Saunders Says the City and Borough Will be One.

Ex-Mayor W. L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, speaking of the new movement on foot to consolidate Plainfield and North Plainfield on Saturday had words of encouragement for the consummation of this important movement. That it has not "bobbed" up in the legislature during this session is not strange, but entirely natural.

Before a bill is presented to the legislature the subject of consolidation must have thorough advertising and public opinion must be expressed, so that the people are fully informed of the true state of affairs. Whether the city is taken into Somerset county or the borough into Union county is a matter not yet decided, but one thing is certain, however, and that is that the two places should be together under one government.

Maps have been made by Engineer Dunham showing the city, borough and county line. When the time comes for action a very strong effort will be made to get the two places under one head.

Married a Somerville Girl.

Henry Gross, coachman for A. W. Haviland, of Rockview avenue, was married last Sunday to Miss Minnie Kukla, of Somerville. The ceremony took place at the bride's home and Rev. Mr. Koechli, formerly of this city, tied the bridal knot. A reception followed. The newly-married couple will take up their home at Mr. Gross' former quarters.

YOUNG CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

Executive Committee of Baptist Christian Endeavorers Meet.

The Executive Committee of the Christian Endeavor society of the First Baptist church, met Saturday evening at the home of Dr. D. J. Yerkes, West Seventh street, with President Henry Crane in the chair. With one or two exceptions, every member was present. The matter of selecting committees was taken up. The list was not entirely completed, and as soon as it is, they will be announced. A resolution was adopted that the treasurer pay the secretary of the Convention Committee $5, which amount is to be devoted to preliminary expenses. Another resolution was adopted that the society purchase a box and place it in the vestibule of the church, for the purpose of receiving contributions, which will go toward the expenses of the coming State Convention. Great stress was placed on the fact that there is a great deal of work to be done before the convention meets, and everyone was urged to do as much as possible. The members discussed plans for the work this coming year and each one agreed to do all in their power to make the society all that it should be. Another meeting will be held at an early date to transact further business.

AFTER THE POULTRY SHOW.

Plainfielders Want to Bring a Big Exhibit to This City in December.

An effort is being made by a number of Plainfielders to influence the officials of the Garden State Poultry and Pigeon Society to hold their annual show in this city next December. The event continues for six days, at which time the best bred fowls of the State are entered for exhibition and prizes, and also brings to the show a large number of enthusiasts from all over the country. The show was held at Hackensack last December, but the facilities were so poor for holding it there that the officials were dissatisfied with the town. It is calculated to hold the event in the Columbia Cycling Academy, where there is ample space for the exhibition and the crowds that attend. In order to bring the show here it will be necessary for citizens to subscribe $200, which should be easily secured. Orange is also after the show for this year, but the Plainfielders who are interested in the affair will make an earnest effort to bring it here. The officials of the society are said to be in favor of Plainfield if they will offer reasonable inducements.

SHOULD THEY FIGHT?

Not England and the United States.

But Children of All Ages and Conditions, Timely Reinforcements in the Battle for Existence.

Perhaps you have an answer for us to this question all ready. And perhaps we may disagree with you. Listen to our side of the story. Is it not a terrible warfare which sweeps from the face of the earth one-third of all children under five years of age? Yet this is the history of the great struggle in which we are all engaged—the battle of life. Some children yield at the first approach of disease, while others make a grand struggle for existence. In this sense, then, we are all agreed that children should be good fighters. They can best fight disease when they are hearty and strong. We do not mean simply when they are fat. Fat is not muscle. They need strong bones, sound nerves and firm muscles. The natural food for all infants is milk. The fat of this food, the cream, exists in the milk as minute globules, resembling in this respect the minute globules of fat found in Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites. There is also mineral matter in milk, and it is in Scott's Emulsion as well. This preparation looks like milk, and children soon become fond of it. So many infants and young children do not appear to derive much benefit from their food. They remain extremely thin, weak, do not increase in weight or height. They seem to have some disease which is actually wasting the body away. Their system calls for food, and yet the food does not nourish them. But food they must have. They also need some remedy which will alter or change the action of the organs of the body to healthy activity. There are remedies which naturally exist in cod-liver oil that are capable of making this change. For this reason they are called "alteratives." The hypophosphites are also of service, as they strengthen the nervous system, which is the great seat of power. The poorly nourished body calls for a fatty food, such as the fat of cod-liver oil. These are the reasons why Scott's Emulsion has proved so valuable to children. It restores healthy action. It feeds. It nourishes. It supplies needed material to the growing body. We can not state too strongly the importance of these few early years to future health and happiness. Children do not seem to bear raw cod-liver oil well. It is so difficult to digest. But the oil in Scott's Emulsion has already been digested, and is, therefore, in a condition to render prompt aid.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor.

OF UNKNOWN DEPTh.

A Pond in New York State That Has No Bottom.

Many Efforts to Fathom the Pool Have Been Fruitless—It is Thought to Have an Underground Outlet.

In the northern part of the town of Napoli, Cattaraugus county, there is what is known in that vicinity as a "bottomless pond." It is situated in a tamarack swamp in that part of the town called Owlenburg, and for many years it has created great local interest on account of its unknown depth, the peculiarity of its location and the character of the land surrounding it.

About midway between the villages of Little Valley and Napoli on the Pigeon Valley road, high up on a ridge several hundred feet above either village, the pond is to be found. On this eminence a natural basin has been formed which comprises many hundred acres of swamp and which is grown up with spruce and tamarack trees, huckleberry bushes and like vegetation; on the east, north and west hills surround the swamp and but for a road that to the south the swamp slopes gradually down to a lower level it would seem that this swamp was at one time entirely covered by a large pond or lake.

About the center of this swamp is the "bottomless pond." It is circular in shape and about 500 feet across. It is probably fed by springs from below and its outlet breaks forth from the earth some distance away and flows south, finally finding its way to the Allegheny river. The water which flows from the pond is black in appearance from its contact with the roots of the swamp.

In approaching the pond one feels the ground trembling beneath the feet even at a considerable distance away, and when standing on its bank the ground feels so unstable that a person's inclination is to quickly turn back and seek more solid ground. It is apparent that the pond was at one time much larger than at present and that it has been slowly growing over, in fact a perceptible change can be seen in its size from year to year. It is certain that the water extends a considerable distance under the banks, but how far is uncertain. Several rods back from the pond a pole can be easily run down through the thin crust of earth into the water beneath. Numerous efforts have been made to ascertain the depth of the pond, but without success. Long lines with weights have been lowered, but the bottom has never been found, and its depth remains unfathomed. And numerous efforts have been made to find the bottom it has received the name of the "bottomless pond." Beautiful pond lilies grow near its banks, but efforts to secure them are attended with great difficulty and danger.

In the tamarack swamp about a half mile away is another pond, round like the first, but smaller, being about 350 acres across. The formation of the ground around this pond is similar to that around the larger one. Between the two there is a high ridge of solid ground which forms a divide so that the water from the smaller pond flows east, while that from the large one flows south. Whether they are two parts of what was once a large pond, or whether there is now any subterranean connection between them can only be conjectured.

The small pond is only 40 or 50 feet deep; in the middle of it, submerged, there stands a tall pine tree, the top reaching to the surface of the pond. This would indicate that the land at the bottom of the pond had from some cause sunk from the level of the surrounding land some time during the lifetime of the tree and that this pond was thus formed. The tree being under water has been preserved, perhaps, for ages to tell the story of the earth's changes.—Rochester Democrat.

The Orator's Inspiration.

Our orator gazes with far-searching eye. He is the poet in prose, the musician who plays on men, the painter, in words, of thoughts, sentiments, passions, like to life and burning, for they are drawn from men's hearts. To him the glory that beckons on from height to height and then again on and on till the eye wearies, is the ideal—that which we pray for, struggle for, travail for, yet never grasp; but are the nobler for having aspired to. As the eye follows hill after hill that the falling sun gilds, and then rests unrested because the gold has turned to black, so the orator must follow hard after the ideal even till the night cometh. For him the breath of the pine is wine, and the strength of the forest makes strong his heart. The broad, clear expanse of space widen his mind, the pure azure clarifies his vision, and the distant rim of earth and sky makes far-sighted and keen the eyes of his soul.—William F. Seward, in New Bohemian.

Good Enough for Her, Too.

The resources of a properly trained Biddy are practically inexhaustible. A short time ago I bought some very expensive hothouse grapes for a member of the family who had been sick, but they were not fancied at the time, and I asked the maid to take them away. The next morning I went to her and told her to take the fruit to the sick room.

"Sure, ma'am, Oi can't. Tis meself thought ye wanted them throw'd away!" with the peculiarly stupid look on Irish girl puts on and takes off with ease.

"Thrown away, Bridget!" I exclaimed angrily. "How could you be so stupid? Don't you know that kind of grapes is awfully expensive?"

"Don't be put out, ma'am," Bridget said, soothingly. "Sure, not one was wasted. Oi ate ivery good grape meself!"—N. Y. Herald.

THE PETERSON CASE.

Organized Aid Association Say That the Husband is a Worthless Fellow

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—The facts in the Peterson case, cited in your columns Thursday, are these: During the past eighteen months Mrs. Peterson has been on several occasions to the Organized Aid Association for help in supporting her family of four little children. Peterson is intemperate and often unfit for work; further, when he has had money he has many times used it in gambling, leaving his family destitute. This has compelled Mrs. Peterson to apply for assistance. She was, at such times, placed under the care of the Relief Association, they providing food and fuel, for which she always willingly paid in sewing for the association. The employment committee of the Organized Aid Association had added her by placing her in homes where extra help was needed, and this has enabled her to provide for her family. Having been their sole dependence, her health has failed, and physicians have urged her to go to the hospital. The Relief Association has offered to pay board for the children while the mother was under treatment, but she cannot be induced to leave them. On the occasion of her last visit to the Organized Aid Association the same sad story of desertion and want had to be repeated, made even more sad by the fact of her husband leaving the home at a time when her children were recovering from an illness, making it impossible for her to leave them to work for their support.

Disheartened at the helplessness of the situation she appealed for aid, as she could not work. Recognizing the fact that steps towards making the husband responsible for their maintenance must be taken, she was directed to confer with G. E. Marx, overseer of the poor, who, after hearing her story, caused his arrest. Work has been offered him in the past, which he has refused. Efforts will be again made to insure him employment which will enable him to support those dependent on him.

A MODEL STORE.

G. Q. Packer's and J. W. Gavett's Store Loses Metropolitan Like.

A store has just been opened in this city that offers all the advantages of the metropolitan stores of a similar character. It is the large store in the Jackson building, at the corner of West Front street and Madison avenue, now occupied by Garret Q. Packer, the furniture dealer, and Joseph W. Gavett, dealer in china, glassware and lamps.

The first floor and the basement of this recently completed building are each divided into six sections, all of which will be occupied by the two firms.

On the right of the first section Gavett will display his beautiful specimens of china and glassware. An art display of Packer's stock will be on the left. The second section will be divided similarly, while sections three, four, five and six will be devoted to Packer's display of furniture.

In the basement five sections will be occupied by Packer and one by Gavett. There will be a ladies parlor, suitably furnished and with writing materials handy, under the charge of a competent woman, similar to those in large metropolitan stores. One of the largest steam heating plants will be found in the basement, which will heat the flats above as well as the stores. The goods will be received at the rear door and a freight elevator will carry them to the basement.

CHEAPER TRANSPORTATION.

A Proposition That Would, it is Said, Reduce Local Freight Bills.

Many of the merchants about the city who receive large shipments of goods have been approached by parties who are desirous of establishing a transportation express line between Plainfield and South Plainfield, to connect with the Lehigh Valley Railroad, and to haul freight from that station to this city, the goods being shipped by the Lehigh road. The freight rate over the Lehigh road to South Plainfield is nine cents on a hundred, while the rate between New York and this city on the Jersey Central is seventeen cents.

It is proposed by the promoters of the transportation company to haul the goods from South Plainfield at a price that would be a saving to the local merchant between the difference in rates of the two roads.

What Organized Aid Does.

The Organized Aid Association reports a case of a mother who represented herself, and who has been believed by many, to be unfit for work, until by a physician's testimony this belief had been exploded, and she is now at work earning the aid she receives from the association.

Both Will Qualify.

Justice of the Peace-elect H. S. Thomas, of the borough, will qualify for the above office at the proper time. D. D. Smalley, the Democrat elected to the same position, will do the same.

WOMEN OF THE TIME.

STATE FEDERATION OF CLUBS MET AT TRENTON YESTERDAY.

Addresses Were Made by Two Plainfield Club Women on Topics of Great Interest—Principal Incidents of the Meeting.

The Assembly room of the State House in Trenton was invaded Thursday by a band of women who felt themselves as competent to make all the good and repeal all the bad laws as the men; a band of women who took possession of the legislators' chairs with signs of satisfaction, determined that for one day, at least, they would do their best to pretend themselves Assemblymen says the Herald.

Club women from all over the State and from sister States flocked to the State House to attend the literary meeting of the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs. All the clubs of the State Federation were represented, and a large delegation from Sorosis, the mother club, was present.

Mrs. Roebling, who represented the Trenton Club element, escorted Mrs. Margaret Yardley, the president of the State Federation to the Speaker's chair.

Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, first vice-president of the State Federation, opened the convention by prayer. Mrs. Yardley then announced that Governor Griggs had sent her a mild warning that he would be unable to be present, and his fears had evidently overcome him, for at present he was not to deliver his address of welcome. She then presented Mrs. Roebling, who, she said, was the nearest approach to a club woman Trenton boasted.

In response to the address of welcome Mrs. Yardley, after thanking Mrs. Roebling, extended hearty greeting to the members of the Federation and said:

"There are many privileges, as well as much responsibility, connected with the work of the State Federation Seven clubs have joined the Federation since October, making fifty eight clubs in all, representing about twenty-five hundred women."

In opening the discussion of "The Scope of the State Federation," Mrs. Llewellyn H. Johnson, of East Orange, said the Federation should interest the women of New Jersey in traveling libraries, in Evelyn College, the school question, economics, household science, town improvements, the Forestry Association, public parks and social science. She continued:

"The greatest work our Federation will accomplish in New Jersey is forming women's clubs in every nook and corner of the State. Just as soon as the woman's club movement is started will home, town, State and National improvements follow."

The paper was discussed by Mrs. Isaac Miller, of Plainfield, who said that it seemed to her that women's clubs were likely to have too much machinery. In regard to the State Federation, she thought that organization rather prone to interfere too much with the individual rights of the various clubs which composed it.

Mrs. Edith W. McCarthy, of Plainfield, began the afternoon session with a paper on "Forestry Interests of New Jersey." She told of the destruction of forests in Europe and America and the consequent loss, and referred to the forming of reservations in the west. She said:

We of the East hope soon to hear of a Palisades Reservation of long acres on the Hudson (a modest petition, it would seem.) These bluffs and slopes contain some of the finest scenery of the Eastern coast, which, meantime, as you know, is being ruthlessly and rapidly dismembered by this quarrymen's attacks.

In forest parties everywhere the most urgent need is for strong public laws, and particularly where is this need more urgent than in New Jersey? Geologically speaking, the lower region, which shows in shaded green on the map that has been spread out before us, is, nevertheless most misleading, for the area is flat and worthless for any but farm crops. The forest has largely either degenerated into worthless scrub growth or it has been converted into farms and villages, and these upon the first sign of slackening energy, for agriculture. If until for agriculture, then they are, at first adventurers, for trees as a crop.

We have three aspects of forestry confronting us in New Jersey. First, we have in the northern hilly section a country of lakes and sparkling brooks and wooded slopes, the region of the Palisades, which still retains these precious reservoirs of moisture which are absolutely essential to the life of the forests. These water sources and watersheds should first claim our attention. Here the axe of the lumberman should be laid at once, and by the hand and forever preserve and protect from greed and waste.

In the second place, we have the great southern body of our State, the coastal plain, the region of the pine barrens, of which the devastation amounting to fully one-half in a few years, is unparalleled in the history of trade and of millions of seedlings, but of the very best timber, the wonderful growth of which is the hope of forests, and creating regions accursed where man does not dwell. Recurring storms and floods have caused disastrous effects, which are a menace to the former, so that even now the Legislature has been forced to appropriation to fight the insects. Why not fight the fire? Why not prevent instead of cure? For as well as crime can be reduced to a minimum. I will only add here that in the second or third decade of these fires, South Jersey should be open to settlement for thousands of families. The pine barrens are the natural home of cranberry bogs and many by-products of the forest would thrive and develop. Immediate fire is the resource, and bids fair to create for us a very great asset of our State.

In the third place, we have our sea coast region, and here another sort of forestry must be applied. The principle is the same, but the principle applies. There is a wood crop to be raised in these regions, but it is a different crop, but similar to those on Cape Cod, where recent plantings of pine are standing where the sands travelled in shifting dunes, to resist the sandstorms and thus finally reclaim the whole worthless barrens. A system of nurseries is established in connection with the planting, where the young seedlings are started close to their final home and set out when able to hold their own against the elements.

We may look forward to adopting these interesting measures in New Jersey, but we may safely wait until the great fire question has been disposed of.

I should have said that there was a fourth aspect of forestry for us to consider, I mean the educational aspect of the subject, and upon this I say the greatest stress. I have said that the propaganda was in the air, but it has not taken root. It needs a nursery in every town, in every village. We can start a cult and reinforce the propaganda with all the ingenuity of woman. We can work through the schools and libraries by keeping the subject under discussion by lectures before school children, and by having exhibits of maps and photographs, figures, accessible to all. We can, as Dulce commands, take up the systematic study of our forest and economic conditions, and we would surely find a most fruitful and engrossing topic.

It is not too much to hope that ere another Legislature adjourns we may have a Forestry Commission appointed and a rational, practical fire policy enforced, which shall save for us the remnants of our forests, and courses of instruction founded which shall teach us to value them and use them aright.

Mrs. E. B. Horton, of Cranford, was the next speaker. Her subject was "Travelling Libraries."

Mrs. Marguerite Lindley, of New York, spoke of "Health Culture in the Home." She said:—"In no other country is woman's mental power felt as in America. They have but one lack, and that is a grave one—health. Women's clubs are destined to liberate not only women from narrowness of ideas and mistaken comprehension of duty, but the race from the curse of invalidism. We need, of course, to restore the diseased forms of the present generation. . . . So long as we women countenance and encourage a lack of physical education, have we any right to censure the moral wrongs that degrade society? Immorality is the outgrowth of curiosity, ignorance and disease; let the mother remember this when sighing over her fallen boy."

Several other papers were also read on topics interesting to women.

The clubs of this city were represented as follows: Monday Afternoon Club, Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, Mrs. E. D. McCarthy, Mrs. R. W. Pond and Mrs. Arthur Ryker; Parliamentary Club, Mrs. S. R. Kroun, Dr. Mary D. Hussey and Miss Ruth Dalziel; Current Events Club, Miss Day.

AN ENORMOUS OFFENSE.

A Fifty-Nine-Year-Old Man Charged With Attempted Rape on Young Girls.

Nathan V. Culver, a man fifty-nine years of age, was arrested on the farm of his nephew near Flemington, Hunterdon County, Thursday afternoon by Police Sergeant Kiely, on the charge of attempting to outrage two twelve year old girls of this city near Campbell's club house on Park avenue, a short time ago. The prisoner was arranged before Justice Storms at New Market, who after hearing of the enormity of the offense, committed the man to the county jail in New Brunswick, the crime having been commited in Middlesex county, to await further action of the court.

Culler claims to own a farm in Oklohoma, where his wife is, but has been residing with relatives in this city for the past year. It is alleged that the attempted to commit an assault on several young girls in this city, but has never accomplished his purpose. The young girls whom he attempted to overcome a few days ago were out bicycle riding with him.

Culler had already left town when the warrant for his arrest was put in Sergeant Kiely's hands, and it was only by clever detective work that the Sergeant was able to locate his man. When Bound Brook was reached and the time came for the officer and his prisoner to change cars from the Central to the Lehigh Valley, Culler grew nervous with fear, and asked the Sergeant if there was any possibility of his being mobbed by indignant citizens who had heard of his conduct. Of course no one in Bound Brook knew of the case and but very in this city, and his fears were without grounds.

A FREEHOLDER WITH A GRIEVANCE.

He Has Attended Only One Meeting Since the Board Organized.

Next month Elizabeth will elect four chosen Freeholders for a term of two years. One of the Republican Freeholders, who was chosen two years ago, George M. Morrell, has never attended a meeting of the Board since the first one. So far as is concerned, Elizabeth was practically without any representative on the Board, Mr. Morrel's singular and unprecedented action was due to the fact that he became disgruntled with his colleagues because three candidates whom he favored for county offices were defeated in the first meeting after the board had organized for business. Freeholder Morrell then made up his mind that he wanted nothing more to do with the Board of Freeholders. What annoyed him most, was the fact that one of the men he championed was beaten by a Democrat.

Frank A. Magowan Arrested.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have, repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
Da. G. C. Osgood,

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrups and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

ON TRACK OF THE THIEF.

Man Held at White Plains Who is Thought to Have Taken Roberts' Rig.

Some few days ago a man was arrested at White Plains, N. Y., on the charge of horse stealing. He confessed to the charges, and told of nine different horses that he had stolen and where he had disposed of them. The facts of his arrest and confession was printed in the newspapers and read by Uncle Dan Roberts. Uncle Dan had a horse and buggy stolen last summer and he immediately concluded to find out if this man was the one who took his rig. He wrote to the authorities at White Plains, and the description they send of the man's features tallies with those of the individual who rented the rig last summer and never returned it. Harry Roberts will probably go to White Plains the first of next week to see if he can identify the thief in custody.

TO BUILD A NEW TOWN.

One to Be Established Just Outside of Elizabeth, It is Said.

The Board of Trade, of Elizabeth, held its first meeting in its new rooms in the Opera House Thursday night. Twenty-two new members were reported. There was also a report made of a new town soon to be established within two miles of Elizabeth, where fifty manufactories will, will it is said, be located. The town will be known as New Orange, and trolley lines will be built from it to Cranford and Newark.

Good, Even If It Isn't True.

Apropos of the "new woman," some body resurrected an old story the other day about Mrs. Julia Ward Howe that may or may not be true. At all events, it was worth resurrecting. The story goes that Mrs. Howe was one fine morning walking down Beacon street, Boston, when she met a friend who asked her how Dr. Howe was. "Dr. Howe?" repeated Mrs. Howe, vaguely, then, as if suddenly recollecting herself, "Oh, he's quiet well, I'm sure. I remember seeing in the morning paper that he presided at some meeting or other last evening.—Evening Sun.

A WELL KNOWN HOST.

George Moulton to Take Charge of Mountain Park Inn.

The people of Plainfield and vicinity scarcely realize that one of the best summer resorts in this section of the country is located on Johnstone's drive, easy of access to this city. Mountain Park Inn is rapidly assuming completion under the direction of its owners, French, Vail & French. Thursday this firm engaged for 1896, the services of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Moulton, who have had charge of "The Laurel in the Pines," at Lakewood, for a long time, and they will act in a similar capacity at Mountain Park Inn. They come with the highest recommendations and are accustomed to catering to the wants and needs of a first class hotel, having had nine years experience. They will bring their own retinue of servants from Lakewood, who are American women. Mrs. Moulton will be housekeeper and Mr. Moulton will look after the other parts of the business. They will take charge June 1st. To facilitate matters, an additional story has been placed over the kitchen.

Taken From the Street.

The Organized Aid Association has recently had in hand an interesting case in which two young girls between twelve and fifteen have been taken from a life on the street. One of them has been placed in the Trenton Industrial Home. The other is receiving treatment at our own hospital where she is given light employment. The Relief Association has provided her with clothing and the hospital authorities promise to keep her as long as she makes herself useful. Both are very happy in their new homes.

Mayor of Mountainside Interested.

Mayor Cory, of Mountainside, is making strenuous efforts to have the proposed trolley road from Elizabeth to Plainfield pass through the borough. James T. Pierson is making overtures to have the road come across country past the cemetery, entering the village at Picton street. Of the $300,000 necessary to build the road, $275,000 is said to be assured.

Baron Roetgen.

Prince Luitpold, of Bavaria, has made Professor Roetgen Baron of Waerzburg, for his discovery of the X rays. In striking contrast to this, if your rays of vision become ex-rays, you will become barren of sight. A realization of this contrast ought to warn you to go at once to Collier's, and avert all danger of such a climax by learning what treatment, if any, your eyes require.

A Letter From Mrs. Mair.

A very interesting letter from Miss Rachael Mair, written in Africa, was read by Rev. Dr. Wm. R. Richards to the congregation of the Crescent Avenue church at the prayer meeting last evening. The letter contained a pleasing account of her first experiences in Africa, en route to Cape Palmas, her new field of work, which place Miss Mair has now reached. Miss Mair was formerly a resident of this city.

A DAY FIGHT AT NIGHT.

HUSBAND AND WIFE QUARREL, FIGHT AND ARE ARRESTED.

The Wife Tells One Story and the Husband Another, so Judge DeMeza Reserved Until Saturday.

A quarrel between a husband and wife, that finally resulted in blows, was aired in the court Friday morning. Last Tuesday night when Sergeant Kiely visited the lockup at about 11 o'clock he found a woman with her fifteen-months-old baby confined there. He released her on her own recognizance. It was Mrs. James Day, and she had been arrested by Patrolman Hartpence, at the complaint of her husband for being disorderly and fighting. Day, who keeps a saloon on West Third street, near Plainfield avenue, was also arrested at his wife's complaint on the same charge.

They appeared before City Judge DeMeza Thursday and Mrs. Day pleaded guilty. Sentence was suspended. Mr. Day pleaded not guilty and his trial was set down for this morning.

The stories of the two interested parties were rather contradictory. Mrs. Day told of her return from the ball on St. Patrick's night and how her husband abused her by calling her vile names and striking her, and showed the black-and blue marks on her arms made by a cane in her husband's hands.

Day owned up that he had struck her, but claimed that he did it in self-defence. He showed a cut on his neck where a glass lamp, thrown by his wife, had struck him. Mr. Day, better known as "Buck" Day, has just recovered from the rheumatism and did not appear in the best fighting condition. His wife is rather stout.

Patrolman Hartpence was called in by Mrs. Day and testified that Mrs. Day struck her husband and appeared very much excited, while Day was apparently trying to prevent a scene.

The trouble occurred in the barroom and in the living apartments in the rear of the saloon.

Judge DeMeza reserved his decision until Saturday morning at ten o'clock.

HE REELED AND ROLLED.

An Inebriated Individual Falls Into a North Avenue Store Window.

According to the best of William King's calculations, there was a continual earthquake in this section of the country Thursday, but the police thought that a too ample supply of liquor was the reason that King could not stand up straight. After indulging rather freely he wandered about until he reached North avenue, and then started to walk down that thoroughfare, when the sidewalk appeared to rock in a most surprising manner, while the telegraph poles and hitchieg posts made lunges at his head. Just as he passed Lusardi's fruit store, the window became very angry and rushed at King, breaking itself. Some of the witnesses of the accident thought that King fell into the window.

He was arrested and Judge DeMeza ordered him to pay $1.50 for the damage done to the glass, besides either paying a fine of $2 or going to jail for ten days.

OVER 120 YEARS OLD.

The Oldest Woman in the State of New Jersey Is Dead.

Aunt Judy Cummings, the oldest woman in New Jersey, died at her home in Red Bank Monday. She was born on October 12th, 1775, at Griggstown, and has lived in the State all her life. Her parents were slaves, owned by William Vector, and for many years Aunt Judy was also a chattel of her master. She had retained her health to a remarkable degree, and until within a short time of her death smoked her pipe and moved about with wonderful activity for one so old.

A Worthy Case.

The Organized Aid Association reports a case of a wife who had made appeals to different individuals for aid to provide shelter for herself and children, and who was referred to the Association for investigation. Now she is taking advantage of their offer for work and is anxious to do anything to provide clothing for her children, while her husband asks work to provide rent and fuel. It is hoped that Plainfield citizens may aid the Association in this case.

West End Improvements.

E. C. Mulford has purchased the house owned by W. L. Perrin, of Monroe avenue, for the Jersey Central Railroad, who will erect a new passenger station on the plot. With the other land which the company now owns it is intended to lay out a pretty park extending towards Front street. The purchase price for the new land was $6,000.

State Officers Coming.

Department Commander White, of Red Bank, and staff, of the G. A. R., will visit Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., Saturday evening in this city, at which time a campfire will be held. A number of visitors have been invited to attend.

THE BIBLE THEIR GUN.

Enthusiastic Meeting of American Volunteers Addressed by Ballington Booth—What the Great Sin-Slayer Said.

The Battle of Plainfield was begun Thursday at Music Hall under the most auspicious circumstances. Despite the rain that poured down steadily just before the hour of assembling, the lower floor of the hall was completely filled while the gallery had its quota of visitors. The audience was a truly representative one, for all classes were there. It was an enthusiastic one, also, for at every good opportunity, hearty applause burst forth while the speaker of the evening, Commander Booth, of the American Volunteers, as the movement was rechristened yesterday, was received with long and loud clapping that showed what a favorite the tall commander of the new army is with Plainfield people.

At about 8:15 the members of the Plainfield seceding post marched on the stage and took their seats, after which Commander Booth, Lieutenant Laing, of Orange, Adjutant Hartwright, of Orange, and several others of the auxiliary board seated themselves in front. Captain Mimms, of the local post, acted as leader of the meeting. The uniform of the regular Salvation Army was not to be seen; instead the male members were dressed in ordinary citizens clothes, while the female members were simply gowned in black and wore no particular style of hat. All the members of the band wore a red, white and blue ribbon, with a picture of the new commander and his wife on a celluloid heart, fastened to the ribbon.

The head of this new movement is a very tall man, rather slim and with a distinguished looking face. He had a moustache and his black hair was brushed back from off his broad forehead. He wore a long, black Prince Albert coat and the only color to his uniform was a pair of General's shoulder straps on his shoulders.

The battle opened with a musical bombardment from all the audience, led by Captain Mimms. The well-known hymn "At the Cross" was sung, after which Fred H. Andrews led in an earnest prayer. While the heads of the audience were still bowed "The Love of Jesus" was softly sung. Adjutant Blackhurst, private secretary to Commander Booth, who presided at the piano, next made a prayer in devout and heartfelt language. After another hymn, "We Fight in the Strength of our King," Captain Mimms opened the action by introducing Commander Booth in a few well chosen words. That officer then stepped to the desk and in clear, strong tones spoke to his audience. For three quarters of an hour he held their attention with hardly a break. His language was of the best and the vein of humor that appeared at intervals through his talk was enough to keep his audience in good humor.

"I am very much pleased to be in your midst," he said in starting, and followed with a witty excuse for not appearing in Plainfield before. "I am expected to say something," he said, "of the the new movement which my darling little devoted wife and myself are inaugurating. In all my twenty-two years of service, this recent period has been the darkest. When we were forced from the Salvation Army we expected to retire to private life, but we received a great number of letters asking and begging us to continue in the good work at which we had been so long."

At this point in his address he was put in a very trying position. The fire alarm sounded, and as there were a number of firemen in his audience there was a sudden break for the door. A word from Captain Mimms explained the situation, and the Commander then started up one of those rousing marching songs, and those who desired to go then left, and then the Commander continued his address by saying: "The letters assured us that we would have the practical support and aid of the American people, and I then said to my wife that we might not have very much money at the start, but that we would have what is infinitely greater, the support of the American people, which will be more to us than $100,000,000.

"We will call this new organization of ours, 'God's American Volunteers.' Many think that Volunteers is not the right word in this place. The heroes that left home, factory and workshop at the call of their President to defend their nation's honor and rescue her from peril were the volunteers, not the regulars. In our work, we call for those who will freely volunteer to follow in the footsteps of Jesus of Nazerath and rescue their brothers and sisters from lives of shame and degredation.

"The word 'American' has also caused some questions. There is one thing that this audience may be assured of namely, is that our organization, though a spiritual one, will be distinctively 'American.'

"There are three classes that we will reach, the denzens of slumdom, among whom the Salvation Army has been so signally successful, the lower classes of society, and the great army of wage earners and artisans.

a blue star, typical of hope, while imbedded in it is a white cross, typical of sacrifice. The banner will be carried in all our parades, never before, but always side by side with the American flag. Our buildings will be called armories instead of barracks, and our local organizations posts instead of corps. Our ranks will be arranged similar to those of the United States army, and our ensignias will be much the same.

"We are resolved that we will stand together. We will not be at war with the Salvation Army, for there is room for fifty Salvation Armies in this country. We are like the Democratic brother that prayed that the Democrats might hang together. The Republican brother replied 'ameh.' 'I do not mean it in the sense that our Republican brother takes it, but pray that they may hang together with one accord.' 'I say amen to that also,' cried the Republican. 'I don't care whether they hang by one cord or not so long as they hang together.'

"We are going to stand by each other to the end. If we are going to sink we are going to sink together, and if we float—"

The loud applause that followed drowned the rest of his sentence.

"We are not going to see the fortresses of Satan stand without attacking them. The same hand, that shall be clenched against vice, shall be lowered to help up the weak and suffering."

Commander Booth next told some of his personal experiences, especially among the prisoners in the jails. He also told the circumstances under which his wife gave up her high position in society and devoted her life to the Lord. He spoke of testimony for the Lord as an easy way to work for Him and said it did not make any difference how one was dressed—a good deed was always the same.

"There is a great diversity of opinion in regard to the methods that we should use. We are asked if we will have the drum, the cornet, the street parade and striking uniforms. Let us have the loudest drum we can, the silliest cornet we can and the most striking uniform we can, if it will bring into the church those that have not been there. We will have sweet music and singing, and our soldiers will wear becoming uniforms. There will be new bonnets for the women that will make every one of them look five years younger. We want everything to be becoming, decorus and befitting. We shall also introduce the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, but we will not have anything that will be a stumbling block.

"We are going forward with a straight doctrine and a sincere faith and with what we believe is necessary for all workers, the love of Christ."

He then closed with a few words of farewell and a wish that the city might help and be helped by the new movement.

The soldiers of the local post then passed among the audience with tambourines and hats and received the contributions. Commander Booth asked all those who wished the new work success to raise their right hand. There was a unanimous response. He then asked all of those to contribute $5 and become members of the Defender's League, the auxiliary body of the Volunteers. He then announced the following appointments for the Plainfield Defender's League: Edwin H. Frost as secretary, and Col. John Hull as traveling or field secretary.

A good start was made in the formation of the Plainfield auxiliary and the following subscribed and became members at once: Dr. Carmen, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Stewart, Dr. B. Van D. Hedges, Edwin H. Frost, Mrs. Charles Beebe, Edward Carter, Fred H. Andrews, Rev. Hobart Clark and James McGee.

D. C. Allen then spoke in behalf of a number of workman at Scott's Press works and presented the local post with a bass drum. Captain Mimms replied with a few words of thanks and Commander Booth remarked that it was a good drum and when it breaks they would come to them to have it repaired. Captain Mimms invited all to attend the meetings at Reform Hall and the meeting closed with the doxology and the benediction by Commander Booth. The collection amounted to about $35.

Mrs. Ballington Booth has yielded to the popular cry against the use of brown cloth for uniforms for the American Volunteers, and returned to the cadet blue which is worn by the Salvation Army lassies. Fred Lindsay, manager of the trade department, has returned the bolts of brown cloth which he had in stock to the wholesalers, and spent a portion of yesterday in examining samples in blues. The uniform of the men is still undecided upon. Commander Booth will endeavor to have it as nearly like that of the regular army as possible, but is experiencing great difficulty in finding a light cloth for summer wear of the proper color.

The total cost of running the State government for the ensuing year will be $2,237,284.

NOT TO BE MENDED AGAIN.

You can take a piece of china that's been broken by the mill,
And can put the thing together if you know the mender's trade.
You can mend the thing so neatly that no one will ever know
That it has e'er been shattered by an unconsidered blow.

You can take a heart that's broken by some small flirtatious girl,
And can mend the fractured pieces till they're As any that heart's possessor feels as sturdy as an oak.
And forgets that e'er it happened that his heart was ever "broke."

You can fall from a bicycle and make pieces of your nose;
You can break your collar-bone, or you can fracture all your toes;
You can reduce your arm to splinters: you can smash your either leg,
And a doctor he will fix it till it's whole as any egg.

You can smash an ocean record, but that record still is there.
You may break a trotting record with a rapid little mare.
And leave the old one standing just as whole, quite as complete,
As when it was the jockeys a-buzzing through the street.

But, alas! if you are angry, and have angry words to say,
Beware a broken silence, or you'll surely rue the day.
For a silence that is broken, by the women or the men,
Is a thing that can't be mended, can't be rendered whole again.

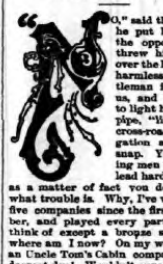
PLAYED A NEW HAMLET.

BY L. FRANK BAUM.



"O," said the actor, as he put his feet on the opposite seat. "threw his wife over the head of the harmless old gentleman in front of us, and proceeded to light his corncob pipe, "life with a cross-roads aggregation ain't no snap. You travelling men think you lead hard lives, but as a matter of fact you don't know what trouble is. Why, I've worked for five companies since the first of October, and played every part you can think of except a brogue statue, and where am I now? On my way to join an Uncle Tom's Cabin company of the deepest dye! Wouldn't expect it in an artist and gentleman, I know; but three meals a day are indispensable to my health and happiness, and I must do what I can till Henderson offers me the comedy part in his new extravaganza.

"Comedian? Not on your birthday; I'm a tragedian by instinct and education; but it so happened that I always have to play the comedy role wherever I go—fate, I suppose, or what those theosophist Indiamaniacs call Karma. I never remember playing a part to my liking but once, and that was under adverse circumstances. I did the ghost in 'Hamlet,' and it was this way: I'd joined a party of barnstormers who were playing week stands through the mining towns in Pennsylvania. We sported a bass band at one time, but they had skipped out and left us with nothing but a bass drum, that was of little use as an attraction; still we lugged it around with us. Well, one week we struck a little town way up on the hills above the Two Lick, where the natives were as green as grass. The first night's performance was a great success, but at its close a committee of miners waited on us with a request that we play 'Hamlet' the next night. Our manager replied that 'Hamlet' was not a part of our repertory, but that we'd give 'em a much better show. The miners were evidently disappointed, and the leader said:

"'See here, boss, we're got to have this Hamlet show or the folks'll git mad. None of us ever seen it, but there was a digger here last year as could talk of nothin' else but Hamlet, as was the greatest show ever played an' had a ghost to it. Now, you say as you're actors, but can't play Hamlet; we've talked with the boys, an' that's the play they all want. You give us that an' we'll pack the house for you.'

"The manager looked puzzled and undecided, and another miner noticed it and exclaimed:

"'See here, cap'n, if you can't give us Hamlet why leave that out, but give us the ghost anyway.'

"The manager put on his sweetest smile.

"'My friends,' he said, 'you shall have the ghost, and Hamlet, too.'

"'To-morrow night?'

"'To-morrow night.'

"The delegates thanked us earnestly and withdrew, while the members of the company turned upon their betrayer in anger and amazement.

"'Say, who knows anything about Hamlet?' I asked.

"'Who's got a copy of the play?' inquired the heavy man.

"'Where's the costumes coming from?' screamed the leading lady.

"'But the manager silenced us all.

"'Look here,' he said; 'if they are bound to have Hamlet they shall have him. It'll fill the house. I never saw Hamlet myself, but I know a few quotations from it, and the most they want is the ghost, anyhow. We'll go on and do anything we like—fake the thing through—and when it gets dull we'll ring in the ghost for excitement.'

"That settled it, but I own I had misgivings when I looked at the stage. We were playing in a schoolhouse, and, as there was no stage, we had been obliged to build one, from some lumber a miner had bought to add a wing to his house. He wouldn't let us cut the boards or nail them, so we laid them across some trusses, meeting beneath the middle, and during the performance we had to exercise great care where we stepped or the end of a plank would fly up and give us an exit not down in the play.

"When the evening came there was a very nervous lot of actors behind the improvised curtain, and even the manager lost a part of his assurance and would have backed out had he dared. By the time we were packed in the house like sardines in a box, and there wasn't standing room for a fly, so we knew it would not be safe to change the bill on them.

"That performance of 'Hamlet' was the rankest parody on a play ever presented to a suffering public. The miners looked on critically and tried to make out what it was all about. The manager, who was chief actor as well, stayed on the stage most of the time himself, getting off time-honored gags and trying to put a little go into his embarrassed and indignant company. I was to play the ghost, but not having seen 'Hamlet' at that time and having no idea how to dress the part I had covered myself with a sheet and swung the bass drum in front of me. As I'm rather short, my eyes just ranged across the top of the instrument. My cue was to be 'Who art thou?' but I was busily engaged in watching the antics of the company.

"They had been a little reckless in their movements and some of the boards near the center of the stage had slipped back, leaving a hole about two feet across. Owing to the drum I never saw this hole. I stood waiting for my cue in the wings, but I was thinking intently of something else when I became conscious that the manager was standing at the other side of the stage glaring angrily at me and shouting: 'Who art thou?' at the top of his voice.

"Instantly I stepped out, gave the drum a solemn beat at each stride and exclaimed: 'I am thy father's ghost!' At the same time I unconsciously walked into the gaping hole in the stage and disappeared like a shot; but the drum remained on top while I was struggling in the darkness to gain a footing and the crowd was shouting in intense delight at this magnificent denouement. The manager rang down the curtain and act first was concluded. They drew me out all covered with bumps and bruises, and while the company roared with laughter and the manager thanked me with tears in his eyes for saving the piece, I tried to collect my wits and discover what had happened.

"But this wasn't the worst of it. Those cussed miners thought the accident was part of the piece, and during the next act shouted so energetically for the ghost that I was forced to go on and repeat the whole business. The third act was the same way, and when it was over my legs and arms were skinned, one eye was swelled shut, two of my fingers were missing and every inch of my anatomy was sore. The crowd waited outside to escort me to the boarding house, where they gave me three rousing cheers. 'Tell you what,' said one of them to me the next day, as I sat propped up in bed, 'that air Hamlet is a great show. We sorter wondered why you didn't want to play it for us, but we understand now, and are grateful to you for givin' in. If ever your troupe comes here again, an' you give us Hamlet an' the ghost, you can have every dollar the town holds!'

"And that," concluded the actor, with a sigh, as he picked his grip out of the rack and put on his ulster, "is the only time I remember playing a tragic part, and yet I was no tragedy. Good-by, old man, I get out here. To-night, if you'll stop off, you'll see me once more in the grasp of relentless fate, and playing the fascinating part of Marks, the lawyer—for which sin may Heaven forgive me!"—Chicago Times-Herald.

Mr. and Mrs. Grote.

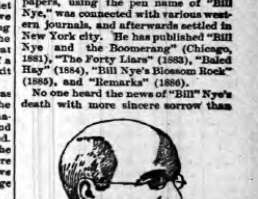
In Mrs. Grote nature had combined a very kind heart with the most masculine vigor of mind and body—and, I might add, of body also—of expression. After Mr. Grote's death she came to see my father, and said: "It is, perhaps, just as well that he is gone first, as I shall be able to write his life." The translation of Lewes' "History of Greece" was brought out at a time when the early strikes had somewhat disturbed the printing trade in England, and this work was printed, as an experiment, in Germany. Its appearance was not all that could be desired, and it has now for some time been superseded. This edition was always called by Mrs. Grote "my Horrible Edition."—John Murray, in Good Words.

RILEY'S POETIC TRIBUTE.

The Hoosier Poet Deplores the Death of Edgar Wilson Nye.

Edgar Wilson ("Bill") Nye, who died February 23, near Asheville, N. C., was born in Shirley, Piscataqua country, Me., the 25th of August, 1850. He was educated at an academy at River Falls, Wis., removed to Wyoming territory, studied law, and was admitted to the bar in 1876. He began early to contribute humorous sketches to the newspapers, using the pen name of "Bill Nye," was connected with various western journals, and afterwards settled in New York city. He has published "Bill Nye and the Boomerang" (Chicago, 1881), "The Forty Liars" (1883), "Baled Hay" (1884), "Bill Nye's Blossom Rock" (1886), and "Remarks" (1886).

No one heard the news of "Bill" Nye's death with more sincere sorrow than



EDGAR WILSON ("BILL") NYE.

James Whitcomb Riley, who was Mr. Nye's close friend and business partner on the lecture platform for a number of years.

"We two have shared confidential sorrows and joys," said Mr. Riley when he received word of the death of his old friend. "My grief is that of a brother, so companionable had we become. I always found Mr. Nye wholly unselfish. He was most gentle at heart, with unfailing hope and cheer. His was a noble, heroic life, full of devotion to his home, his mother, brothers, wife, children, and friends. I cannot doubt that somehow, somewhere he continues cheerily on in the unbroken exercise of his spiritual capacity."

The following is his further tribute to the memory of his friend:

EDGAR WILSON NYE.

The saddest silence falls when laughter lays
Finger on life, and fatiringly breaks;
The glad heart-throbbing shakes
And quavers, lorn as airs the wind-harp plays
At wane of dreariest winter's bleakest days—
A troubled hush, in which all hope forsakes
Us, and the yearning, upstrained vision aches.
With tears to drown e'en heaven from our gaze.

Such silence, after such glad merriment—
O, prince of the halest humor, wit, and cheer,
Could you speak yet again I doubt not we Should catch your voice, still blithely eloquent
Above all murmurings of sorrow here,
Calling your love back to us laughingly
—James Whitcomb Riley.

DILLON MADE LEADER.

The New Chairman of the Irish Parliamentary Party a Famous Man.

John Dillon, who has just been elected chairman of the Irish parliamentary party, is not only an able parliamentarian and politician, but a qualified physician and surgeon. His father was John Blake Dillon, of Dublin, a famous barrister. Mr. Dillon inherited his rare power of oratory from his father, who was likewise a patriotic M. P., sitting for Tipperary in 1865-66. Mr. Dillon's mother was Adelaide Haire. He was born in 1851, and was graduated from the Catholic university of Dublin. He is also a licentiate of the Royal College of Surgeons, of Ireland. He was first sent to parliament in 1880, when he sat for Tipperary. In 1885 he was elected from East Mayo. He was reelected in 1892. He has a good face. An excellent relief and a noted artist painted that face in a West End London church panel as the countenance of St. John, where it is admired to-day for its serene beauty. Mr. Dillon is a great lover of books. His home in Great Great George's street, Dublin, has a library rich in rare Hibernians and, indeed, in many valuable and interesting old volumes picked up by their owner through many years of patient search. The neighborhood in which he lives was a favorite one with the members of the Irish parliament. It would be hard to imagine a man of Mr. Dillon's imaginative nature living in any but an ancient house with historical associations. At his best Mr. Dillon is as fine a speaker as any man in his party. But he lacks constancy. He has neither the steadiness of Healy nor the readiness of Sexton. His sentences are sometimes broken and disjointed. But if his feelings are strongly moved there is a simple strength about what he says that, taken with his manner, makes him second to none in impressiveness. He has long been affectionately known as Honest John Dillon.

CAUSES OF THE FLOOD.

A DAILY PRESS REPORTER INVESTIGATES BOUND BROOK'S POSITION.

Many People Think That the Railroad Embankments at That Point Are the Real Cause of Several Overflows.

The two recent floods at Bound Brook have caused much speculation regarding their general cause and why it is that two should come the same year, when hitherto they have been about fourteen years apart. Of course they were primarily brought on by the severe storms, but every year has its heavy rains. The two floods in the same year, however, would seem to prove that the physical conditions have been recently changed so as to increase the liability of floods. Plainfield is interested in the troubles of her near neighbor and a few days ago a Daily Press reporter went over the ground and interviewed a number of Bound Brook residents regarding the causes and possible remedies, if any, for those frequent inundations of the borough.

"Everybody in town," said one, "has his own theory regarding the causes, and so many different ones have been suggested that we don't know which to believe."

The situation was then explained. Bound Brook is located on the banks of the Raritan river. Below the town the river makes a turn to the east while the flat lands extend to the east of the town. Above Bound Brook, the valley broadens although the river channel itself is not very wide. The narrowest part of the Raritan in the vicinity, is opposite the centre of the town where the Delaware and Raritan canal on one side and the Port Reading railroad embankment on the other form high banks for the river. When the Millstone river and the North and South Branches send an unusually large quantity of water into the Raritan, the low lands above the town are flooded. When the narrow place in the river is reached there is not sufficient outlet for this large body of water and it is thrown back west of the town. The numerous bridges and culverts in the embankments of the Port Reading, Lehigh Valley, and Central New Jersey railroads furnish openings which allows the water to flow northward into the western part of the borough. About one-half of a mile west of the town proper, Middle brook empties into the Raritan river, bringing with it the torrents that flow through the notch near Chimney Rock.

The bridge on the Jersey Central Railroad embankment is quite low and the opening beneath it is not large enough to allow a free passage for the flood. The water in the brook meets another obstacle in the back water from the Raritan, which has forced its way under the bridges in the different embankments. These two forces unite and throw the north side of the railroad embankments until they reach the town. The tracks of the Bound Brook division of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad leave the main line of the Jersey Central Railroad about a mile west of Bound Brook and cross the Raritan. This bridge and the bridges of the Lehigh Valley and Port Reading railroads adjoining, also tend to throw the high water in the Raritan river along the northern side of the railroad embankments, into the town.

East of the town the situation is somewhat similar. The high water in the Raritan comes back under the bridges in the railroad embankments and meets the high water in Green or Bound Brook, and the water is forced into the eastern end of the town.

The dam on the Raritan river, about a mile below Bound Brook, is said to assist in forcing the water back under the embankments. Of course, when the water is sufficiently high, the two floods meet in the centre of the town, and Bound Brook is again flooded.

An additional source of discomfort is a sewer built to drain the lower part of the town on the northern side of the three embankments and connecting with the river. In time of flood the sewer works backward and a stream of water is poured into the town.

The remedies suggested have been many and one is already under way. The Philadelphia and Reading railroad has increased the length of its span over the Raritan river. One prominent Bound Brook citizen proposes that Main street, the scene of most of the damage of last month's flood, be raised several feet at the cost of the borough and that the buildings be raised by their owners. The entire cost, he says, will not be over $150,000. Another plan is that embankments or dykes be erected at both ends of the town to keep the water back. Some think that should the Central Jersey railroad increase the height of its embankment, it would keep the Raritan, which floods the tracks at very high water, in the vicinity of the Middle Brook bridge, out of the town.

The Bound Brook Board of Trade has discussed the matter and a full report of the subject will be made at the next meeting.

FORTY WOMEN REVOLTED.

Perth Amboy Daughters of Liberty Objected to Gray.

Perth Amboy is excited over the split in Liberty Council, No. 10, Daughters of Liberty. William Gray organized and tried to run the lodge. The women objected, and when Gray had himself elected Councillor more than forty of the women promptly left the society and joined the Daughters of America. The dissenters are led by Mrs. Mary Larkin, who is Gray's foremost opponent.

Dunellen.

G. Homan, of Brooklyn, is a visitor in town for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Naller are entertaining their daughter from Brooklyn.

Miss S. Gray, of Washington avenue, has been entertaining friends from Irvington.

At the meeting of the I. O. F. Monday evening three applications for membership were received.

Mrs. Orr, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. J. Milligan, of Prospect avenue, has returned home.

Mrs. E. Apgar, of High street, has been entertaining her son, Charles Apgar and wife, from Westfield.

Miss Lulu Lewis, of Elizabeth, is spending a few days with her sister, Miss Regina Lewis, of Front street.

Eugene Leach, who has been working at Bound Brook, has accepted a position in Pond's shop at Plainfield.

Miss Millie Vail, of East High street, who has been visiting her aunt at Hasbrouck Heights, has returned home.

Mrs. Tettener, who has been visiting her brother, John Moynihan, of North avenue, has returned home to St. Louis.

Walter Smith and William Larkin, of New Market, are going to start a bicycle store in the rooms now occupied by Undertaker Runyon on North avenue.

Scotch Plains Man Dead.

One of the principal men of Scotch Plains, Thomas C. Cleaver, the veteran grocer, died at his home yesterday morning at 9:30 o'clock from a complication of diseases brought on by the grip. He was taken ill two weeks ago with the grip. Within the last two or three days he sank rapidly and his death was a great surprise to the community.

He was 73 years old. He was born and brought up in Scotch Plains, emigrated west, and then returned to Newark and became a dealer in dairy products. Twelve years ago he bought out W. H. Dean in Scotch Plains and established himself there.

He was a member of the Baptist church and a firm supporter of it. He was well known as an honest Christian. He has two brothers, Rev. J. B. Cleaver, of Bound Brook, and ex-Judge Cleaver, of Newark.

New Market.

The Holy Innocents church is undergoing repairs.

C. Ward has purchased the Williams property.

B. Marsh, of Springdale, spent Tuesday with friends in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Adair, of Philadelphia, are spending a few days with friends in town.

Mrs. L. Pierson has returned home from her visit with relatives at Binghamton, N. Y.

Miss May Brown, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. Brown, has gone to Brooklyn to visit among relatives.

In Charge of the Women.

The young women of Monroe Avenue chapel have in preparation a very unique affair which will be held on Friday evening, April 17th, in the chapel. Among those who will entertain are Miss Addie Parker Jackson and the ladies' orchestra from Dunellen. The women will have full charge of everything and they expect their gentlemen friends to patronize them liberally. The admission will be 20 cents and supper will be served for a small additional fee.

Had to Saw Off the Ring.

While dressing a chicken, Saturday night, Mrs. Howell, of Grandview avenue, seriously cut the the third finger on her left hand. The finger swelled before she was able to remove the ring from the injured member. She went to several jewelers but they refused to take it off. At Collier's, however, the ring was sawed in two and thus taken off.

Tramps Journeying Northward.

The tramps are beginning to journey northward, and this vicinity is overrun with them, says an Elizabeth dispatch. Chickens are stolen every night and the belated pedestrian has to yield tribute to the "growler" or suffer harsh treatment. Women are afraid to venture out in the suburbs and the usual reign of King Tramp is commencing, a sure harbinger of spring.

Seeking a Democratic Candidate.

The Elizabeth Democratic Executive Committee will meet tonight and wrestle with the problem of finding a candidate who will run for Mayor against John C. Rankin, the Republican executive.

IN WASHINGTON'S HONOR.

Monument to Commemorate the Birthplace of Our First President.

The movement to erect a monument in honor of George Washington at the place of his birth has recently taken definite shape and may be regarded as among the accomplishments of the near future. Last year congress appropriated $11,000 in furtherance of the project. The design submitted by John Crawford & Son, of Buffalo, has been accepted. The site of the house in which Washington was born, which is determined now only by a scattering pile of broken bricks and mortar from the chimney, is about 1½ miles from the Potomac, at a point where that river is about seven miles wide, and about 500 or 700 feet from Pope's creek, formerly Bridge's creek. This "creek" at this point is about three-quarters of a mile wide and very shallow, not more than four feet wide at high tide, and separated from the Potomac by a sandbar across the mouth of it.

The monument will stand 51 feet above the cement foundation, the monolith shaft rising 40 feet 8 inches above the base. The shaft will spring from a foundation 14 feet square and 8 feet high. Dressed down the shaft will weigh about 36 tons. Above this will rise the stone of the first base, 12 feet square and one foot eight inches high. On this will rest the second base, nine feet three inches square and three feet high. Above this will be the die upon which the inscription will be cut, and it will be six feet five inches square and four feet ten inches high. The plinth just above it will be four feet five inches square and one foot two inches high. The shaft that will spring from this will be three feet eight inches square and will rise 40 feet 4 inches above the plinth. On the die of the monument is cut the inscription:

BIRTHPLACE
GEORGE WASHINGTON.

On the lowest foundation will be the following:

"Erected by the United States, A. D. 1895."

The shaft will be visible from passing steamers and will divide with Mount Vernon the interest of the Potomac tourist.

fairs, breadth of statesmanship, and conscientiousness of purpose, Mr. Frye has no superior in the republican ranks. In point of cleanliness of record he measures up to the highest ideas. As an orator he has few superiors, and there is no senator who brings to the discussion of economic questions larger information or more convincing logic than he habitually does. He has probably no aspirations to the presidency, but if the republicans of Maine were to agree upon him as a candidate he would prove a formidable competitor to the candidates now in the field.

Four Duchesses in the Family.

There are four duchesses of Marlborough now living. These are Consuelo, reigning duchess; Lillian, wife of Sir William Beresford; Fanny, the grandmother of the present duke and mother of the late Randolph Churchill, and Jane, widow of the late sixth duke. These do not include Lady Blandford, who was divorced before the late duke reached his title.

When a girl tries to catch a ball she throws her arms wide apart, waits until the ball hits her on the nose, turns her hands with a windmill motion, runs after the ball, picks it up, brushes her hair out of her eyes and smiles, as though her way of doing it cannot be improved upon.

No Danger of Losing His Job.

Street Commissioner Meeker, of Plainfield, has incurred the ill-will of a number of prominent citizens and is threatened with all sorts of reprisals, because he enforced an ordinance requiring the cleaning of snow off of sidewalks. If his courage in this matter should cost him his official head he might come to Newark. Lots of people here would feel like rising up to put in public office a man who had the pluck to enforce that kind of an ordinance.—Newark News.

OPPOSE SUNDAY CYCLING

SUNDAY NEWSPAPERS ALSO CONDEMNED AT THE CONFERENCE.

Appointments Made for the Year—Rev. H. J. Johnston Will Come From Cranford to the Grace M. E. Church.

Bicycle riding for pleasure on Sunday and Sunday newspapers were deprecated by the M. E. Conference at its seventh day's session in Newark. The matter was brought up on the report of the Committee on Sabbath Observance, and, as it was promptly adopted, the Conference went squarely on record Wine on the tables of church members was also deprecated.

"The demand for rest on the Sabbath is unquestionable," said the committee in its report, and it is destined to survive whatever opposes it."

Touching the Sunday bicycle and Sunday newspaper the committee used these words:

Of all the forces entered in arraignment against the institution none of the number is more deplored than the Sunday secular newspaper, and if is, therefore, the conviction of this Conference that the Sunday newspaper should under no circumstances be patronized by Christian people or introduced into our homes.

Traveling and visiting should be confined to works of mercy and necessity, and conducive as the bicycle is to health, we believe it to be the imperative duty of pastors and church members to condemn it in the use as a pleasure seeking instrument on the Lord's Day.

The committee further declared that whereas there was a "peculiar temptation" to break the Sabaath during the summer months, pastors of the Conference be requested to preach on that subject some time during May, and the signing of a petition to Congress for a law securing the observance of Sunday in the District of Columbia was recommended.

Rev. Dr. L. R. Dunn, of Orange, created a stir by saying: "It is not an uncommon thing for members of the church to have whiskey or wine on their tables. There are some that glory in the fact that they use liquors and don't care who knows it, and there are those of this class among the wealthy classes in the church. Yes, and there are ministers who are gagged and are impelled to bow to those who have wine on their tables."

There were loud cries of "Yes!" "Yes!" and "That's so!" and counter-cries of "No!" "No!"

Rev. Dr. Baker took exception to the statement and said that this was his first appearance on the Conference floor in twenty-eight years, and for the first time he would speak and ask Dr. Dunn what he meant by the statement that ministers were gagged, and, as he looked at Dr. Dunn, he exclaimed, "I would like to know who they are?"

Bishop Foss rapped his gavel sharply and said, "Dr. Dunn, I wish you would carefully weigh your words."

Dr. Dunn replied that he "did not mean that the tendency was universal," and then Drs. Bryan, Parsons, Mayhem and Halleron spoke briefly on the temperance question. The latter said the Republican party gave them the only temperance legislation the Church ever had, and Rev. J. L. Hayes interrupted to say politics did not figure in the resolution. The Bishop sustained him, and Dr. Halleron sat down.

The long expected time limit question was brought up next in a resolution presented by Rev. D. D. Jones, of Hackensack. It was as follows:

Whereas, The great success of the Methodist Episcopal church is due in a large measure, we believe, to our pastoral itinerant system; and in the present agitation of the subject will probably reach the next General Conference in some form what is known as the "time limit," therefore be it

Resolved, That we regard such a change as an experiment fraught with peril, radical in its nature, and in contravention to results that we respectfully petition the ensuing General Conference not to make any change in the rule.

Rev. Salmon D. Jones backed his resolution by saying that if the Salvation Army had such a system there would not be the trouble that there is there today. "The Lord God above is the author of the time limit system," the Rev. Mr. Jones added. "Let's keep the old machine going as it is."

Rev. Edward C. Dutcher, of Jersey City, favored the system, and then P. C. Bascom, of Newark, offered a substitute, which was signed by several pastors. It asked that the system be modified so as to allow a pastor "to remain in charge for a longer period than five years in clearly exceptional cases, while the plan of yearly appointments be retained."

Rev. Dr. Halleron, of Jersey City, stoutly asserted that the time limit should be retained. "The success of the Methodist church is an indication of Providence, and the substitute would interfere with the progress of the church."

The appointments were made by Bishop Foss at the close of the Conference. It will be noted that Rev. H. J. Johnston was transferred from Cranford to North Plainfield. They are as follows:

Elizabeth District, Presiding Elder, G. W. Smith; Asbury and Bethlehem, A. C. Cowgill; Bloomsbury, L. F. Jones; Round Brook, J. W. Daily; Carlton and Fairmount, C. E. Walton; Centreville, W. A. IN THEIR NEW ROOMS.

Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, Open Their New Home.

A rousing time celebrated the opening of the new hall of Howell Division, No. 97, Sons of Temperance, Tuesday in the Elkwood building. The division was largely represented while members of the Patriotic Sons of America, the Masons, the Amalgamated Society of Engineers, the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the Sons of Veterans and the Grand Army of the Republic, were present and enjoyed the entertainment and the pleasant time that followed.

The evening's programme began with the singing of the opening ode. Then came a prayer by the Chaplain, an organ solo by Miss Emma Angleman, remarks by S. B. Scribner, recitation by Miss Richards, remarks by S. S. Swackhamer, song by Prof. Stevens, recitation by Robert Mattox, remarks by Grand Worthy Patriarch Mansfield, recitation by the Misses Nettie and Sadie Lysendripp, patriotic song by Prof. Stevens, reading by Miss Alice Scribner, recitation by Miss Tey Mattox, remarks by John H. Sayers and recitation by H. S. Thatcher. The programme closed with the presentation by W. R. Mattox of a fancy plate to Grand Worthy Patriarch Mansfield. Refreshments brought the evening's pleasure to a close.

The entertainment committee who arranged the affair consisted of W. B. Ayers, S. B. Scribner, W. R. Mattox, Alice Scribner, Mrs. S. Koyer and Mrs. R. Mattox.

The decorations by S. S. Swackhamer was particularly enjoyable.

EFFICIENT OFFICERS RECOGNIZED.

The Prosperous Loan Association Re-Elect Their Old Officers.

The new Board of Directors of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association met Tuesday for organization, at which time Hon. W. R. Codington was made temporary chairman. The following officers were unanimously re-elected for the ensuing year: President, L. E. Barkalew; vice-president, Henry Liebler; treasurer, W. R. Codington; secretary, B. F. Coriell; solicitor, W. R. Codington; financial committee, William A. Woodruff, Jacob Voehl and James R. Homan. An application was made for a loan in the fifth series and referred to the finance committee. A loan of $1,800 was made in the fourth series. The bonds of the treasurer was fixed at $10,000 and the solicitor at $1,000. The fact that all the officers were re-elected speaks well for their efficiency.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Beach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

—Ninety per cent of all the people need to take a course of Hood's Sarsaparilla at this season to prevent that run-down condition of the system which invites disease.

—Hood's Pills are purely vegetable and do not purge, pain or gripe. All druggists, 25c.

We might tell you more about One Minute Cough Cure, but you probably know that it cures coughs. Every one does who has used it. It is a perfect remedy for coughs, colds, hoarseness. It is an especial favorite for children, being pleasant to take and quick in curing. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

YOUNG MISSION WORKERS.

First Baptist Church Society Hear Reports and Elect Officers.

The Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held their annual meeting Tuesday afternoon. The attendance of members was very encouraging to the officers. The report of Mrs. W. O. Chapman, treasurer, showed that $434.87 had been received in all, and that $120.45 had been expended for home missions. The sum of $168 had been expended for foreign missions, and the balance was spent for incidental expenses. There is now $15.15 in the treasury.

The report of the secretary was encouraging, and showed that the society had performed excellent work during the year. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President, Mrs. DeWitt C. Brokaw; first vice-president, Miss Laura J. Runyon; second vice-president, Miss Susie Woodland; recording secretary, Miss Bertha Needham; corresponding secretary, Miss Ida Yerkes; treasurer, Mrs. W. O. Chapman.

Two lookout committees were appointed, one for young girls and one for young ladies. They were: Miss Bertha Needham, Miss Susie Woodland, Miss Nora Williams, Miss Alice Needham. For the older ones the following were appointed: Miss Ida Yerkes, Mrs. B. W. Vail, Miss Laura J. Runyon, Miss Mamie French.

Routine business occupied the rest of the time.

CHARGE AGAINST AN OFFICER.

Special Marshal John Barry Said to Have Been Drunk Last Night.

A man named Edward Vandaury, gardener for Pedeflou's, at his place on the mountain back of Washingtonville, came to North Plainfield Monday night and imbibed to freely. He stopped at the Arlington hotel, and in some way a scrap was started. Special officer John Barry was present and arrested the man. A large crowd gathered and several blows were struck. Vandaury received severe treatment, judging from the appearance of his face when arraigned before Justice Crosley this morning. Ex-Chief Marshal Pangborn made a plea on behalf of the Frenchman and called several witnesses who testified that, not only was Vandaury intoxicated, but that Marshal Barry was also. After Mr. Pangborn had made a short speech urging leniency, Justice Crosley imposed a fine of five dollars. As regards Marshal Barry, the Justice said he would refer the matter to the Mayor and Police Committee of the council for investigation. Many who saw the affair claim that Marshal Barry was in the wrong.

STATE RATHBONE SISTERS.

Secret Work Exemplified at Newark Last Evening.

The First New Jersey Staff of the Rathbone Sisters, with the Grand Chief Deputy of New York, met last Tuesday in La Manch, K. of P. Hall, Newark, and exemplified the work before G. C. R. Donath and grand staff and 250 Pythian Brothers. One woman was initiated and 203 Pythian Brothers took the obligation in Ark Weaver Temple. Great admiration was expressed by all present at the grandeur and perfect manner in which the work was performed.

Suggestions were made that the Sisters exemplify their work before the Knights of Pythias at Jersey City, but the Plainfield members wish to honor their city brother Knights of Pythias before any other city, hence no decision was reached. A very fine supper was served and regrets were expressed that the Plainfield members were obliged to return home so early.

To Assist the Joint Detail.

At the meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, S of V., held last evening, Captain Willard V. Sutton appointed Charles Stephens, James Stryker and Arthur Drake a committee to meet with the Joint Memorial detail of the G. A. R., to arrange for the observance of Memorial Day. John M. Lewis and W. C. Dobbins were presented with handsome past captain badges by the camp. After the meeting the members had a short drill. Second Lieutenant H. C. McVoy, reported that the arrangements for the entertainment to be given to the members by their lady friends were progressing favorably.

An Affidavit.

This is to certify that on May 11th, I walked to Melick's drug store on a pair of crutches and bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm for inflammatory rheumatism which had crippled me up. After using three bottles I am completely cured. I can cheerfully recommend it. Charles H. Wetzel, Sunbury, Pa. Sworn and subscribed to before me on August 10th, 1894. Walter Shipman, J. P. For sale at 50c per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

CHRIST'S SELF-SACRIFICE

A LESSON TAUGHT IN HIS REBUKE OF WOMAN'S LOVE AT THE CROSS.

Rev. Dr. Lowry Preaches a Powerful Sermon in the Series of Holy Week Meetings—His Many Good Points.

The first of the series of services to be held in connection with Holy Week took place last Tuesday in the First Presbyterian church when Rev. Dr. Robert Lowry, preached a powerful sermon to a large audience. Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards read the Scripture lesson from Luke 23-28, after which Rev. Cornelius Schenck offered up prayer. Dr. Lowry then spoke in substance as follows:—

"I have chosen a portion of the twenty-eighth verse of the twenty-third chapter of the gospel of Luke for my text this evening, which reads: 'Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourselves and your children.' These words constitute a portion of Christ's last connected discourse on earth. Everything that he said afterward was disjointed. This is fairly a discourse for you will find it sets forth three points, namely, reproof, argument and prophecy. It seems a strange place and time for these words to be uttered. Look at it! Within yonder walls the terrible words and deeds were enacted. People outside looking for something to happen.

"Oh! the sight! I do not call this Holy week nor Passion week. I have no name for it. It is a week for solemn meditation and prayer. I envy not those who can go to the theatre, the card party or the dance. Let us picture the scene. We go down into that mob where Roman soldiers the high and low, all in one teeming mass are sweeping toward Calvary. In the midst of this scene Jesus is conducted. They make their way through the gate and press onward toward that memorable spot. Christ needs assistance in carrying the cross, so Simon is picked out. He does not bear the cross from Christ's shoulder, but he takes hold of one end so that Christ may be relieved of the dragging sensation. There is a temporary check in the procession. Women rush to the front, and then it was that Christ spoke to the weeping women, which brings out the words of our text tonight.

"There were thousands of people present coming from all quarters to the scene. There were many enemies and haters of Jesus, who were interested in seeing the end. There were those present who were sincere admirers and sympathizers of Christ, and there were 'the women' Christ introduced the latter and brought them forward. They unlocked the fountains of grief. Men, poor things, little know about sympathy and weeping. When he does anything it is the woman in him that does it.

"It is the influence of woman that counts for so much. In this scene we see the strength of attachment. Perhaps the women had no business there, but they were there! Man was not capable of doing what they did. In the midst of the shouting of Crucify Him! Crucify Him! the women stood fearlessly for perfect love casteth out fear. Now comes the strange portion of the text. Christ did not rejoice. He rebuked the women, as though he would say, 'Do not look on me as deserving of sympathy. I held My life in the hollow of My hand, and I can take it up or lay it down.' His suffering was the inevitable end of sin, which He assumed for the world. Somebody must die, and He did. But they did not understand it. He was pronounced innocent, yet He suffered like the blackest villain, and yet He said 'Weep not for Me.' It is impossible to weep pain, error or mistake away.

"We have heard considerable about the Armenian troubles how thousands have been slaughtered, yet there is not a man nor a government to stand up and say this thing in Armenia must stop! I attended a vocal concert some years ago in the old Congregational church and heard for the first time the production of 'Stabat Mater.' I will never forget it. I was spell-bound; couldn't move. In fact, I was paralyzed. After it was over someone remarked 'Wasn't it beautiful.' I felt almost insulted. It wasn't beautiful. It was an avalanche of heavenly glory.

"There is such a thing as an eloquent sermon, but all the sermons I had heard never moved me like that rendition of 'Stabat Mater.' I never heard Reaven nor no better but it touched my physical nature.' At this point the doctor very tersely remarked that he forgot it was a week day and kept thinking it was Sunday when people had no engagements to interfere with their religious duties. He closed his discourse by saying that a sinner must look to Jesus and inquire What am I? What do I need? That is the only process where by he can be saved. He then offered prayer and after the singing of a hymn, the service closed.

EXEMPTS ENTHUSED.

The Old Fire Laddies Have a Meeting Reminiscent of Old Times.

The regular monthly meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association was held last Tuesday, and there was a large attendance of the members. The first business was the nomination of officers, with the following result: President, Auguste Saltzman; vice-president, Alexander Titsworth; recording secretary, G. Thorn; treasurer, E. M. Laing; financial secretary, G. W. Clark; board of trustees, D. W. Littell, E. M. Laing, J. A. Hubbard, William A. Woodruff and E. A. Verchenle; representatives to the Relief Association, G. Thorn and A. Saltzman; delegates to the State Convention, E. M. Laing, William A. Woodruff, Frank Schuck, D. W. Littell and Jacob Blimm, Sr.

A feature of the meeting was the presentation to the Association, by the president, Auguste Saltzman, of an old trumpet which was given to the latter in 1877 by the old Alert Company.

L. E. Barkalew, a faithful member of the Association, had composed several excellent verses of poetry which he read last evening. They told in an entertaining way about the boys in the old department; how the old fire bell was removed; and how the new company No. 2. was organized and the spirit of rivalry existing in those days. The reading of it was heartily received. One new member was elected to the Association, after which the meeting adjourned.

The election will take place at the next meeting.

AMHERST GLEE CLUB.

A Musical Organization Whose Talent is Recognized the World Over.

There is always a peculiar interest felt in college glee clubs and their songs, characteristic as they are of the universities themselves. The audience is brought in personal contact with the student life. This is especially true in the case of Amherst, for no college has had a wider reputation on account of the excellence of its musical clubs. A large part of the selections are original with the students themselves, having the spice and interest that always comes with original talent.

The Amherst concerts have always been the best given by any of the American colleges and it is on account of the intrinsic merit of their performances that they have gained such a wide reputation.

This year the Amherst Clubs are exceptionally good as has been shown by marked success of their concerts in Boston, Hartford and Northampton. Monday, April 6th the clubs will be in Plainfield and after the rest over Sunday it is to be hoped it will be one of the best of the trip. Two years ago the clubs were in Plainfield and this time they will receive no less hearty a welcome, when they appear at the Casino.

STOLE PICKS; GOES TO JAIL.

An Italian Water Boy Caught Stealing Railroad Property.

One of the water boys employed by the street railway contractors started to help himself to the contractors property. Tuesday, when he made the acquaintance of the city rookey. Yesterday noon one of the employes at the Scott Press Works told Edgar L. Serrell, the clerk for the contractors, that one of the Italians had just carried away an armful of picks and hidden them by the brook. Serrell investigated and found the would-be thief and the picks. The Italian explained that it was only a joke, but Serrell did not look at it in that light and escorted the man to the nearest policeman.

The Italian was brought before Justice Nash Tuesday afternoon and there gave his name as Charles Rao. He still claimed that he had intended to bring the picks back again, but the Justice held him in $100 bail to appear before the grand jury next May. Funds were low with Mr. Rao, so he will await the pleasure of the pleasure of the grand jury at the county jail.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

Burns are absolutely painless when DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve is promptly applied. This statement is true. A perfect remedy for skin diseases, chapped hands and lips, and never fails to cure piles. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

TROLLEY WORK HALTS.

BUT ONLY FOR TODAY TO ORGANIZE THE WORKING FORCE.

Many of the Italian Laborers Incompetent and New Men Will be Put in Their Places and the Work Pushed On.

With the exception of a few workmen who were kept busy spiking and bolting the rails together, the entire force of men who have been engaged in laying the extension of the trolley road were laid off this morning. The cause of the cessation in the construction of the line is the want of skilled labor.

Contractor Serrell has met with a series of unexpected and inevitable obstacles that have prevented the work from going forward at the rate it should under ordinary circumstances.

Several days before the work was begun a contract was made with Frank Wilson, of Liberty street, New York, to furnish one hundred men to begin work Friday night at Plainfield. Wilson made no effort to secure any laborers until Friday noon, and then took what he could get, mostly men inexperienced in track building and many of them incompetent and undersed. The men were sent out here but no provision was made for housing or feeding them. After considerable hustling Superintendent Yarnall managed, by a midnight invasion on the local bakeries, to supply food for the workmen for Friday night and Saturday morning. Arrangements were made with McVey to assist in supplying the necessities of life to the laborers, most of whom were foreign.

Another detachment of men was obtained from Patsy Christmas, of Fanwood, who has furnished labor for the contractors at other times.

Superintendent Yarnell had made arrangements with an expert trackman to take charge of the laying of the track but, at the last moment, received a telegram from him stating that his house had just burned down and he would be detained for a short time. Another telegram from his wife came later and told of his illness. Another track-layer could not come, but Superintendent Yarnell expects one this evening, unless he dies on the road or is kidnapped.

Many of the Italians who compose most of the force have been discontented with the treatment of the agents who brought them here. A number were turned off Monday and a few yesterday on account of discontent and incompetency.

In talking with a Press reporter this morning Superintendent Yarnell said that the force was utterly unorganized and where such a number of men should have laid 1,200 feet of track per day, only 400 to 600 feet had been laid. Tomorrow the force will be permanently organized and only the laborers satisfied with their work will be employed. The experienced trackman will then be here and work will be continued at a much more rapid rate than previously.

All the dissatisfied Italians were discharged and paid off this morning.

WORDS FROM THE CROSS.

The Ministers and the Subjects for Good Friday Union Services.

The Good Friday Union services will be held in the First Baptist church Friday evening. The ministers who will preach and the words they will have for a subject are as follows:

First Word—"Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Rev. J. Johnstone.

Second Word—"Woman, behold, thy son! Behold, thy mother!" Rev. J. W. Richardson.

Third Word—"Verily I say unto thee, today shalt thou be with me in paradise." Rev. E. M. Bodman.

Fourth Word—"My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" Rev. Dr. Richards.

Fifth Word—"I thirst." Rev. S. Herring.

Sixth Word—"It is finished." Rev. Dr. Lowry.

Seventh Word—"Father, into Thy hands I commend my spirit." Rev. Dr. Barnes.

GOING RIGHT AHEAD.

Work on the Trolley Road Extension Being Rapidly Pushed.

All the opposition to the trolley line seems to have died away for the work of sending it towards Netherwood meets no opposers. There is a feeble kick regarding the erection of the poles, but that is usually settled satisfactorily. The track was completed nearly to Richmond street yesterday, and by 2 o'clock today the rails were down on Richmond street from East Fifth street to LaGrande avenue, and need to be spiked down. The ground is broken nearly to Putnam avenue.

So far nothing has been done regarding the wires, but they will be strung in a few days.

Its just as easy to try One Minute Cough Cure as anything else. Its easier to cure a severe cough or cold with it. Let your next purchase for a cough be One Minute Cough Cure. Better medicine; better result; better try it. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

METHODS OF MANAGERS

Art and Business Methods of Three Famous Men.

How Henry Irving Puts a Play on the Stage—Mr. Daly's Autocratic System of Management—Gustave Frohman's Success.

[Special New York Letter.]

The extent to which the personalities of half a dozen men are reflected in every worthy current phase of dramatic endeavor becomes apparent to the habitual play-goer, as well as to the humblest class of laborers in the theatrical field, in these days of financial depression when only plays of great merit or strikingly original novelties enjoy pecuniary success. In fact, the art and business methods of three of these men are responsible for every recent achievement in their line that is worthy of note. Others using the same methods have made nearly as great reputations; but that has been through their talent for appropriating to their own use the creations of greater minds.

In the last decade there has been no disposition to dispute the fact that Henry Irving stands supreme and alone as an artist manager. Viewed merely as an actor he has never ranked with the English Macready or the American Forrest and Booth. But no actor of the first rank has ever possessed Irving's comprehension of art in its broadest significance. The art of the English master of the stage is universal. It is the possession of this quality that enables him to make productions of classic and historical drama, which, before his advent, were beyond the dreams of the most ambitious stage director. The scenes of an Irving production are a delight to the painter's eye; the incidental music which accompanies the action is composed in some master mood; he has caught from Irving the spirit of the play; the costumes, faithful in material and design, win the admiration alike of the lover of romance and the student of history.

Surrounding the genius of the Lyceum theater, London—in fact, his comrades and cordial co-workers—are most of the men of the English metropolis whose names are great in painting, in sculpture, in music, in architecture—in every branch of art that can contribute of a perfect stage representation of a noble historical subject. It is a peculiarity of Irving's temperament that he is able to inspire and bind together in his own service all these elements. Probably the secret of his success is his invariably generous public recognition of the contributions of others toward his triumph, and the geniality of his bearing toward all with whom he comes in contact. These characteristics are nowhere else so pronounced as in his relations with the members of his acting company. Those who have been privileged to witness a rehearsal of one of Irving's famous productions at the Lyceum theater have carried away with them two especially vivid impressions. They have observed that the suggestions of even the least important members of the cast are courteously considered. A supernumerary may advance his own theory of how his spear should be carried, for example, and Irving, if he finds this theory wrong, will take the trouble to courteously explain why it is so. In this way the best intelligence of every member of the cast is called into action. Although the presiding genius gives up a great deal of his time to considering the suggestions of those who are less expert than himself, he gains a hearty cooperation which more than compensates him. With all his close attention to the details of his productions—a self-imposed task nearly as exacting as those of his staff of assistants on the stage—Irving neglects none of the social duties which are the lot of representative men of art and letters in the English metropolis. In this regard he is as indefatigable as our own Chauncey Depew.

This picture has a reverse in our country, where for nearly 20 years the name of Augustin Daly has been associated in the minds of play-goers with all that is most refined and truly artistic in the field of drama. In some instances Daly's results have been the equal of Irving's. He has the correct eye and ear, and the temperament, of a born artist, and when he has been surrounded by capable people whose powers were proof against the chill and uninspiring atmosphere of his discipline, his high ideals have usually been realized, instead of radiating inspiration, as Irving does, Daly absorbs every artistic quality that his legal representation on his pay roll, filters it through his own personality and tenders the harmonious product to an admiring public, who accept it as Augustin Daly's very own. When his actors develop individual excellencies of impersonation, thereby setting a very bad example to all properly constituted automata, it is necessary that they should go elsewhere; Daly's instrument must respond to his touch alone. He is a master, but he has no association with other masters of his craft. The name of no great painter, musician or poet is ever found associated with Daly's upon the occasion of any of its triumphs, unless the latter should chance to be the author of the play presented, and even then, unless the author should happen to be Shakespeare—who, by the way, furnishes Mr. Daly with some excellent material for spectacular productions bearing his name—his status is apt to be somewhat vague.

It would be unfair to Augustin Daly to charge him with being the instigator of all the inequalities in the common highway of strict equity in these matters that have been observed during the course of his career. For example, the palpable neglect of Mr. French, the publisher of standard acting dramas, to remove from the title pages of "Frou Frou" the name of Augustin Daly as author, when Mr. Daly and every other well-read American has known for a dozen years past that two clever Frenchmen, not unknown in their own country, namely, Meilhac and Halleyy, are the authors of that fine work. It is somehow the misfortune of Mr. Daly to have failed to live down that early period in his career when he was a man, nobody and nothing in dramatic firmament of this country. Perhaps he could if he would, and if he could and would there are few who will deny that if Augustin Daly should now avail himself of all the forces that would be at his command under the Irving form of administration he would still be as unapproachable in his special field as he has been in the past.

There being few men in the theatrical field naturally so gifted as Mr. Daly, his imitators have been very few. The imitators of another man, of vastly different gifts and attainments, are correspondingly numerous. The methods which he put into operation a score of years ago have reduced theatrical management to a legitimate business basis, if not to a science. They have built handsome playhouses in hundreds of towns, which, under former conditions, would be able to boast only the primitively constructed town hall; have brought within the reach of practically everyone the best dramatic literature of the past and present. The man referred to is Gustave Frohman, second in years of the three brothers whose combined interests in the amusement line are of greater importance than those of any other dozen managers.

Gustave Frohman was the pioneer distributer of celebrated dramatic attractions throughout the towns and villages of the country. What others had done in a haphazard way with "Uncle Tom's Cabin," he did systematically with "Hazel Kirke," and is now doing with the impersonations of his brothers, Charles and Daniel Frohman. Many will doubtless be surprised to know that without this cleverly managed and exhaustive "road business," as it is called, the expense of importing the great novelties of Paris and London, such as "Jane," "Sowing the Wind" and "The Fatal Card," would practically prohibit that enterprise. But whatever is demanded by the people of New York city and Chicago is eagerly accepted by the audiences of the smallest towns on the map of the country, and it is placing these attractions everywhere on a carefully systematized plan before their novelty has worn off that enables American managers to give their productions a run not had in any other country. While Gustave Frohman's administrative genius showed other managers how this result could be accomplished, and while he still remains the chief among road managers, to say that his talents are limited to this field would be far from the truth. As the lessee of a first-class theater in Chicago he has demonstrated the possession of sound artistic judgment, and it is well understood in the theatrical profession that no other manager excels him in the knowledge of how to exhibit the talents of the actors in his employ at their best.

CURTIS DUNHAM.

Napoleon's First Wife.

A recent writer on Napoleon I. says that Josephine was far from being the beauty that she is commonly supposed. Her nose is too long, her chin was small and receding, her eyes were rather oblique, her teeth were brown and decayed and her breath very bad. He (it was not Percy, and she had a foolish giggle that spoiled her conversation.

CUPID'S DARTS IN MARCH

MARRIAGE OF MISS BELLE CARKHUFF TO ROBERT W. BARNES.

The Event Solemnized at the Home of the Bride's Uncle at Mt. Pleasant—Many Plainfield People Present at the Affair.

The pretty country home of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Rowley at Mt. Pleasant was the scene Thursday afternoon of a very charming wedding when their neiee, Miss Isabelle S. Carhuff, became the wife of Robert W. Barnes, of this city. The ceremony, which was performed at 3 o'clock by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, was witnessed only by the relatives and intimate friends of the contracting parties. At the appointed hour the bridal party entered the front parlor from the hallway, and passed to the rear parlor where they formed in a semi-circle. As they entered Miss Etta Taffan, of Mt. Pleasant, rendered Mendelssohn's wedding march on the organ. The groom and best man, John G. McLoughlin, of North Plainfield, and Dr. Yerkes, entered the room from another door. The ceremony was performed with a ring and the responses were very clear. While a favorite march was being played the party passed to another room on the opposite side of the hall, where the bride and groom received congratulations.

The bride wore a gown of tan cloth with Fedora front of Dresden silk and trimmed with brown velvet. She carried an exquisite bunch of bridal roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Lizzie Rowley, cousin of the bride, was gowned in brown cloth, with brown satin bodice, trimmed with berths of spangled passmentrie and white silk lace. She carried pink roses. A most excellent wedding supper followed congratulations, after which Mr. and Mrs. Barnes left by the Royal Blue Line train for Washington where they will spend their honeymoon. On their return they will board for awhile until their new home on Grove street is completed. They were the recipients of a large number of very handsome and useful presents. The groom's gift to the best man was a gold scarf pin with pearl setting.

Those present at the marriage were: Rev. Dr. and Mrs. D. J. Yerkes, Councilman and Mrs. Harold Serrell, Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Randolph, Mrs. C. D. Batchelor, Mrs. Spratt, Miss Trewin, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. John Butler, Robt. Butler, Robt. Barnes, father of the groom, Miss Gussie Runyon, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Randolph, Miss Bertha Van Cleef, Miss Geogia Eick, Mrs. Jeremiah Van Winkle, Robert Love, Nelson Van Winkle, W. C. The ushers were Robert Love, of Plainfield, and Eugene Garrabrant, of Bayonne. They wore favors consisting of boutonnieres.

A Butterfly Social.

The East Sixth Street Whist Club gave a "butterfly social" Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Cora Richardson, of East Sixth street. The evening passed only too quickly with whist, dancing and conversation, while delicious refreshments added to the occasion.

Those present were the Misses Cora Richardson, Charlotte Messersmith, Nellie Schenck, Bessie Giles, Jessie Giles, Marie Giles, Margaret Coriell, and the Messrs. Randolph, Judson E. Giles, Robert Carpenter, Charles Coriell, Ernest Millard, John Steiner and Fred Haynes.

Rankin Again for Mayor.

Mayor Rankin, of Elizabeth, seems likely to be renominated for Mayor without opposition—says The World. No candidate has yet appeared in the field against him. The newspaper war waged upon him recently has "made him solid," the politicians say, with the German American vote, and nobody else could win the primaries from him.

TIME WAITS LEGISLATION

THE CLOCK WAS STOPPED BUT THE LEGISLATURE GOES ON.

The Two Houses In Last Hours of Their Existence—Rushing Business Through—Mr. Reed Talked of for Senator.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Trenton, March 26th.—Every year when it comes time for the Legislature to adjourn in compliance with the joint resolution of the two houses, which is always fixed for the noon hour, the members of the Assembly and Senate play a huge joke on old father time, and are able to finish up the business which they have mapped out and then adjourn within the time limit. It is done by the Sergeant at-Arms of each house giving the word to a subordinate officer, who approaches the clocks in the two houses and with an air of great importance stops the pendulum before the hands reach the hour of one o'clock. Then the tick tock of the clock is silenced and for several hours the old axiom that "Time and tide await no man" is made negative. The Legislature goes rushing through with its business, and when it is all cleaned away and the members are ready to adjourn sine die, the subordinate official ceremoniously approaches the time piece again and with one gentle push starts the tick tock and a few minutes after the Legislature has become a thing of the past until the first of the next year, unless some great problem should arise during the intervening time and require Legislative action.

This noon the stop-the-clock proceedings were gone through with at 12:30 o'clock. The legislators were working with all the busts that is possible, while time awaits their command to move on. There is quite an accumulation of business which the leaders are anxious to dispose of, and it may be way along in the night before the clock is started again. Up to the time that this dispatch is being written Senator Thompson has not yet given his resignation to the Senate so that he might accept the clerkship of the Chancery, but he probably will hand it in sometime this afternoon.

Many Legislators express the opinion that Assemblyman Reed will no doubt receive the Senatorial nomination in Somerset county next fall. The record that the young lawyer has made in the Assembly this winter has astonished many of the older heads, but has won their admiration, and they predict for him a bright future in a political and official way.

Charles J. Baxter, who has been appointed State Superintendent of the Public Schools, was about the State House today making the acquaintance of many of the big men of the State. He impresses all with his quiet, unostentatious manner.

Differences among the Republican Senators over the constitutional amendment reorganizing the courts, resulted in the final adjournment of the Legislature being postponed until today. Yesterday's session was continued until this morning in order to prevent the resuscitation of bills that have been killed by delaying action. After spending nearly three hours in conference Tuesday night over the amendments the Republican Senators spent three hours more on them yesterday afternoon, with the result that an agreement was reached on all but the judiciary amendment, and it was decided to transfer the fight on that to the floor of the Senate. Ten of the eighteen Republicans favored the amendment reported by the majority of the Lawyers' Committee, which is practically the same as adopted by the Constitutional Commission of 1894. Eight favored an amendment providing for a single court of fifteen Judges, divided into three divisions, with law, equity, and appellate jurisdiction. No formal vote was taken in the caucus. The three Democratic Senators, it was known, favored the latter proposition. After the caucus was over Senator Voorhees reported the fifteen Judges amendment and Senator Johnson moved to substitute the other, but the motion was defeated by the vote of 8 to 12 and the Voorhees amendment adopted by a vote of 19 to 0.

The other amendments were then adopted as follows: Prohibiting legislation that will legalize lotteries, bookmaking, pool selling or other form of gambling; granting women the right to vote at school elections except in cities; providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature, and extending the terms of the Governor to four years, Senators to four years, and Assemblymen to two years; providing for the division into Assembly districts of all counties electing two or more Assemblymen, and guarding against gerrymandering the districts; prohibiting the appointment to office during the recess of the Legislature of persons which the Senate has refused to confirm.

Some of the Republican Assemblymen, having shown a disposition to repudiate the promises made last fall to abolish the lay Judges in the county courts, was summoned into caucus this afternoon, and after a long discussion the caucus decided by a vote of 25 to 14 to pass the Senate bill abolishing the Judges. Subsequently the bill passed the House by a party vote of 37 to 14. The Democratic opposition was based on the fact that laymen had always been represented in the New Jersey courts, and were closer to the people and better able than lawyers to determine questions of fact.

Other bills passed by the House were: Prohibiting the manufacture or sale in New Jersey of cigarettes of any kind; a general revision of the corporation laws of the State, and several bills reenacting various corporation laws under their proper titles; legalizing those boroughs whose charters were invalidated by recent court decisions; making it unlawful to buy or sell or use milk cans belonging to other dealers; furnishing to each public school and certain public officials copies of the history of New Jersey soon to be published; giving to honorably discharged veterans of the war preference as employees on all public works.

In view of the mystery surrounding Cagney's Dollar Gas bill, Mr. Queen presented a resolution which was adopted, requesting the clerk of the House to ascertain and report without delay what committee or official of the House, or other person, has control or possession of the bill requiring the City Collector of Jersey City to collect all water rents. The official copy of the bill is missing.

Among the bills passed by the Senate were: Prohibiting trolley companies from carrying freight, except such companies as are now legally doing so; accepting the gift of a farm at Englewood, in Monmouth county, upon which to erect a home for blind persons; also the House concurrent resolution requesting New Jersey's Senators and Congressmen to vote for the bill classifying the employes of the mail service; prohibiting the sale or gift of cigarettes to persons under sixteen years of age; the Deficiency Appropriation bill, carrying $239,577; the bill legalizing boroughs providing that boroughs, villages, cities and towns shall be incorporated only by special acts of the Legislature, and be governed by general laws, requiring official envelopes used at elections to be made of yellow paper; the Annual Appriation bill. Bullock's bill requiring the payment of wages semi-monthly by corporations was practically killed by the adoption of amendments.

The House last evening passed the Anti Trust bill introduced by the Judiciary Committee, and ordered that it be sent to the Senate at once. The Incidental bill was also passed. The Incidental expenses of the Legislature have been but $6,300.

A poll of the members of the House has been made, and it shows that there is strong opposition to the biennial session and the Assembly districting amendments to the Constitution adopted by the Senate, and that they will probably be defeated.

HE LOVES PLAINFIELD.

But His Love is Not Reciprocated and He is Sent to Jail.

There is one tramp that thinks Plainfield is a good thing, and so he has been pushing it along at a lively rate. It is Daniel Jones, and Thursday Sergeant Kiely arrested him for about the sixth time on the same charge, that of vagrancy and begging. Jones has a good looking face and a smooth tongue which he uses to a good advantage. He has expressed a decided love for Plainfield and promptly returns here as soon as he is released from jail.

He felt ugly in the city court this morning, and used anything but respectful language to the Judge When asked how many times he had been arrested, he remarked with an unconcerned air, "Oh, about a hundred. Not over a hundred, I think." His uncleanly appearance caused the Judge to ask, "When do you wash?" "When I get ready," was his reply, and the Judge's opinion was that he needed to get some pretty soon, and so gave him a chance by sending him to jail for fifty-nine days, and also ordering him to pay or work out a fine of $100.

Spring Opening at Lederer's.

Lederer's was crowded yesterday by ladies who had come to view the large and varied assortment of hats and millinery on the first day of the spring opening. They were well pleased, for there was never a finer exhibition displayed before at the above-mentioned store. The millinery department presented a handsome appearance, due to the clever taste of Miss May Flanagan, who has charge. The opening continues today and tomorrow, and if you are out for a walk call in, and you will be sure to see something to suit you. The hats are beauties, and Miss Flanagan will leave nothing undone to please those who favor her with their patronage.

Wedding Reception.

The marriage of Miss Eleanor Alice Underwood to Mr. Samuel Burrowes Parrott, to take place Wednesday evening, April eighth, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Underwood, of 138 Crescent avenue, will be followed by a reception from 8:30 to 10:30.

MISTRESSES IN CHANCERY.

Miss Mary Philbrook Rushes Her Bill Through Both Houses.

Miss Mary F. Philbrook, the first woman lawyer, will be the first Mistress in Chancery.

The bill which she had drawn and introduced has passed both branches. She urged the bill through the Senate and House in one day. She reached the end of her day's work about 8:30 Tuesday night, and was rewarded by hearing her courage eulogized by the young lawyers led by Assemblyman Scovel, of Camden, followed by Leader Robertson and Reed, "the tall sycamore of Somerset."

She was seated in the gallery at the time. After sounding her praises unusually strong, the first Mistress in Chancery was given the privilege of the floor by resolution of Leader Robertson, but instead of taking the floor, she took a train for Jersey City, satisfied that she had made a good fight.

She has the Governor's promise that he will affix his autograph to the bill.

A PLACE FOR THE CITY POOR.

Intention to Place Overseer of the Poor Mars in Charge of the Sewage Farm.

That the City Council intend to provide a place for the city poor near the sewage farm, is a fact that is well assured. The former own three houses on the property, two of which will be placed near each other. The grounds will be graded and laid out in the most approved method, and the houses will be put in first-class condition to accommodate those who will be compelled to go there.

It is the intention of the Council to place both the sewage farm and the city poor under the direction of the Overseer of the Poor, who will be in full charge. Those who are able to work will find something to do about the farm, and thus be the means of relieving the city of additional expense. Instead of creating offices for men, the plan is to double up the work so that it will require a less number to run the city's affairs.

ENTERTAINED AT CARDS.

An Informal Whist Party Given by Miss Mary Brown Yesterday.

An informal whist party was given Thursday afternoon by Miss Mary Brown at her home on Park avenue. It was a charming affair and her guests spent a very pleasant afternoon. While occupied most of the time and prizes were awarded at the close. Miss Fritts and Miss Arline Crane won the first prizes. Mrs. Andrew Fritts and Miss Ida Cook took the second prizes. The consolation prizes were captured by Mrs. C. T. Pond and Miss Anna Boice and the booby prizes by Miss Delphine Bowers and Miss Mary Fritts. Conversation was interspersed by dainty refreshments.

Horse Thieves at Work.

The authorities of Woodbridge are searching for a party of horse thieves that visited that town last night. The stolen property was a small bay horse attached to an extension-top surrey. The police of this city and neighboring towns were notified of the robbery.

ESSENCE OF SONG-PUN.

Great Audience Witness the Minstrels of the Wheelmen.

ORIGINAL HITS OF A LOCAL NATURE.

Music Hall Packed With an Audience Who Appreciate and Applaud the Efforts of Plainfield's Funny Men—The First Part was an Exposition of Up-to-Date Minstrelsy—Besides the Melody of Music and the Jocularity of Jokes, There Were Several Original Acts—Names of Those Who Were the Participants.

The art of merriment as elucidated from song and pun was exploited with an irresistible subtleness at Music Hall Thursday by the gay, the grand, the gorgeous array of black-faced and white-panted contingent of the Crescent Wheelmen.

It has not been often that Music Hall contained a larger audience; every seat was occupied and a large number of people were standing. The audience was a cosmopolitan one, a Democratic one, a fashionable one. Almost everybody was there, or at least some of their relatives, and everyone who wasn't there wanted to be.

The conservative business man from Wall street, who almost ran his legs off between Broadway and Liberty street to catch an early ferryboat so that he might "come early and avoid the rush," accompanied by his wife, and children, if he was so fortunately blessed, was there. He hawhawed without any respect for conventionalities, and didn't seem to care a picka yune whether the market was bulled or beared. His clerk was in evidence also, and with him came the young lady who is the prospective Mrs. Wallstreet Clerk. They viewed the wry faces and comical antics, and smiled, giggled and laughed. The progressive Plainfield merchant occupied an orchestra chair, or anything else that he was lucky enough to get into, and chuckled with inward glee at the jibes that had been coined and aimed at the frailities of some unfortunate friend of his who had come under the eye of the ridiculous of "bones" or "tambo." He had his family there, too. His clerks and all his competitors' clerks had to come to view the pompous aggregation and indulge in the bushels of merriment that were dealt out. The staid matron, who seldom visits places of popular amusement, could not resist the temptation to see some of the boys whom she had known since they were knee-high-to-a-grasshopper, appear behind the footlights "to make fools of themselves," as she expressed herself when giving a plausible reason for her indulgence from her usually sedate conduct. But after the performance she confessed that she had laughed till the tears dimmed her eyes and she couldn't tell whether Charlie Lyman was the living skeleton or the man with the rubber skin. In a word, the crowd was there and they laughed.

The performance was of a local character all the way through, most of the jokes being aimed at members of the various clubs of the city. They were original, cleverly executed and the humor of a kind that was quickly appreciated by all who heard it. Now and then, however, a pun would be thrust out that would fall short of its mark, principally because a large part of the audience were not acquainted with the subject. As good a pun as was rendered was that given by Billy Runyon when he said that "Ballington Booth was doing the split at the Salvation Army." But it was gone and the audience was laughing at another before many people saw the point. Charles Lyman made a good interlocutor, his voice and bearing having the element of dignity requisite for the position. George O. Stevens and Charles Runyon as "bones" and William N. Runyon and J. H. Rogers, as "tambos," acted with an abandon and indiscrousness necessary to create lots of laughter.

Those appearing in the first part were as follows: W. N. Runyon, J. H. Rogers, A. W. Demarest, C. E. Pettinos, F. D. Hallock, F. Freeman, R. McGee, W. E. MacClymont, W. Thiers, J. E. B. Petrie, W. J. Tripp, A. E. Holmes, Charles H. Lyman, E. E. Runyon, L. S. Bond, C. Angleman, H. Schutt, L. Miner, J. E. Douglass, H. Moore, A. B. Jessup, George Lehman, S. P. T. Wilbur, Charles Runyon, George Stevens, A. Titsworth, S. Reynolds, C. Hazeltine, A. H. Cornish, A. Cannon, H. Yaeger, G. Ulrich, F. H. Smith, F. French, W. Stephenson, R. Mundy, C. Lister, G. Homn, W. Sweuey, F. H. Clarkson, A. F. Baker, G. Rockefellow, E. L. Jones, W. B. Mosher, R. Miner, Wyatt Barnes, Ed. Serrell, T. Smith, J. Crawford, N. Titsworth.

The busy hum of conversation was suddenly stilled by the sound of singing coming from behind the curtain. The male voices blended harmoniously in the strains of "I Am Working on the Levee," and then the curtain rolled up. A grand burst of applause from the audience greeted the picturesque party, and then, at a signal from the genial interlocutor, the dusky-faced artists sat down and the long-expected minstrel show of the Crescent Wheelmen had begun. The overture by the entire company was a varied one and everybody had a hand in it. First came the familiar strains of "Paradise Alley" and "Little Alabama Coon." The orchestra gave snatches of other well-known selections in the intervals between the songs while "Bones" and "Tambo" kept up a lively accompaniment. "Go Tell the News on High," with the solo part sung by George O. Stevens, came next, and "Lulu," with Alfred Holmes, was also given. Then up jumped George O. Stevens and William N. Runyon in their fantastic costumes while the orchestra struck up "Two New Sports in Town." They sang it in a way that brought tears to the eyes of their hearers. They were tears of joy, however. A grand finale by the orchestra, bones and tambos concluded the opening selection.

"There is an intoxicating effect about this show," remarked Stevens from his end. Of course, the interlocutor, Charles H. Lyman, wanted to know what and how it was. "We have got Music Hall full," began Stevens, and everybody saw the point and laughed. He then went on to tell about who was present in the audience. Sheriff Kyte, so he said, had an attachment for this kind of shows and came down to see the programme properly executed.

His story of his last trip on the trolley car and how, as the sign said not to split on the floor, he tried to expectorate on the ceiling, was a very sad one, but still the audience laughed. Bones, for such Stevens was, then told something about "Bill" Runyon and how he got his clothing by the hand starts, not getting them until they fitted and then starting off without remembering to pay. That made him think how he had given Runyon a bill sometime ago. Its denomination was Episcopalian, he thought, because it kept lent. Louis Timpson's little boy swallowed a five-cent piece and was hurrying to see Dr. Mattison when they met Stevens, or at least so the latter said. He told them to go see Reed & Coddington for they, who had just got $1,000 out of a man, ought to be able to get five cents out of him.

A bass solo, "Rollin' to de Sea," was well rendered by Raymond A. McGee assisted on the chorus by Messrs. Angleman, Bond and Pope. Will Runyon had in the meantime fallen asleep and Interlocutor Lyman roused him out of his slumbers. Will was disgusted because he was waked up in the middle of the best dream he ever had. He dreamed he was "Jimmy" Leonard and had a job, but while up there he found out what the salary was. The audience hollered with amusement.

Runyon's gags were good, and his bland, innocent smile quite captivated the crowd. He told how Will Worth was so stingy that in church, when the congregation sang "Old Hundred," he sang "The Ninety and Nine" to save his breath on one. Lyman made some inquiries regarding his law practice, and Runyon said so innocently that the only man that employed him in a murder case was acquitted for being insane. Ballington Booth was credited with doing the split on the Salvation Army. Then Runyon ended with a story about his sister, who, he said, was a typewriter in Charley Fisk's office. Her devotion to duty was remarkable, according to Will, for she put mucilage on the sheet of type-written matter and sat on it so Mr. Fisk could see that she was sticking to her work.

A pretty selection was sung by Wm. J. Thiers, while the chorus was rendered by a quartette composed of Messrs. Angleman, Thiers, McClymont and McGee.

Chas. Runyon, as the second bones, had a far away look in his eyes, and looked as if he hadn't a friend in the world. Interlocutor Lyman wanted to know what was the matter, and Runyon told a sorrowful story of how, after looking at his watch, he had hurried to the train, eating a ride on one of George Stevens' coal wagons so as to beat the trolley car, and arrived there to find the train gone. He looked at his watch to find that it had stopped.

"What was the matter with your watch?" inquired Ly man.

"Had a bed-bug in it," was the reply.

"A bed bug! How could a bed bug get in your watch?" said the Interlocutor.

"It crawled in between the ticks," came the solemn answer. George Stevens tried to die while Will Runyon looked quite ill. But Charley Runyon was good for more. He told how Joe Cooney locked up a tooth-pick-legged young lady in bloomers for having no visible means of support, and how Judge DeMeza let him go after he assaulted his mother-in-law with a door in a midnight encounter with her because, the judge said, no man could be arrested for a-dooring his mother-in-law. He then spoke of a funny sight he had seen in Green Brook where the two mayors, Dr. Thiers, Dr. Carman, Dr. Hedges, and a number of other prominent men were looking for the sewer connections with an X-ray machine.

The orchestra started and George Stevens wiggled to the centre of the stage and sang that plaintive melody, "I Want Yer Ma Honey." He begged so pleadingly that the pianist was nearly drawn out of his seat. After a rousing encore, the members of the Lotos Glee Club gathered round their leader. They were Messrs. H. Angleman, J. E. Douglass, W. M. Muler, Herbert Schutt, Herbert Moore, Henry Yaeger and W. J. Timpson, tenors; Raymond A. McGee, Wyatt Barnes, Chas. Hazeltine, Stacy R. Reynolds, F. J. Pope, A. H. Cornish, Ralph K. Miner and Thomas U. Smith, bassos. They were hardly recognizable with their curly wigs and burnt-cork complexion. Their two selections, "Maid of the Valley," and "They Kissed, I Saw Them do it," were rendered in a most scientific manner, and the large audience was greatly pleased with the appearance of Plainfield's new glee club.

Will Runyon had recovered from the effects of Charley Runyon's story by this time and began to talk about Judge DeMeza. Then Lyman remarked on the great number of Runyons in town and Will said that Plainfield would hardly be a borough without the Runyons.

He said there were more Charley Smith's in town than any other name and he told of some of the terrible mistakes they had caused—how ten beer kegs had been unloaded and piled upon the front piazza of Charley Smith, the architect, and how a gallon of paregoric went to Charley Smith, of West Front street, instead of Charley Smith, the jeweler, and a green barkeeper made cocktails out of it, nearly ruining his employer's business. Some plans meant for Charley Smith, the architect, arrived at the residence of Charley Smith, the jeweler, and his baby swallowed them by mistake, causing a bow window swelling in its neck and giving it a brown-stone front.

While the audience was recovering from this last shock, a very pretty "Slumber Song" was sung by Elmer E. Runyon, whose sweet tenor voice pleased the audience more than ever. The chorus was sung by a quartette, composed of Messrs. Bond, Angleman, Pope and McGee.

J. H. Rogers, Will Runyon's companion as "tambo," took his share in the fun. He used a dialect that was a cross between German and Negro, and he looked so solemn, when he said that McVey was arrested for cruelty to animals, because he beat an egg, that straight faces were few and far between.

He told about Elmer E. Runyon and said that Judge Nash was not an American, but a Laplander, as he knew, for he saw him at dinner in a cabin car. He closed with a little poem about wanting to be on a golden wheel on a golden shore, where "punctures would punct no more."

The well known baritone, Alfred E. Holmes, was the next to take part and he gave the pleasing selection, "The Requital," in an artistic manner.

It was appeared from the way Geo. Stevens performed about that he was loaded and wanted to go off, so Lyman pulled the trigger and he fired his first shot up Somerset street. He exhibited his roses from Miles' greenhouse, and remarked that one would have to go miles to find their equal. After commenting on death and burial he told about the recent wind storm, when S. P. T. Wilbur stood on Washington Rock waiting to be blown off by someone. Elmer Runyon was his next victim, and George told how that gentleman came home one night from the lodge without his night-key and started to make an entrance over the piazza roof. His wife heard a noise, and looked out of the window, where she saw his bald head just looming up above the piazza roof. She took it for the moon, so said Stevens, and retired again. He then said that Elmer Runyon could not keep thoughts in his head, for they kept flowing away, as they had so few locks to keep them. He closed with a wonderful story of the hunting exploits of Percy and Fred Sandford.

The first part closed with an end song entitled "Only a Yaller-Headed Coon," by Will Runyon.

During the intermission, the orchestra rendered a selection and then the curtain rose for the second part. With his hair standing at every angle and a bath robe wrapped about his shoulders, George Taggart came out to give his monologue, "The Cause B' Man." He was dressed in a bicycle suit beneath his robe while several ribbon badges and the large No. 13, decorated his chest and back. He sketch was a good one and well rendered, and his quick manner of assuring the audience that it "was all right" highly delighted them. He told in his witty way of his experiences in going to a race meet in Plainfield with a friend from New York. "Everybody comes out from New York, for nobody in Plainfield ever goes to a race meet." He went on to describe the race which he did very graphically and his imitation of the announcer and his remarks appeared very realistic and the audience recognized it. His entire sketch was filled with bits of humor that he gave so seriously and he seemed quite surprised when his hearers laughed.

A very meritorious part was the slack wire performance by Mr. Burke. Many of his acts were new to Plainfield and it was all given in a manner that was deserving of the loud and hearty applause that he received. One of Fletcher Hallock's pleasing mouthophone solos was added to the programme at this point. He was accompanied by a banjo trio, Messrs. Pettinos, Lehman and Jessup, of Lehigh University.

The audience was then treated to a genuine "Coon Wing Dance" by Harry Schenck, a young colored man of this city.

Next came a humorous sketch by Will Runyon and George Stevens. They were dressed to kill and apparently tried to kill their audience with laughter. The scene was supposed to be a restaurant and their efforts to secure something to eat were as astonishing and nearly raised the roof. After playing all sorts of ridiculous pranks and getting off local hits as they conversed, they sang a parody on "She May Have Seen Better Days." They brought out a large card, the front of which was labeled, as they sang each verse. The first stanza was about President Cleveland and his love of duck shooting. The card said "Popular Songs." The next sign was "Why I Love Work, by Jimmy Leonard" and that verse referred to Cuba and the "better days" she will soon see. The other titles and verses were as follows:

Novel. A Girl in Jail, by Judge DeMeza.

Our good Mayor G. the critics agree
Doth daily his duties secure.
His speeches so fine in the banqueting line
Are knocking out Chauncey Depew.
His so fine are the arrows of delicious bow-knots
That is (under confidence seal)
That his family "pards" he daily bombards
With orations at every meal.

Oh may he see longer days
That with his gift will shine.
When it will be the craze
To banquet on the fine
When in the pastures of wit
His genius may constantly graze
And pour his all wars for the local cafes.
'Twas just after 12 o'clock m.
And strangers, you see, got the notion that he
Was seeking a chance to—ahem!

He may yet see better days,
Days of calm delights,
Yes, he may see days
Free from sleepless nights,
When from politics he may
Turn his argus gaze,
When bets are "thick" are as tight as a brick
He may see better days.

"The Evils of Cigarette Smoking, by Roger W. Erickson."

While strolling along with an appetite strong
For the sights that our city reveals.
In the thoroughfares tide Jim Leonard I spied,
And Pete Matthews was close at his heels.

They were vis-a-vis, and they both did agree
'Bout the times being quite out of gear,
And decided that they would no longer shirk
Were they offered $10,000 a year.

They may have seen better days
When they were in their prime,
They may have seen better days,
Once upon a time.
They by the wayside they wait
They are waiting for the buses to,
When shekels accrue for just nothing to do
They will see better days.

"How to Win Ladies, by L. H. Van-B."

Our city police have got an increase
Of about five or six dollars a week,
And its uniforms new they loiter to view
Themselves in each window they peek.
They're drilling so fine, if seen when in line
All Europe would tremble with fright.
For they'd know at a glance they would'nt be in the dance
With the Plainfield police in a fight.

They'll never see better days.
Ever their peers to see,
Never more charm and daze
The ladies with beauty,
Wearing a salem militaire.
With gun on shoulder they'll craze,
Till they go to patrol the cerulean pool
They'll ne'er see better days.

"How it Feels to be a Statesman," by Charlie Reed.

The sights that one meets as he strolls
Thro' the streets,
Where the sewers have lately been laid,
Makes a Plainfielder think that we've stood on the brink
Where an earthquake its havoc has made.

Eruptions galore and lumps by the score
Encourage the streets as we pass
Till stung to the quick at the sight we strong
And indignantly cry out En-Masse.

Oh may we see better days
When pure water trendy ride
Over our public ways
Sacred to humanity,
When for our money we may
Have roads that are worthy praise
Where highway wrecks will endanger our necks
And forfeit better days.

"How to Put Out Fire, by R. J. Shaw."

The fall will concede that quite in the lead
The Crescents at wheeling you'll find,
Such speed to acquire their treasury's tire
With victories large will be lined.
But thanks to their friends whose encouragement lends
New hopes of success to their aim,
With money in hand they'll come to the land
For Plainfield fresh honor and fame.

And there will see better days,
Days when the records will fall.
Days you'll remember with praise,
When victories large will be piled.
And we will gratefully hold
Your tribute in memory always,
When you thus did reveal your regard for our weal,
And insured better days.

"Stop."

'Twould suit us to death if we had the breath
And iron clad vocal machines
To stay here and toot till we really took root
Or become a fixed part of the scenes.
We'd have to be built like the Brooklyn bridge
When Gabriel's booked to appear,
As when he cornet he tooted you bet
Our voices above it you'd hear.
But we must forbear from further flings,
Lungs of eternal wear,
Anti-corrosive lungs
Filled with ambient air.
Then with our throats copper-lined
Our parts we'll continue to do,
And keep up the time till the last afternoon
Of the sweet bye and bye.

Each stanza was loudly applauded and the local hits were all duly appreciated.

After several well rendered selections by the Lehigh University banjo quartette composed of F. D. Hallock, C. E. Pettinos, G. Lehman and S. B. Jessup, the never to be forgotten minstrel show of the Crescent Wheelmen closed with a farce entitled "A Night at the Park Club with the Union Counties.

The work of which the audience knew little, but which after all was of the utmost importance, was performed by Louis G. Timpson with signal success. Mr. Timpson managed all the details of the money-making end of the affair, and he did it so well that the club will clear about $500 from the minstrels. All day yesterday he was kept busy in perfecting many little arrangements that were necessary to a successful presentation, and last night he managed the stage so that every number on the programme was carried out without a break. He was assisted on the stage by the regular Music Hall ushers, Thaniel Chase and Wheeler, late of Thatcher's minstrels.

The music was under the direction of Prof. Conde, whose rendition was perfect for the performers and pleasing to the audience. The overtures between the acts were especially fine and merited much favorable comment from the critical audience that was present.

The ushers were under the direction of Harry Coward and were as follows: Harry VanEmburgh, Clifton Pearson, Mr. Dryden, Frank Richards, Frank Howland, Richard Williams, George Griffin, Harry Patten and Max Lunger. They did their work efficiently and courteously.

STRAWBERRIES UNPROMISING.

Jersey Crop Prospects Injured by Recent Severe Weather.

The recent severe weather is said to have been bad for the Jersey strawberry crop. Hammonton farmers say that the strawberry plants have been seriously injured by the cold rains of the last two weeks, as the roots have been decayed to a great extent.

Blackberries and raspberries have stood the winter well and give promise of large crops.

May Interfere With Communion.

The New York Advertiser recently published an extract from a pamphlet by the late Rev. Dr. Abraham Coles, of Scotch Plains, entitled "Christ's Character the Answer," in connection with a statement that the Raines bill in New York might prevent the use of wine at church communion. Dr. J. Ackerman Coles yesterday had the following in the Advertiser:

In reply to the article headed "No Communion Wine," received by me, I call attention to a pamphlet argument of the late Abraham Coles, M. D., LL. D., of which some of the ablest critics in this country and in Europe consider unanswerable. It proves conclusively that, in the absence law interference with religious worship, so far as it concerns the use of alcoholic wine at the sacred rite, is forced the better. Spurgeon says (1871): "We have tried a few unfermented wines, and we use it with satisfaction to all our friends. I cannot think that there is any essential point in the memory of our Lord's death. We have not, as a spiritual fact, found it so in our churches. I do feel that we ought to have respect the scruples of the weak brother, to which Christian charity would be a spare, is the very essence of Christian communion.

Dr. Hussey at Trenton.

Dr. Mary D. Hussey, of Madison avenue, with Miss Philbrook, were among the ladies who went to Trenton this week to watch the passage of the school suffrage constitutional amendment through the Legislature. They were much pleased with the result as it went through both Houses with such pleasing votes. If it becomes a law it will restore to women the right to vote for school trustees in the country districts. Petitions from every county in the State were presented for it.

From Store Rooms to Flats.

Pearson & Gayle, the carpenters and builders, are now transforming the upper part of the building on the corner of Park avenue and Second street, formerly occupied by G. Q. Packer, into flats. They are removing a portion of the front to allow for an entrance and stairs to the upper floors. The building is owned by Messrs. C. A. Marsh and W. L. Stillman. Marsh, Ayers & Co., will have the store for their wall paper and paint business.

At Work Again.

Contractor Washburn has resumed work on the sewage disposal beds and will push the work along as fast as possible to complete the remaining beds.

AMATEUR SINGERS.

They Should Attempt Ambitious Feats in Public with Caution.

The average American to-day knows more of music than he did 20 years ago and only those who have worked for years under the guidance of the best masters feel like playing for others not within the innermost circle of admiring friends. But, still the case seems to be quite reversed in singing. How often have we made one of a band of unhappy but smiling victims, forced to listen to some otherwise charming girl, who, after perhaps not more than one essaya, tries to entertain a room full of company, totally unconscious of her cruelty! A partially trained voice is at times most beautiful, but is lamentably at the mercy of circumstances. A slight cold; a close room; a little nervousness—what horrible visions of failure they conjure up! But look at the experienced artist. He is also mortal, but he has learned to cover up little defects; knows just what he can and will not do, and so makes himself master of the situation.

Singing should be perfectly natural, but we are constantly straining after effect, and striving to make unattained voices perform feats which only years can accomplish. Some little unpretentious ballad in our mother tongue sung to friends who enjoy it for the singer will and as well as the song's, may give ever so much pleasure; but a German, French or Italian master skill that the music alone brings unless rendered with such consummate skill that the music alone brings out the true beauty of the song might much better be played on a violin. By all means study the works of the masters, but do not try to interpret them for others until you can handle your voice as well. Another thing to keep in mind that a good voice and a correct ear are not the only necessary attributes of the successful singer. Schumann says: "The most important thing for a musician is to cultivate his inner sense"—a rather unfortunate thing which compels others to feel what you feel. The artist must have it, or who will buy his bits of canvas and patches of color? The writer must have a message to give through his effusions? The speaker must have it, or his audience will be gathering the fleecy coats from the occupants of far distant pastures instead of his gems of thought. The pianist must have it, or his music is simply a series of exercises to conversation. Alas, then, for the singer who has it not! He may as well use a speaking trumpet to address his hearers or turn the crank of a phonograph. When you tingle all over with the feeling of the songs you are moved by it, lifted out of yourself—then, and not until then, are you singing. If you are only making certain sounds according to the directions of your singing master, you are doing your neighbor harm.

Many people have this real musical gift, but it is latent and waits to be developed; therefore, my plea is for more cultivation among amateur singers. Why should you not work as industriously at your music as at your play? If people will listen to your voice uncultivated, why should you stop there and never develop the grander possibilities within reach?—The Outlook.

THE FAMILY BATHROOM.

An Indispensable Adjunct to a Well-Ordered Household.

It is one of the most surprising things in the world why people who have the ordinary comforts of life should build houses without bathrooms.

The farmer needs a bath much more than his city neighbors, and could have it at a small cost. A bathtub is not expensive, and with a good force-pump and a barrel or two as head water, can be arranged without the aid of plumbers. If the house is already built and there is no room for the bathtub, it might be put into the kitchen, or even into the family living room. A heavy curtain or a strong screen could conceal it, and when not in use could be covered over and put over it, and it would be quite out of the way. But a little ingenuity and work will fix it in fine running order in any ordinary dwelling.

There are houses where there is a range, with hot and cold water, but no bathtub. This is an omission that should not be tolerated. A small tank, with force-pump and drainage, can be supplied for a very little money, and it has been proved that money to keep this without freezing, it is time some measures were taken to insure anti-freezing conditions.

A well-equipped bath-room, with closet, can be arranged in any dwelling where there is even a tolerable supply of water. The kitchen sink can drain through the pipes, the water from the weekly wash will clear them out, and if there is proper ventilation and a suitable outlet there will be nothing unsanitary in the outfit.

Of course, the more water the better, but as every house is, or should be, supplied with a never-failing well, the means of keeping the pumping be very well used in this direction. By all means have the health, comfort and safety of the family provided for by proper and sanitary bathroom and closet arrangements.—N. Y. Ledger.

He Got an Answer.

For grave speeches of importance delivered with weight, Bismarck was, of course, most celebrated. When annoyed he nearly always adopted a jesting tone, which must have sounded to his frightened friends much as if the tiger in the menagerie had greeted them with a cordial handshake before devouring. "Do you mean to break the convention of Gastein?" bluntly demanded the Austrian ambassador. Count Kurolyi, of the Prussian minister-president. "No," replied the latter, with great directness, "but even if I did so, do you think I should be such a fool as to tell you?"—Detroit Free Press.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

The Governor has signed the bill prohibiting trolley companies from carrying freight.

In its general working features the Raines excise law in New York, over which there is such a howl of protest by the big cities, is no more severe than the excise law which governs Plainfield.

D. A. Peil, who was recently appointed by Governor Griggs keeper of the State prison, is still in doubt whether or not to accept the position. He did not know of the intention of the Governor to appoint him.

The Democrats in Elizabeth seem to be in a quandary for a Mayoralty nomination, and it seems likely that if some one does not come to the front very soon, Mayor Rankin will have the field for re-election all to himself.

A correspondent in another column of today's Press suggests the name Watchung for the consolidated city and borough. Plainfield is good enough, and Plainfield it will remain even when the "greater" is accomplished.

It is a conceded fact that the major portion of church work is done by women, and it seems, therefore, that the reject ment, by the conference at Newark, of the proposition to permit women delegates at the General Conference, is a bit of heresy on the part of the men.

Assemblyman Reed, of Somerset county, has proved himself one of the best qualified legislators in this State. Since Senator Thompson has retired from active politics and has accepted a position as clerk of the court of chancery, the Republicans of Somerset county could not do better than to elect Mr. Reed to the Senate.—Elizabeth Journal.

Rev. Dr. John L. Scudder, pastor of the Jersey City Tabernacle, in a prelude to his sermon last night about lobbyists, said: "A prominent Assemblyman of this county once frankly informed me that he sold his vote, as a matter of course, but, nevertheless, protested that he was an honest man and surpassed his associates in the Legislature, inasmuch as he sold his vote for a fair, honest price, whereas the rest of them charged outrageously high."

The Newark Advertiser, one of the leading Republican papers in New Jersey, has the following to say about the third house at Trenton:

> An indignant correspondent complains elsewhere of the lobby which flourishes at Trenton. His criticism is well founded, for the New Jersey lobby is as offensive a crowd of self-seekers and wood-sawyers as it would be possible to find anywhere. It is unblushing, voracious, very hungry, very thirsty, starts in late and gets up early, works week days, holidays and Sundays, has a nerve as strong as an ostrich's powers of digestion, is as devoid of the sense of right and wrong as an ourang-outang, refuses to be rebuked or bullied and pretends to earn everything it gets at Trenton from the railroad station to the State House. Modesty does not appear in the vocabulary of the Trenton lobbyist. He is on familiar terms with everyone, calls the Governor John, tells the Chief of Departments how to run things, and orders, or tries to order, Senators and Assemblymen around as if the legislator were his little brother.

This is certainly rich! On Friday last The Daily Press published the announcement of the death of Tom Jones, the Central baggage master, and spoke a few words of eulogy of his character and disposition. The next day the Elizabeth Journal copied what the Press said about Mr. Jones, but failed to give the proper credit. Yesterday, three days after the death of Mr. Jones and the exclusive announcement in the Press, the News appeared on the scene, and with its usual "enterprise" printed the same matter, word for word, that The Press published as original last Friday, and which the Elizabeth Journal had clipped the next day.

It would be wrong and unlawful for the Superintendent of Immigration at this port to discriminate against, or to discriminate in favor of the immigrants who come here from any particular country of Europe, or who belongs to any particular race of mankind. It would be wrong for him to deal less favorably with the immigrants from Italy than with those from any other, or any other, European country. Comparatively few of the Italians who land at Ellis Island are learned persons, but nearly all of them are healthy, muscular and sensible, possessed of a fair measure of discernment, and exceeding anxious to procure work of any kind. Among the immigrants who reach Ellis Island daily, there are some who are more learned than the Italians, yet who are far less desirable additions to the population of our country. The law does not permit the Superintendent to open the gates more widely to foreigners of one race than to those of any other race, or to make any discrimination, one way or the other, in case of immigrants from Sweden, Italy, Germany, Ireland or Russia.—New York Sun.

The following editorial is from the pen of ex School Commissioner John W. Slauson, of Middletown, N. Y., who was intimately associated with Mr. Baxter in educational work. He is now editor and proprietor of the Middletown Daily Press:

> We are glad to note that the name of our old friend, Charles J. Baxter, was sent to the New Jersey Senate Tuesday morning by Gov. Griggs for the important office of Superintendent of Public Instruction. No doubt New Jersey has many excellent men for this position, but the Governor could not have found a better one than Mr. Baxter. He is a born school man, and with his technical knowledge of the science of teaching, he combines administrative and executive ability of a high order. Mr. Baxter taught the school at Otisville in this county for several years, and was always foremost in all teachers' work and organization for the improvement of teachers and the advancement of the profession. For several years past he has had a lucrative and responsible position with the Provident Life and Trust Insurance Co., of Philadelphia, with his home at Plainfield. We congratulate Mr. Baxter upon his appointment and Gov. Griggs upon the wisdom of his selection.

Next to a Union county man being appointed to a good position, there is nothing more pleasing to a Plainfielder than to have a Somerset county man experience equally as good luck. The Press therefore extends congratulations to Senator L. A. Thompson over his appointment to the Chancery clerkship. Mr. Thompson was born in Somerset county in 1845, taught school for five years, and then opened a millinery and fancy goods store, in which business he has since continued. He has been Sheriff of Somerset county and President of the Board of Commissioners of Somerville. In the Senate he has been chairman of the committees on Corporations, Unfinished Business and State Prison. The salary of his new office is $6,000 a year, and the term is five years.

There seems to be a lack of approval by the State press on Governor Griggs' appointment of Charles J. Baxter as State Superintendent of the Public Schools because of the apprehension that he has had no experience in educational work. True, Mr. Baxter's business for a few years past has been in the insurance line, but previous to this he was a successful educator, and engaged in the very work over which he will exercise general supervision in his new position. As was shown in yesterday's Daily Press, the schools which Mr. Baxter superintended were rapidly brought to the front rank of the public school system, and his students competed successfully with those from recognized high class institutions. Since he retired from active school work, he has been in close touch with the progressive element of the public school system, and among his acquaintances there is no feeling other than that he will make a successful and satisfactory official for the State.

Holy Week Services.

The following are the Holy Week services at All Saints church at Scotch Plains, of which Rev. Edward H. True is rector:

Wednesday, April 1st, 8 p. m., litany service and lecture on the "Betrayal of Jesus."

Thursday, April 2d, 11 a. m., full morning service. Holy Communion and sermon.

Good Friday, April 3d, 11 a. m., full morning service and sermon; 3 p. m., evening prayer; 8 p. m., special service and sermon on "Paradise."

Easter eve, Saturday, April 4th, 4 p. m., evening prayer and baptism.

Easter Day, April 5th, 9:30 a. m., early celebration of Holy Communion; 10:45 a. m., morning prayer, Holy Communion and sermon; 3 p. m., full choral evening prayer; 7:30 p. m., Easter festival of the Sunday-school. The offertory at all services will be for the extinguishment of the mortgage debt of the parish.

Easter Monday, April 6th, 7 p. m., evening prayer; 8 p. m., election of wardens and vestrymen. Polls open for one hour.

The newly-organized choir, under the direction of Mrs. Buckley, the organist, will give a special musical service on Easter morning and the young ladies of the parish hope to surpass their previous decorations of the church with flowers and plants. The congregations of the church have increased largely during the year, and all the members of the parish are working harmoniously and enthusiastically for the success of the good work committed to their charge.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

TO BETTER THE STREETS.

COUNCILMANIC COMMITTEE MEET AND DISCUSS MATTERS.

A Proposition Made That Property Owners be Assessed by Some Method for the Improvements of the City Streets.

C. J. Fisk, Ralph I. Tolles and Geo. H. Frost, the Councilmanic Street Committee, held a meeting last Monday and discussed plans for work on the streets this year. One thing proposed was to lay a direct sewer pipe from Park avenue railroad bridge through Park avenue to Greenbrook to carry off the surplus water in heavy rains, and also to place a catch basin at the corner of Park avenue and Second street. This will be done if the committee can so arrange the appropriation to that end.

Owing to the fact that the amount for street purposes this year is only $15,000, the committee do not feel that much can be done on the streets outside of repairing them where the sewer pipes have been laid. The members thought it would be advisable, at an early date, to introduce a plan of assessment on each property owner, so that all of the streets could be put in first class condition. One of the members expressed the idea that $1 0,000 would be necessary for street improvements.

A. C. Stebbins, W. A. Westphal and C. J. Fisk, the Fire Committee from the Council, also met last evening and talked over in an informal manner plans for the department for 1896. The amount to be asked for at the Council meeting next Monday evening was decided upon, and other matters of importance received due consideration.

McKINLEY THEIR CHOICE.

New Jersey Republicans for the Ohio Candidate.

Since the adjournment of the Legislature there has been an increase of interest in the Republican State and Congress district conventions to elect delegates to the St. Louis Convention, says the Sun. The First, Second, and Fifth district conventions will meet in Trenton on April 28th, the day of the State Convention. The Fourth district convention probably will be called for the same date and place. Some of the political leaders express a belief that the holding of district conventions outside the districts may result in contests in the National Convention. The call issued by the State Committee says that district conventions must be held in the same manner as conventions to nominate members of Congress, which are held within the districts.

There will be a hot fight over the election of three district delegates from Essex county, Newark and East Orange compose the Sixth Congress district, while the rest of the county, with Union county, and the city of Bayonne, in Hudson county, make up the Eighth Congress district. One of the delegates from the Eighth has been assigned to Essex county, and William Riker, Halsey M. Barrett and Andrew W. Bray, representing rival factions, are candidates. Riker will receive the aid of the regular party workers and probably will be successful. Frank Bergen of Elizabeth, will be chosen from Union county to represent the sister district. The candidates are Charles Bradley, Elisha B. Gaddis, Frank Parker, all of Newark, and George E. Halsey, Henry L. Potter, Joseph L. Munn, J. Frank Fort and Joel W. Hall, of East Orange.

The Essex county leaders believe that Charles Bradley and Mr. Fort will be successful, but the Republicans known as the "Herold faction" are preparing for a hard fight and express confidence in their ability to break any slate made by the regular Republican organization.

The sentiment among the voters is decidedly in favor of McKinley as the Presidential candidate, and this is largely shared by the leaders, several of whom express fear that the McKinley sentiment is so strong that it will be difficult to prevent some of the district conventions instructing in favor of the Ohio man. Some of the leaders can remember that a New Jersey State Republican Convention ever has instructed its delegates, and any attempt to so this year will be opposed.

The leaders are giving considerable attention to the boom of Garrett A. Hobart for second place on the ticket, and predict that with McKinley and Hobart as the candidates Democratic New Jersey would give between 30,000 and 40,000 majority for the ticket. His friends say that because of his prominence as Vice-Chairman of the National Committee and his strong protection and sound money views Mr. Hobart would show equal strength in other states. Mr. Hobart will not admit that he is a candidate for second place.

Some of Mr. Hobart's friends believe that he would not be willing to accept the nomination, as it would take him out of the race for United States Senator in 1899, when Senator Smith's term will expire. Others who are close to Mr. Hobart believe he will prefer eight years as Vice-President to six as Senator, as they believe that he would be almost certain of re-election.

do you eat iron

Some persons are always taking iron. If weak and easily exhausted; pale and without appetite; if the nervous system is weak, and sleep difficult, what do you take? Iron? But iron cannot supply food to the tissues; nor does it have any power to change the activity of unhealthy organs and bring them back to health. Cod-liver oil is what you need. The oil feeds the poorly-nourished tissues, and makes rich blood. Iodine, bromine, and other ingredients, which form part of the oil, have special power to alter unhealthy action.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is the most palatable way to take cod-liver oil. The hypophosphites supply healthy nerve action, which controls all the processes of life.

SCOTT'S EMULSION has been indorsed by the medical profession for twenty years. (A 12 year's doctor.) This is because it is always palatable—always uniform—always contains the purest Norwegian Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites.

Eggs and Egg-Eating.

After all that has been said of the real worth and great value of bone for chicks and poultry, I want to add my testimony in favor of its use. I shall only try to give some of the established facts obtained by experience. Fresh bone, meat and gristle when fed to your poultry will often double the number of eggs. Fresh bones will increase the vigor of the whole flock, they will also make the eggs more fertile. It has been proven by some of the foremost poultrymen that fresh bones cut and given to poultry will stop egg-eating because it satisfies the craving of the flock for blood and fresh lean meat, both of which are supplied by fresh bone. One average analysis of these bones showed by actual weight thirteen ounces of lean meat, gristle and fat in every pound of bones obtained that morning at one of the markets. This meat, cartilage, etc., when cut up in small pieces and fed in a raw state to hens gives them fresh, rich animal food. Another reason for their use is, that the bones are easily obtained and are very cheap, and when cut by a good machine you will find no other food that your flock likes as well. You can convince any one doubting this last statement by placing all your different kinds of food along with this cut bone and meat, and opening the doors of the pens.

One trial will be sufficient to convince the most skeptical. The raw bone and meat is devoured at once, and although one ounce per hen for each day may be considered sufficient, many give their flocks more than this and no disastrous results follow. We firmly believe no one having properly used green bone food has or intends to discontinue its use. This may partially explain the fact that there are a larger number of poultry yards through the country than formerly. This improvement in feeding makes the poultry business more lucrative. Would it not be well for all those interested in poultry raising to give close attention to the most important methods of feeding their flocks, and in this way make a complete success of the business?—A Reader of the Ploughman.

ANOTHER SUCKER DUPED

A WISCONSIN FARMER FOOLED ON THE GREEN GOODS GAME.

Visited Bound Brook With Confidence Men and Gave Them $1,000 in Good Money for a Lot of Tinted Paper.

Bound Brook has again been selected by the green goods men as the base of their operations. Owing to the many fast trains on the three railroad lines that pass through it they can easily escape after the usual confidential transaction is made.

This time the victim is a Milwaukee farmer, and the confidence men hail from New York city. Six weeks ago B. D. Y. Andrews, who says he lives on a farm near Milwaukee, Wis., received a letter from a green goods man in the metropolis quoting counterfeit money at the rate of $13,000 for $1,000 in Treasury notes. Andrews had just fallen heir to $1 900, and he proved an easy victim. With $1,000 to purchase the counterfeit money with and $200 in Treasury notes to "mix in," Andrews could easily figure it out how a fortune could be made, and in imagination he saw himself already a capitalist.

The circular stated :—"For instructions telegraph Mr. Antis, West street, New York." Andrews wired him, "Answer, best terms." He received a reply at once that the above were the lowest possible rates. Correspondence was carried on until he decided to come to Jersey.

It was agreed that Andrews should arrive in Phillipsburg Saturday, where he was to be met by the "bunco" man.

Andrews arrived on the nine o'clock train. According to directions, he seated himself in the station. A red ribbon tied to his vest made his identity known to the swindler, who soon arrived. The two took a stroll over to Easton, where the swindler told Andrews he would show him how easy it was to pass the bills. They made several purchases, and each time the swindler handed out a $10 bill and was given legal tender in change. Andrews, presuming that the bills were genuine, became anxious and requested that the exchange take place.

"Antis" suggested that Bound Brook was a good place to make the exchange, and the two left on the 12:13 a. m. train. When they arrived at Bound Brook they were met by two men and a carriage. After an introduction and a handshaking performance the trio entered the carriage and were driven into the country. On returning to Bound Brook, and just before the 2:14 p. m. train was due, the swindlers counted out the $13,000, placed it in the usual tin box, which was locked. Andrews then handed over his cash.

The driver was told to whip up his horse and they arrived just as the train began to leave. Andrews succeeded in boarding it, and when the train had gone several miles he attempted to open the box. The key would not fit and he became suspicious.

He broke open the box and found it contained a one dollar bill and a lot of tinted paper. When the train reached Flemington Junction the man alighted and returned to Bound Brook on the 6:45 p. m. train, but failed to obtain any clue as to the whereabouts of the swindlers. He said he was afraid to inform the police, fearing arrest, and left on a late train for his home, where he will endeavor to earn what he has lost by honest toil.

S. D. DRAKE'S ENCOURAGING WORDS FOR THIS CITY'S PROGRESS.

The Noted Real Estate Man Says That The City People Are Anxious To Come Here and The Town Will Grow Rapidly.

Silas D. Drake is one of the best known real estate men in New Jersey, and is a close and shrewd observer of the value of land for residential purposes. Mr. Drake has written the following for The Press, which will be read with a great deal of interest:

"It may be of interest to the readers of your valuable paper to hear what the outlook is in the greater New York in regard to real estate. I must say I am amazed at the prospects for a boom in real estate in Union county, particularly in Plainfield. I have advertised extensively in New York and Brooklyn papers offering bargains in real estate in Union county and am in correspondence with hundreds of prospective purchasers, and very many of them ask what bargains I can offer at Plainfield, and as Plainfield was my birthplace, and knowing it to be a good thing I am 'pushing it along.' Don't get the idea that purchasers are ready and willing to pay more than property is worth, but there is a demand for bargains in real estate in your ideal town. Arrangements will soon be perfected to build trolley lines from Plainfield to Elizabeth and when this is an accomplished fact, as it will be, it will be the means of creating a veritable boom along the line. The opening up of the Mountain Park, near Johnston's drive, for New Yorkers, who can reach a summer home within one hour of New York, is attracting a great deal of attention, and I already have orders booked for a number of plots on this famous location. They are anxious to get in on the ground floor of a good investment.

"I predict that within the next two years the increase in Plainfield's population will be greater than in the past five years, and I propose taking an active part to take my prediction good."

WHAT FAITH WILL DO.

NO MATTER HOW SMALL IT WILL LEAD TO SOMETHING BETTER.

Dr. A. V. D. Raymond Preaches an Interesting and Helpful Sermon in the Crescent Avenue Church Last Night.

The many friends of Rev. Dr. Raymond, formerly pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of this city, now President of Union College, Schenectady, were glad to see his genial face in the Crescent Avenue church pulpit Sunday morning and evening. The weather being less unpleasant toward night, a large congregation gathered for the evening service, and listened to a strong and interesting sermon.

Dr. Raymond's text was John 9:35-38: "Jesus heard that they had cast him out; and when he had found him he said unto him, dost thou believe on the Son of God? He answered and said, Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him? And Jesus said unto him, Thou hast both seen him, and it is he that talketh with thee. And he said, Lord, I believe. And he worshipped him."

We all remember the story of the blind man who healed on the Sabbath, and then was turned out of the synagogue He did not know that Jesus was the Messiah, he only thought him a prophet. But when tempted to deny the miracle, the Pharasies saying that Jesus could not have healed him, for he was a sinner he would not deny the one who had restored his sight. He was true to what little knowledge he possessed. And now this interview with Jesus meant new knowledge, larger knowledge for him. The lesson for us is obvious. Larger knowledge always comes to the one who is true to what he has already. All the possibilities of Christian development are locked up in the smallest seed of faith. How much is necessary, to bring a harvest that shall feed a multitude?

A little thing that you can hold in your hand. God never displaces the day of small things. A great blaze of enthusiasm has been kindled by a single spark in one man's heart. A little faith, if it is living, is just as real as a fully developed faith. The question is not, does a man believe this or that, but does he believe anything at all, in a way to influence his whole life toward God? Out of the faith the disciples had in Jesus as a man, grew their faith in Him as the Son of God. The man in our story tonight began by believing in Him as a prophet, and ended by believing in Him as the Messiah.

There must be some real faith to start with. It need be only a germ, but the germ must be there. The trouble is not so much men's denying the doctrine of the inspiration of the Bible, as their losing faith in it as a helpful book. If a man denies the divinity of Christ, but believes that Jesus of Nazareth was the best man that ever lived, one that it would be well for all men to copy, if that man will put himself under the influence of Jesus of Nazareth, and try day by day to be like Him and to follow His teachings, the Savior will reveal His divinity to that man.

If you want to believe much, begin by believing a little with all your hearts, and you shall "grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ."

IN THEIR NEW HOME.

Organized Aid Association Has Moved Into the House Presented to Them.

The office of the Organized Aid Association has been removed to the building, 544 West Front street, recently given for the use of the Relief Association and the Organized Aid Association.

The Superintendent of the Organized Aid Association will be at her office every morning between 9:30 and 11:30. The Employment Bureau of the Organized Aid Association will have its office in the Boys Club building on North avenue until further notice. The office will be open every morning, except Thursday, from 9:30 to 11:30. The names of men and women desiring work by the day, whose references have been investigated, can be obtained at the employment office.

A GOOD TIME FOR VETS.

AND THEIR WIVES AND SONS WERE THERE ALSO TO ENJOY IT.

Several G. A. R. State Officials Make a Visit to Major Anderson Post—Addresses Made by Visitors and Comrades.

Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., gave Department Commander Henry S. White and a portion of his staff a royal reception Saturday evening in their rooms on Park avenue. This is the first time in a long while that department officers have visited Plainfield, officially, and the event was a memorable one. Post No. 109 also had as their guests about forty members of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, and a delegation from John Hand Camp, Sons of Veterans.

Commander Joseph T. Dunham, of Post No. 109, occupied the chair. He called on Rev. L. E Livermore, of Post No. 109, to take the chair for the evening.

Mr. Livermore upon assuming command spoke a few words of welcome. He extended to all a cordial greeting, and said in part: We are glad to see you here and meet you on such an occasion. As comrades, we have sustained a noble country and the best Republic on the face of the earth. We stand as free men, and discard all those things which are unworthy. If the United States today should say to Spain, hands off from Cuba, Spain could do nothing else. If she should say to England you must arbitrate, England would do it. It is not always a question of party, but the fact that it is our Republic

Department Commander H. S. White was then introduced and made a few stirring remarks. He reviewed briefly the work accomplished in the department during the past year, and remarked that all ought to feel encouraged and stand shoulder to shoulder.

Department Chaplain C. E. Hill gave a short address in which he complimented the officers and comrades for their efficient work.

At times he became humorous and his witticism was greatly enjoyed.

At this time Mrs. Asa Collier rendered a choice vocal solo accompanied by her daughter, Miss Mary Collier, on the piano. She was obliged to respond to an encore.

The speech-making was then continued and Adjutant-General H. C. Terhune was introduced. His remarks were full of wisdom and advice, and he dwelt at length upon the value of comradeship. Dr. M. S. Crane, of Newark, department medical director, followed in a vein of humor and his jokes brought forth hearty applause. He thought that after listening to all the remarks he was unable to tell whether he was a Republican, Democrat, Prohibitionist, Baptist or Methodist, and came to the conclusion he was sadly mixed. After an excellent vocal solo by Past Commander W. C. Smith, of Post 73, Major Rogers, Superintendent of the the Soldier's Home, at Kearney, Essex County, was called upon and made a few excellent remarks. Assistant Adjutant-General John Chandler, of Red Bank, and Commander I. L. McVoy, were introduced and made remarks appropaiate to the occasion.

W. R. Mattox, of Post 73, won applause for his admirable rendition of "Barbara Fretchie," and H. S. Thatcher, of the Sons of Veterans, was called upon and gave a parody on "Barbara Fretchie" that was well received. The members of Post 109 then took charge and served coffee, sandwiches, cake, bananas, oranges, and cigars. During the refreshments genuine Grand Army sociability reigned supreme. Former incidents were recalled, some with sadness and some with joy. It was nearly twelve o'clock when the visitors departed, but all agreed that they had enjoyed themselves immensely.

SERMON ON THE CANTATA

A BEAUTIFUL SERVICE IN THE FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

The Crucifixion Was Rendered in a Faultless Manner by the Choir—Dr. Johnstone Preaches on the Same Subject.

The beautiful and very religious cantata, "The Crucifixion," by Sir John Stainer, M. A., Mus Doc., was rendered in afaultless manner Sunday evening by the choir of the First Baptist church. Every seat in the large auditorium was taken and the service was especially helpful and interesting. The solo parts were grandly rendered by Miss F. May Grant, soprano; Mrs. Knight, alto; Mr. Smith, tenor, and Wm. Holmes, basso, while at different times the chorus assisted in making the rendition one of great pleasure to all. Under the direction of Organist E. J. Fitzhugh and C. W. McCutchen the sweetest harmony was produced and the general opinion was that no finer work of the kind has ever been given in this city.

Those who composed the choir were: Sopranos, Miss F. May Grant, Miss Bessie Blair, Miss Spear, Miss Petrie, Miss Swain, Mrs. Harold Serrell; Miss Allis; altos, Mrs. Knight, Miss Nancy Randolph, Miss Florence Kline; Miss Bertha Needham, Miss Grace Bonny, Miss Alice Needham; tenors, C. W. McCutchen, E. B Ryder, L. H Bigelow, Jr.. Mr. Smith; bassos, B. T. Barnes, Wm. Holmes, Geo. Snedeker, Harry Drake, Edward Kline.

After the rendition of the cantata, Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, of the Church of the Redeemer, preached a powerful sermon from the text "They Crucified Him." In part he said:

On the other side of the water in a noted place their hangs on the wall a picture representing the theme which has been so grandly rendered by the choir tonight. That scene which was enacted at Jerusalem 1900 years ago, has a lesson for us. We see Mary Magdalene. She loved much because much had been forgiven her. This theme has been painted by many hands, as the great representation of human hate. There is nothing so holy and tender as a little child. No woman or mother can stand by and see a little one suffer. Millions of men are now looking back 1900 years and they see Jesus Christ slain for us. They see Him in pain and agony. His prayer showed that He was divine. He suffered the very pains of hell. His words were full of meaning which we shall never fathom, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do." He gave words of comfort to the thief, "Today thou shalt be with me in Paradise." There is no condemnation to those that are in Christ Jesus. We should stand under the shadow of the cross. God is our friend and lover. Men, women or society never forgive, but Christ does and He has died for us. The service closed with the singing of a hymn and the benediction.

Fifteen Candidates for the Civil Service Examination Next Saturday.

The civil service examinations for postoffice clerks and carriers will be held Saturday from 1:30 to 6 o'clock, in the rooms of the Plainfield Business College. There are fifteen candidates that will take the examinations, the most to try for the positions in Plainfield since their start.

Owing to the large number to take the examinations, Postmaster Hetfield was at a loss where to hold them, but Prof. Phelps kindly offered the use of the college rooms and the offer was gratefully accepted.

In combination, proportion and process Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar to itself, and unequalled in true merit.

No other medicine ever possessed so much curative power, or reached such enormous sales, or made such wonderful cures, as Hood's Sarsaparilla.

It is undoubtedly the best medicine ever made to purify, vitalize and enrich the blood.

That is the secret of its success.

Read this statement:

"When my son was 7 years of age, he had rheumatic fever and acute rheumatism, which settled in his left hip. He was so sick that no one thought there was any help for him. Five sores broke out on his thigh, which the doctor said were sores. We had three different doctors. Pieces of bone came out of the sores. The last doctor said the leg would have to be cut out and the bone scraped, before he could get well. Howard became so low that he would eat nothing, and one doctor said there was no chance for him.

"One day, a newspaper recommending Hood's Sarsaparilla was left at our door. We decided to try this medicine. Howard commenced taking it the last of February, after having been sick for a year and a half. He hadn't taken it a week before I saw that his appetite began to improve, and he gained rapidly. I gave him five bottles, when the sores were all healed, and they never broke out again. The crutches he had used for four years were laid aside, as he had no further use for them. I give all the credit to Hood's Sarsaparilla. MRS. ADA L. MOODY, Fay Block, Lynn, Mass.

SALVATION ARMY COMMANDERS.

Arrangements for the Introduction of the Booth-Tuckers in New York.

Mrs. Booth Tucker, who, with he husband now on the Majestic on his way to this country, is to command the American Salvation Army, is rapidly recuperating.

Ballington Booth has not yet visited his sister. A prominent officer at headquarters said this morning that no appointment had been made for a meeting, but that it would probably occur to day or tomorrow.

The Salvation Army officers are making elaborate arrangements for the welcome to Commander and Mrs. Booth-Tucker at Carnegie Hall in New York on the evening of Tuesday next, when the new officers will make their first public appearances. Shortly after this meeting Commissioner Eva Booth will say farewell, as she has been ordered by Gen. Booth to return to London.

METHODIST CONGRESS.

Soon to Meet at Cleveland in Quadrennial Session.

Functions of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church—Men Who Will Be Prominent in Its Deliberations.

[Special Cincinnati (O.) Letter.]

This important ecclesiastical body will meet in Cleveland, O., May 1, 1896.

It will be composed of ministerial and lay representatives from all of the 123 annual conferences and as many lay conferences of this great denomination. There will probably be about 540 accredited members in the conference.

The 17,000 itinerant preachers are represented by one for every 45 members of an annual conference, and the 2,300,000 lay members by two lay delegates for every lay conference, except where the annual conference with which it quadrates has but one, in which case there is but one layman. In the last general conference there were 315 ministerial and 189 lay delegates. This inequality of members has caused not a little friction in some places, but it is nearly counterbalanced by the arrangement that although both orders deliberate and vote as one body they may vote separately on any question on the demand of one-third of either order; and when a separate vote is taken the concurrent vote of both orders is necessary to complete an action. Still there is considerable agitation in favor of equalizing the representation. The principal objection is that it would make the legislative body too unwieldy and that the separate vote ought to continue and even on many subjects be made mandatory.

From the organization of the church in 1784 till 1872 the general conference was composed wholly of ministers. During three-quarters of the century an agitation was kept up—chiefly by ministers—for the admission of laymen to participation in the responsibilities of the general conference, but the laity were comparatively uninterested, and even when asked to vote on the question in 1865 they refused it. But the preachers and some laymen finally succeeded in getting a change of mind, in those who voted, and in 1872 laymen were admitted to the conference. One of the problems before the next conference will be how to reconcile the objection of representation and not cause the legislative body to become a huge mass meeting.

The general conference meets once in four years and has "full power to make rules and regulations" for the church subject to six restrictions that protect: 1, the doctrines; 2, the membership of the general conference; 3, the episcopal form of government; 4, the general rules of the church; 5, the rights of trial and appeal to ministers or members, and 6, the proceeds of the book concern and chartered fund. These things cannot be changed save by three-fourths of the members of the annual conferences—ministers—and two-thirds of the general conference. Outside of these things there is really no limit, legislative, judicial or executive, to the power of the general conference. Many see the peril of this state of things and are earnestly advocating the further restriction of the power of the general conference, especially as to its passing judicially on its own legislative acts. There is a strong sentiment in the most influential quarters favorable to a new constitution, and this will be one of the most weighty and difficult problems before the next conference. It is probable they will not attempt to mature such a document, but will order arrange for the election by the annual and lay conferences of a constitutional convention.

The relation of the bishops to the church and to the general conference is peculiar. In other churches, having bishops, these officers usually have a decisive control in the government of the church. But while the fathers of Methodism in this country believed the episcopal form of government the best, they decided on having "a moderate episcopacy," one that would be subject to the elderate and charged with the distinct work of superintending. These fathers were all familiar with an [illegible] that limits each officer to [illegible] field or diocese, but they [illegible] their incumbents should be coequal in authority over the whole church, and so styled them "general superintendents," and their episcopacy they called a "general superintendency." Consequently, when a bishop in the church dies, there is no "vacancy" created, but the general conference must think it well to "strengthen the episcopacy" by electing one or more additional men to the office. Were these bishops diocesian, then the diocese would elect, but because they are general superintendents only, the general conference can elect.

Before the general conferences became in 1812 delegated bodies, the bishops, as elders—primus inter pares—were members of that body with full privileges of members, but since that time they have been simply presidents of the conference, with no right to even give a casting vote in case of an equal division. Neither are they recognized as a separate house with a veto authority. In the general conference of 1788, in New York, when the question of enrolling the names of five women who had been elected to serve as delegates came up in the organization of the conference, the bishops, as presidents, and, as they argued, responsible for the lawful procedure of the inchoate body until it became fully organized, assumed authority to withhold those names, seeing formal protest against enrolling them had been lodged with the bishops.

For this they were sharply censured by the friends of the admission of women, and at once other arrangements were made to provide for such cases in the future. There is no special danger that the Methodist episcopacy will become a hierarchy. Indeed, the jealousy against anything that even seems to look in that direction is sometimes extreme. Nevertheless, the church is full of the highest respect for its episcopacy and the vast power of the appointment of 17,000 pastors annually to the charge of nearly 28,000 local church organizations is a tremendous responsibility. There are at present 16 general superintendents, of whom Bishop Thomas Bowman is the senior, both in age and office. He was born July 15, 1817, and elected bishop in 1872.

The general conference prepares its work in a dozen large committees, composed of members from each annual conference. As there are about 125 of these, it will be seen that each committee is larger than many of the early general conferences. In addition to these, there are usually appointed a score or more special committees, to whom is sent the less easily classified business.

As there is but one house and no provision for a veto, or even for a challenge, of any act of the general conference, it follows that by a mere majority votes most important, if not even revolutionary, actions may be taken. This is admittedly one of the most serious perils of the denomination, and one that more powerfully than any other, cries out for the much-discussed new constitution.

The men who have most occupied the attention of the conferences for several quadrennia are Drs. Buckley, Neely, Kynett, Little and Leonard. The first named is the versatile and brilliant editor of the Christian Advocate, in New York city. There is considerable talk of electing him bishop, while many others ask forcibly why remove from the editorial fraternity one so eminently qualified for that position, especially seeing "editors are born, not made." Dr. Neely is probably one of the most profound students of Methodist history and polity that can be found anywhere. He is an author of distinction. In 1892 he came near being chosen corresponding secretary of the board of education. He has served with acceptability in the office of presiding elder in the city of Philadelphia, and is now successfully serving the Union church in that city as its pastor.

Dr. Kynett is the veteran father of the great board of church extension, having first formed its plans in his own Iowa, and has served as its corresponding secretary since 1867. He is also prominently connected with the national anti-saloon movement, as a member of its executive committee and chairman of the Methodist general conference permanent committee on temperance and prohibition.

Dr. Little is the president of the Garrett Biblical Institute of the Northwestern university at Evanston, Ill. He is widely known as a successful educator, and he wields a trenchant pen.

Dr. Leonard has for eight years been one of the corresponding secretaries of the missionary society. Not long before, that genius of a phrase maker, Murat Halsted, gave him abundant free advertising in the Cincinnati Commercial because he had the temerity to run for governor of Ohio on the prohibition ticket without the consent of his political opponents.

Each of these gentlemen has his admirers, who insist that the favorite should, at the first chance, be made a bishop. As they are all good men, the church would not suffer if they all were bishops. BUCKEYE.

Keep Off the Grass.

It is said the following sign is posted in a public park in England: "Notice—All persons are cautioned to keep off the grass, cattle and poultry included."

THE M. E. CONFERENCE.

Question of Permitting Women to Be Lay Delegates Will Be Decided Today.

The interesting feature of Thursday's session of the Methodist Episcopal Conference in St. Paul's church, Newark, was the balloting for delegates to the General Conference to be held in Cleveland, a few months hence. There were many candidates in the field. Rev. Dr. H. A. Buttz, President of Drew Seminary, secured 139 out of 196 votes cast on the first ballot. Four other delegates will be elected today.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society held its meeting in the afternoon. Mrs. Sarah E. Drake, of Jersey City, presided, and Rev. Dr. Louis A. Banks, of Brooklyn, delivered an address on "Some American Heathens." Reports from the presiding elders of the various districts, showed a large increase in the number of communicants, an increase in the number of churches and missions, and an increase in the finances.

The laymen held their conference in the Franklin Street church, Newark, and elected the following delegates to the General Conference: Samuel Sterling, W. H. Beach and Dr. Robert R. Doherty, of Jersey City; Dear Jeffries, of Washington, N. J.; William H. Murphy, of Newark, and Dr. H. K. Carroll, of Plainfield.

The conference decided Thursday morning to vote today at noon on the question of admitting women as lay delegates to the General Conference at Cleveland, next May. It was decided that no ballot shall be counted on any question unless cast personally. Rev. Dr. Homer Eaton reported $127,000 as the share of the Methodist Book Concerns profits in 18 5, for superannuated clergymen.

DOHLMAN'S INTELLIGENCE.

Bob Whitaker's Horse to be a Feature of the Orange Circus.

Robert Whitaker, the well-known bareback rider, whose home is in Plainfield, has charge of the ring performance of the Orange amateur circus. He will figure on the programme as "equestrian director," and will also appear in the ring as a performer. His trained horse, Dohlman, will also be one of the attractions offered.

There are a number of daring, dashing riders in the club, and they are fast learning how to do their acts under Whitaker's guidance. He declares that the amateurs pick up the art of bareback riding surprisingly fast and ventures the opinion that the ring part of the performance will be better than many given by professionals.

Dohlman, Whitaker's horse, is no common animal, although he is by no means a thoroughbred. It is doubtful if he could, if gifted with the power of speech and the ability to write prove his ancestry back further than his sire and dam, but his intelligence covers these omissions. He is a white animal, whose back, broad and firm, shows no trace of the liberally sprinkled rosin that is always put on the slippery hair of a circus horse to enable the artist to stick to his back.

Dohlman has his valet all the year round, and his own trunk, a huge affair that has in its ample space all sorts of blankets, sponges, medicines, lotions and a liberal supply of sugar, for this educated animal is very fond of sweets. He will pluck from between his master's lips a cube of sugar as cleanly and gently as ever gallant lover caressed a fair maiden. The horse is the apple of Mr. Whitaker's eye, and Mr. Whitaker is the object of Dohlman's solicitude. One of the duties of the horse's valet is to see that after each meal the teeth are carefully brushed with the special brushes made for that purpose, and after each performance he is bathed and pedicured.

TOWNSHIP SCHOOL BOARD.

The Trustees Meet and Elect Officers For the New Year.

The school trustees of North Plainfield Township met last Friday in the office of the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage company on North avenue, and organized by electing Robert Clark, Jr., president and W. H. Morris, clerk. The following committees were then appointed by the president:—Auditing, P. Voorhies, Ed. Luckhurst, Theo. Lewison; repair and supply, Frank Mobus, P. H. Acker, John Doty; teachers, first district, P. H. Acker, Frank Mobus, W. H. Morris; second district, Ed. Lackhurst, John Doty, W. H. Morris; text books, first district, Theo. Lewison, P. H. Acker, Robert Clark, Jr., second district, P. Voorhies, John Doty, Ed. Luckhurst.

After the trustees had ordered warrants drawn to pay the teachers' salaries, the meeting adjourned to meet Friday, April 24th.

Easter Week Union Services.

Union services will be held in the various churches during the coming week as follows: On Tuesday evening in the First Presbyterian church at 8 o'clock, the sermon by Rev. Robert Lowry, D. D.; Thursday evening at 8 o'clock in the First Baptist church, the sermon by Rev. M. E. Dwight; Friday evening at 7:30 in the Grace P. E. church, with addresses by different pastors.

TRIED TO KILL HIS WIFE.

CHARLES CALLAHAN FIRED FIVE SHOTS AT HER FLEEING FORM.

The Couple Quarreled Over the Way the Mid-day Meal Was Served—A Neighbor Narrowly Escaped Being Shot.

An angry husband, partially crazed with drink, tried to kill his wife by emptying the five chambers of his revolver at her fleeing form Friday afternoon. The man who thus attempted the life of his helpmeet was Charles Callahan, of 756 East Second street, just beyond Berckman street.

Early in the afternoon Patrick Donnoly, who occupies the front rooms on the lower floor of Callahan's house, heard Mr. and Mrs. Callahan quarrelling in the kitchen. The trouble continued and at about 5 o'clock the shooting occurred. Although there were a number that saw it, they hardly know how it happened. The angry couple had gone into the yard when the watchers saw Mrs. Callahan start to run toward the street and her husband rush inside the house. He returned in an instant with a revolver and fired two shots at his wife who had reached the street. After she had gone further down East Second street he called to her to come back and then fired the remaining three shots from his revolver. Mrs. Martin Kreitling, a neighbor, was passing by and saw the shooting. One of the bullets narrowly escaped striking her.

Patrick Donnoly then appeared on the scene and Callahan started for him. The sight of the smoking revolver was too much for Donnoly and he departed for the back yard and hid in one of the outhouses.

Callahan shouted to Donnolly to come back as he would not harm him, but Donnoly did not care to. Then Callahan began looking for him.

"Be gobs," said Donnoly to Sergeant Kiely and a Press reporter as he told the story of the affair, "I thought my time had come."

Callahan finally went into the house and Donnoly soon put several blocks between himself and the revolver.

Sergeant Kiely was notified of the affair by some of those that saw it and promptly arrived at the scene. He found Callahan in the house and the latter denied having a revolver. The Sergeant searched him, found the revolver, and arrested Callahan. He was immediately conveyed to the lockup.

The couple have quarreled before, usually when Callahan drank. He did not go to work yesterday afternoon as usual. The quarrel started over the midday meal and the way it was served. The affair was a great shock to Mrs. Callahan and she refused to talk about it at all when seen by a Press reporter after her husband had been arrested.

The attempt was witnessed by Eddie Duck, of Netherwood avenue, who was in the next yard and Robert and Henry Angleman, of East second street, who were across the street. Mrs. Kreitling and several men and woman at the corner of Berckman and Second streets.

City Judge DeMeza this afternoon committed Charles Callahan to the county jail for forty days in default of paying a fine of $15, and James Matthews was given 40 days for being abusive and using indecent language.

CLUB WOMEN PROTEST.

They Had No Intention of Influencing Legislation, They Say.

The members of the New Jersey State Federation of Women's clubs are much stirred up over the report sent out by some correspondent in Trenton that the proposed constitutional amendment giving to women the right to vote at school elections was instigated by the organization as a move in favor of universal suffrage.

The club women, who are not all suffragists by any means, disclaim all responsibility for the measure, and declare that at the suggestion of Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, the secretary, a vote of sympathy with the movement was passed during the recent convention in Trenton. The members declare that in taking this action they had no intention of influencing legislation.

An Admirable Arrangement.

An arrangement has been made by the employment committee of the Organized Aid Association with E. F. Holmes, whereby he agrees to give work to four or five men each week in his woodyard for one day's labor. This has been a great help to the association. In one or two cases sufficient work has been given in this way to enable families to pay house rent. More work in this way is greatly needed. The woodyard has proved a help in testing a man's disposition to work.

Railroad Signal Company Incorporated

The Standard Railroad Signal Company, whose plant is to be located in Rahway, filed articles of incorporation yesterday morning with the Clerk of Union county. The incorporators are Hilda Johnson, Dr. J. M. Randolph and W. B. Wells, all of Rahway. The company will manufacture and fix mechanical and electrical interlocking block signaling and safety appliances for railroads. The company's capital is $300,000.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

LITTLE CHILDREN IN A CANTATA.

Pleasing Juvenile Entertainment Given at Trinity Reformed Church.

There was not a vacant seat in the lecture room of the Trinity Reformed church on Friday and many of those who came to see the entertainment given by the Junior Society of Christian Endeavor of the church had to stand up. The programme opened with a piano solo by Miss Lucy Coriell, after which came the cantata "The Floral Rainbow" given by thirty-five little misses of the society. They were:

Rose—Grace Emmons, Clara Martin, Lydia Wyman, Martha Anthony, and Lizzie Denckla.

Tulip—Anna Hazell, Mary Jones, Belle De-Mott, and Hattie Vanderhoef.

Dandelion—Gertrude Tier, Anna Randall, Pauline Buckley, Mary Woolston and Clyde Slater.

Snowball—Emma Line, Bessie Ten Eyck, Grace Ten Eyck, Hattie Bodine, and Cora Hand.

Corn Flower—Bessie Martin, Louisa Ebel, and Lillian Terhune.

Morning Glory—Lucy Coriell, Dora Wilson, May Anthony, Maizy Gray and Lulu Vail.

Violet—Violet VanWinkle, Blanche Randall, Mary Hazell, Anna Holder, Hazell Martin and Etta Trombley.

The girls wore different colored draperies of tissue paper over their gowns. The Roses were red, the Tulips red and yellow, the Dandelions yellow, the Snowballs green, the Cornflowers blue, the Morning Glory blue and purple, and the Violets purple. The girls representing each different flower came out on the platform, and in song and recitation, told about their flower and what it was the prettiest. The cantata closed with a chorus by all the flowers, and the combination of the different colors, as they stood in line, made a very pretty rainbow.

The second part of the programme was as follows: Singing, "Tolling for Jesus;" prayer, Bessie Randall; recitation, "Temple Builders," by Luther Shephard; autoharp solo by Bessie Ten Eyck; dialogue by ten Juniors, entitled "What can I do for Jesus," followed by singing, "Savior bless the little children;" recitation, "A plea for the Indian," by Martin Anthony; singing, "Send the Light," duett and chorus; dime dialogue by Fred Dunavan and David Wikoff; collection; singing, "Our Junior Band."

Over $20 was received and it will be given in furtherance of the work of Indian Evangelist Wright, who is well-known in this city. In the dialogue by the ten Juniors, little Cornelius Schenck, Jr., made his maiden speech.

The affair was gotten up by Mrs. Cornelius Schenck and Miss Olive Wikoff, who worked hard for its success and they deserve great credit for the excellent manner in which the programme was carried out. Mrs. G. W. Saums acted as accompanist.

The City of Watchung.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Seven strong reasons are here given showing the advantages of consolidation. The new city to be named "Watchung" and forming part of Somerset county: 1, One school system; 2, one fire department; 3, one police department; 4, one street department; 5, one sewage system; 6, one city government; 7, lower taxes, harmony of interests and the abolition of two governments for the same town. Let those who oppose this progressive reform publicly state their objections so that the community may form a correct opinion of the merits of the various propositions.

Anti-Mosaback.

A KNAVE CONVICTED.

Counterfeiting Carter's Little Liver Pills a Serious Offence.

Eight months in the penitentiary was the sentence imposed by Judge Pitzgerald in New York the other day upon William Remington, alias Scott, for manufacturing and selling spurious "Carter's Little Liver Pills." Since last June the Carter Medicine Company has been engaged in running down a lot of people who were selling counterfeit Carter's Pills Several of these cases have been tried and one druggist named Thomas B. Hughes, No. 281 Tenth avenue, was convicted and sent to the penitentiary.

Everyone handling the spurious goods named William Remington as the person from whom they made the purchase. Remington was accordingly arrest and plead guilty with the above result.

Our Indians.

"Our Indians" is the title of a strong article by Hon. Hoke Smith, Secretary of the Interior, published in The Youth's Companion of March 26th. Perhaps there is no national theme which arouses more quickly the sympathies of all fair-minded Americans. The Indian who once had complete liberty to hunt and occupy this fair land has found the United States Government a master whom he cannot understand. Secretary Smith gives much valuable information about the present condition and prospects of the Indians, their increasing numbers, their education, and indicates the position of the present national administration toward them.

Plainfield's Good Example.

Plainfield says her citizens must shovel snow, settle with silver or see the Sheriff. They have their choice. Rather rigid regulation, perhaps, but evidently efficacious. Several days ago the Street Commissioner filed complaints against twenty-five different people for not cleaning off their sidewalks. There are many folks in town, no doubt, who, having felt the pain and mortification of equilibrium gymnastics on slippery sidewalks, have heartily wished the same thing was in force in New Brunswick.—New Brunswick Home News.

Mr. Baxter Sworn In.

Charles J. Baxter was sworn in as State Superintendent of Schools Thursday at Trenton by Associate Justice of the Supreme Court William E. Gummere. It was at first thought that Mr. Baxter was appointed to fill out the unexpired term of Mr. Poland, but Thursday he was informed that it was for a full term of three years. Mr. Baxter will continue to reside in this city, going back and forth to his duties at Trenton, where he has an office in the State House.

Schlatter, the Healer.

The remarkable cures of this western wonder have found their equal in those performed by one Newell, of New England, whose magic touch is daily bringing relief to scores of sufferers. Neither of these great healers, however, made any pretensions to curing blindness, the best protection from which is in prevention. To insure this protection every precaution should be taken, the first of which is an examination of the eyes; such examinations and expert optical advice are free to you at Collier's, 103 Park avenue.

A TRUMP CARD PLAYED IN THE MOONLIGHT.

THE STREET RAILWAY OFFICIALS MAKE THE FIFTH STREET EXTENSION DURING THE NIGHT.

To Avoid the Possibility of Injunctions Being Served on Them, the Work is Started When the Supreme Court Has Adjourned, and No Proceedings Could Be Commenced to Thwart the Construction of the Road Over Contested Ground- Material and Men Were in Readiness as Soon as the City and Railway Officials Signed the Contracts, and the Ink Had Hardly Dried When the Picks Struck In—The Work Watched By a Crowd of Citizens.

From The Press of March 28th.

The "man in the moon" saw a strange sight in Plainfield last night. An army of laborers quietly invaded the town and marched in a long silent procession to East Fifth street. Trucks carried tools and strange apparatus to the same place. Soon East Fifth street, between Washington street and Watchung avenue, was illuminated by immense kerosene torches and the workmen had strung along the centre of of the street. All was activity, men were running about, lanterns were waved and picks and shovels were flying, but still the unwonted silence continued, broken only by the rattle of the tools on the stones of the roadbed, the creaking and rumbling of the moving trucks and the hoarse roar of the torches. The bright moon made the scene almost as light as day, while the brilliant flame from the torches cast a still brighter glow on the street and surrounding houses.

To the peaceful citizens and their families returning home, the sight was indeed a strange and mysterious one. But a few words explained the entire situation.

It was a new trolley road in process of construction and it was started as soon as the Common Council gave the required permission and before an injunction could be secured by any of the objecting property owners.

The Common Council met last night and approved of the plan of construction for the extensions of the street railway and the bonds for $20,000 which were filed on March 16th in the City Clerk's office by the Plainfield Street Railway Company. Then they adjourned. That was all that was needed, however, to allow the work to be started at once. Lemuel W. Serrell is the contractor in charge of the construction. He realized the fact that after the permission had been granted, there were several residents on East Fifth street who intended to secure an injunction to stop the work.

That would mean a delay of several months which was not to be thought of. So Mr. Serrell decided to begin work the moment the plans had been approved and the contract complete and rush it through at night before the opposers of the scheme could secure an injunction. Preparations have been quietly going on for several weeks. The rails, ties and poles and other material arrived ten days ago and part was distributed along the Dunellen and the West Fourth street extensions, but the residents of East Fifth street were not given the slightest hint that work was soon to commence. Tools, bolts and the other necessary adjuncts were stored in the vacant store on West Second street, next to Terrill & Cole's undertaking establishment. Local truckmen were sworn to secrecy and told to be on hand last night. The plan of the contractors was kept very still and very few people knew that anything unusual was going to happen.

In addition to Contractor Serrell's own experienced gang of workmen, about 100 Italians from New York and Jersey City were imported to do the digging and hardest manual work. These Italians were employed through Frank Wilson, of this city, who furnishes a large number of such laborers to contractors on big jobs. The men came out from New York at 8 o'clock, and were marched from the North avenue station to East and West Second streets, near Park avenue, where they were huddled together until the time came for them to start for the scene of work. The men were frequently cautioned to be quiet, and scarcely a word was spoken above a whisper.

Contractor Serrell attended the Council meeting, immaculately dressed, and his demeanor gave no evidence that he was soon to startle Plainfield by turning night into day. He engineered the consummation of the deal between the city and the street railway through the Council and then started for East Fifth street. Engineer Gavett and his staff of assistants were already there running the line for the new railroad and staking it out and locating the trolley wire posts. The hustling contractor then returned to his home to don sweater and golf cap when he returned to the scene of operations where he remained all night.

At 10 o'clock the trucks began to unload the material and the vanguard of the army of workmen arrived. All was activity; seven large kerosene torches, of 4,000 candle power each, were placed along the side of the street to illuminate the scene. A crowd of interested spectators gathered along the sidewalk to watch the proceedings. The strangeness of the scene, together with the unusual quietness of the workmen, seemed to awe the on-lookers and everybody spoke in a whisper.

It was known that opposition was feared from a few of the residents and the interest centered about the houses of the opponents of the trolley. The knowing ones, however saw how nicely Contractor Serrell had outwitted them, for it was a case of "heads I win, tails you lose" in favor of the trolley.

No personal opposition would be allowed by the police, now that the franchise had been granted, and the only way left was through the courts which were unaccessible at night.

William H. Sampson, of 229 East Fifth street, was the first of the residents to appear on the scene and protest. He declared it to be entirely wrong and asked why it was that the company should be afraid to work in the daytime and so try to construct the line at night on the sly. He watched the operations for sometime and evidently came to the opinion that Contractor Serrell held the highest card, for he soon retired to his house and, after a time, the lights were extinguished there.

Most of the residents in the neighborhood were just retiring when the unusual light and large number of passing wagons attracted their attention. At East Fifth street, from Richmond street to Watchung avenue, was aroused. Curtains were pushed to one side and faces appeared at the windows. Then front doors softly opened and the investigators took a nearer look at the disturbers of their evening's rest and quiet. The house that was watched the most by the visitors was No. 220, where H. H. Baker and Charles G. Crawford reside. They were known to be especially prominent in opposing the trolley line and had retained Assemblyman C. A. Reed as their lawyer in the fight which they promised to take to the courts. At last the patience of the watchers was rewarded and Mr. Baker was visible at an upper window gazing on the busy scene below.

After a time he appeared at the door and came out to learn more of the invasion of his peaceful neighborhood. One of the trolley poles happened to come directly in front of his house. He immediately said that it must not be put there. The workmen had received their orders and paid no attention to the protestations of the old man. Seeing the impossibility of stopping the work, Mr. Baker retired from the field and the pole was placed in position. Quite a crowd gathered around as he conversed with one of his neighbors on the situation. The neighbor was in favor of the trolley, however. Mr. Adelman, the superintendnnt of the street railroad, Mr. Baker remarked that as long as work had been begun he had nothing to say, after which he returned to his house to dream of trolleys, contractors and injunctions.

The only other objection came from the home of Mrs. A. A. Chandor, 330 East Fifth street, where she and family were highly indignant when they learned that the trolley was going through. They declared that a trolley pole should never be placed in front of their home, and there was not, as it missed it by about four feet.

Some property owners were jubilant over the appearance of the road and were especially pleased at the way in which the injunction was to be prevented. Other residents looked on it as a necessary evil, and one woman said to a Press reporter "I don't want it, but I suppose we have got to have it and so there isn't any use of fighting." She then retired to her domicile and left the trolley in full sway. Contractor Serrell was pleased with the result of his coup, and told a Press reporter something of his plans for the future. The track and wires would, he said, be completed on East Fifth street, between Watchung avenue and Franklin place, as soon as possible. He hoped that that part would be ready by the next morning, but as the men were new it might take longer. This was the only place along the route where he expected opposition, as property owners generally are much pleased.

If the weather continues good, he said, the work will be pushed right along as rapidly as possible, and they expect to have everything completed by the first of June. He did not anticipate any trouble with Mr. Baker or Mr. Crawford, as he said they would rather have the work completed than stopped with the street in its present condition.

The ground was broken at twelve minutes past 10 o'clock and from that time up to the time of going to press the workmen kept at work with only short intervals of rest. The poles from Watchung avenue to Franklin place were all placed in position during the night and the ties and rails placed in position as far as Washington street. This morning the rails were bolted together and spiked to the ties.

The large crowd that witnessed the beginning of the work remained until about eleven o'clock. Almost all of the Councilmen were there while a number of other prominent citizens were to be seen in the crowd that silently watched the preparations. Assemblyman Reed did not visit his clients nor the scene of action, although he knew what had been begun. He said nothing could be done last night. Some of the watchers remained until after midnight, waiting to see, if possible, the first spike driven.

To a Press reporter this afternoon Supt. Yarnell said "We are greatly disappointed in the quality of the workmen. They are very poor. We will merely finish up the one block today and start with an entire new gang of men on Monday."

At noon, the road had been completed on East Fifth street from Watchung avenue to Washington street, but the ties and rails had not been covered.

The superintendent of the construction is V. H. Yarnell, who has been employed by Mr. Serrell before and is well and favorably known among the people of Plainfield.

The first real excitement caused by any objecting propery owner was occasioned this morning at an early hour when the workmen who were putting up the trolley poles arrived in front of one of the houses owned by Emil Messerschmidt, of Jackson avenue, and occupied by Mrs. Bookaw. Mr. Messerschmidt did not object to the tracks being laid in front of his property, but he did protest against a pole being set in front of the house.

The workmen, however, paid no attention to his son William, who was there to look after the interests of his father, and went ahead and excavated the post hole.

Finding no one who would respect his wishes, he resorted to the act of placing his body in the hole, where he remained for fifteen or twenty minutes and carried on a council of war with the official in charge. The matter was finally compromised by the pole being located on the dividing line between the two lots, thus obviating what Mr. Messerschmidt considered would be a detriment to his property.

RIGHTS OF A DRIVER.

Judge Lippincott Makes a Rule About Travel on Trolley Tracks.

Judge Lippincott filed an opinion Tuesday in the Supreme Court in the suit of Edmund W. Reeves against the Consolidated Traction Company. Reeves secured a judgment in Hudson county, for damages resulting from a collision between a traction car and his horse and wagon, for the value on the horse, wagon and harness. The traction company brought the case to the Supreme Court on certiorari.

The Supreme Court decision affirms the judgment of the Common Pleas Court. In the opinion of Judge Lippincott, the following rule in regard to contributory negligence is laid down:

"A person traveling with a horse and a vehicle on a street traversed by electric trolley cars has the right to make use of the tracks upon which such cars are propelled whenever the necessary and customary use of the street requires or permits him to do so; and it is not, perse, contributory negligence for him to turn off from one track into and upon the other track in a street in which double sets of tracks are laid, to allow a car to pass, if while not doing or whilst he is endeavoring to turn back again, he is struck by a car running upon the other track. The fact that he turns to the left to allow the car to pass is not of itself contributory negligence."

Cheap Excursions to the West and Northwest.

On March 10 and April 7, 1896, the Northwestern Line (Chicago & Northwestern R'y) will sell home seekers' excursion tickets at very low rates to a large number of points in Northern Wisconsin, Michigan, Northwestern Iowa, Western Minnesota, Nebraska, North Dakota and South Dakota, including the famous Black Hills district. For full information apply to ticket agents of connecting lines or address H. A. Gross, G. E. P. A., 423 Broadway, N. Y., or T. P. Valle, S. E. P. Almost 200 Sewer Connections.

Supervising Engineer A. J. Gavett reports that nearly 200 connections have been made to the sewers. This, he says, is unprecidented, and cites a town of similar size where the sewers have been in operation one year and only has that number of connections.

A SOCIETY THAT WORKS.

TWENTY-THIRD ANNIVERSARY OF A FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The Reports of the Officers Showed That Much Had Been Accomplished During the Year—A Talk on Japan Missions.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the First Baptist church, celebrated its twenty-third anniversary Thursday afternoon in the church in a very appropriate manner. The president, Miss Linda Butler, was in the chair. Mrs. Wyckoff, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, offered prayer, after which Mrs. B. J. Shreve presented her annual report as secretary. It was a very excellent review of the past year's work and showed that the society had accomplished considerable in mission work. Mrs. Alex. Gilbert, treasurer, read her report, showing that $660.61 had been received during the year. This amount does not include everything for some money has not yet been reported. For the Gold Dust Band Miss Gilbert reported. This society of little ones have raised $30.48 during the year. Mrs. W. O. Chapman presented a report for the Young Ladies Missionary Society. Her report showed a balance of about $160 in the treasury. There was reported about $125 as the profits of the recent "Festival of Holidays." In all there has been raised over $800, which is very encouraging to the members. Miss Hattie Shreve gave a most excellent report of the work of the Young Ladies Band.

A pleasing solo was rendered by Mrs. George Chapman, and after the singing of a hymn, Miss Butler made a few remarks urging the members to do more for the society and to attend the meeting more regularly. She then introduced Miss Church, a returned missionary from Japan. Miss Church is a very interesting speaker and she related in an entertaining manner something of her work in Japan.

She told how rapidly Japan was advancing in Christianity and how willing the natives are to learn something about Christ. She said that there was a great work to be done among the children. In her school she has forty scholars and they are very attractive and bright. Each day there is a certain amount to be accomplished in the school and the scholars are eager to learn. They rise every morning at six o'clock and recite the Fourth Commandment and from that time till four o'clock in the afternoon, the time is occupied in teaching the Bible and English branch. The pupils advance rapidly and give promise of making bright men and women. At the close of Miss Church's talk, Mrs. L. H. Biglow, Jr., sang a solo. Miss Butler then introduced Mrs. Alonzo Pettit, of Elizabeth, State Secretary of the Foreign Missionary society. She extended hearty words of congratulation and gave the society a cordial invitation to attend the state anniversary at Newark April 15th and 16th.

At the close of the meeting, mite boxes were given to the members.

Those who composed the choir at the meeting were: Mrs. W. O. Chapman, Mrs. DeWitt C. Brokaw, Mrs. Harold Serrell, Miss Harold, Mrs. George Chapman, Mrs. L. H. Biglow, Jr., Miss Gussie Runyon, Miss Florence Bellis. Those who acted as collectors were Miss May Stelle and Miss Stephenson.

NOT FOR PERSONAL REASONS.

Mr. Baxter Not Selected Because He Was a Friend of the Governor.

Charles J. Baxter, who has just been appointed Superintendent of Schools for New Jersey, was seen at the North avenue station last Thursday, before his departure for Trenton, by a representative of the Daily Press. Mr. Baxter stated that the report circulated by some New York papers that he was appointed to the position because he was a personal friend of Governor Griggs, was absolutely without truth.

"I never knew Governor Griggs, never saw him," remarked Mr. Baxter, "until last Monday, when I was summoned to Trenton and there had an interview with the Governor previous to my appointment being sent to the Senate."

Sad News Received at a Party.

Mrs. Charles Brantingham gave a party and dance at her home last Friday evening for her children and their friends. When the festive preparations were complete and all the guests were present, a telegram arrived telling of the death of Mrs. Brantingham's father in the west. The shock prostrated her, but she insisted on the guests remaining and the dance being continued. The party broke up at an early hour, however.

POLITICAL ORATORS.

Congress Is Full of Men Who Have the Gift of Gab.

Many of Them Will Be Heard During the Coming Campaign—Statesmen Whose Speeches Are Worth Hearing.

[Special Washington Letter.]

It is a common thing to refer to the good old times when statesmen were orators, thrilling the masses with their eloquence and producing lasting results in directing the policies of the nation. Our fathers have taught us that Daniel Webster, Henry Clay and Stephen A. Douglas were orators whose equals have never entered the senate or house of representatives.

We will probably teach our children that Roscoe Conkling, James G. Blaine and Matt Carpenter were the most marvelous orators in the history of the world, but we may thus be misleading the coming generation. When the grown folks of to-day went to school and studied McGuffey's readers, we saw therein and committed to memory long paragraphs from the speeches of Webster and other orators of the preceding generation. Now that the leaders of the departing generation have passed and are passing away, we will probably buy schoolbooks for our children containing some of the most forceful utterances delivered in congress since the civil war.

But every generation produces men equal to the strong men of the remote or approximate past. The passing years develop the wonders of nature, and the minds of the statesmen of to-day are stored with information which would seem miraculous if transmitted suddenly to the men of the past. For example, if Henry Clay, Daniel Webster and John C. Calhoun, three of the greatest men of their times, were to stand on the corner opposite the house any to-day, conversing upon political or scientific matters, and the cable cars should come shooting around the curve, without steam or other visible means of propulsion, they would all take to their heels and run like deer, or climb over the walls for safety inside the inclosures of St. Elizabeth's insane asylum.

Campaign oratory is becoming less and less effective every year, because our people are omnivorous readers, and given to studying men and affairs for themselves. Nevertheless, for the sake of raising a hurrah and creating popular interest in affairs, we must have torchlight processions, barbecues and meetings in the town halls, where orators will endeavor to spellbind the people, as they used to do in the days of Demosthenes and Aristides. The people have been long in the habit of sending their best orators to congress, and the 444 senators and representatives now in congress are men of more than ordinary oratorical ability; and all of them will be heard on the hustings this year.

Mr. Blaine was a presidental candidate in 1884. He went upon the stump and delivered speeches constantly during the campaign. That is a good precedent which no doubt may be nominated this year may properly go forth and talk to the people in his own behalf; so that we may expect to hear all of the present presidential candidates during the campaign which fast approaches.

On the democratic side we look for William R. Morrison and Adlai E. Stevenson, of Illinois; Henry Watterson and John G. Carlisle, of Kentucky; William P. Vilas, of Wisconsin; Daniel W. Voorhees and David Turpie, of Indiana, and Ben Tillman, of South Carolina. When Col. Morrison was in congress he was an orator of extraordinary power. Vice President Stevenson, while in congress during his candidacy for the position he now holds, manifested strength, fire and vim in his public utterances. Secretary Carlisle is one of the most cold, logical, reasoning, earnest speakers who can create for enthusiasm by his gestures or utterance, but whose political points are so clearly stated that the truths uttered bring conviction to the minds of his hearers. David Turpie has all the facts, rather than the man, who presents them. Henry Watterson, an editor by profession, and an orator by nature, is so genial, so mild, so kind to the enemy, and withal so sarcastic and bitter, that every democratic listener feels like throwing up his hat at every sentence. Watterson is magnetic to a wonderful degree.

William F. Vilas is a born orator. He acquired ripe scholarship and profound legal learning before he began to actively participate in political affairs. His oratory is like unto that of Marc Anthony, who said: "I tell you that you all do know." That is, he is modest, unassuming, conversational and instructive. As soon as he obtains the complete attention of his audience, he impresses them with his personality, magnetizes them, and almost hypnotizes them; for they are completely carried away with his eloquence.

Senators Voorhees and Turpie, of Indiana, are orators of diametrically opposite characteristics. Senator Turpie is a calm reasoner, like Carlisle. Senator Voorhees is, from beginning to close of his speeches, like a raging lion. He simply endeavors to demolish and annihilate his political enemies.

Senator Ben Tillman, of South Carolina, will probably confine his efforts to his own state this year. It is not likely that he will be invited into northern states, because he is too wild and wreckless an extremist. Although claiming to be a democrat, Senator Tillman unsparingly assails democrats and republicans alike, and so he will not be heard in northern states.

On the republican side there are also orators galore. Tom Reed, whether the head of the ticket or not, will, of course, go upon the hustings and deliver speeches in states which the republicans regard as doubtful or hopeful. Senator Allison, of Iowa, will not hide his light under a bushel, for he is a speaker of force and earnestness. His long experience in public affairs has equipped him with almost boundless knowledge with the details of our system of government, and his speeches are replete with general information.

Gov. McKinley is a sturdy speaker. He is not an inspiring speaker, but calm, deliberate and dogmatic in his statements. His apparent belief in his every statement carries with it a strength and force which induces his listeners to agree with him and assume that his arguments are unanswerable.

Senator Foraker, of Ohio, will be heard in the land. He is more like Blaine than any orator now living in our country. He is a whirlwind on the hustings. He is a hand-shaker and has a wonderful memory of names and faces. He is after the presidency, and every speech which he now makes is intended to enhance his opportunities for the highest office and distinction in the republic.

Senator Thurston, of Nebraska, is one of the best political orators in this broad land. He began life a poor boy, having lost his father during the civil war. He educated himself, and studied law. He soon made a reputation as a lawyer and as an orator, and for several years was general counsel for the Union Pacific Railroad company. While occupying that position, he was sought far and near to deliver addresses at banquets and upon other public occasions. He is a new man in the senate, but not a new man among public men. His first speech delivered in the senate was on the subject of pensions and it at once attracted attention.

Senator Chandler, of New Hampshire, seldom indulges in public speaking outside of his own state, even when political campaigns are hottest. But on the floor of the senate he is the most intensely annoying sarcastic talker on the republican side.

Massachusetts has two good speakers in the senate, and they will be heard upon the hustings. Senator Hoar and Senator Lodge are typical New England scholars and English purists. They are ardent political workers, and will probably be heard beyond the New England borders this year.

Senator Davis, of Minnesota, is an orator of superior merit. He is primarily a lawyer, but at the same time one of the most cultured classic scholars in the land. He is a great international lawyer, and his recent speech concerning the Monroe doctrine is a model of English diction. His oratory is attractive because it is logical, earnest, plain and unpretentious. He loses his identity in his subject.

Senator Quay is a presidental candidate, but he is not an orator. He seldom speaks in public. But, during the debate on the Wilson tariff bill, he delivered a speech which filled a volume.

SENATOR THURSTON, NEBRASKA.

He spoke an hour or more every day for five or six weeks. His oration was a statement of tariff facts and statistics, and was read without oratorical effort.

Senator Burrows, of Michigan, is an orator whose fame is well earned. His presence upon the stage or upon the floor of the senate is sufficient to command attention at any time, and under all circumstances. His voice is a rich bassoano profundo, and has been carefully cultivated. Public speaking is manifestly no effort for Senator Burrows, but an apparent pleasure, it is so easy. He has long been in public life, is well informed upon all subjects of national interest, and can talk instructively and in an interesting manner upon any occasion.

Senator Wolcott, of Colorado, one of the handsomest men in congress, is a forcible speaker, and a speaker of magnetic power. His speech nominating James G. Blaine, at Minneapolis, in 1892, was by many regarded as superior to the splendid effort of Chauncey M. Depew, who nominated Harrison.

These are only a few of the spellbinders of the two political parties who will appear before the people during the coming presidential campaign. You will be fortunate if you can hear any one of them, regardless of your political opinions and beliefs.

THE VETERAN WILL FIGHT.

An Elizabeth Democrat Means to Hold on to a Comfortable Place.

Jacob Sheppard has been clerk of the District Court in Elizabeth for some years. He is a Democrat and a war veteran. When Governor Griggs appointed City Attorney E. S. Atwater, a Republican, judge of the court in place of Judge P. H. Gilhooley, Clerk Sheppard announced his intention of retaining his position under the Veteran Soldier act. A bill was put through the Legislature empowering District Court Judges to appoint their own clerks. Friday Judge Atwater decided to appoint James C Calvert, when he took office on April 1st. Sheppard says he will fight the case to the end. Calvert is a member of the Republican City Executive Committee and prominent in the party.

NOAH RABY, 124 YEARS OLD.

Born in North Carolina, was a Sailor and Now Lives in a Jersey Poor House.

According to his own statements—and the people of Piscataway and Stelton have full confidence in his veracity—Noah Raby, an inmate of the Piscataway Poor Farm, will pass his one hundred and twenty-fourth year mark should he live to see next Wednesday. He is therefore the oldest man in the state. Henry G. Hummer, overseer of the farm, has known the man for more than fifty years, and he himself is firm in his belief that Raby is far past the century point. As he sits in an old-fashioned armchair before the fire in Mr. Hummer's house the old man looks every bit a cenetarian.

"Uncle Noah" is short and much bent. Sometimes his eyes sparkle, but they are sightless, as he became blind about ten years ago. Although his shoulders are somewhat contracted the muscles of his legs and arms are as firm as they were thirty years ago. He is toothless, and in talking he gives vent to a wierd whistling noise. But his voice is strong and clear, and his life is hearty. His accent is of the South.

General good health has blessed the old man since a serious illness at the age of eighteen. His mind is wonderfully alert and he has an emphatic way of saying "Certain, sir." Fearing a rush of blood to his head, he sleeps sitting up in a chair. On pleasant days he goes to the well in the yard, guided by a wire stretched from the back door.

Boiled fish or rice, or some bread and milk, constitute the old man's simple diet. He weighs only about one hundred pounds although at his best he seldom averaged more than 130. Noah has developed a fondness for an occasional glass of rye whiskey and downs it like a cannoisseur. He says he was born at Eastontown, Gates County, N. C., on April 1, 1778. He also says he heard Washington speak at Norfolk, Va. At that time Raby was a sailor in the United States Navy.

DEER PARK.

On the Crest of the Alleghenies.

To those contemplating a trip to the mountains in search of health or pleasure, Deer Park, on the crest of the Allegheny Mountains, 3,000 feet above the sea level, offers such varied attractions as a delightful atmosphere during each day and night, pure water, smooth, winding roads through the mountains and valleys, and the most picturesque scenery in the Alleghany range. The hotel is equipped with all adjuncts conductive to the entertainment, pleasure and comfort of its guests.

There are also a number of furnished cottages with facilities for housekeeping.

The house and grounds are supplied with absolutely pure water, piped from the celebrated "Rolling Spring" and are lighted with electricity. Deer Park is on the main line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and has the advantages of its splendid Vestibuled Limited Express trains between the east and west. Season excursion tickets, good for return passage until October 31st, will be placed on sale at greatly reduced rates at all principal ticket offices throughout the country.

The season at Deer Park commences June 22d, 1896.

The breath of a chronic catarrh patient is often as offensive that he becomes an object of disgust. After a time ulceration sets in, the spongy bones are attacked, and frequently destroyed. A constant sources of discomfort is the dripping of the purulent secretions into the throat sometimes producing inveterate bronchitis which has been the exciting cause of pulmonary disease. The brilliant results by its use for years past properly designate Ely's Cream Balm as by far the best and only cure.

PETER WOODEN'S WILL STANDS.

The Appelants Couldn't Overcome the Evidence Presented by Craig A. Marsh.

In the Somerset court on Tuesday morning, the contestants of the Peter Wooden will gave up the case, their attorneys stating that they couldn't overcome the evidence of the executors, who were represented by Craig A. Marsh. The five attorneys of the contestants insisted, however, that they were entitled to counsel fees, as they had acted in good faith. In view of the age of Peter Wooden, which was over ninety years, and the suspicious circumstance of the making of the will, they had only done their duty.

The court agreed, after the establishing of the will, to make allowences of counsel fees for the appelants attorneys as follows: W. R. Codington, $250 George DeMeza, $200; J. P. Powers and Steele and Meehan, $400; William M. Stillman as counsel for the Seventh-Day Baptist churches was allowed $350, and Craig A. Marsh, as counsel for the executors, was allowed $1,000. The estate amounts to $30,000. The Seventh-Day Baptist churches in this city and New Market will each receive $2,000 and the Seventh Day Baptist University at Alfred, N. Y., will receive $10 000. The rest of the estate will go to the heirs. There were about forty persons interested in the will.

A DREAM THAT OUGHT TO BE TRUE.

A Correspondent Takes an Imaginary Trip to Monument Square.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—There are probably few people in Plainfield who know where "Monument Square" is, and for their benefit, I propose to ask them to accompany me on a visit to this historic spot. Starting from any quarter of the city and going North or South on Watchung avenue or West on La Grande, or East on Seventh or Eighth streets in a short drive, there will soon appear a finely sculptured shaft apparently standing in the middle of either one of the thoroughfares just named. On arrival at the spot we find that "Monument Square" is a point where the above named streets and avenues intersect. It would be well to state right here that a portion of the site of the square was formerly a part of the grass plot immediately in front of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. The beautiful brick paving of the square was done at the expense of the city. The monument itself is fifty-three feet, six inches high and is conceded by all to be a work of art. I do not know who paid for it, but it was undoubtedly erected at the expense of some or many of the whole souled, generous and patriotic citizens of the neighborhood. You ask, "Why was it erected and why this is an historic spot?" The full answer would be long and might appropriately be written in blood, but this spot is historic because at the sight of this monument there is brought to mind the bloody conflict that brother waged against brother in the days gone by, when the history of this fair land of ours was re-written, and ever since which time freedom has meant what it stands for in the lexicous. The monument commemorates the brave dead who then or later gave their lives for this Union, and then too, the thought of each old veteran now living, "that stands for me," must be very pleasing. In summer time the city band is wont to come to the square on pleasant evenings and discourse sweet music to the lingering concourse of people. Let me tell you one thing, that very few people at the present time have knowledge of, that the whole souled, generous and patriotic citizens referred to above, were many years getting the money together to cover the cost, but you can see for yourself that they finally got there. I wish we had a list of their names that above them all we might write, "They have done what they could to perpetuate loyalty and have erected this ensign to ever bring to the mind of the young men of our land that 'the Nation's heroes are not forgotten.'" Plainfielders Get a Good Man.

The following very interesting item was taken from the Newark Sunday Call, of last Sunday:

Passengers upon the Newark and New York road have missed their ideal conductor, Charles Keyser, for some days, and are beginning to make inquiries about him. There is no mystery about the matter. It is merely that some of the wealthy patrons of the road living in Plainfield saw and coveted him. Keyser was his shape, his beautiful blonde mustache or his elegant manner that they admired is not known, but they got him, and that in Plainfield's gain is Newark's loss. Keyser no longer graces the Newark platform, and his admiring friends may get only occasional glimmpses of him at the Jersey City end. If one is lucky enough to strike it in time of arriving or leaving. He takes out the fast express to Plainfield and Somerville every morning and besides makes two runs to Roselle in the morning.

That measure putting the Supreme Court and Chancery Clerks on a salary has been generally spoken of as "the Voorhees bill," because of the part that Union's Senator took in urging its passage. As a matter of fact, the new law, exactly as it stands, was drafted by Senator Johnson.—New York Tribune.

It's all the same, a slight cold, congested lungs or severe cough. One Minute Cough Cure banishes them. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street

NO MISSION IN THE SUMMER.

But Col. Hadley Says That Rescue Work Will Begin Again in the Fall.

Col. H. H. Hadley, of St. Bartholomew's Mission, New York city, delivered an interesting and instructive talk on Rescue Mission Work, in Grace P. E. church Tuesday before a fair-sized congregation.

In his remarks, Mr. Hadley said that during the three months trial of the mission work in this city, fully thirty men and women had been brought to see the error of their way.

The three months lease of the quarters runs out soon and as no other quarters suitable for the purpose can be obtained at present, the work will be suspended until next fall, when the workers hope to have a building of their own completed. He desired as much support in the fall for the work as had already been given it, and said that the workers will labor with as much zest and will, when the work does begin in the fall, as they have hitherto.

The speaker relates several interesting anecdotes about a number of cases which have come to his personal observation, and told how, after many weeks, months and years of sin, they had come forward to be cleansed by the blood of Jesus Christ: "Mordrunkards," said the speaker, "go to St. Bartholomew's Mission than to any church or mission in New York city."

Col. Hadley says he has never received one cent of commission out of all collections taken for the mission work.

THE VENETIAN ARTIST.

Prof. J. C. Van Dyke Gives a Lecture on Art Before Talented Women.

The Monday Afternoon Club are to be congratulated in securing such an interesting and talented speaker as Professor J. C. Van Dyke, of Rutgers College, to give his illustrated lectures on the Venetians. Tuesday afternoon was the second of the special lectures and the members responded in a most encouraging manner.

Prof. Van Dyke's subject was "The Great Venetian Painters of the Sixteenth Century," and he brought to the minds of all a clearer conception of the great artists of Venice. They had the art of bringing out charm, dignity and beauty in the work that was marvelous, and in their treatment of light and shade their productions were superb. The beautiful scenery surrounding their objects, with the deep blue Italian sky, for which they were noted, was indiscribable in beauty. The speaker said that their art work was not painted to be hung in galleries, but was intended for use in decorations, and so it was used. Their pictures were never designed especially for the public gaze, and the people in their day were not allowed to get nearer to them than twenty feet. They were remarkable in filling space with a given object. That the Venetians could draw was an established fact. They were superb draughtsmen. They had a knack of turning to good advantage the material at hand. It has been said that they could paint religious works, but when it came to other subjects they were not able to do the theme justice. This is not so. They were adept on any subject and they never failed to place the modern spirit in their work. At the close of Prof. Van Dyke's lecture he was heartily applauded by the audience.

A LONG TIME COMING BACK.

T. J. Carey Recovers Several Articles He Lost During the War.

Tunis J. Carey seems to have remarkable luck in recovering lost property. Monday a friend brought to him an old combination knife, fork and spoon that he carried during the early part of the war. On the handle was cut "T. Carey, 1862," while "Company A, Thirtieth Regiment," was scratched on the bowl of the spoon. This article suddenly disappeared and Mr. Carey never saw it again until Monday. It was found among the old traps of a fellow soldier of Mr. Carey's by a young man who, seeing the name, restored it to its rightful owner.

Two years ago Mr. Carey had returned to him a valuable army saddle that had been borrowed eighteen years before. He was found hanging up in an old shed at Bound Brook. Artist Julian Scott is now using it as a model for army saddles.

Oh Come, Let Us.

The Plainfield Courier of yesterday has the following:

Senator Storbeck of Elizabeth, is slightly ill with the grip, which he attributes to the bad ventilation of the Senate chamber. James Parker, Clerk of the House, caught a cold at his desk in the Assembly chamber and was laid up with pneumonia for a period. The trouble is excessive steam heat, bad ventilation and a multitude of small draughts in both chambers. These defects are the result of bad work done under the old contracts which were investigated by the Senate Investigating Committee, in which were discovered several big deals.

But, Mr. Courier, it snowed yesterday some three inches in depth—all unseasonable. Many people had wet feet; many will have pneumonia; some may die. All these things, you should charge to the "old contracts which were investigated by the Senate Investigating Committee." Are you short of campaign thunder? J. E. M.

—"I have been troubled with a tired sinking feeling, and was not able to get rid of it, until I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. I feel like another person since I began its use." A. J. Whitenack, Far Hills, N. J. Hood's Pills cure indigestion, biliousness.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Beach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

Its just as easy to try One Minute Cough Cure as anything else. Its easier to cure a severe cough or cold with it, and your next purchase for a cough be One Minute Cough Cure. Better medicine; better result; better try it. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

OLD NASSAU MEN DINE.

TIGER-SIS-BOOM-AH! PRINCETON IN THE CASINO LAST NIGHT.

Plainfield Graduates of Princeton Have Their Third Annual Dinner—A Jolly Time Enjoyed Around the Board.

The Princeton tiger would have roared from sheer delight could he have been present at the Casino of the Union County Country Club Tuesday night and seen the jovial gathering of the Alumni of old Nassau under the orange and black banner and heard the sentiments of love and sympathy expressed for their Alma Mater. It was the occasion of the second annual dinner of the Princeton Club of Plainfield and its great success predicted wonderful things for the future of the club. The gathering was not a very large one but the true Princeton spirit pervaded all. Old staid business men forgot the cares of Wall street or the stock exchange, professional men threw their anxieties to the wind and one and all joined in doing honor to the grand old college that sent them out into the world better equipped for the battle of life. Stories of the college days were told and they joked and laughed about their experiences in the quaint old Jersey town.

The room was handsomely decorated for the occasion, the orange and the black, of course, predominating. A large Princeton banner was hung across the stage and another was suspended from the ceiling above the heads of the diners. Orange and black bunting was draped over the the doors and about the electric light fixtures and hung in artistic folds from the balcony on the roof of the large fire place. Here smaller Princeton flags, bunting and two large green dragons, immovable guardians of the feast, added to the splendid appearance of the room.

The table was prettily decorated with orange and black satin ribbon. The dinner was an excellent one and reflected much credit on Max Wiertz, the caterer. The party that gathered last night to do honor to New Jersey's oldest college consisted of Dr. Hayes, Leonidas Dennis, Jr. '83, Prof. John G. Hibben, Rowland Cox, Adrian H. Joline, Edward C. Perkins, William R. Wilder, Rev. William E. Honeyman, John Magie, Dr. W. H. Murray, Dr. E. W. Hedges, Alfred E. Holmes, Wm. N. Runyon, Edward C. Petrie, Orville G. Waring, Hugh B. Reed, Dr. VanDuyn, Dr. P. W. Brakely, Frank C. Marsh, W. T. Kaufman, J. P. Murray, Dr. B. Van D. Hedges, Edward Patterson, Max Munger and Dalziel Schoonmaker.

The committee in charge of the dinner consisted of Harry Munger and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges.

After the repast had been concluded and the diners had settled back for a whiff at their fragrant Havanas, president Rowland Cox rose and addressed a few introductory remarks to his fellow Princetonites, telling of a recent visit to Princeton and declared it to be the loviest place in all the world. He introduced Prof. John G. Hibben, '82, who responded to the toast "Princeton University." Prof. Hibben was greeted with the rousing Princeton yell followed by "Hibben." Prof. Hibben told of the firm foundation of "Old Nassau" and characterized its growth as an evolution and not a revolution. The noted acts of some of the graduates and the many prominent places in the scientific and literary world that are held by them, were referred to. As a member of the faculty he spoke of the high literary spirit among the undergraduates. Athletics, he said, attracted much attention there, but the main principle of all was that they should be pure. Young Brokaw, who was drowned at Elberon in attempting to save the life of a young woman, he referred to as a hero and a true type of the perfect manly athlete. Garrick, the winner at the Olympian games, was also spoken of as having the true manly Princeton spirit. Prof. Hibben then then told of the honor system in vogue and declared that the man himself and not his position decided his standing among his college mates. He concluded with a few words on the plans for the future of Princeton.

President Cox next read an account of the Olympic games and proposed the health of Garrick, who distinguished himself there, in which all joined.

Adrain H. Joline, '70, was the next speaker and answered to the toast "The Alumni." After an eulogy on New Jersey, and especially Princeton, interspersed with humorous remarks, he told of the board of trustees, the undergraduates, and finally the alumni. He told very wittily of the functions and duties of the alumni according to his observation. One of the duties of the alumni, in common with those of other colleges, was, he said, to stand firm and cool in times of popular insanity and uprising.

Edward C. Perkins was next introduced by President Cox to respond to the toast "Harvard." He spoke highly of the Jersey college and congratulated the club on selecting a night when the praises of Princeton are being sung throughout the country on account of the great victory of her athletes at Athens. He closed by wishing Princeton a great future.

A witty little introduction by President Cox preceded the response to the toast "Oranje Boven," by Leonidas Dennis, '84. His speech was full of humor and his listeners were kept in a continual roar of laughter. One of the great weaknesses of Princeton was, he said, the attitude of the press, which never fully represented the side of Princeton. He spoke of the advantages other colleges had gained in Plainfield, but declared that the Orange and the Black would finally triumph, but that in victory or in defeat she would still wear the banner of honor.

Princeton's great rival in the athletic and literary world, Yale, was represented by James R. Joy, who was the next speaker. The familiar tune of "Bahn of Gilael" greeted him and then he spoke entertainingly on his college and the college of his hosts. He said he brought the greetings of Yale and hoped that the Princeton Club would grow and flourish, provided, of course, that Yale maintained the same ratio in size she held at present. Princeton and Yale are, he said, the nearest alike of all the American educational institutions, and graduates of one college were constantly on the faculty of the other. All through the history of this country Princeton and Yale men have stood together and the graduates of these two colleges have done more and their influence has been felt farther than any other institution in the country.

The last toast, "The Tiger," was responded to by William R. Wilder, '79. Mr. Wilder told of his efforts to discover who and what "The Tiger" is and read a letter to Prof. "Bill" Libby and its reply. He found, so he said, some crumbs of comfort in the qualities given to "Mrs. Tiger" in its Arabic derivation, and in the description by Prof. Joy, Prof. John G. Hibben, Rowland Cox, Adrian H. Joline, Edward C. Perkins, William R. Wilder, Rev. William E. Honeyman, John Magie, Dr. W. H. Murray, Dr. E. W. Hedges, Alfred E. Holmes, Wm. N. Runyon, Edward C. Petrie, Orville G. Waring. Hugh B. Reed, Dr. VanDuyn, Dr. P. W. Brakely, Frank C. Marsh, W. T. Kaufman, J. P. Murray, Dr. B. Van D. Hedges, Edward Patterson, Max Munger and Dalziel Schoonmaker.

The committee in charge of the dinner consisted of Harry Munger and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges.

After the repast had been concluded and the diners had settled back for a whiff at their fragrant Havanas, president Rowland Cox rose and addressed a few introductory remarks to his fellow Princetonites, telling of a recent visit to Princeton and declared it to be the loviest place in all the world. He introduced Prof. John G. Hibben, '82, who responded to the toast "Princeton University." Prof. Hibben was greeted with the rousing Princeton yell followed by "Hibben." Prof. Hibben told of the firm foundation of "Old Nassau" and characterized its growth as an evolution and not a revolution. The noted acts of some of the graduates and the many prominent places in the scientific and literary world that are held by them, were referred to. As a member of the faculty he spoke of the high literary spirit among the undergraduates. Athletics, he said, attracted much attention there, but the main principle of all was that they should be pure. Young Brokaw, who was drowned at Elberon in attempting to save the life of a young woman, he referred to as a hero and a true type of the perfect manly athlete. Garrick, the winner at the Olympian games, was also spoken of as having the true manly Princeton spirit. Prof. Hibben then then told of the honor system in vogue and declared that the man himself and not his position decided his standing among his college mates. He concluded with a few words on the plans for the future of Princeton.

President Cox next read an account of the Olympic games and proposed the health of Garrick, who distinguished himself there, in which all joined.

Adrain H. Joline, '70, was the next speaker and answered to the toast "The Alumni." After an eulogy on New Jersey, and especially Princeton, interspersed with humorous remarks, he told of the board of trustees, the undergraduates, and finally the alumni. He told very wittily of the functions and duties of the alumni according to his observation. One of the duties of the alumni, in common with those of other colleges, was, he said, to stand firm and cool in times of popular insanity and uprising.

THE NEW PRESIDING ELDER.

A Short Sketch of the Ministerial Work of Rev. G. W. Smith.

The Elizabeth Journal last Saturday published the following sketch and picture of Rev. George W. Smith, the new presiding elder of this district:

Mr. Smith is one of the leading men of his conference, and was chosen as the last session to represent it, with four other clergymen and two laymen, at the general conference to be held in Cleveland during the month of May.

REV. GEORGE W. SMITH,
The new presiding elder of this district.

The Elizabeth District extends in this State from Newark bay nearly to the Delaware river, along the main line of the Central railroad and the Flemington branch, and also includes Rahway, Woodbridge, Millstone and Metuchen, and Staten Island, in all fifty-five churches, over which the presiding elder has supervision, requiring quarterly visitations. Elizabeth, being the most central point in this district, is usually selected by the presiding elder for his residence.

The change was unexpected, but was made by the bishop at the earnest solicitation of the Summit church for Dr. Ryman to become its pastor.

The appointment of Mr. Smith gives great satisfaction to both ministers and churches in the district, and Dr. Ryman leaves it, after three years of efficient service, with the regret of all.

ACCEPTED A COIN COLLECTION.

Herbert Johnston Makes a Valuable Presentation to the Library.

The regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Public Library was held last Tuesday. Directors A. C. Baldwin, J. Evarts Tracy, Rowland Cox and J. W. Yates were absent.

President M. W. Tyler reported that he had presented to the Common Council the resolution passed at the last meeting, requesting them to levy an additional tax of $7,000 at their meeting of April 6th, but they declined to order and levy the tax.

A letter was received from J. Herbert Johnston, of New York, tendering to the Library a valuable collection of coins made by his late father, John Taylor Johnston, on condition that the Library provides a proper and safe place for their exhibition and keeping.

On motion, the president was instructed to write Mr. Johnston and accept the gift, and to extend to him the thanks and appreciation of the board for the gift. The matter of providing accommodations for the coins was referred to the art committee.

THE OLD MEET THE NEW.

A PLEASANT RECEPTION GIVEN AT THE Y. M. C. A. LAST NIGHT.

The Old Members of the Association Greet the Younger Men, and Entertain Them—Bicycle for Mr. Manning.

It is possible for young men to be sociable and make their fellows feel the same, and when the "old fellows" of the Y. M. C. A. gave a reception to the "new members" last Tuesday, the fact was self-evident from the oldest to the youngest member present. J. W. Gavett, Philip Suffern, Thomas Cuming, J. A. V. Craighead, James Kimball and Robert Radford, Jr., composed the reception committee on duty, and it was very little they had to do, for everyone was sociable. Each one was provided with a diamond-shaped tag, which distinguished the old from the new, also giving the name of the wearer and the time he joined. This afforded an excellent channel for introductions. George R. Cornwell called the members together in the small hall, after which President Murray, in a few well-chosen words, introduced Alfred E. Pearsall, of Westfield. As an entertainer, Mr. Pearsall is well known and the hearty reception accorded him last night was well merited. He related the story of "Singing Joseph" and "A Night of Trouble." Josiah Allen and his wife Samantha figured largely in the last named selection. Both selections brought forth loud applause.

President Murray followed by making a few announcements. He said that the season was coming when the members would prefer out-door diversion to the building attractions, and the association cognizant of the fact, had provided a summer camp at Northfield, Mass., a good place to spend a vacation. He also spoke of the baseball team which would furnish sport on the Crescent Oval, and the wheeling section which would make tours around the State visiting various associations. A camera club would also be organized and rooms will be fitted up for the member's use. The grounds in the rear of the building will be graded and arranged for basket ball and light out door sports. Mr. Murray said the annual meeting of the association would be held May 19th, and a supper will be served to the members of the Get One Club. Next Sunday afternoon at the men's meeting the subject will be the "Bright Side of the Y. M. C. A." Mrs. Brooke will sing, Raymond McGee will play the cornet and Martin Korff will play the violin.

A great surprise followed when President Murray on behalf of the association presented general secretary Harry Manning with a handsome Cleveland swell special bicycle. When Mr Manning appeared the applause was so hearty that he could not speak. Finally he said he was not able to make a speech, but Rev. Mr. O Donnell who was present, reminded him of a remark which the latter made a few days ago. It was, "Blessed is the man who, having nothing to say, loses no time in saying it." He said he would lose no time in using the wheel.

Mr. Pearsall then gave the "Soldier's Story in Song," and "Ben Deane." Both were superbly rendered.

The reception committee served ice cream and cake to all, and with sociability, refreshments and college songs, the most successful reception ever held was brought to a close.

IN HONOR OF HER FRIENDS.

Miss Mary Collier Gives a Party and Dance at the Olympia.

A party and dance was given last evening at the Olympia by Miss Mary Collier, of East Sixth street, in honor of her guests, the Misses Ella and Delia Phillips, of Wilmington, Del. A very pleasant evening was spent by all. Light refreshments were served during the evening. Leap year was remembered by a "leap year" dance in which the young ladies selected their own partners.

Those present were the Misses Julia C. Ketcham, Mary Ketcham, Lillian Glen, Agnes Langhorne, Grace Crane, Bertha Thorn, Leonore Carl, Mabelle Smith, Addie Manning, Louise Egnan, Olive Newell, Lucie Palmer Davis, Grace E. Overton, Eleanor T. Vandeventer, Edith L. Burt, Amy Burt and Mary A. Luckey; the Messrs. Wilbur T. Cornwell, Henry Brower, Walter Probasco, Arthur B. Crane, Carl D. Pfender, Joseph Cornwell, Thomas U. Smith, Charles Noble, Franklin P. Noble, John De Meza, Alvah Davis, Arthur W. Vail, Volney F. Green, Charles F. Davis and Berry Egan.

It is not a miracle. It wont cure everything, but it will cure piles. That's what DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will do, because it has done it in hundreds of cases. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

MISSIONARY WOMEN MEET.

A Lecture Delivered by a Missionary From Burmah.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church was held Tuesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Considering the weather, the attendance was remarkably good. Mrs. Wyckoff opened the meeting with devotional exercises, after which M. B. Kirkpatrick, a worker in the Burmah missions, under the direction of the American Baptist Union, was introduced and gave an interesting review of his seven years work on the mission field. He told of the many peculiarities of the people with whom he had been associated. In some sections of the country, there were 50,000 people with but one teacher to tell them of Christ and his wonderful power. Another place consisting of 300 miles in diameter was mentioned where the same conditions exist. The people in that locality are obliged to go fourteen miles for a doctor. When Mr. Kirkpatrick first went to the field he was very kindly received, especially by the Heathen Prince, who has assisted him in every way possible in carrying on his work. He turned over to Mr. Kirkpatrick a hospital recently erected, thus allowing him to do more efficient work among the natives, both from a spiritual and physical standpoint. The average number of patients in the hospital will number twenty-five per day. When a native goes to jail his family is supposed to take care of him and furnish him with food. The hardest thing in this country is to convince people that they are lost, and the great question is how to escape the terrible destiny, but still its difficult for them to understand redemption. The work is progressing very favorably, however, and the natives are rapidly learning of Christ. An instance of where a village consisting of about 100 persons were converted, was cited by the speaker.

During the meeting Mrs. Rand read two very interesting letters from foreign missionaries who are located in Burmah, telling of their productive work in that country.

An informal discussion followed when many valuable points regarding mission work were brought out.

TROLLEY INVADES ANOTHER STREET

Work Started on Watchung Avenue Extension This Morning.

Rumors of fresh trouble changed the plans of the trolley line contractors and at five o'clock Wednesday they began work on Watchung avenue, between North avenue and Fifth street, which they expect to complete today. It was understood that a property owner on Watchung avenue was going to raise an objection to the laying of the tracks. He did not appear this morning, however, and work went on without hinderance.

The very muddy condition of Putnam and Woodland avenues had something to do with the stopping of work there for the day. The track has been laid up Putnam avenue, beyond Hillside avenue and they expected to complete the line by next week. Its completion will now be delayed until the end of next week.

Missionary Work in Africa.

A. B. Cramer, a missionary in the Congo region, Africa, gave a very interesting talk on the modes of life and what missionary workers have accomplished in that section of the Dark Continent, in the W. C. T. U. rooms last Monday before a fair-sized gathering. The speaker told of the great amount of superstition which exists among the natives. The witch doctors, also, have a great influence over the natives. Mr. Kirkpatrick, a missionary from Burmah, was present and offered prayer. Mr. Cramer will return to Africa in the fall.

Died at a Ripe Old Age.

The death occured Tuesday morning of Mrs. Sarah Stout, a sister of the late Mrs. Job Male, at the home of Capt. J. Spicer, of West Fifth street. She was in her ninety-first year and one of Plainfield's oldest inhabitants. She has lived in this city about twenty years, and kept house for the late ex-Mayor Job Male, for some time. After the latter's death she resided with Mrs. W. L. Titsworth, of Watchung avenue. She was a faithful member of the Unitarian church. The funeral will be held from her late residence tomorrow morning at 9:30. The interment will be at Middletown, Monmouth county.

READ THE KING A LESSON.

A Marquis Gives Charles I. a Poem from Gower the Poet.

However dull to us are the works of that grave and ancient English poet, Gower, the contemporary of Chaucer, it is certain that his influence extended far beyond his own time, as he had admirers as late as the reign of Charles I.

In connection with the curious "conference" on the occasion of the visit Charles I. made to the marquis of Worcester at Raglan castle, with his court, an amusing incident is related. The marquis was a favorite of the king, both for his frankness and his love of the arts.

Among his rare curiosities was a sumptuous copy of Gower's volume. King Charles usually visited the marquis after dinner, and one day found him with Gower's book lying open before him. The king remarked that he had never before seen the work.

"Oh, it is a book of books!" exclaimed the marquis, with enthusiasm. "If your majesty had been well versed in it, it would have made you a king of kings."

"Why so, my lord?" asked Charles, curiously.

"Why, here is set down how Aristotle brought up and instructed Alexander the Great in all the rudiments and principles belonging to a prince," said the marquis; and thereupon, under the persons of Aristotle and Alexander, the marquis read the king such a lesson that all the bystanders were amazed at his daring. The king asked whether he had his lesson by heart, or spoke out of the book.

"If you would read my heart," responded the marquis, "it may be that you might find it there; or if your majesty pleased to get it by heart, I will lend you this book."

Some of the new-made lords fretted at certain passages in the marquis' discourse, and protested that no man was so much for the absolute power of the king as Aristotle. Upon which the marquis, turning the pages till he came to a certain passage, read:

A king can kill, a king can save;
A king can make a lord a knave,
And of a knave a lord.

At this point several of the courtiers slunk out of the room, and the king said, laughingly: "My lord, at this rate you will drive away all my nobility."

This anecdote certainly proves that after the lapse of two centuries and a half the words of the old poet had still vitality enough to afford a pungent lesson to the courtiers of Charles I., as they had to those of Richard II.—Youth's Companion.

AN NEAT BIT OF SARCASM.

The Judge Thought It Was About Time to Convict Some One.

Some years ago there lived in Alabama a judge who was noted for the sarcasm which he dispensed lavishly during his administration of justice. On one occasion during a term of court at Montgomery a young man was tried for stealing a pocketbook. The next case was for murder. The evidence in the larceny case was slight, but in the other seemed to the judge conclusive. To his amazement and wrath, however, the jury convicted the young man and acquitted the murderer.

In passing sentence upon the convicted thief, after the discharge of the other prisoner, the judge said:

"Young man, you have not been in this country long?"

"No, your honor," replied the prisoner.

"I thought not," said the judge. "You don't know these people: you may kill them, but don't touch their pocketbooks!"

On another occasion when the evidence seemed to point conclusively to the prisoner's guilt, but when the judge, from long experience, distrusted the jurymen's wisdom, the counsel for the defendant said: "It is better that 99 guilty persons should escape than one innocent man should suffer."

In his charge to the jury, the judge admitted the soundness of this proposition, but he added impressively and severely:

"Gentlemen, I want you to bear in mind that 99 have already escaped."—Youth's Companion.

Why Is It?

That when you put your hand in your pocket for a nickel and find a quarter, you are disappointed?

That, if a woman, you insist upon telling the conductor to stop the car at the next street when you have already seen him pull the bell cord for somebody else?

That, when you owe your grocer a small bill, you trade and pay cash at his competitor's?

That you wear your old coat without flinching, provided you have a better one at home?

That the weather gets cold so early in the autumn if you have a new sealskin sack?

That you say you "used to play a good game," when you can't make a simple carom at billiards?

That you use half a dozen towels on the sleeping car when one is sufficient at home?

That you tell an utter stranger facts you wouldn't whisper to your dearest friend?

That you grapple with and overcome a present trouble and misfortune when you worry over a theoretical one in the future?—St. Paul Dispatch.

Mnemonics.

Prof. A.—Would you believe it, my dear colleague, I actually do not know the ages of my children?

Prof. B.—Such a thing could never happen with me. I was born 2,300 years after Socrates; my wife 1,800 years after the death of Tiberius; our son Leo, 2,000 years after the promulgation of the Licinian laws by Tiberius Sempronius Gracchus, and our Amanda 1,500 years after the commencement of the great migration. Very simple, is it not?"—Zondasanblad.

LONGFELLOW AN ECLECTIC.

"Tales of a Wayside Inn" Appeals to All Americans.

If Longfellow is generally appreciated by our people it must be because he has something for them all, and not alone for those of Anglo-Saxon stock. And this is true. It arises from the fact that Longfellow is an eclectic in his tastes and sympathies. He might have said, with Terence, "Homo sum: nihil humani a me alienum puto." "Because I am a man, nothing which pertains to humanity is beyond the range of my interest;" but it would have been more accurate to say: "I am an American." English stock, born when continental ideas were beginning to permeate the civilization of New England, and conversant, by the very necessity of my vocation, with the literatures of western Europe; so that all that is best in the tongue of Lope de Vega, of Uhland, of Charles d'Orleans, of Tegner, and of Dante, I regard as no less my portion than the pages of the Bible or the history of Massachusetts."

Accordingly, Longfellow is at once a patriot and a cosmopolite. He writes with pleasure in Europe, but dwells for years in the house which had once sheltered Washington. He writes "The Courtship of Miles Standish" and "The Village Blacksmith," but also "The Spanish Student," "The Golden Legend," and "Michael Angelo." In fact, he is like a merchant who traffics extensively with foreign countries, though he has also a considerable domestic trade, and devotes all his gains to the embellishment of the city in which his lot is cast, and in which he dwells by preference.

The eclecticism of Longfellow is well illustrated by the "Tales of a Wayside Inn." The scene is the Red Horse tavern in Sudbury, 20 miles from Cambridge; but the characters include a Norwegian, a Sicilian, and a Jew, besides a student whose tastes make him a citizen of the world. In addition to these there are characters more identified with New England, of whom two, at least, are persons of the widest sympathies. Thus it happens that, while his foreigners are relatively fixed and bounded in knowledge and likings, Miles Standish is the noble in spirit, and the society which they temporarily form is delightful, because of the association of pronounced individualities with others whose personal characteristics are tempered with that universal sense which is nothing less than the very efflorescence of wisdom.—Prof. Albert S. Cook, in Chautauquan.

ALAS FOR THE EGGS.

The Revenge of a Donkey That Had Been Beaten.

One morning, while in Rome, I walked out of the city with a friend writes Rev. George F. Haskins. After a walk of several hours we called at an inn for refreshment. As we neared the ever open door of the hostelry, our attention was arrested by the approach, from another direction, of a tall, stout, middle-aged woman, and by her side two large, moving panniers filled to the very brim with eggs. From these panniers, if you looked up, you saw two very long ears; if you looked down you saw four small legs, and between the panniers was the head of an animal. It was a donkey who bore the heavy burden.

The woman was in great haste to reach the city; but the donkey was in no haste at all. On some previous occasion he had very likely been fed at the inn, and he stopped there now, probably in the hope of getting something to eat. Nor would he budge a foot.

The woman was armed with a stout stick about three feet long. With that she began belaying the poor donkey, shouting at him meantime. Then she went behind and strove to push him on by main strength, putting her shoulder to his rump. Then she renewed the beating and the shouting. All in vain.

Presently the donkey became sulky, perhaps revengeful. For to the horror of his agonized mistress, he kneeled and then down went his hind legs, and the next moment he was rolling over on his back. His feet were in the air, and the eggs were everywhere.

I could not help pitying the poor woman, who sobbed, shrieked and danced wildly about in her distress; and yet I reflected that if she had fed the poor donkey instead of beating him so unmercifully, the disaster might not have occurred. I hope the same thought struck her.—Youth's Companion.

Betrayed by His Child.

A publican who had a house a few miles out of London told me the following story not long since: One day a little girl, about seven or eight years old, came in for a pint of four ale in a tankard. Not having one in the bar, my friend sent her out into the public house, where the potman was busy boiling his pots, to obtain one. "Oh!" said the little girl, "do you boil yours? Why, my father fries his." Having lost several pots, the potman's suspicions were aroused, so, in company of a police officer, he followed the girl home and caught the father melting down some pewter pots in a frying pan. The man, who turned out to be a noted coiner, got two years' penal servitude.—London Answers.

What Decided His Vote.

When Dr. Kenealy, being returned to parliament by the electors of Stoke, took an early opportunity of moving a vote of censure on the judges, he found a seconder in Whalley. On the house dividing, it was found that 433 members of all parties voted in the negative. Dr. Kenealy's proposition being supported by a single member. The single member was Maj. O'Gorman. Asked afterward why he had gone against his own party, for once merged in the majority, the major, mopping his massive brow, answered: "Bedad, it's a hot night, and I knew there would be more room in the 'aye' lobby."—San Francisco Argonaut.

MILLIONS IN THE ICE.

Antediluvian Beasts with Ivory Tusks Locked in the Frozen North.

Wealth is waiting for the man who shall have the courage to essay a certain bold exploit. It is no gold, nor silver, nor yet precious gems, but ivory—the finest ivory in the world. Mines of it exist, in which are stored quantities of this valuable substance well nigh inexhaustible. The mines are not designed to inflame the imagination. It is cold fact, resting upon indisputable authority. Let the most adventurous spirit take advantage of the information which is given by the famous Lieut. Schwatka, who was sent by the United States government to bring back to this country the bodies of De Long and his companions after the Jeanette disaster. These ill-fated men, it will be remembered, perished of starvation and cold in the Lena delta. The Lena rises in eastern Siberia and flows northward to the Arctic ocean. To the northeast of its mouth there is a group of islands known as New Siberia. It is on record and known that the ivory mines are to be found.

The Lena, however, has not one, but many mouths. Its delta covers an area of 5,000 square miles. This frozen region was thoroughly explored by Lieut. Schuetze in his visit to New Siberia. Later he visited it again, bringing several thousand dollars' worth of gifts to the natives. He secured their confidence, and they spoke to him of many things which they would not communicate to any other stranger. They even told him about the ivory mines and showed him some tusks.

They were mammoth tusks. The ivory deposits are deposits of the tusks of mammoths that lived in that region thousands of years ago. All over northern Siberia these huge animals roamed in vast herds. The climate at that time was comparatively mild. But there came a change. Fierce, bitter winter swept over the land—a winter permanent and deadly, never again to resign its sway. The mammoths sought shelter in the valleys, where they huddled together until, overwhelmed by snowdrifts, they lay down to die beneath fleecy avalanches which were finally transformed into solid ice. This ice, composing glaciers, was swept through gorges toward the Arctic ocean, carrying the buried creatures.

Thus the bodies of the mammoths were likely to be preserved for an indefinite period. Such, in fact, was the result, and to this day it occasionally happens that the thawing of a mass of ice by the short summer's sun reveals the carcass of one of the gigantic beasts, its meat still fresh enough to be fed to the dogs. Such a thing occurred in 1799. The mounted skeleton is now in the Imperial museum at St. Petersburg, and there is also a small one, comparatively speaking, being only nine feet high and 16 feet long.

When the Siberian natives had come to know Mr. Schuetze well they told him about the ivory deposits in New Siberia. The islands of the group, they said, were "built on mammoth bones." Subsequent observations by the lieutenant confirmed this statement.

Mammoth ivory, be it understood, is more highly valued than any other kind. It is worth four dollars a pound in the crude. The tusk of a big fellow will measure 14 feet in length, and will weigh four times as much as the tusk of a large elephant. The market demand for ivory is now dispatched to a great extent from Siberia. The mammoth tusks are carried enormous distances overland to reach the nearest railways. This kind of ivory is known as "fossil" ivory, though that is a misnomer.—N. Y. Journal.

LIST OF ACQUAINTANCES.

Very Few Men Who Know by Name One Thousand People.

A small party assembled in the Manhattan club the other night was discussing the question of acquaintances. One well-known lawyer said he knew as many people as any man in the room, he did not care who he was. I asked him if he could say how many acquaintances he had—not friends merely, but persons known casually and slightly. After thinking it over he said: "Ten thousand."

"I bet $50 to $5," said another of the party, "that you cannot name 1,000 persons of your acquaintance, and give you all night to do it." The bet was made, and the lawyer began a friend keeping tally.

When, after two hours of hard thinking, he had reached between 500 and 600, he was going very slow and straining terribly. At midnight he was so far from the 1,000 mark that the party broke up in disgust.

I doubt if there is a man in this country who could write down the names of 1,000 acquaintances at a moment's notice. I don't believe there are five men in the United States who are acquainted personally with 10,000 people.

Dan Lamont, secretary of war, is said to know more faces than any other man. He made a study of faces when Mr. Cleveland's private secretary, and became indispensable to the president.

It might be said that there are many politicians who know more than 10,000 people personally, but you can't rely upon a political acquaintance. The politician has a way of pretending to know every living man who has a vote. Dr. Chauncey M. Depew probably has as wide an acquaintance as any man we know. Many men remember faces without being able to recall names. That is not an acquaintance. It would be a waste of time to meet such and such a man before somewhere, but cannot recollect his name.—N. Y. Press.

Childish Ingenuity.

ALL WERE DELUDED.

EXPECTING TO BE FOOLED, CHURCH WOMEN AGREEABLY SURPRISED.

The Women of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church Give an Entertainment Over to the Men, Who Gave an Elaborate One.

This leap year will be a memorable one in the social life of the Seventh-Day Baptist church and April 1st will be a day long to be remembered. The Ladies' Society for Christian Work of the church planned for a social time of night but finally decided that it would be more appropriate to the year to let the men take charge of the sociable. And so it was that the entire management was put in the hands of A. L. and G. B. Titsworth.

The preparations went on, but nobody except the men knew what was coming until last night

Last night the visitors that came early found the Sunday-school room apparently empty but, after quite a number had arrived, the doors into one of the smaller rooms were thrown open and there were tables groaning with good things, while the smell of delicious coffee pervaded the room. There was a suppressed 'Oh!" but nobody moved, for they all remembered that it was April Fools' day. Out came the men in approved waiters' costumes, all wearing white aprons and coats. The visitors were invited to partake, and the delicious appearing crullers and the glorious ginger bread looked oh, how, tempting, but visions of cotton, cayenne pepper and soap loomed up and left the dishes severe. At last some of the bravest took a wee bite, then another larger one, and as no evil effects were to be seen the rest followed, but very carefully.

Everything was good, and that was where the joke came in, for the waiters laughed as they never laughed before, at the surprised faces of their guests, as the dinner proved no "fake" after all.

The seats had all been arranged so that they faced the Central avenue side of the church. A curtain was drawn across the end, behind which a red light could be seen. After all the chairs were filled, the audience was surprised to see the entertainers filing out on to the platform in their rear. There was a general scampering and the chairs had to be turned about, while the men smiled at the way in which their guests had been "sold."

On the platform was seated a chorus composed of Walter McIlroy and Charles H. Angleman, first tenors; Dr. Frank Clawson and R. J. Wright, second tenors; A. L. Titsworth and Robert Gorton, first basses; Ralph Titsworth and D. E. Titsworth, second bassos. Below, seated on the edge of the platform, was the "fake" orchestra, arranged as at a minstrel show. It consisted of G. B. Titsworth and Harry Maxson, bones; Frank Smith and Frank J. Hubbard, tambos; J. M. Titsworth and W. C. Hubbard, banjos; F. D. Randolph and Dr. Marc Clawson, flutes; and F. A. Dunham, guitar. The orchestra never attempted to play.

"One good turn deserves another," remarked D. E. Titsworth, master of ceremonies, as the audience settled down after their sudden move, and then the chorus sang "Juanita" in a very pleasing manner. F. D. Randolph then read a poem entitled "Year Hints," after which Walter McIlroy, of Brooklyn, sang a tenor solo, "Still as the Night," in a way that greatly delighted his audience, as was shown by the loud applause. Between the different numbers on the programme, D. E. Titsworth and the members of the orchestra cracked jokes and said all sorts of witty things about each other and the prominent men in the church to the great amusement of the listeners.

A quartette, composed of Messrs. McIlroy, Wright, Gerton and D. E. Titsworth, then artistically sang the "Pickaninny Lullaby."

G. B. Titsworth next started to explain the number of apples that Adam and Eve ate in the Garden of Eden. He first told how Eve ate (8) and Adam did too (2), which, he said, made 10. He gradually increased the number until he reached 865,052. Eve, he said, when she ate one (81) she ate one too (812) many making 81,812, while Adam ate for to fortify (814,240) himself. As the audience was laughing after these wonderful calculations, D. E. Titsworth remarked that probably all saw the application. After another well-rendered selection by the quartette, J. M. Titsworth read "Two Opinions" by Eugene Field.

A solo by Master Jauregui, soprano soloist at the Cathedral of the Incarnation, Garden City, L. I., was delightfully rendered, and then the chorus pleasingly sang "The Legend of "The Chimes" from "Robin Hood." After a pretty solo by Robert Gorton, the chorus sang the remarkable anthem "Little Tommy Went Fishing." The programme concluded with a "Good Night" selection by the chorus.

During the programme the members of the orchestra took up a collection in frying pans. The audience had been warned, however, and everybody turned in pennies, one man contributing five hundred brand new ones. The collection, which weighed 17½ pounds, was turned over to Mrs. F. S. Dunham, treasurer of the Ladies Society for Christian Work.

The programme was an excellent one and the humor that appeared now and then seemed to add greatly to the enjoyment. A. L. Titsworth had charge of the musical part of the entertainment and Harry Maxson of the literary part. The decorating was well done under the charge of Robert Gorton and C. S. Dunham. Part of the table decoration deserve special mention. It was apparently a large boutquet, but was made of carrots, beets and turnips cut to represent flowers, by W. J. Stephenson. It was very well done.

The refreshment committee, that cooked and prepared all the good things, consisted of L. T. Rogers, chairman, J. M. Titsworth, and J. P. Mosher. The white coated waiters that assisted them were W. H. Rogers, C. H. Dunham, Will Mosher, G. E. Stillman. Fred Stillman, Asa Randolph, Dr. Marc Clawson, Charles Randolph, Frank Smith and A. J. Spicer. Messrs. Rogers and Dunham remained in the kitchen to look after the coffee. The white aprons were made at a meeting of the men Tuesday night.

A MAN OF PROGRESS.

James E. Martine One of the Biggest Improvers of Real Estate In This City.

James E. Martine is certainly a man of activity and progress. Besides being a farmer, orator, politician, philosopher and philanthropist, he is one of the biggest real estate improvers in Plainfield. Most Plainfielders know, of course, that all that section of the city below East Ninth street and east of Park avenue was opened up by Mr. Martine several years ago, but there are doubtless few today who know he is extensively engaged in building a high-class of residences on his property. A representative of the Press accompanied Mr. Martine through two of his newly erected houses on East Ninth street a day or two ago and they are certainly models of up-to-dateness. They are prettily designed in architecture and are arranged throughout with the idea of combining beauty and convenience. Broad verandas surround both of them, the rooms are large and airy, and yet small enough to make them cosy, and taken all the way through they are designed to extract that essence of serene comfort which is found in a pleasant home. Every little detail in their construction is attended to with much attention and the most prominent portion of the structure.

Mr. Martine has in his mind the extension of Third place further through his property, and he has already the lines surveyed for that purpose and is filling in and leveling off that section near Ninth street preparatory to opening the thoroughfare. As planned, the street will run diagonally west from Ninth street to Prospect avenue, coming out near the house now occupied by Howard Smith. There it will turn and in a serpintine route continue to Martine avenue. This will open up one of the most desirable residential streets in Plainfield.

A PROSPEROUS CHURCH.

Annual Meeting of the Crescent Avenue Church and Chapels.

The annual meeting of the Crescent Avenue church, Hope, Warren and Bethel chapel was held last evening in the chapels of the church. Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, the pastor, presided. Reports were read from all the societies in the church and chapels. Each department showed progress and the members were much encouraged. Dr. Murray reported for the Crescent Avenue Sunday-school, Rev. G. K. Newell and H. G. Squires for Hope chapel, and Rev. J. O. McKelvey and L. N. Lovell for Warren chapel. Rev. Mr. Alexander reported for Bethel chapel.

The amount of money received from all sources during the year was reported to be about $28,000.

There has been an increase in membership in the church and chapels, as well as the several societies, and all branches of the work start the new year with increased zeal and love.

Dr. Murray and John Leal were unanimously re-elected as elders, and Dr. Murray as deacon of the Crescent Avenue church.

The report of the trustees of the church was noteworthy, the excellent condition of affairs being a source of encouragement to all.

Compliment to a Plainfielder.

At the recent Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church held in Newark, the Rev. W. P. Ferguson, president of the Hackettstown Seminary, paid a high tribute to the Rev. G. H. Whitney, the former president, and a member of the conference. Mr. Whitney is a resident of this city and a son-in-law of P. M. French, of Somerset street.

May Have Rubber Tire Wheels.

The wheels to Chief Doane's wagon are in such a condition that they need replacing, and there is considerable talk of putting rubber tires on the new wheels.

BOROUGH G. O. P. DELEGATES.

Representatives Elected to the State and Congressional Conventions.

A Republican caucus was held in the North Plainfield schoolhouse last Tuesday for the purpose of electing three delegates to attend the Third Congressional District Convention to be held in New Brunswick, Thursday, April 9th, and three delegates to attend the Republican State Convention to be held at Trenton, Thursday, April 16th, at which time delegates-at-large will be chosen to go to the National Convention to be held at St. Louis.

Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., called the meeting to order, after which W. Wallace Howland was selected as chairman and S. B. Joseph secretary. The latter read the call of the meeting. Hon. Charles Place then stated that the call was issued in the name of the township and therefore the latter was entitled to one delegate and the borough according to the number of legal voters.

Assemblyman Chas. A. Reed said that the call included the township as it takes in all the voting places. The borough was still a part of the township and it was only fair that there should be one from each polling place.

From the borough, H. N. Spencer and C. A. Reed were selected to go to New Brunswick and Geo. W. Bullman from the township.

The delegates chosen to attend the State Convention were Charles S. Sminck and L. B. Woolston from the borough and Chas. Sebring from the township. Mr. Place was nominated but declined.

The secretary cast the ballot for each delegate, and they were empowered to select their own alternates.

There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

Borough Real Estate Transfers.

The following real estate transfers from the borough have recently been recorded in the Somerset county clerk's office:

John H. French et ux., to Sarah D. Vail, $1; John H. French et ux., to Wm. C. Smith, $50; John H. French et ux., to Joseph T. Vail, $1; Mary H. French et ux., to Wm. C. Smith, $1; Elston M. French to John H. French and Leonard A. Vail, $1; John D. French and husband to John H. French, $1; John H. French et ux., to Louis H. and Roxanna D. French, $1; Louis H. French et ux., to John H. French, $1; John H. French et al., to Wm. J. Rooms, et ux., to Jeremiah and James Kanaine, $300; John H. French et ux., to H. Ann Spencer, $500; Rebecca Miller et al., to Lizzie E. Swackhamer, $60; John H. French et ux., to Wm. J. Rooms, $1,000; Township of North Plainfield, to John H. French, $1; First National bank of Plainfield, to Charlotte Fritz, $8,000; Wm. H. Carter to Louis Carter, $500; Daniel B. Martin and husband to John H. Lewis, $1,882; L. M. Codrington et ux., to David T. Kenney, $1,000.

BAD, BUT PASSABLE.

THAT IS THE KIND OF MONEY A JERSEYMAN HAS BEEN MAKING.

A German Expert With Pen and Ink Has Defied Uncle Sam for Twenty Years—Lived Near Plainfield.

The United States Secret Service agents have been for nearly twenty years endeavoring to capture an expert penman who, merely with pen, ink and paper, has made counterfeits of United States bills of large denominations so excellent in execution as almost to defy detection except by an expert.

Those pen-and-ink counterfeits have made their appearance from time to time in one or another of the larger cities of the country. The Secret Service men assert that at last they have caught the counterfeiter in the person of Emanuel Ninger, whose home is at Frankfort, formerly Flagg-town. He was taken into custody as a result of the arrest of another man who tried to pass a spurious bill in New York on Saturday last. It is stated that Ninger made $10, $20 and $50 bills as far as back as in 1879. But his latest series consists of $100 bills.

On last Saturday evening Joseph Gilbert attempted to pass a $50 pen-and-ink bill in a saloon at 87 Cortlandt street, New York, and was arrested. He said that he was a farmer and came from Wilkesbarre, Pa., to dispose of some Government bonds.

A man who had bought of the bonds, he said, near the Union Trust Company's building, gave him in payment the bogus bill which he had tried to use in the saloon.

Gilbert was closely questioned by Secret Service Agent George Bogg, and finally broke down and betrayed the penman, Ninger, whose arrest followed.

Agent Bogg has received several complaints from persons who have been victimized by means of spurious bills recently, but none of them have been able to identify Gilbert as the man who had swindled them.

So extremely clever has the pen-and-ink work of Ninger been, that bills made by him have been exhibited to visitors at the Treasury Department at Washington, as specimens of the counterfeiter's handiwork. It has been considered that the maker of them might never be captured, unless he should be found actually engaged in the work.

Ninger's home at Flaggtown is a small two-story frame house about a third of a mile from the station of the south branch of the Central Railroad of New Jersey. Yesterday it had the appearance of being deserted. All the blinds were closed. The family consists of Mr. and Mrs. Ninger and four children, three girls, aged 12, 10 and 3 years respectively, and a boy, aged 6 years. The Ningers went to Flaggtown about three years and a half ago from Westfield, where they lived eight or nine years. Previous to that, Mrs. Ninger said they lived in Cincinnati. They own the house at Flaggtown. They paid $1,500 for it when they went there to live.

Mrs. Ninger said yesterday to a New York Sun reporter that she had never suspected that her husband was doing anythingthing wrong. "He would go upstairs," she said, "and stay for a long time without telling me what he was doing. He always gave me money to buy clothes for myself and the children, but not much of it." The ragged garments of the children bore out the last statement.

"He always bought all the meat and groceries at Somerville," Mrs. Ninger said, "and all the money went through my hands. About once a month he would go to New York for a day or two, and would always bring back money, which he said he had made in stock speculation."

The room upstairs in which Ninger spent so much of his time contained two beds, in which the children slept, from which it would appear that Ninger did most of his work during the daytime. The only other furniture in the room yesterday was a small table and a cooking stove.

The people of Flaggtown were much excited over Ninger's arrest, for he had always been regarded as one of the model citizens of the place. The neighbors said that in all their dealings with him he had been honest and peaceable. He always paid cash for everything that he bought, and it is said that on one or two occasions he has tided some of his fellow townsmen over financial difficulties with good-sized loans.

Ninger came to this country from Prinn, Germany, twenty years ago, it is said. There he was a grocery clerk, but he developed a talent for drawing and learned crayon and more intricate work.

Cottages on the Mountain.

William C. Smith has received the contract for the masonary work on three new summer cottages which are to be erected on the mountain this summer by persons who are struck with the picturesque and desirable location for summer recreation. The work is now under way. The Mountain Park Inn is receiving its first coat of paint.

SILVER WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Hicks Have Been Married Twenty-five Years.

Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Hicks, of 824 West Third street, celebrated in an appropriate manner the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage last Friday. Friends and relatives had gathered to such an extent that the house was filled to its utmost capacity, about 150 being present.

The marriage ceremony was performed over by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of the Monree Avenue chapel. After the ceremony had been performed Rev. Mr. O'Donnell made a few remarks fitting to the occasion, and ended by kissing the bride. In a few well-chosen remarks Mr. O'Donnell presented the happy couple with a coal hod. Mr. Hicks replied in a humorous manner.

The presents received formed a very handsome group, the display being a useful as well as an ornamental one. A silver water set was given by Rebecca Lodge, a mahogany table by Queen City Lodge, I. O. O. F., while Mr. Hicks' fellow patternmakers at the Pond Tool Works, sent a large lamp, and Bobecca Lodge also gave a crazy quilt, portions of which were contributed by various members of the lodge.

At the close of the evening refreshments were served and music rendered by several of those present, and it was nearly midnight before the last guest had departed for home.

PROFITS OF THE MINSTRELS.

The Crescent Wheelmen Settle Up Several of Their Liabilities.

At a meeting of the entertainment committee of the Crescent Wheelmen last night to hear reports on their minstrels it was found that out of the $700 receipts the club would net about $420.

Immediately after the entertainment committee had adjourned a meeting of the Board of Directors was held, when the profits of the minstrels were immediately paid out in liquidating a number of debts. Fifty dollars was paid on each of the two notes, $80 for rent and a number of other accounts were also straightened up. The club will probably not keep the building which they now occupy any longer than the first of July, when their lease expires.

EDITOR REINER AT LIBERTY.

Two Men in Plainfield Become His Bondsmen for $10,000.

John Max Reiner, the editor of the New Jersey Herald, of Elizabeth, who has been in jail there since March 7th on twenty-six charges of alleged criminal libel, made by Mayor Rankin, obtained his liberty last niget.

Henry Van Sickle and Justice Vincent W. Nash, of this city, went on his bond for $10,000. They, it is understood, got collateral security. The case will come up before the May Grand Jury.

Better Delivery Wagons Coming.

The United States Express Company are now in possession of their new, handsome and commodious stable in the rear of Van Zandt's feed store on Park avenue, and the American flag floated proudly from the staff yesterday denoting the fact. Manager Mills has worked assiduously to give the public the best service possible and they appreciate it. In a short time he will have five new express wagons, one double and four singles. The stable is fitted in the most approved and modern method and is certainly a credit to the company and the town. It is built of brick and thoroughly fire-proof.

DIDN'T STOP TO DISPUTE

MRS. BISHOP ORDERS BOYS OFF HER PROPERTY WITH A REVOLVER.

A Party of City Young Fellows Want to Make a Short Cut and Bring up Against a Woman With a Will.

A party of young men from this city had the novel and not particularly pleasant experience of being ordered around at the point of a revolver Thursday afternoon. The party consisted of Bertram Rockwell, Archibald Butler, Will Pike, Garfield Pike, David Scott, Lester Baldwin, William DeLong and Thomas Blair, and they had taken a stroll on the mountain during the afternoon. After visiting the "look out," they started to walk over to see the Mountain View Hotel. On their way over they had to pass by the solitary house that is occupied by Mrs. Bishop. Instead of going around by the road they took the short cut that passed close to the house. Several of the young men had already gone by when a woman appeared in the doorway and ordered them back. As several of the party were past the property the remaining ones followed during the orders of the woman. They went over to the hotel and went through it.

As they wished to return to the "lookout" the party started to recross the disputed property, taking care to give the home of Mrs. Bishop a wider berth than before. They had not gone very far, however, when Mrs. Bishop appeared again, this time leading her dog. She walked straight up to Garfield Pike, who happened to be in the lead and, pointing a revolver at him, ordered him and his companions to get off her property. The sight of the revolver rather surprised the young men but several of them prepared to fight. Pike then inquired how far down her property extended and she told him to the road.

Deciding that discretion was the better part of valor, the young men retraced their steps and went back by the road while Mrs. Bishop retired to the house.

CLOSE TO BEING A CENTENARIAN.

Miss Susan Honeyman Passes Her Ninety-First Birthday.

One of the pleasant features accompanying old age is to be kindly remembered by those younger in years. Such was the case Wednesday afternoon, when Mrs. Susan Honeyman, of Grove street, celebrated the ninety-first anniversary of her birthday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Dr. D. C. Adams, of Grove street. It was a delightful event, and the hostess enjoyed it to the fullest extent. Those present were the family of her son, J. Newton Honeyman, her daughter, Mrs. N. P. Todd, of Atlantic Highlands, and Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Dunham, of Bound Brook. During the afternoon two very interesting letters were read, one from her daughter, Mrs. Carmon Parse, who is now in Knoxville, Tenn., and the other from, her seven-year-old great great granddaughter, Cozella Corbett, of Le Roy, Minn.

The afternoon was one of real pleasure to all and the excellent refreshments served added not a little to completing the event. Each one wished their hostess many years of true happiness and health.

Mr. Jaquett in His New Store.

One of the best equipped gents' furnishing goods store in the city is the one conducted by F. H. Jaquett, on East Front street. Mr. Jaquett is now located in his handsome new store and is ready to do business. He has a full and complete line of white shirts, neckwear, collars and cuffs, all in the latest styles. He has also a fine line of men's suits and trousers. A special feature will be the children's department with suits and trousers to fit any child. Don't forget he carries a complete stock of the latest style hats, and the best part of it all is that the goods can be purchased to suit anyone's pocketbook. Those who visit this store will find the genial and popular Jerry Van Winkle, Jr., who studies to please his customers.

Cheaper to Have Paid at First.

A week ago a woman living on Grove street, near Greenbrook road, was arrested and fined $10 by Justice Crosley for maintaining a nuisance on her property. She raised a great fuss over the conviction and was given a few days in which to pay the fine. She showed no disposition to pay the fine, however, and a levy was made on her piano. She claimed the piano belonged to her daughter, but as the daughter is under age, this argument did not stand. She finally agreed to pay the fine and also considerable costs incurred by the officials in the endeavor to collect it.

Mischievous Boys.

A crowd of boys have lately been invading the property bordering Green brook, just west of the Washington avenue bridge and Abraham Angleman and Lemuel E. Hart, who live on West Front street, have been complaining about certain eggs and pigeons that have been missing. Signs have been put up and it will go hard with any other offenders that are caught.

COLORS FOR THE VOLUNTEERS.

Major Pattie Watkins to Visit the Local Post Next Thursday.

Major Pattie Watkins, who commands the New York city and New Jersey Division of the Volunteers, comprising seventeen organized and officered posts, will visit Plainfield Post on Thursday next and present the colors of the organization and the American standard. The meeting will be in Reform Hall which has been secured permanantly as the armory of the Volunteers. A street parade in which each of the thirty-six soldiers will carry the stars and stripes will preceed the presentation. An important feature of the meeting will be the excellent singing of Major Watkins, who is famous as the "Welch Nightengale."

The local corps of the regular Salvation Army are having a hard tussle to maintain an existence, but the headquarters are determined that the barracks shall remain open for one year at least, and to that end have signed a lease for the hall in the Elkwood building, guaranteeing that if the local soldiers cannot pay the rent of $75 per month, the headquarters will make good the deficiency. The army meetings are meagrely attended and the officers are surrounded by circumstances which makes their work extremely discouraging. But with that Christian servitude which has distinguished the army ever since its formation, they go plodding on with a diligent spirit that cannot but command the respect and admiration of people who realize their unfliching devotion to the cause of saving souls.

MISS HUMBLE'S RECEPTION.

A Number of Young People Pleasantly Entertained Last Night.

Miss Mattie Humble gave a very pleasant reception to a few of her friends last evening at her home on Somerset street. The rooms were very prettily decorated with pinks and roses, presenting a bright and cheerful appearance. The evening was passed in playing games and listening to excellent instrumental and vocal music, after which refreshments were served. Those who accepted Miss Humble's hospitality were Miss Stackhouse, Miss Jenkins, Miss Lizzie Stafford, Miss Margaret Schuck, Miss Linbarger, Robert Davis, Wm. Simmonds, Bert Steiner, James Stafford, Wm. Moore, Walter Linbarger, of Plainfield, George Richardson and Wm. Richardson of Dunellen.

The McAll Auxiliary.

The monthly meeting of the Plainfield McAll Auxiliary was held at the Public Library Building, Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock. The resignation of the secretary, Miss Sadie Hilliard Hunter, was accepted with deep regret, as she has been an efficient officer. Miss Annie J. Bronson was elected to fill the unexpired term of Miss Hunter. It was also decided that the regular meeting should be omitted in May owing to the annual meeting of the American McAll Association to be held in the Westminister church, at Elizabeth, on May 6th and 7th. The delegates appointed being Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, president, Mrs. James Petrie and Mrs. A. C. Baldwin, vice-presidents, Mrs. James M. Middledith and Miss Annie J. Bronson. It was earnestly requested that as many members as possible attend the meeting at Elizabeth.

A Hot Firm.

The combination of George O. Stevens and William N. Runyon is a hot one, though they are engaged in a coal business. But, of course, this is a mere figurative saying, more expressive to the mind of a business world than to those who have a strict regard for the elementary rules of rhetoric. The young men are popular, have a large circle of friends, are known to be thorough business-like, handle a good mine of coal, and, in fact, have every element to make them successful, as no doubt they will be.

Moves to Utah.

Aaron Keyser, accompanied by his family, has left his handsome residence on Watchung avenue and gone to his former home at Salt Lake City, where he was called to look after his property there. In bidding good-bye to E. C. Mulford, yesterday, he said that anyone not satisfied with Plainfield as a place of residence would not be satisfied with any place. As for himself he was perfectly satisfied, and only sorry that he had to leave.

Charged With Trespassing.

Tunis Vail was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza on the charge of trespassing on the Jersey Central Railroad. Thomas Bowser, his colored companion, was not present, so the Judge reserved his decision until Tuesday morning.

The broad tire bill has become a law, and a signal stroke in favor of good roads is accomplished thereby. Township committees are empowered to give a rebate tax to any farmer or teamster who uses a broad tire on his wagon.

A LESSON.

When in my heart love first began,
So well I played my part,
Her father said I was a man
Right after his own heart.

Her sister said I was a dear,
Her brother thought me fine,
And to mamma did I appear
A creature half divine.

But when I asked her for her hand
She laughed a laugh most gay,
And told me in sweet accents bland
To call some other day.

Next time I find myself involved
By fate in love's mad whirl,
Upon one thing I am resolved:
I'm going to court the girl.
—Tom Masson, in Detroit Free Press.

A ROMANTIC TRAGEDY.

THE Little Tennessee river winds circuitously through these large mountains and finally finds its way into the Tennessee at Lenoir City, at a point near the state line between Tennessee and North Carolina. Yellow creek empties into the Little Tennessee. About five miles up this creek lived old man Burchfield and his family, composed of his wife and two children, one a boy of sixteen and the other a girl of eighteen. Their parents called them Lem and Lize. Lem did not amount to much, but Lize was known through all the mountain settlements as the had a pretty face and a beautiful figure. The arts of fashion were never known to her and nature was her only teacher. She could climb a mountain or shoot a rifle as good as anyone.

A few miles from the Burchfields there lived another old settler named Wilson. This old man was blessed with a large crop of boys, the oldest being known as Bill.

Bill was not a handsome boy, neither was he extra smart, but, as old man Burchfield expressed it, "he was one of the evenest boys you ever seen." Bill was a favorite with Lize, and more than one Sunday did he spend at the Burchfield cabin "a woolin' and a-coolin' her." His affection was by no means reciprocated, for this fair maiden loved another. Lize had once attended a dance in Cade's Cove, and while there she met a young man named Zeb Simpson. They danced together several times, and before the festivities closed over Zeb and Lize had told each other of their love.

Zeb was a little handsomer in the eyes of Lize than Bill, and besides he had more money. He could sit and tell all about the big bounds in Maryville and Sevierville, having visited both places.

On the following Sunday Zeb was also a visitor at the Burchfield cabin, much to the discomfiture of Bill. Zeb continued his visits, and it was not many months before there was a deadly enmity between the two mountain bucks. It was reported that Bill had said he would kill his rival before he should take his girl away from him. This greatly annoyed Lize and Zeb, because they had an idea that Bill would do just as he had said, so they met in secret together and fixed, as they thought, a great plan to get rid of Bill.

The plan agreed upon was this: Bill owned a small still way down in creek, where he made enough whisky for his own use and a little to sell. Zeb was to go to Maryville, where he could find Freshaur, a revenue man, and inform him of the still in the mountains. Freshaur was to go to Lize, and from her he was to get all the information needed. The revenue man started out on his mission, and after a tiresome journey reached old man Burchfield's on Yellow creek.

The girl, as soon as she had talked awhile with the stranger and found out who told him to come there, immediately went out to Bill to meet her at his still soon the next morning, as she wanted to see him.

"Bill received the message with feelings of great joy. He didn't sleep a wink that night. Many a vision passed through his mind. Air castles were built one after another.

Long before day the next morning found him at his still, cleaning it and fixing a nice little rustic seat for the idol of his heart. But he was soon to meet with disappointment in a manner which was least expected. While sitting at the foot of a large poplar tree partly dreaming, there suddenly sprang out from among the bushes a man with a Winchester directly leveled at Bill's face.

HE RECOGNIZED BILL WILSON.

"Throw up your hands!" the man with the Winchester exclaimed.

"All right, Mister Officer," said Bill. "Come on up git me; I am not er goin' to feel hard at you. I am er ready to go with yer, but please let me say a few words afore I leave my still."

"All right," said the officer, and as Bill knelt down he was heard to utter these words:

"Good-by, old still, I may never see yer again, but I swear afore God that if I live ter git outen this me or Zeb Simpson will die."

Bill had seen through the whole scheme, and had taken an oath to kill the man who had robbed him.

The revenue man destroyed the still and carried his prisoner to Maryville jail, where a number of other prisoners were incarcerated preparatory to attending the "big court" at Knoxville. There were several murderers confined in the jail, and a plan of escape was in progress when Bill was placed inside its walls. They found no trouble in getting the new man to help them, and for three weeks they worked all the time they could, and finally a night was set to make a break for freedom. Their plans were successful, and the next morning the town was all astir over Bill delivery. In the excitement which followed Bill was forgotten. There were more important ones to catch, and he found no trouble in making his way back to his old home.

He traveled over the mountains where no one would see him, and he slipped in home after dark one Saturday night. The old folks were glad to see him, but he was destined to receive bad news. Zeb was coming over to marry Lize the next day.

Bill never said a word, but went to his bed, after eating a snack, telling the folks that he would not be home on the following day.

Before daybreak Bill took his old trusty rifle and wended his way over to the foot of "Old Bald" mountain, where he knew Zeb would pass on his way to Burchfield's.

He sat down on the side of the path and waited. About two hours after sunup he saw some one coming down the mountain with a rifle on his shoulder. Upon closer examination it proved to be his old-time rival. Would he step back in the bushes and murder him? No. Face to face he would meet him and settle the grudge. Zeb plodded along with a light heart, not dreaming of the fate which awaited him. As he suddenly rounded a turn in the path he recognized not two feet in front of him his old enemy, Bill Wilson.

"Zeb," said Bill, "you beat me outen the gal, and you thought I was in jail, but I am here right now to kill you."

Hardly had he uttered these words when two rifles were quickly raised and two shots were quickly fired, but only one report could have been heard. Zeb was shot through the heart, while the deadly leaden missile wended its way through Bill's brain, and they both fell dead. At the Burchfield mansion all was astir. The neighbors had assembled to witness the marriage ceremony. Ten o'clock came and the groom had not put in his appearance; eleven and twelve o'clock came without any change, and the impatience of Lize knew no bounds. Without saying a word to anyone she slipped out of the cabin and wended her way in the direction her lover would come, hoping to meet him on the road.

On and on she went until she nearly reached the foot of Bald mountain, when she stumbled and fell. She got up and sat down at the foot of a tree and waited several hours for Zeb to come. Would she go to him? Yes.

With a sudden start she arose, and hardly had she gone ten steps before her eyes rested on the forms of two men lying prostrate on the ground. She started to run at first, but finally concluded to see what was the matter. When she got closer she saw who it was, and not being able to stand the shock she fell in a dead faint.

The Burchfields and neighbors waited for Lize to return, and at last they concluded to go in search of her. They found her at the foot of the mountain, lying in a state of unconscious, and a little further on they found Bill and Zeb. The Burchfields soon restored Lize to her reason, but in no manner would she answer any questions applied to her. A consultation was held and it was agreed that they should all go home, as it would soon be dark, and the next morning they would return and bury the dead where they were found.

A great sensation was created, but it soon died away. The general belief was that Zeb and Bill had met and quarreled over Lize and their deaths were the result.

Five years had passed and Lize had grown into womanshood. During all this time she had never uttered one word in regard to the tragedy. One Sunday, when she was attending meeting, she became very much interested, and before the services were over she had professed her faith in God, and to that assembly she gathered and she related every detail from beginning to end of this noted case and asked forgiveness of everyone for the part she played.

Every year, as long as she lived, at a certain time she would go and gather wild flowers and place over these two graves.

Death finally called her away, and the two graves are grown over with grass, and the stranger who passes by never fails to wonder who is buried there.—Chattanooga Times.

Democratic State Convention.

The Democratic voters of New Jersey are requested to meet at such times and places as may be designated by their local committees to elect delegates to a State Convention, to be held at

Taylor's Opera House,

in the city of Trenton, on

THURSDAY, MAY 7th, 1896,

at 12 o'clock noon, for the purpose of selecting four (4) Senatorial and sixteen (16) District Delegates to the Democratic National Convention to be held to nominate candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States.

The basis of representation will be one delegate for each two hundred Democratic votes cast at the Gubernatorial election of 1895, and one for each fraction of the same over one hundred; but each ward and township shall be entitled to at least one delegate.

DEMOCRATIC STATE COMMITTEE.
E. F. C. Young, Chairman. Willard C. Fisk, Secretary.

The Trenton True American observes that Morton is the only sound money candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination.

A New Jersey farmer figured it out one rainy day that he had walked 300 miles in cultivating one acre of corn. He thereupon sold his farm and moved to a town, where he walked 600 miles to find a job.—Exchange.

The Bound Brook Chronicle this week publishes a half column article reviewing the record of Assemblyman Reed. Among the complimentary allusions to genial Charles were these:

In the session just ended Somerset's Assemblyman, Charles A. Reed, was a prominent figure. He was chairman of the committee on Incidental expenses, and as such made a record for economy. In 1894, under Democratic rule, the incidental expenses amounted to about $34,000; in 1895, $30,000; 1896, $4,700, and this year to but $4,200.

He was recognized as one of the leaders on the floor of the House, and as a man actuated by honest motives, having the courage of his convictions and one safe to follow.

The resignation of Hon. E. F. C. Young as Chairman of the Democratic State committee leaves vacant an important post in the Democratic politics of New Jersey. The time seems to suggest as a fit selection for that responsible position, Hon. W. J. Keys, of Somerset county, a gentleman of great dignity, and personal honesty.

The above, from the Plainfield Press, is very complimentary to our ex-Senator, but we are in a position to state that Mr. Keys is not a candidate for the Chairmanship, and would not accept if elected thereto. It is said that Gen. Donnelly, of Trenton, will be asked to fill the vacancy.—Somerville Messenger.

Assemblyman Reed, of Somerset county has proved himself one of the best qualified legislators in this State. Since Senator Thompson has retired from active politics and has accepted a position as clerk of the court of chancery, the Republicans of Somerset county could not do better than to elect Mr. Reed to the Senate.—Elizabeth Journal.

Nothing wrong about that, except the Democrats are going to elect the Senator and their candidate will doubtless be Hon. Wm. J Keys, against whom Mr. Reed with his usual keen perception of possibilities will without the shadow of a doubt decline to run.—Bound Brook Democrat.

It is reported now that the reason why ex Secretary Whitney will not think of accepting the Democratic Presidential nomination is that he intends to get married. Of course some people might be incredulous enough to suggest that if circumstances were such that he could fairly entertain any expectation of being elected, his acquaintance of a wife would not interfere with his acceptance of a nomination. There have even been those who thought that that other eminent Benedict, ex-President Harrison, if the nomination came his way, might accept it even if it followed close upon a bridal tour. It is to be hoped that the doubters are right in these instances. Conjugal devotion is a beautiful thing, but what would be the people's fate if all elderly widowers who got married again declined to do anything to save the country?—Newark News.

The Democratic State Committee met in Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, Saturday afternoon. Edward F. C. Young presided. He has tendered his resignation as chairman, but the committee has not succeeded in finding his successor, and he was persuaded to continue as chairman until the meeting to be held on May 6th in Trenton, on the eve of the State Convention. Among those mentioned as the new chairman are General Richard A. Donnelly, of Trenton; William B. Gourlay, of Paterson; James J. Bergen, of Somerset county, and Oliver H. Kelly, of New Brunswick. There will be another vacancy to fill, Abram De Bonde, of Bergen, offered his resignation, but was persuaded to refrain from presenting it until the meeting at Trenton. Arrangements were made for the State Convention. R. V. Lindabury, Harry Paul and Howard Hayes were appointed a committee to prepare a platform, and Rufus Blodgett, R. V. Lindabury and Eckert Budd were selected as the committee to name the temporary officers.

A JOYOUS EASTER DAY.

THE RESURRECTION CELEBRATED IN THE CHURCHES YESTERDAY.

Special Services Rendered in all the Temples of Christianity to Commemorate the Day That Christ Arose.

From The Press of April 6th.

A sunlit atmosphere and a gentle, balmy breeze that made all life glint and sparkle and wave, yesterday, contributed to make Easter an ideal day. Sweet scented flowers were redolent in all the churches, while carols of songs made joyful the temples of Christianity to commemorate the great event in the life of Christ. The services in the various churches were as follows:

CHURCH OF THE REDEEMER.

There was a profuse display of flowers at the Easter service of the Church of the Redeemer, Grove street, yesterday, the whole pulpit being banked with flowers, and an elaborate programme of music was rendered by a choir consisting of Miss Stevens, the Misses Hasbrook, Miss Davis, E. A. Sprowl, H. S. Thomas, J. S. Stevens, under the direction of Walter A. Hudson, the well-known basso, of New York. The congregation was about the largest that has attended worship in the edifice since it was erected, every seat being filled, and all standing room was also occupied. The offering received will be devoted to the building fund. The pastor of the church, Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, preached a very eloquent sermon from the text, "Yet they knew not the scripture that He must rise from the dead." The sacrament of the Lord's supper was observed.

The musical part of the service was as follows:

Processional, Schilling; Anthem Christ Our Passover, F., Gloria; Te Deum in D, H. Farmer; Jubitate in C, W. C. Williams; Hymn; Kyrie, B. De Beeg; Gloria Tibi; Hymn; Gloria; Offertory, "They have taken away my Lord," Sir John Stainer; Escription; Sanctus; Gloria in Exclesus. The Sunday-school of the church united with the church at the regular evening service and their offering will also be devoted to the building fund.

GRACE M. E. CHURCH.

Grace M. E. church celebrated Easter in a very appropriate manner and large congregations were present. The platform was tastefully decorated with choice potted plants. In the morning the following programme was rendered: Anthem, "Now is Christ Risen," choir; tenor solo, Mr. Douglass; anthem, "Awake Thou that Sleepest," choir; soprano solo, Miss Grace Carroll. The new pastor, Rev. H. S. Johnston, preached for the first time from the text John 20:20, and his sermon was favorably received. In the afternoon the exercises were as follows: Carol, school; prayer, Rev. H. S. Johnston; anthem, choir; recitation, "A Spring Walk," Mabel Garey; selection, Charles Hummer, L. H. Hummer, Ezra Loomis, Frank S. Runyon; recitation, "A Legend of the Northland," Grace and Charles Powell; vocal duet, "Misses Carroll; recitation, "Lillies," six little girls; address, Rev. H. S. Johnston; singing, primary department; selection, male quartette; address, superintendent, John Valiant.

The pastor preached and appropriate sermon in the evening, and the following musical programme was rendered: Anthem, "The Resurrection," choir; soprano solo, Miss Alice Carroll; anthem, "He is Risen," choir. The following composed the choir: Sopranos, Miss Margarette Schuck, Miss Laura Steiner, Mrs. E. E. Winckler, Miss Tingley; altos, Miss Grace Carroll, Miss Alice Carroll; tenors, Mr. Douglass, Ezra Loomis, L. H. Hummer and Charles Hummer.

CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH.

The services at the Crescent Avenue church yesterday were unusually interesting and largely attended. The floral decorations were very elaborate, consisting chiefly of lilies and palms from the conservatory of Councilman S. A. Ginna. They were formed about the platform with rare taste. The music rendered by the choir under the direction of Organist Frank J. Smith. Below will be found the programmes in full:

Morning service—Organ prelude, Bereny; Doxology; The Lord's Prayer; Festival Te Deum, Buck; Scripture reading; Hymn 57; Scripture reading; Solo, "I Will Extoll Thee," Costa. Prayer; Anthem, "Now is Christ Risen," West; Hymn 328; Sermon, Matt. 28:18. All power is given unto me;" Prayer; Offertory, "O Saving Victim," Saint-Saens; Hymn 339; Benediction; Organ, "Hallelujah," Lemmens. Evening service—Organ prelude, Saint-Saens; Anthem, "The First Day of the Week," Steane; Responsive reading, selections 2 and 10; Solo, "Galilee," Combs; Hymn 359; Scripture reading; Puartette, "The Choir Angelic," Hanscom; Prayer; Quintette, "List the Cherubic Host," Gaul; Hymn 348; Sermon, Acts 17:18. "He preached Jesus and the Resurrection;" Prayer; Offertory, solo and chorus, "From Thy Love as a Father," (Redemption) Gounod; Hymn 356; Benediction; Organ "Offertoire," Wely.

The choir consisted of the following: Mrs. Emily Badta Brooke, soprano; Miss Annie P. Havdenbergh, contralto; Elmer E. Sunyon, tenor; Charles L. Lewis, basso; Frank J. Smith, organist and director; assisted by Mrs. J. K. Myers, Mrs. F. T. Clawson, Mrs. J. E. Manning, G. W. Schoonmaker and F. W. Walz.

ST. JOSEPH'S (R. C.) CHURCH.

A very fine programme of music was rendered at St. Joseph's (R. C.) church yesterday morning under the direction of J. E. Mulvey and full chorus. The church was prettily decorated with lilies and palms. An excellent sermon was preached by Rev. Father Molloy. The programme consisted of the following selections: Kyrie Eliesson, Madonno; Gloria, LaHache; Credo, LaHache; Regina Caeli, Melvil; Sanctus, LaHache; Benedictus, Wiegand; Agnus Dei, Leonard. The soloists were Miss C. Smith, soprano; Mrs. David Kenney, alto, and J. E. Bulley, basso. The service was impressive, and attended by a large congregation.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

The Easter-Day services at the First Baptist church were of especial interest, and both morning and afternoon, the large auditorium was filled with worshipers. As usual, the decorations were exceedingly fine. Around the platform and organ there was a profusion of lillies, palms, roses, azaleas and other choice flowers, presenting a scene of unequaled beauty. The music was under the direction of C. W. McCutchen and organist E. J. Fitzhugh, and the selections rendered by the choir were superb in every particular. In the morning the communion service was held, previous to which the following selections were given by the choir. "The First Day of the Week," Bruce Steane; "In the End of the Sabbath," O. B. Brown; "Te Deum, D flat," Lambillotte, arranged by E. J. Fitzhugh; "The Choir Angellic," E. W. Hascom. The soloists were Miss F. May Grant, soprano; Mrs. Knight, contralto; Wm Holmes, baritone, G. W. Smith, tenor. The Easter service and anniversary of the Sunday Schools of the church was held at three o'clock in the afternoon and the programme was as follows: Prelude, "Prelude to the Deluge," Saint-Saens; E. J. Fitzhugh, organist; P. Ludwig Conde, violinist; Howard Case, pianist; "Oh, Easter Bells," Bessie Fitzhugh, schools; Invocation, Lord's Prayer, responsive; anthem, choir; scripture lesson; carol, "Softly Now the Shades of Evening," W. Mason, East Third Street mission; prayer, Dr. Yerkes; carol, "Hail! all Hail the Easter Morning," Sebring, schools; flag drill, Boy's Brigade; hymn, "My Country 'Tis of Thee," schools. At this time the reports of the schools for the past year were given. Secretary C. H. Smith, reported for the home school. The review showed that on February 9th, 1896, there was the smallest attendance, 151, and on December 1st, 1895, the largest, 353. There were added during the year eighty-two scholars and eighty-four were dropped. In the main school there are twenty-nine classes, eight officers, thirty-one teachers; in the primary department fifteen classes, four officers, fifteen teachers and two adult classes. In all there are 452 connected with the school. Superintendent M. C. Dobbins reported for the Mount Olive Sunday-school. Owing to the fact that there was a communion service and baptism at the above church, the school was unable to be present. The report showed that $1,472 had been expended for additions to the church, and there was only a small debt. There are 200 scholars, eleven teachers, average attendance of scholars ninety-eight, teachers ten. There had been raised during the year $1,180 for pastor's salary, flagging sidewalk, new carpet and other expenses. Superintendent L. W. Randolph, reported for the East Third street Mission. There are now enrolled 160 scholars with an average attendance of seventy-five. The largest attendance was 107. The collections for the year amounted to $75. The reports were followed with a brief address by Dr. Yerkes, after which the balance of the programme was continued as follows: Carol, "Sweetly the Birds are Singing," Schnecker; schools; Scripture Lesson, Offertory, "Melodie" Wagner; organ, violin and piano; Carol, "Hallelujah! "Swell the Chorus" Wilkinson; schools, Benediction; Postlude, "Clauson D'Armour" Popp; organ, violin and piano.

ST. MARY'S (R. C.) CHURCH.

Never before in the history of the above-named church was Easter Sunday more fittingly celebrated than it was yesterday. At the three services preceding the solemn high mass the church was crowded, but at the latter service the edifice was filled to overflowing, many being unable to get seats in the church proper, but were obliged to be contented with standing in the vestibule. Many of those present were non-Catholics, attracted by the sight of witnessing the beautiful ritual of the church as observed on Easter, and also of hearing the musical programme, one that is seldom heard outside of a metropolitan church. The handsome main altar, with its many lighted candles and adorned with numerous floral pieces, Easter lilies predominating, presented a magnificent sight. Over the high altar and extending its full length were the words "He is Risen; Alleluia," brilliantly illuminated by many gas jets, while on the tabernacle was a crystal cross, similarly lighted, and very resplendent. Within the sanctuary rails formed the major portion of the collection of plants that lent their beauty to grace the scene. The Asperges preceded the 10:30 solemn high mass, of which Rev. Father P. E. Smyth was the celebrant. An excellent sermon on the Resurrection was delivered by Rev. Father Murphy. The music consisted of organ and orchestra of fifteen pieces, the latter under the leadership of Jos. Sattels. To say it was grand, is putting it mildly, and it reflected credit on Mr. Sattels. The chorus was presided over by Miss St. Leger. To M. J. Cashin, choir master, is due all praise, for it was his hard work and practice that the choir under his guidance underwent, that perfected them so that the musical portion of the services could not but be a success. The following were the soloists: Miss May Flanagan, soprano; Miss Tessie Keely, alto; T. J. Cumerford, tenor; Wm. J. O'Connor, bass. They were assisted by a chorus of twenty voices. The programme at 10:30 was as follows: Vidi Aquam, Leyendecker; Kyrie Elieson, Weber; Gloria in Excelsis, Farmer; Qui Tollis, Farmer; sermon; Credo, Farmer; Et Incarnatus, Farmer; Et Resurexit, Farmer; Regina Coeli, Cagliero; Sanctus, Weber; Benedictus, Weber; Agnus Dei, Weber; Dona Nobis, Weber; Traumerie, violin solo, Schuman, Joseph Sattels; March, Pontificale, Gounod, orchestra. At the grand vespers at 8 p. m. the following programme was rendered by a quartette, with M. J. Cashin, director, composed of Miss May Flanagan, soprano; Miss Tessie Keely, alto; T. J. Cumerford, tenor; W. J. O'Connor, bass: Domini Adjuvandum, Werner; Dixit Dominus, Werner; Confitebor, Werner; Laudate Pueri, Werner; Magnificat, chant; O Salutaris, soprano solo, Blandus, Miss May Flanagan; Tantum Ergo, trio, Verge; Laudate Dominum, chant. The service closed with the Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, a fit ending of Easter, the day that the Lord hath made.

HOLY CROSS P. E. CHURCH.

Beautiful music and beautiful flowers made the Easter services at the Holy Cross church yesterday very impressive and attractive. In the morning the programme published in Saturday night's Press was followed out. The attendance was very large. The Sunday-School held their special exercises in the church in the afternoon, which were largely attended. The children marched into the church, behind the surpliced choir and were seated in the front pews. The rector, T. Logan Murphy, made an address appropriate to the day. The floral decorations were all white and green. Easter and calla lillies, roses and other white flowers were placed about the altar and in the chancel in a way that gave a very artistic effect, while the green of the leaves of foliage plants blended very harmoniously with the flowers.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The Easter services at the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning and evening were largely attended. The front of the church presented a beautiful appearance. Easter lilies were grouped just below the pulpit and just above hung a white dove, suspended by a wire. Potted plants were arranged along the edge of the platform, while cut flowers, in vases, were placed on the piano and tables. In the morning Rev. C. E. Herring preached a sermon appropriate to the day and the choir sang several additional anthems. The musical service, the programme for which was published in Saturday's Press, was held in the evening, Mrs. B. T. Barnes, pianist, and P. Ludwig Conde, violinist, assisting W. E. MacClymont, the regular organist, in the instrumental music.

ST. STEPHEN'S P. E. CHURCH.

Easter was appropriately celebrated at St. Stephen's church yesterday. The chancel was filled with Easter and calla lilies and potted plants, artistically arranged. A white dove rested on the organ and another on the lecton. In the morning the surpliced choir sang several Easter anthems. The choir was composed of Lawrenze Smith, Robert Guttridge, George Staats, Richard Nelson, George Nelson, F. Frederickson, Fred Christensen, Orville Waring, Bert Tallamy and Percy Wheeler. William A. Wheeler was the organist. The special Easter service of the Sunday-school was held in the afternoon and was largely attended by both scholars and their friends. The special selections sung were "Christ is Risen," "The Lord is risen today," "Sing sweet Carols, Night is Past" and "The Strife is o'er, the Battle Done," Percy V. Wheeler acted as organist. Prizes for regular attendance, good behavior, bringing new scholars, fifteen in all, were presented. The Easter offering amounted to $24.73. On leaving, each scholar was presented with an Easter egg, tied with colored ribbon.

TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

At Trinity Reformed church there was a very large attendance both morning and evening, many visitors being attracted by the excellent musical programme as published in Saturday's Press. At the morning service, the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, delivered an interesting, instructive sermon from the text "The Lord is Risen," Luke 24-34, and his many friends and admirers gave him hearty congratulations before retiring from the church. The floral decorations were in competent hands, H. C. VanEmburgh acting as chairman, assisted by Miss Lizzie Dunn, Miss C. Smalley, Miss May Sheppard, Mrs. H. W. Marshall and Mrs. R. A. Meeker. Two white banners, draped with smilax, bordered in gold—one "Christ Is Risen," and the other with a cross and crown—were appropriately hung on the front of the organ. The arrangement of palms, blooming Easter and calla lilies, rubber and many potted green plants, in handsome jardiniers, on the pulpit platform, was artistically done and the committee in charge are to be congratulated for the beautiful effect produced. The music committee of the sonistory, of which F. D. Drake is chairman, is entitled much credit for the excellent choir of fourteen voices, who sang so acceptably and in such perfect unison, it being freely remarked that yesterday's choir was far ahead of all previous efforts. The organist, A. L. Titsworth, who trained them, is also to be congratulated for their finished work, which was only accomplished after many nights of rehearsing. The soprano solo "Immortality," by Mrs. Asa Collier, was particularly enjoyable at the morning service, as was her rendition of the anthems called "Easter Song," at the evening service. Mrs. H. E. Rider, Miss Runyon, and Messrs. Robert Gorton and Robert Clark, are also deserving of more than passing mention for their gratifying efforts. The evening service was in charge of the Sunday-school and consisted of singing by the choir and also by the senior and junior scholars, recitations, scripture readings, a short address by the pastor, and a few well chosen remarks of thanks etc., by Superintendent E. E. Anthony. The primary department of the Sunday-school, in charge of Superintendent Mrs. J. M. Tier, and her assistant, Miss M. Arnold, acquitted themselves well. Among the interesting features of the service was a recitation by seven boys of the primary department, viz: Morris Brokaw, Willie Nischwitz, Betram Leggett, Johnnie Yose, Arthur Calcen, Raymond Martin and Crissie Mobus. Also one by eight young misses, Lucy Goriell, Ruth Berg, Anna Beedall, Edith Calcen, Mildred Calcen, Anna Holder, Dora Wilson, Luella Day. Six little misses here sang an Easter song very prettily, followed by a recitation by Albert Yeager, "Who has Rolled Away the Stone," and "The Voice of Spring," by Anna Randall. This was followed by a solo by Master Willie Vail. Miss Carrie Fritz, of the senior department, also gave a pleasing recitation. Miss Kreitling accompanied the little ones on the chapel organ for the singing.

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

Special Easter services were held in the Seventh day Baptist church, Sabbath (Saturday) morning. Special anthems were sung by the chorus choir, and a very impressive solo was rendered by D. E. Titsworth. The choir was composed of Mrs. D. E. Titsworth and the Misses Elizabeth Allis, Bessie Titsworth, Nancy Randolph and Louise Lewis, and the Messrs. Louis Rogers, A. J. Spicer, Charles Randolph and Hobart Ayres. D. E. Titsworth was the leader. An interesting sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., on the history of the day and the reasons for its observence. The floral decorations were very handsome. Easter and calla lilies were placed in front of the pulpit, and palms, ferns and potted plants were banked on the corners of the platform. In the afternoon, Easter was observed by the Sundry-school with songs. The primary department also took part in the exercises, and six little tots gave a song and recitation. The regular church collection for the benefit of the Christian Endeavor Society was taken up at the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society in the afternoon. It amounted to $22.50.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH.

Easter was specially remembered at the First M. E. church yesterday by services in the morning, afternoon and evening. The floral decorations were elaborate and very handsome. Calla lilies were arranged along the chancel rail while inside the chancel potted plants were massed against the platform. Daisies and other white flowers surrounded the pulpit while the baptismal font contained a large bunch of calla lilies. Tables were placed inside the chancel rail and were covered with flowers. In the morning Rev. C. R. Barnes preached an Easter

3,000 DEATHS A DAY.

Startling Statistics in Regard to Consumption.

Some Idea Also of the Proportion of Cures—Analysis of the Dread Disease.

When we visit a factory where there are the most delicate and most dangerous machines, we are amazed to notice how indifferent the workmen are to the danger about them. Saws and knives work rapidly, and yet no one seems to think of danger. Long association with danger causes indifference to it.

If the statement were made that there was a contagious disease abroad in the land which was killing people at the rate of 3,000 a day in Europe, thirty a day in New York State, and nearly 100,000 in one year in the United States, every one would be aroused to action. Yet such a condition exists to-day. Consumption is a contagious disease, and the above figures concerning it are taken from recent reports. But we have become so familiar with the disease in our midst, that we do not fully understand its terrible nature.

Yet it is surprising how many recover from this disease. Even after the germs of consumption cause serious damage to the lungs, thousands recover. As yet, no specific is known for the disease. The treatment consists in giving aid to the body in its efforts to destroy the disease germs. For two centuries, cod-liver oil has occupied the first place in the list of remedies. The next valuable remedies are the hypophosphites. Some rely on one alone, but as both are recognized as of great value, we think it best to combine them. Thus you are sure of getting every help which the best remedies known to medical science can afford. In Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites the oil is emulsified, that is the oil is broken up into minute globules of fat. The oil is digested and thus saves the weakened body from doing this work. What will Scott's Emulsion do for those with weak lungs?

If taken before the germs of consumption have secured a foothold in the lungs, it will so invigorate and nourish the body that the disease will be successfully resisted. In this way it prevents consumption. Even after the lungs are diseased, the body emaciated, and the health greatly affected it will often enable the system to come off victorious. And even in the last stages of the disease, when all hope is reasonably abandoned, it lessens the severity of the attack, and makes the last days more comfortable. Scott's Emulsion brings hope and health to the great majority, while it brings comfort to all.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor.

sermon and the chorus choir rendered two Easter anthems in which the solo parts were sung by Miss Marguerette Barnes, Louis H. Bond and Raymond A. McGee. The Sunday-school held their exercises in the afternoon. The scholars met, as usual, in Vincent chapel and then marched into the church. The services were led by Superintendent J. W. Jackson. The programme was as follows: Opening chorus, Sing Ye Joyful Nations; Scripture reading, Rev. C. R. Barnes, D.D.; Invocation, Rev. C. R. Barnes, D. D.; Chorus, Ring Out, Ye Bells; Address, Rev. W. C. O'Donnell; Responsive reading, Prophecy and Fulfillment, led by G. M. Rittenhouse; Anthem, O Calvary; Responsive reading, The Sepulchre, led by G. R. Cornwell; Chorus, He Rose Again; Responsive reading, The Resurrection, led by Miss Angleman; Chorus, Hallelujah; Remarks, Rev. H. M. Simpson, of Saratoga; Hymn, King of Glory; Collection; Congregational Hymn, Coronation; Benediction. Easter cards were distributed to the school at the close. Rev. H. M. Simpson, of Saratoga, formerly of Dunellen, preached in the evening and the choir sang two special anthems. The choir was composed of Mrs. H. H. Bond and the Misses Margueretta Barnes, Mattie Humble, Alice Jenkins and Etta Raybert, sopranos; the Misses Lizzie Stafford, Florence Barnes, Eva Jenkins and Cora Shepard, altos; the Messrs. Louis H. Bond, Robert Davis and Arthur Crane, tenors; and the Messrs. Raymond A. McGee, William Symons and Alvah Davis, bassos.

MONROE AVENUE CHAPEL.

Easter Sunday was the occasion at the Monroe Avenue chapel yesterday of the reading of the annual reports of the church and Sunday-school. In the morning, the annual report of the chapel was read by James McGee, which was an especially pleasing one, showing great improvement and growth in all branches of the chapel. The annual report of the Sunday-school was read in the afternoon and showed a like improvemnt in that department. The special Easter exercises were also held in the afternoon. There were several Easter songs by the school and recitations by Vaugh McGee, Stephen Aldrich, Miss Daisy Brouard, Miss Randolph, Clarence VanDorn and little Miss Aldrich. The decorations were very tasteful and consisted of Easter lilies and potted plants arranged about the pulpit and along the platform. Several jars of cut flowers added to the pretty effect.

GRACE P. E. CHURCH.

Those who attended the Easter service at Grace P. E. church yesterday morning were impressed with the excellence of the programme and its superb rendition under the efficient direction of Mrs. W. H. Freeman, the organist. The regular choir was assisted by the young ladies choir, and solo parts were rendered by Miss Olive Newell, Arthur Freeman, Chas. Angleman and F. J. Pope. Below will be found the programme: Processional; Hymn, Angels Roll the Rock Away; Anthem, Christ our Passover, Chappel; Te Deum, Simper; Jubilate, J. Hindle; Introit, Awake Thou that Sleepeth, Simper; Kyrie Eliesou, Adlem; Gloria Tibi, Adlem; Hymn 112; Offertory, Christ is Risen, Simper; Sursum Corda, Adlem; Sanctus and Agnus Dei, Adlem; Glorie Eleisus, Adlem; Recessional, Hymn 110, Come Ye Faithful, Raise the Strain. In the evening at the children's service the young ladies' choir met the boy choir at the entrance to the church and then marched together around the church to the altar. A large cross of greens, surrounded by potted hyacinths, was an added feature of the decorations. The latter was afterward given to the sick of the parish. The Lenten mite collection amounted to $18, and goes toward Bishop Leonard's fund for the Indians. The other collection will be sent to the Bishop Scarborough fund. In the morning the collection amounted to $762, which goes toward paying off the church debt. Dr. Rodman presented a prize medal to Walter Hockridge, and Kendall Mason and Chas. Bryan received special mention as striving for the prize of a prayer-book and hymnal. Features of the evening service were the rendition of Easter-Tide, with triangle accompaniment, and the composition of "Welcome, Happy Morning," by Cleveland Howard. This was the evening programme: Processional; Lord's Prayer and Versicles; Responsive reading; carol, "Easter Tide," school; Lesson; carol, "Welcome, Happy Morning," school; Creed and Collects; carol, "God Has Sent His Angels," school; address, Rev. Dr. Rodman; offerings; carol, "Across the Eastern Hilltops," school; Benediction; Recessional.

PARK AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH.

Beautiful flowers were tastefully arranged about the platform at the Park avenue Baptist church yesterday in commemoration of Easter. Potted plants and Easter lilies almost hid the pulpit from view and then sloped down toward the ends, giving a pyramidical effect. Owing to a recent change in organists, no elaborate musical programme had been arranged but the orchestra in the evening, rendered a number of delightful selections. The choir, which assisted in the regular Easter music, consisted of Miss Cora Brokaw, Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Mrs. I. B. Hill and Miss Henrietta Cuming, soprano; Miss Emma V. Fish, Mrs. Charles Steiner and Miss Moss, altos; M. S. Lowry, William Stimpson and I. B. Hill, tenors; and T. A. Cuming, Wesley Brokaw and Nelson VanWinkle, bassos. Rev. J. W. Richardson's special topic for the evening was "Christ's Easter Victory."

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

The Easter services at the Congregational church were held yesterday morning and the programme, published in Saturday's Press, was carried out. The choir that rendered the special Easter music consisted of a double quartette, the Misses M. G. Morse, Eda Beekman, M. E. Meredith and Julia Belknap, and the Messrs. Herbert Schutt, Horace J. Martin, Stacy R. Reynolds and John Burnett. Mrs. B. T. Barnes presided at the organ. Rev. C. L. Goodrich preached a very effective sermon on the topic: "The Angel's Message."

The floral decorations were very beautiful and consisted of palms, smilax, marguerites, Easter lilies and calla lilies, grouped along the edge of the platform. A large bunch of yellow tulips were placed on the piano and a jar of Easter lilies rested on the communion table.

MARCONNIER CHAPEL.

After the regular Sunday-school exercises yesterday afternoon in the Marconnier chapel everybody was invited to the lawn of Gen. Schwenck. Long grass had been spread over part of the lawn, and about 300 small baskets, full of decorated eggs, real eggs, were hidden there. The young people then searched for them and each kept the basket they found and its contents, about six eggs. Nearly 400 of the residents of the neighborhood were the guests of Gen. Schwenck at the egg hunt.

WARREN CHAPEL.

The Easter services at Warren Chapel were held yesterday afternoon and consisted of a long programme of carols, prose and scripture reading. The decorations consisted of Easter lilies in a profuse display which were arranged about the pulpit in a very artistic manner. Rev. J. O. McKelvey spoke on the theme "Jesus Met Them." There was a large congregation.

Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills.

For thirty years Dr. Deane has made a study of dyspepsia, and a thirty years' study cured many cases of it that probably no other fifty physicians combined. He gave up the study of theology and took to medicine, because the most eminent physicians of that day gave him up as a chronic dyspeptic, with only a short time to live.

Result of this change—a hearty, healthy, useful life, an enormous practice, and a demand for his pills greater than for all others combined wherever known. For sale at all druggists. Send for a free sample. When wrapper if constipated, yellow if bowels are loose.

A Surprise Party.

Mrs. Charles L. Force, of 23 Pearl street, gave a surprise birthday luncheon to Mrs. David Force Saturday. The decorations consisted of yellow and white and were exceedingly pretty. The surprise was complete in every respect. Those present were: Mrs. C. M. Apgar, Mrs. Wm. Lunger, Mrs. Wm. M. Buckman, Miss Bertha Richards, Mrs. Corra Ryno, Mrs. Frank Krewson, Mrs. David Force, Miss Minnie Force, of Plainfield, Mrs. Sylvester Fishbough, of Easton and Mrs. C. M. Apgar, of High Bridge.

Died After a Long Illness.

After an illness of two months, Mrs. Julia Pendleton, widow of the late Henry C. Pendleton, died at Muhlenburg Hospital Saturday evening. She was 50 years of age and leaves two daughters and a son. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock from the Mt. Olive Baptist church.

GOT AWAY WITH A PENNY

SMALL HAUL MADE BY BURGLARS LAST SATURDAY NIGHT.

Obtained an Entrance to the Clinton Avenue Station, Stole Two Cents, Were Frightened, and Dropped One.

Burglars entered the Clinton Avenue station of the Jersey Central Railroad Saturday night and succeeded in escaping with one cent. They forced an entrance through one of the windows on the first floor with a jimmy. They then climbed over the high railing into the office, but found only a number of unstamped tickets and two cents in money. Mrs. Meader, the station agent, lives on the second floor in the station.

The noise below awakened her and she sprang from her bed. The uninvited visitors on the first floor heard her and took to flight, dropping one of the pennies in their hurry. Mrs. Meader says that if the robbers will send her their address, she will mail them the penny they lost.

There is no clue to the depredators or their disappearance, but Mrs. Meader is certain that there was more than one as she heard the thieves as they ran away.

A False Diagnosis.

La Grippe is confounded by many persons with a severe attack of catarrh, which in some respects resembles the former. These individuals suffer severely with pain about the forehead, eyes and ears, with soreness in throat and stoppage of the nasal passages, and, in fact, are incapacited for work every third for days at a time. These are catarrhal sufferers. Ely's Cream Balm has been used with the best results in such cases. The remedy will give instant relief.

NAPOLEON AND LOUISA.

Meeting of the Emperor and Queen of Prussia at Tilsit.

It was at this crisis of Prussia's affairs that the king, after much urging, consented to summon his queen. The rumors and insinuations concerning the czar's undue admiration of her, so industriously spread by Napoleon, had made him over-sensitive; but as a last resort he felt the need of her presence. She came with a single idea to make the cause of Magdeburg her own. She had suffered under the malicious innuendos of Napoleon regarding her character; she had shared the disgrace of the Berlin war party in the crushing defeat at Jena and Auerstadt: she had been a wayfarer among a disgraced and helpless people; but her spirit was not broken, and she announced her visit with all the dignity of her station. The court carriage in which she drove, accompanied by her ladies in waiting, reached Tilsit on July 6, and drew up before the door of the artisan under whose roof were the rooms of her husband. Officers and statesmen were gathered to receive and encourage her with good advice; but she waved them away with an earnest call for quiet, so that she might collect her ideas.

In a moment Napoleon was announced. As he climbed the narrow stairway she rose to meet him. Friend and foe agree as to her beauty, her taste and her manners; her presence, in a white dress embroidered with silver, and with a pearl diadem on her brow, was queenly. In her husband's apartment she was the hostess, and as such she apologized for the stair. "What would not one do for such an end!" gallantly replied the somewhat dazzled conqueror.

The suppliant, after making a few respectful inquiries as to her visitor's welfare and the effect of the northern climate on his health, at once announced the object of her visit. Her manner was full of pathos and there were tears in her eyes as she recalled how her country had been punished for its appeal to arms, and for its mistaken confidence in the traditions of the great Frederick and his glory. The emperor was abashed by the lofty strain of her address. So elevated was her mien that she overpowered him; for the instant his self-assurance fled, and he felt himself but a man of the people. He felt also the humiliating contrast, and was angry. Long afterward he confessed that she was mistress of the conversation, adding that she stood with her head thrown back like Mlle. Duchesnois in the character of Phaedra, something by this comparison to stigmatize her attitude and language as theatrical.

So effective was her appeal that he felt the need of something to save his own role, accordingly he bowed her to a chair, and in the moment thus gained determined to strike the key of high comedy. Taking up the conversation in turn, he scrutinized the beauties of her person, and, complimenting her dress, asked whether the materials were of home or foreign manufacture. "Shall we talk of rags at such a solemn moment?" she retorted; and then proceeded with her direct plea for Magdeburg. In the midst of her eloquence, when the emperor was almost overcome by the opportunity, her meddling husband most inopportunely entered the room. He began to argue and reason, citing his threadbare grievance, the violation of Anspach territory, and endeavoring to prove himself to be right. Napoleon at once turned the conversation to indifferent themes, and in a few moments took his leave.

"You ask much," he said to the queen on parting; "but I promise to think it over." The courageous woman had done her best, but her cause—if, indeed, it was ever in the balance—was lost from the moment she put her judge in an inferior position. Her majestic bearing was thrown off; it was not diplomacy. She might, nevertheless, have succeeded—had she been the wife of a wiser man. Long afterward Napoleon thought she might have had considerable influence on the negotiations if she had appeared in their earlier stages, and congratulated himself that she came too late, inasmuch as they were already virtually closed when she arrived.—Prof. Sloane, in Century.

PUNG RIDING IN BOSTON.

A Very Unique Way of Indulging in Fun.

Speaking of sleighs, the practice of pung riding on the part of young girls seems to be also a thing of the past. It has been common enough in other years, but recently it has, to judge without an actual census, been unprecedented. The driver of a grocery wagon says that he can get along with the boys, but that the girls beat him. "You can lick off the boys," he says, "but how are you going to lick off girls?"

Certainly they won't take no for an answer, and generally they do not observe the formality of asking permission to mount a sleigh. They jump on anywhere—on the runner, on the evener, on the seat with the driver; they tumble in backward over the tailboard, and they come aiming behind, holding on by the tips of their fingers. Some of the girls who thus assault the passing sleighs are alarmingly small, and others are alarmingly large. Some are alarmingly well dressed. The centers of the pung-riding diversion are such streets as Columbus avenue, West Newton street, and other South end thoroughfares, but the sport is not unknown on Commonwealth avenue, and on Beacon street. To leave out of the discussion the question whether the amusement is a decorous one, it certainly should be discouraged, because it is dangerous. In these days of electric cars, young children should hardly be allowed to run at large on the streets, especially in the pursuit of an amusement that often absorbs their attention so completely that they cannot be depended upon to look out for passing cars.—Boston Transcript

HIS RECORD.

He Had Been a Constable for Years, But Had Never Made an Arrest.

I had been walking all day to reach the hamlet of Bentonville, and as I entered the place at sundown and was inquiring my way to a tavern a rough-looking man accosted me with:

"Look a-here, stranger, I don't quite like your looks."

"Sorry for that, but I can't help it," I replied.

"No, I don't like your looks," he continued. "Fact is, you 'pear to be a suspicious character, and I guess I'll lock you up."

"Have you the authority to do that?"

"I should smile that I had! I'm a constable, and I shall lock you up as a suspicious character."

I tried to argue the matter with him, but he was "set" and ugly to boot, and he was taking me to the lockup when two or three men interfered to the extent of suggesting that I be taken before the justice of the peace for immediate examination. After some hesitation this was agreed to, and a crowd numbering a score of people accompanied us. The "jedge" was eating supper, but he hurried up and came over to his office in the back end of a store and opened court. When all was ready he asked the officer:

"Tom, what's the charge agin' the prisoner?"

"Suspicion," replied Tom.

"Suspicion of what?"

"Dunno. Jest suspicion."

"I decline to entertain so nuthin' suspicious about him," said his honor, as he looked me over. "Stranger, who be you?"

I told him.

"What' ye from?"

"Hillsfield."

"What' ye goin'?"

"Go to Mountville to-morrow."

"Nuthin' suspicious about that. What made ye think him suspicious, Tom?"

"Dunno, but it come over me that he was."

"Do you want to sw'ar out a warrant agin' him?"

"Guess not."

"Then the prisoner is discharged."

I went to the hotel and got supper and after the meal sat down on the veranda for a smoke. In the course of five minutes the same constable walked up the steps and approached me and said:

"Stranger, I've cum to apologize."

"For arresting me? Yes, you were hasty, but it's all right."

"Thank ye. You see, it's jest this way: I've bin constable in this county fur 22 years and never arrested a critter yit. Got to thinkin' it to-day, and made up my mind to uphold my dignity or bust a leg, and as you looked like a cuss who hadn't any friends and wouldn't kick about bein' locked up, I run you in. Cum, her a drink with me and I'll resign to-morrer."—M. Quad, in Detroit Free Press.

THE LADY AS A COMPANION.

She Is Helpful and Comforting to Her Family and Friends.

She is the woman who with her husband and sons is the best companion. She surrounds herself, unconsciously, with a spiritual atmosphere that is a rest to the weary, especially to the weary man. She is not a bigot. She is in sympathy with whatever work the man may be doing; in many ways she may help him with it, but when he has thrown off the trammels of labor he finds in her all the sweetness, all the rest and all the happiness that can be given by a woman who sets her life so that it is like a perfect music unto perfect words." It is curious that two great writers, Amberly and John Stuart Mill, each dedicated their great books to their wives, whom they describe as perfect helpers and perfect women, using almost the same words! Words are inadequate to describe the lady. Disraeli says of his wife that she was "the most severe of critics, but a perfect wife." In thinking of women, who can be like Carlyle put upon the tombstone of that nervous, jealous creature, who yet loved him well? After giving her name and age he speaks of her value to her husband, and ends by saying: "And the light of his life is as if gone out."

The public woman is given to talking much about the woman who never marries. I do not think her life is quite rounded, but many times she is the mother where there is no mother, and the sister and companion where there is no wife. She can do much good to so many. She can give of her time and her love to the poor and needy, and always she can make herself useful because she has spare time; she is the personal companion with whom many friends find rest and from whom many friends comes pleasure. She can teach that boy who has no mother how to say his prayers, and there is more meant in that than the mere act of praying. As I look at it it seems to me the teaching a boy the respect due to God and woman; the teaching a boy the love due to mother and wife, and the keeping always and ever in a man's heart a fresh spring of spirituality enough to flood his whole system and wash out all commercial meanness and worldliness and make him wholesome and clean is woman's noblest work.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Acme of Forensic Force.

"And now, gentlemen of the jury," shouted the young lawyer, running his long fingers through his flowing locks, "now, gentlemen of the jury, I ask you as men and citizens of this great and glorious republic, if the spotless character of my client is to be permitted to suffer from the words uttered by that—by that—by that vermiform appendix who sits in the witness box with perjury stamped all over him!"—Indianapolis Journal.

Cause for Nervousness.

Wife—What! another box of cigars gone? I should think it would make you nervous, smoking so many.

Husband—It does make me nervous! I don't believe that fellow will trust me for another box.—Puck.

THE GREATEST TRAGEDY.

UNION GOOD FRIDAY SERVICE COMMEMORATES CHRIST'S DEATH.

A Large Congregation Gathered in Grace P. E. Church to Hear Local Clergyman Preach From the Words of the Cross.

The tie which binds together Plainfield's Christians of all denominations is never felt more strongly than during Holy Week, when all meet together in a common service, to worship the Lord who was crucified for all alike, whether Presbyterian, Baptist or Episcopalian.

The Union Good Friday service was held this year in Grace P. E. Church, and a very large congregation filled the beautiful building. It was an unusually solemn and impressive service from beginning to end. The cross upon the altar, draped heavily with black, was a solemn reminder of the greatest tragedy in the world's history, which that congregation had met to commemorate.

The service began with the entrance of the choir, singing the processional, carrying a tall, black-draped cross, and followed by the clergymen who were to assist in the service. The Penitential Office and prayers followed, led by Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, after which Dr. C. R. Barnes stepped forward to the lectern and read the lesson. Reverently the choir and congregation sang, "When I survey the wondrous Cross;" then followed the meditations on the words from the cross. The first, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do," was commented on by Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone. We, he said, were we to be called upon to face death, would think first of our unworthiness to enter Heaven, and would confess our sins. But with Jesus there was no such confession. He had done no wrong; He had no such fear for Himself, and his prayer was for His enemies.

Rev. J. W. Richardson spoke upon the second word, "Verily I say unto thee, today shalt thou be with me in in Paradise." If Christ was willing to make this promise to such a man at such a time, how much more willing He must be to make it to us who love and try to serve Him. It should take the dread of death away from us entirely; it is no dreamless sleep that Jesus promises, but as the literal translation gives it, a "pleasure garden," that you may enter today."

"Behold the Lamb of God" was now sung, then Dean E. M. Stodman spoke upon "Behold thy Son, behold thy Mother." In these words Christ sanctified the relations of the home; let us care that our homes are such as He can approve.

"My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" was the words taken up by Dr. W. R. Richards. It might be as well, he said, if I should simply keep silent and let you think of these words. But there is one comfort that we may take to ourselves from them; we may have the companionship and sympathy of our Saviour in times of darkness and doubt. He has been through the shadows before us.

Rev. C. E. Herring spoke upon "I Thirst." It was not a bodily thirst that our Lord felt; He thirsted for love, and for souls. He does still. He thirsts for yours, my brother. Have you given it to him?

Choir and people sang "Sweet the moments, rich in blessing," then Dr. Robert Lowry spoke upon the words "It Is Understood." The work of redemption was finished. Like all the works of God, it is complete. The great battle with the power of evil is over; Christ won it on Calvary.

The final word, "Father, Into Thy Hands I Commend My Spirit," was commented upon by Dr. C. R. Barnes. Walk in the way of service that Jesus took, if you want to have the outlook into eternity that He had. Then you can peacefully commit your spirit to the loving Father, and in the midst of the cloud you will see the Good Shepherd, and "so shall you be forever with the Lord."

An offering was then received, while the choir sang "Come Unto Me." Then choir and congregation united in singing "Just as I Am." A moment of silent prayer, then closing prayers and benediction, by Dr. W. R. Richards, then singing "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name," choir and clergymen filed out of the chancel, leaving the congregation to go silently homeward, touched, impressed, and awed by the most solemn service of the Christian year.

An Immense Purchase.

It takes nerve to go into any auction room and put down five thousand dollars in cash for a lot of wet goods. That's what Edward White did this week in one of the large auction houses in New York, where the stock of the importing house of W. L. Wellington, whose stock of fine dry goods was slightly damaged by water, was sold. The entire stock was sold by order of the fire insurance company, and Mr. White secured many of the best goods offered, thirty-five thousand yards in all, at a price that permits him to sell at one-quarter of their real value. The goods will be on sale Monday morning. For full particulars see his advertisement.

MUCH LITTLE BUSINESS.

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL DISPOSE OF SEVERAL MINOR MATTERS.

Bonds of the Various Officials Filed—A Dispute Over a Bill of Election Officers—The Memorial Day Appropriation.

Much business of great and small importance was transacted at the regular April meeting of the Borough Council last Friday, and all the members were present to look after it.

After the minutes of the last meeting were read and approved, Clerk Arnold presented his financial report as follows:

	Balance.	Deficit.
Borough	$1,654.84
Fire department		107.30
Light	1,079.74
Bonds	102.10
Poor		101.10
	$3,196.56	$209.40
	209.40
	$2,987.07	total balance.

He also reported $8.50 collected as fines and license money. The report was received and filed as was also the report of Tax Collector H. N. Spencer, who reported as follows:

Taxes collected for 1893 since last report, $26.97; for 1894, $133.39; and the following for 1895:

County tax	$37.12
State School	36.73
Borough	27.30
Light	31.39
Road	27.30
Fire Department	19.04
Poor	9.52
Poll	2.00
Dog	3.00
	$213.08
Board of Health	$ 4.08
Special school tax	86.00
	$ 73.08
	$212.08
Balance	$ 264.16
Previously reported	$7,670.83
	$37,934.99

A communication was received from W. W. Coriell, of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., as secretary of the Memorial Detail, asking Council to assist them in the proper observance of Memorial Day. It was received and filed.

Dr. J. H. Carman in a letter stated that he had removed from the borough and that he therefore tendered his resignation as a member of the Board of Health to take effect April 1st. The matter was referred to the committee on Streets and Public Health.

A petition was received from R. G. Silvers, H. K. Carroll and others, asking that Westervelt avenue to Brook avenue, and Brook avenue from Westervelt avenue to Chatham street be macadamized. This was also referred to the Street and Public Health Committee.

Residents on Duer street petitioned for a crosswalk on their street across Linden avenue on the south side where it intersects Duer street. The petition was referred to the proper committee, as was also the petition of Robert Carson and others asking that Belmont avenue, from Brook to Mountain avenues, be accepted by the borough. The petitions agreed to give the necessary amount of property to the borough for a street and sidewalks.

George Kirch, of Somerset street, petitioned Council for the privilege of erecting a wooden shed in front of the property at 196 and 198 somerset street. It was referred to the Fire, Water and Lamp Committee.

At this point Clerk Arnold read the usual batch of bills, among them being bills from D. C. Carney and W. N. Pangborn for $4.20. Mr. Pangborn said that he had performed services for which Mr. Carney had presented a bill—that of carrying the election returns to Somerville to file with the County Clerk. He asked that the bills be referred and investigated. It was so ordered. Mr. Carney told a Press reporter that Mr. Pangborn was mistaken as to the services for which he made the charge. He did not take the returns to Somerville, but took the registry lists before election, which the law says shall be filed with the County Clerk, therefore his charge was for an entirely different service.

It was so ordered and the balance of the bills were ordered paid, after certification by the auditing committee.

Mr. Woolston said that owing to the small number of bids received for furnishing crushed stone, he desired to wait till the next meeting before making a report.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Peck, that the Mayor and Clerk negotiate a loan of $1,000 and charge the same to the fire department account. It was adopted.

Mr. McLaughlin offered a resolution that $25 be given for Decoration Day observance to be used by the G. A. R. Posts of this city. Mr. Valiant stated that the Council should put the matter clear before the public and that the resolution should read $25 for the G. A. R. Posts of this city. The former resolution was withdrawn and Mr. Schutt offered one covering the points mentioned. The resolution was adopted unanimously.

W. C. Smith was given the floor and spoke in behalf of the appropriation and urged that it be made. He cited other places where it was done and he thought the borough should do it also.

Mr. Woolston and other members favored the appropriation and there was not a dissenting vote.

The following bonds, with amount and bondsmen, were presented: Chief Marshal William A. Wilson, $500, W. C. Smith and F. M. Whitely; Overseer of Poor D. B. Weaver, $500, J. P. Humble and Augustus Winckler; Constable Peter Hansen, $500, Jacob Voehl and Henry Hansen; Constable J. W. Van Horn, $500, Jacob Voehl and Thomas Rutledge; Collector H. N. Spencer, $15,000, Jacob Voehl, J. H. Cooley and A. I. Smalley. They were referred to the laws, ordinances and election committee and later were reported back correct.

The ordinance relating to the renumbering of Westervelt avenue was taken up and passed to a second reading and laid on the table for final adoption.

The street and public health committee reported that $2,663 had been expended on the streets this year.

Mr. Woolston said that Mr. Cooley had asked Council to lay a crosswalk on Rockview avenue in front of his property. He saw no reason why it should be placed there, but thought one should be placed on Rockview avenue at its intersection with Mercer avenue. A resolution to that effect was adopted.

Mayor Hegeman at this time appointed F. M. Whitely, Jules Stephany and W. N Pangborn as special marshals, and Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution that they be confirmed which was done.

In regard to the resignation of Dr. Carman, Mr. Valiant moved it be accepted and that the Clerk express to him the Council's appreciation of his excellent services. It was so ordered.

The Mayor then appointed Dr. D. C. Adams in Dr. Carman's place.

The Mayor stated that the Commissioners would probably be ready to report on the Watchung avenue extension in about two weeks and advised that a resolution be offered that the Council meet again on Friday, April 17th.

The resolution was offered by Mr. McLaughlin and he set the hour of meeting at 8 o'clock, sharp. Council then adjourned.

CASTORIA

A PASTOR SURPRISED.

Rev. Mr. Alexander Made the Recipient of Many Presents.

The members of Bethel chapel gave their pastor, Rev. W. H. Alexander, a complete surprise last evening, after the annual meeting held at the Crescent Avenue church. Two of the members waited for him at the church and escorted him to Bethel chapel, where he found a large gathering of members and friends who had assembled to enjoy a social time. The affair was what might be termed a donation party, for those present had not failed to remember their pastor. They brought everything needful to him and his family, consisting principally of eatables.

Mr. Alexander was very thankful for the kind manner in which he had been treated. A short time was spent in sociability and when the guests departed they all wished their pastor and his family prosperity and happiness.

Missionary Anniversary.

Next Wednesday evening the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the First M. E. church will celebrate its anniversary in the church. An excellent programme has been arranged and it is expected that one of the best speakers in the denomination will deliver an address.

IN HIS NAME.

King's Daughters Hold a Pleasant and Profitable Sale.

Funds are a very necessary adjunct to charitable work and to increase the amount of them in the treasury, the Golden Rod Circle of King's Daughters held a fair Thursday afternoon and evening, at the home of E. P. Stevens, 65 Grandview avenue. The booths were prettily arranged in the back parlor and here delicious home-made candies, cakes, bread and lemonade were sold, while one booth was devoted to groceries. They were presided over by the following: Candy table, the Misses Emma Stevens and Libbie Stevens; grocery store, the Misses May Conroy and Emma Layboteau; cake table, Miss Lizzie Hoagland; bread table, Miss Bertha Stevens; lemonade booth, Miss Mary Hoagland.

In the dining room, tables were set and here the visitors were served to light refreshments by the Misses Agnes LaBoyteau, Phoebe Conroy, Lucetta Clark and Mabel Stevens. The president of the circle, Mrs. A. M. West, had general charge of the fair and assisted in making the fair a success.

Although the attendance was not large in the afternoon, in the evening quite a number attended and a brisk sale of the good things followed. During the evening an informal musical programme was given by the Misses May Conray, Libbie Joseph and Mabel Benner. The proceedings of the fair will be devoted to some charitable purpose.

SUING FOR A DIVORCE

Mrs. Aten Names Desertion as the Charge for Her Prosecution.

Charles A. Reed, as special master in Chancery, this morning took testimony in the divorce proceedings of Elizabeth Aten against her husband, Alfred Aten. Aten is a moulder and formerly worked at the Pond Machine Tool Works and at Potter's Press Works in this city but is now located at Worcester, Mass. The couple were married in 1892 at Westfield by Justice Collins, the bride being a Somerville girl. Aten, however, proved an unfaithful husband and after a year of unhappiness left his wife and went to Massachusetts. There, so it is said, he became infatuated with another girl and was engaged to marry her, when the latter learned of his first escapade in the matrimonial line and jilted him. Mrs. Aten names desertion as the charge on which she prosecutes her suit. Lawyer John Frech, of Somerville, is conducting her case. Aten makes no defense. The testimony will be submitted to Chancellor McGill, who will probably grant a divorce. Both the husband and wife are about twenty-eight years of age.

Entertained a Few Friends.

Miss Elsie Jobs entertained a few of her friends at her home on Third Place, Thursday evening. The evening passed very pleasantly with games and dancing, while light refreshments made a pleasing interruption. Among those present were the Misses Angie Kohl and Bessie Anderson, of Somerville, Florence Serrell, Nettie Langdon, Maud French, and Edna French, and the Messrs. A English, B. English and C. English, of Elizabeth, George P. Smith, Walter T. Serrell and Lindley Hillman.

MR. MIDDLEDITH'S SIDE

THE BROKER SAYS THE CHARGES AGAINST HIM ARE FALSE.

Refused to Give Up Certain Knowledge and, He Claims, the Cigarette Company Had Him Indicted For It.

The New York World Thursday published the following in connection with the charges preferred against James Middledith, who resides at the corner of Park avenue and East Ninth street, this city:

Jas. Middledith and John T. Kirby, who were arrested Wednesday night after the Grand Jury had indicted them for circulating false and malicious reports about the National (Admiral) Cigarette Company, will be arraigned before Recorder Goff, in General Sessions, Monday.

Assistant District Attorney Battle said yesterday that there was another man to be arrested, who has been indicted under the name of John Doe.

The papers in the case show that on Tuesday last a messenger from the office of C. I. Hudson & Co., asked that reporters from the two Wall street news distributing agencies should hurry at once to that office. The runners were quickly there, for seconds count in Wall street, and within a few moments the news-slip of Dow, Jones & Co's agency announced that the factories of the National (Admiral) Cigarette Company had been closed.

Lawyer M. S. Gutterman, of the firm of Einstein & Townsend, who represent the National Cigarette Company, was seen yesterday at his office, 32 Liberty street, by a World reporter.

"The spreading of the false rumors about the only rival the trust has," said Mr. Gutterman, "was very detrimental to our clients. The reports reached all the members of the Stock Exchange. The story was made out of the whole cloth. There was no foundation for it whatever. On the very day that the circular was issued our clients were putting in new machines, increasing their capacity about 33 per cent.

"Immediately steps were taken by us to ascertain the source of these false statements. The reports were issued Tuesday. The next day the Grand Jury found an indictment against the two men. Mr. Middledith is supposed to be connected with the firm of C. I. Hudson & Co., of 36 Wall street. Mr. Hudson, I understand, is a Governor of the Stock Exchange. It is our opinion that these false reports were circulated for the purpose of advancing the prices of Tobacco Trust stock."

Mr. Middledith sent the following to The Evening Post last night:

"Mr. Middledith and Mr. Kirby are both innocent of the charges preferred against them by the National Cigarette Company, as will be proven. The motive of the latter company they prefer not to discuss just now. Mr. Kirby is a reputable exporter, and Mr. Middledith has been on the Street for thirty years. Neither was interested in any stock speculation."

Although the indictments charge Mr. Middledith and Mr. Kirby with circulation of the false news, there is believed to be an intention to smoke out larger game. Intimations were heard of disclosures that would involve others in a scheme to serve peculation in tobacco by false reports or any disreputable means. It is possible that the Stock Exchange authorities may be furnished abundant material for an investigation of some importance, although this is not yet clear. The supplying of false information about a business to a newspaper, the offense charged in the indictments, is classed as a misdemeanor, for which the maximum penalty is one year's imprisonment, a fine of $500 or both.

Mr. Middledith was seen by a Press reporter this morning and stated that the charges were brought against him because he refused to give information that was desired by the National Cigarette Company, and that when the charges were cleared away, as he felt certain they would be when brought before a Court, he should institute a suit for $50,000 damages against those who had preferred the charges against him. The warrant for Mr. Middledith's arrest was served Wednesday night just as he was preparing to leave for Plainfield, when all the courts had adjourned, and it was thought that he would have to go to jail in default of getting a Judge to grant him bail. However, Mr. Middledith had plenty of influential friends who quickly rallied to his support, and a few hours after his arrest he had secured the necessary bail and was on his way home.

A Dividend Declared.

Big Attendance.

One hundred and fifty-four was the average attendance at the young men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. for the month of March.

WORK OF THE W. C. T. U.

Temperance Women Discuss Plans for the Efficiency of Their Society.

The regular monthly business meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held Thursday afternoon in their rooms on Watchung avenue. Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, president for the month of March, presided, and a good-sized number of members were present. Reports were read from the committees on evangelistic services, foreign and flower work and narcotics. The evangelistic committee reported that the Sunday services were well attended and that the interest was increasing. Mrs. DeForest for the flower committee stated that bouquets, provisions, clothing, jelly and tracts had been supplied to needy families and in other ways the committee had carried out its objects.

The members set Thursday, April 23d, as "Paper day," and clippings from papers on various subjects will be read. April 30th was set aside for "German work," and Miss Teing, of New York, will make an address. Mrs. Cahoone was selected a member of the resolution committee, for the summer school of methods, and the members decided to send a resolution advising the establishment of anti-cigarette leagues among the schools. Mrs. Krom will prepare the resolution. Next Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock Miss Lundon, of Flemington, will address Swedish women of Plainfield in the W. C. T. U. rooms. Miss Lundon is a talented speaker and she will talk in the Swedish language. It was decided to serve tea after the meeting and Mrs. Winters and Mrs. Honeyman were appointed a committee to arrange for the same.

Mrs. T. W. Powell, of Grandview avenue, was elected as one of the vice-presidents for the Grace M. E. church to take the place of the late Mrs. Griffen, and Mrs. F. H. Brown was elected as vice-president from the Mt. Olive Baptist church.

Miss Clementine B. Yates was selected as corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Winters was made superintendent of Sunday-school work. Mrs. Tomlinson urged those present to try and secure new members for the union and thus make it possible for them to present a good report at the State Convention.

A prepared catechism on the last annual report of the State organization was introduced and the members responded to the first five questions. At each meeting the above nnmber will be used to acquaint all with the work of the State body.

A MIDNIGHT PROWLER.

Quietude of a City Family Disturbed by the Strange Actions of a Man.

A man, whose purposes appeared anything but the best, has been causing considerable excitement in a Westervelt avenue household. For some time it has been known that a man was hanging about the neighborhood. Several days ago a young man, evident Spanish, visited the house when the elder daughter was at home alone. He inquired for all the family and learning they were all out, tried to persuade the young lady to give him her picture so that he might make a crayon portrait of it. When she refused, he offered to go upstairs with her after it if she was afraid. She still refused and he finally left after insisting on shaking hands with her.

Night before last, the eldest son was out late in the evening. The family heard some one come upon the front piazza, jingle their keys and try to unlock the door. Supposing it was the son, they paid no attention to it. Later, however, the son came in. He had not been in very long when the same performance was repeated. This time the family heard it and started to investigate. As soon as a lamp was lighted, the intruder skipped. The husband rushed to the door and seeing a form disappearing in the darkness, fired two shots at it from a revolver. Nothing more has been seen or heard of the midnight prowler.

RED MEN'S DAY.

An Indian Invasion of Plainfield Planned by Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe.

An Indian invasion of Plainfield is being planned for Thursday, April 16th, when Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe, No. 193, Improved Order of Red Men, will duly celebrate their second anniversary in true Indian fashion. An Indian masque ball and peace dance will be held in the Columbia Cycle Academy, and a great feast will follow. Nearly every tribe in the State will be represented by braves in full costume, while a large delegation of the great chiefs is expected. The Plainfield braves are making great preparations for the event.

GREAT LESSON TAUGHT.

REV. MR. DWIGHT DRAWS CONCLUSIONS FROM CHRIST'S DEATH.

It Has Brought Peace to Many Hearts and Changed the World—It Has Compelled Men to Follow Christianity.

The second of the series of union meetings in connection with Holy Week, was held in the First Baptist church last Friday. Rev. D. J Yerkes, D. D., opened the services and Rev. W. H. Richards, D. D., led in prayer. The sermon was preached by Rev. M. E. Dwight, and he took for his text, Romans 5:8, "Christ Died For Us." He said in substance as follows: "They are four short words but they form a sentence that tells of the greatest event in the world's history and expresses the greatest truth that has ever been known. It has brought the peace of God to many hearts and changed the world. Wherever it has gone, it has compelled men to think and follow along the lines laid down by Christianity. But have not others died for us? Did not the Pilgrims, the revolutionary heroes and our patriot countrymen all die that we might enjoy all the privileges and blessings of this country of ours? Are we going to rank Christ's death with these? No! His death stands apart from all others unique in its pre-eminence and purpose. It is the unselfishness of a perfect and divine love. We strive to tell of the death of Christ, but our best efforts are mere shadows of the real meaning. The illustrations of those, whose love has conquered death, help us to understand it. But they died for their friends and Christ died for his enemies.

"The death of Christ was unique in its purpose. Christ died to become the propitiation for the sins of the whole world. To exclude this idea of propitiation from this Bible makes it unintelligible. Exclude this idea and with what can the guilty conscience be appeased, how can we know that God has forgiven us. I am persuaded that it is enough for you that the Scriptures say so, but if any one doubts this doctrine, the experience of all mankind is that true peace of mind can only be found in the belief that Christ died for us, the just and the unjust.

"His purpose was as grand as it was peculiar. He died for the sins of all the world. He took not only one sinner's place but every sinner's place. He was what John the Baptist said, the Savior of the world. It is indeed true that only those that believe in Him will be saved by Him. A man must believe in the Savior to be saved.

"There is a grandeur about it when we consider the scope of it. Others died for only part, but He died for all. But grander still appeals this purpose when we consider that it is already being accomplished. His death is actually lifting up this world. The world is rising more and more, mankind is being upraised and lifted. The human race shall be redeemed and only a small portion lost. The little flock may seem small but it is gradually growing greater. Multitudes are fleeing from the sins of unbelief to the forgiving arms of Christ. Then, on the last day, will it best be seen that Christ is really the Savior of the world, and the grandeur of this object attract us to Him. I wish that the simplicity of these four words might penetrate our hearts. Whosoever believing, and calling upon His name, shall be saved."

The service closed with the benediction by Rev. C. R. Barnes, D. D.

HE IS THE MAN.

Harry Roberts Identifies the Man Who Stole His Father's Rig.

Some time ago exclusive mention was made in the Daily Press that a man was held in custody at White Plains, N. Y., who confessed to stealing a number of horses, and that it was thought that he was the individual who hired a rig from Dan Roberts livery stable in this city and never returned it. Yesterday, Harry Roberts went to White Plains and was taken in among the prisoners at the jail where the horse thief was incarcerated, and quickly identified him as the man who had hired the rig from his father. When confronted with the charges, however, the fellow absolutely refused to say a word as to where he had disposed of the property though he already told where he had sold a number of horses that he had stolen. The fellow's name is John Towns. Harry will go to White Plains again to see if he can learn where the rig was sold.

THE MOONSHINER OF FACT.

Vastly Different from the Wild Creatures Pictured in the Reading Public.

He is neither a bandit nor a highwayman, a disturber of the peace, nor, in respect to formalaries other than the revenue statutes, a law-breaker. Least of all, perhaps, is he a desperado. Within a month of the present writing, a traveler on one of the Tennessee railways entered the smoking car of the train.

In the rear seat sat an officer in charge of a "covey" of moonshiners flushed by him on the mountain the night before. He was in charge of his party; they had yielded without resistance to one man; and—most singular circumstance of all, in the south—the deputy had not found it necessary to put them in irons.

At their trial the members of this party will doubtless plead guilty to a man, though a little hard swearing would probably clear half of them; they will beg for mercy or for light sentences; and those of them who promise amendment will most likely never be again brought in on the same charge, for the mountaineer is prone to keep his promises, amendatory or otherwise.

A venerable judge, in whom judicial severity is tempered by a generous admixture of loving kindness and mercy, and whose humane decisions have made his name a word to conjure with among the dwellers in the wasty places, tells a story which emphasizes the promise-keeping trait in the mountain character.

A hardened sinner of the stills, whose first and second offenses were already recorded against him, was once again brought to book by the vigilance of the revenue men.

As an old offender, who had neither promises to repented, it was likely to go hard with him; and he begged earnestly, not for liberty, but for a commutation of his sentence which would send him to jail instead of the penitentiary, promising that so long as the judge remained upon the bench, he would neither make nor meddle with illicit whisky.

He won his case, and was sent to jail for a term of 11 months. This was in summer, and six months later, when the first snows began to powder the bleak summits of Chilhowee, the judge received a letter from the convict. It was a simple-hearted petition for a furlough of ten days, pathetic and eloquent in its primitive English and quaint spelling.

Would the good judge let him off for just ten days? Winter was coming on, and the wife and children were alone in the cabin on the mountain, with no one to look after or provide for them. He would not overstay the time, and he would "certain shore" come back and surrender himself.

His petition was granted, and, true to his word, the mountaineer returned on the tenth day, and gave himself up to the sheriff. He served the remainder of his sentence, and, after his release, kept his pledge so long as the judge remained on the bench. — Lippincott's Magazine.

MILLIONS IN COUNTERFEIT COIN

Large Quantities of Spurious Stuff Passed in New York Daily.

The making and passing of small counterfeit coins said to be an industry in the entirely confined to the Italians. Indeed, the racial aspect is one of the most interesting features of counterfeiting. While the Italian is content with the small profits resulting from "shoving" spurious nickels, dimes and quarters, the American counterfeiter devotes his talents to producing bank notes of the larger denominations. "Sweating" gold is the favorite scheme of the patient, industrious Russian, who forms the large family of children employed in this slow but sure method of defrauding the government. To the ingenious Frenchman we are indebted for the cunning glass dollar, which has deceived even the most expert. The Bowery crook still depends on the confederate bill as a means of turning an honest penny, and the police reports would go to show that this old swindle is not yet entirely out of fashion.

The Italians have been always the most persistent "shovers of the queer," and, while the individual amounts have been small, the profits in the aggregate form no large sums every year. Probably the greater part of this spurious coin is passed by the push-cart men, whose calling gives them great facilities for getting rid of it with little danger of detection. The victims are shoppers hurrying homeward to the ferries at dusk, who stop to purchase fruit from the carts that line the gutters of certain streets during the rush hours.

If a peddler is disposed to be dishonest he can swindle with the greatest ease, for everything is in his favor. The customer is in a hurry and seldom more than glances at his change. As it is counted out piece by piece into the open hand he can see that the amount is correct, but there is no tell-tale ring, as if the money had been put down on a counter. In the dim light, which the peddler's torch makes more uncertain, there is little chance to detect the counterfeit coin. Not until he has reached the ferry does he find out that he has been swindled and then it is too late, for the push-cart men are constantly on the move.—N. Y. World.

Conscientious About It.

"Edith," called out mamma from the sitting-room, "are you stirring the flour into that batter as I showed you how to do it?"

"Yes, mamma," said the little girl, "but my arm is getting awfully tired. Would it make it any worse if I stirred it the other way a little while?"—Chicago Tribune.

PERSONAL AND [illegible]

—Eleonora Duse has received the rare honor of the medal for art and science from the king of Sweden. She also received the king's photograph with his autograph, but earned it by listening to King Oscar while he played and sang to her a ballad of his own composition.

—Mrs. Langtry's daughter attracts much attention at the Niagara, London's new and fashionable skating rink, where she frequently goes. Her skill on the ice is more than ordinary, and her beauty rivals that possessed by her mother in the days when the phrase "Jersey Lily" was invented.

—Guy de Maupassant's mother, to whom he left 10,000 francs a year by his will, recently applied to have the will set aside on the ground of mental incapacity, as she would have received much more if he had died intestate. As the will was made before the novelist broke down, she lost her case.

—One of the best whist players in this country is Mrs. Lucia Runkle, who is also a literary worker. She is a wonderfully good player, with a young daughter who is coming up to be nearly as remarkable in that respect. Mr. Runkle was celebrated for his proficiency in whist, and his only child has had the advantage of constant practice with his parents.

—Cornelius Vanderbilt was elated the other day because he was able to eat a few stewed oysters and not be distressed. Mr. Vanderbilt for years has suffered from acute dyspepsia and has been compelled to live on a bit of graham cracker and a sip of malted milk did not bring agony to him. The gentleman who told of Mr. Vanderbilt's happiness over the stewed oysters remarked that they were as much of a treat to him as a first course dinner and wines galore would be to a tramp.

—An English paper revives an old story about Artemus Ward. When he was in London he gave a children's party. One of John Bright's sons was invited, and returned home radiant. "Oh, papa," he explained upon being asked whether he had enjoyed himself, "indeed I did! And Mr. Browne gave me such a nice name for you, papa. He called you that!" "Why, he asked me how that gay and festive cuss, the governor, was," replied the boy.

—Alfred Austin, Salisbury's poet-laureate, is called "an estimable little bardling" by the Saturday Review, and it declares that Lord Salisbury, in making the appointment, has fitted the fool's cap on his own head for all time." The office of laureate, says the Review, was "felt by Tennyson himself to be as much an anachronism as the office of court fool, was he did not hesitate in private to condemn it, and to express his sense of the ignominy of the position."

"When Quality Meets, Compliments Pass."

Judge Jones was a southern gentleman of the old school, and had been a gallant in his day. Old age did not dull his fancy nor his gallantry, but with increasing years memory played strange tricks with his recognition of names and faces. On this point the judge was sensitive. One day he met at a reception a young woman whom he once knew up to him with outstretched hand and smiling face. To save his soul, the old man could not recall her.

"Why, Judge Jones," exclaimed the lady, "you have forgotten me, and I met you only two years ago!"

"On the contrary, madam," bowed the courtly judge, vainly racking his memory the while, "on the contrary, I have been striving for two years to forget you."—Harper's Magazine.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—The attendance in the Scottish universities for the year 1894-95 is thus stated: Edinburgh, 2,324; Glasgow, 1,903; Aberdeen, 812.

—There are two Chinese girls who are studying medicine at the University of Michigan. They will return to China as Christian medical missionaries.

A new porch is to be erected at one of the entrances to Hawarden church by Mr. Gladstone's son Henry. A niche above the door will be kept empty for one statue.

—Forty girl students at the State normal school in Warrensburg, Mo., have organized an athletic association. They are going to devote much attention to outdoor sports, and will wear bloomers and sweaters.

—Presbyterian vigor in invective has not degenerated in Scotland. A Glasgow minister, who opposed total abstinence, was described lately in the pulpit as "a whited sepulchre of blasphemer engaged in raising a sign post to hell."

—Dr. B. E. Fernow, chief of the division of forestry in the department of agriculture, has been appointed special lecturer on forests and forestry in the school of economic, political science and history, in the University of Wisconsin. This course of lectures will probably be the first one of the kind to be given in a school of this character.

—A criminal suit against the lay rector for neglecting to repair the chancel of the parish church, probably the first suit of the kind brought in the present century, was instituted recently by the churchwardens of St. Peter's church, Derby, in the consistory court. The gentleman, who draws the tithes and enjoys the revenues of the church, pleaded guilty and was condemned to ten days' repairs.

—The saloonkeepers of Flint, Mich., are considerably alarmed because the prohibitionists of that place have determined to set up a counter attraction on Saturday afternoon when the farmers come in. A church is to be opened and hot coffee furnished there free of charge. Smoking will be allowed, and it is expected that the visitors will have a general good time—without any of the usual after effects.

—The professors at the Berlin university do not take kindly to the concessions which have been made to women in allowing them to attend classes, and it is reported that one, Prof. Schmidt, of the German literature department, has petitioned the minister of public instructions to have his classes exempt from women. Prof. Von Preitschke, a famous historian, is said to have actually escorted to the door of his classroom a lingering woman who came with the intention of joining.

THEATER EGGS.

Variety That Is Still Much in Demand in Some Sections.

The man with the fur-lined coat stopped before the principal grocery in an interior town and casually inquired:

"How are eggs to-day?"

"Well, they're a little high," replied the grocer.

"Because of a big demand or a small supply?" asked the man with the fur-lined coat.

"Small supply," answered the grocer.

"The hens seem to be taking things easy in this vicinity just now."

The man with the fur-lined coat nodded his head, as if he approved of the action of the hens, and then asked:

"Any bad ones?"

"Bad ones?" exclaimed the grocer. "Yes. Any of the ancient, odorous variety that we all know so well?"

"No, sir, not in this shop," returned the grocer, emphatically.

"Sure?"

"Sure! Of course I'm sure."

"Do you suppose there are any in town?" asked the man with the fur-lined coat, anxiously.

"No, sir. We pride ourselves on our fresh eggs in this neck of the woods, and it wouldn't be safe for anyone to keep bad ones."

"I'm glad to hear it," said the man with the fur-lined coat, with evident relief, as he continued his stroll down the street.

The grocer looked after him for a minute, and then a great light suddenly came upon him.

"Say!" he yelled.

"Well?" came back the answer.

"Did you mean eating eggs or theater eggs?"

"Theater eggs?" exclaimed the man with the fur-lined coat, stopping short in his walk.

"Yes. The farmers never bring in their theater eggs until the afternoon before the show. I was thinking of eating eggs all the time, but if it's theater eggs you want, there'll be about eight or nine crates of them on sale in about an hour."

Then he went back into his store and told his assistant that any jay actor who tried to pump him was bound to get the worst of it every time.—Chicago Post.

Cleaning Kid Gloves.

Clean kid gloves with naphtha; put them on the hands, rub with flannel dipped in naphtha, and then wipe dry with a clean piece of white flannel. Remove the gloves and hang them up in the air. The first steps in renovating are uninteresting, but must be done well or the after results will be far from satisfactory. Silk embroidery may be cleaned with a camel's-hair brush and spirits of wine. Prepare to do the task well or do not commence it. Be careful of explosive cleaning fluids, like benzine, naphtha or alcohol. Always air goods after cleaning them in a fluid of strong odor.—Ladies' Home Journal.

THE CITY LEGISLATORS.

THE COMMON COUNCIL TRANSACT A LOT OF IMPORTANT BUSINESS.

In Session For Over Three Hours—The Proposed Library Appropriation Defeated—For Equitable Taxation.

It required a three-hour session of the City Council to transact the business brought before that body last Monday. There was considerable to do and there was apparently no hurry, for it was 11:45 when the motion to adjourn was made.

Mayor Gilbert in a communication appointed Harry Fraleigh as a regular policeman. Mr. Dumont said he was not in favor of increasing the force and thereby adding expense. Mr. Barrows thought it was the last department in the city to economize in, and the people were now beginning to take pride in the department. The appointment was confirmed. The monthly reports of the Bulding Inspector, City Collector, Treasurer and City Judge were all received and filed.

In a communication the Board of Engineers recommended confirmation of the action of Zephyr Hook and Ladder Co., in expelling L. C. Beekman, and accepting the resignation of Martin Vanderweg from Gazelle Engine Co. The Council concurred in both cases. The bond of Street Commissioner R. A. Meeker was filed.

Mr. Tolles recommended the placing of electric lights on East Third street, Berckman street and LaGrande avenue, West Eighth street, corner of Spooner avenue, West Eighth street, between Plainfield and Spooner avenues, and Carleton avenue, 200 feet from Putnam avenue. They were all ordered placed as given above. Several hackmen appied for license and the same were granted. There were also several applications for peddler's licenses, but only three were granted.

The latter are residents of this city and New Market and the others live in New York.

Mr. Barrows asked that the Police Board be authorized to contract for summer uniforms for the policemen. It was so ordered.

At this time the bids were recieved for furnishing the city with crosswalks culverts, and crushed stone. There were three bidders on the former and two on the latter. H. C. Johnson's price for crosswalks and culverts was 79 cents for double and 75 cents for single; Powers & Son, 95 and 69 cents respectively, while A. C. Lazzie bid 97 and 84 cents for the same. H. C. Johnson gets the double at 79 cents, Powers & Son, the single at 69 cents. For crushed stone C. I. & N. B. Smalley bid $1.10 for Nos. 0 and 1, and $1.00 for No. 2; while Jasper Wilson bid $1.20 for No. 0, $1.10 for No. 1, and $1.05 for No. 2.

The above price is per lineal feet. Smalley Bros. were accordingly given the contract. They have to file a bond of $1,000, while the others give bonds for $500 each. Mr. Barrows moved that the committees' report be received, which was so ordered.

The committee on streets presented a petition advising that until all new streets are properly graded, macadamized and curbed, the same be not accepted by the city. A resolution was then introduced by Mr. Tolles that the streets mentioned in the communication of the Plainfield Real Estate Company be not accepted until the above had been complied with. It was so ordered.

Following the above Mr. Tolles moved that Orange street be accepted by the city, after the same has been graded, etc. It was so ordered.

Mr. Serrell introduced an ordinance regulating the use of bicycles and vehicles about the city. It provides that bicycles shall carry lights, which can be seen 100 yards ahead, the same to be lighted one hour after sunset and one hour before sunrise.

They are also to be provided with bells which can be heard 100 feet distant. A fine of $5 for each violation is provided. It was stated by Mr. Serrell that the present Legislature had abolished all cycle ordinances and one was needed by the city. Mr. Dumont wanted time to examine the ordinance. After the first reading the ordinance was laid on the table for that purpose. Another ordinance was introduced by Mr. Serrell providing for the sprinkling and not soaking of the streets in the summer. The ordinance provides for the use of a certain sprinkler. On Mr. Dumont's suggestion the same course was taken with this ordinance as with the preceding one.

The resolution from the Board of Directors of the Public Library, authorizing the expenditure of $7,000 for the proposed additions to the building, was read. Mr. Dumont said the amount was necessary and should be given. Mr. Frost spoke against it and said that the best interests of the city did not demand the expenditure. The library was not opened when the general class of people could use it, and the extensions would not be serving the people. He thought the library should be overhauled and it would then be found that there was considerable room. Mr. Barrows stated that the duty of a Councilman was to serve the city first, then his district and lastly himself. He said his ward was in favor of the library expenditure, but the city at large was, and that he could hardly afford to vote for the spending of the $7,000. The fire and police department needed money more than the library. Mr. Serrell also put himself on record as being opposed. The resolution was lost on a vote, Mr. Dumont being the only one to vote for it.

A resolution was presented by Mr. Frost, which provides for the revising of the rates on taxable property in the city. He thought the city should take account of stock every fifteen years.

Mr. Dumont thought it was a good thing, as there was property in the city which is taxed too low. Below is the resolution:

Whereas: The subject of taxation is one of the most vital topics for present day discussion; and

Whereas: A just and equitable system is desirable from every point of view, all the individuals of this community being interested in securing such a system; therefore be it

Resolved, That this Council considers it expedient to make entry, to show: 1. The value of land in Plainfield, exclusive of improvements. 2. The total amount of taxation now levied within each ward, (or district.) 3. The probable value of such taxation which would be levied upon the land only. 4. A classification of values, the classification to show rentals; land; improvements of different kinds; railroad values; exempted property; and all other property. That a committee of two members of the Council be appointed by the President to act with the Assessor to carry out the provisions of this resolution.

There being nothing further the Council adjourned at 11:50.

Spring Time.

Is when nearly everyone feels the need of some blood purifying, strength invigorating and health producing medicine. The real merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the reason of its widespread popularity. Its unequalled success is its best recommendation. The whole system is susceptible to the most good from a medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla taken at this time, and we would lay special stress upon the time and remedy, for history has it recorded that delays are dangerous. The remarkable success achieved by Hood's Sarsaparilla and the many words of praise it has received, make it worthy of your confidence. We ask you to give this medicine a fair trial.

Lacerated His Ear.

Saturday morning last while G. E Whitten, agent for the Grand Union Telegraph Company, was driving over the Dog Watch Hollow road, the right forward wheel of his wagon sunk down in the road and threw him out of the wagon. He struck on his right side and his head was cut and his right ear was partially torn away and the bones broken. Though stunned by the fall he managed to get up and lead his horse to the nearest neighbor, W. Spencer, where, after bandaging his head, Ambroze Mantz drove him home in his wagon. Dr. F. M. Wilde, of Bound Brook, was called. He removed the particles of broken bone and sewed up the ear.

A Pleasant Event.

A salmagunda party was given last evening in honor of Miss Helena Van-Alstyne, of Chatham Centre, by her aunt, Mrs. William VanAlstyne, of Watchung avenue. The contests were very exciting and caused no end of fun. The first prizes were won by Miss Margaret Yerkes and Percy Van-Alstyne. The winners of the consolation prizes were Miss Eda Beekman and George Stirling. Refreshments and a general social time followed the games.

If the Hon. Garret A. Hobart's aspirations, real or supposed, are discussed at all in New Jersey, it must be seriously, says the New York Sun, replying to a question of a correspondent who asked if Mr. Hobart was a candidate for the Vice-Presidential nomination. WHERE AND WHAT ARE THEY DOING

The Watchung Avenue Commissioners Should Get a Hustle On.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—It is said on good authority that the ostrich when wishing to hide from his pursuers burries his head in the sand and imagines that he is entirely hidden from sight. Alas, poor bird, he is fooling himself and will soon be caught. Not so foolish as this proud bird is the action of some human bipeds. They not only keep their official heads out of sight but neither they or their actions are visible. Really now, what is the matter with the commissions appointed, on behalf of the city, to open Watchung avenue? Has anyone seen them? Why do they not report and draw their pay? These hard times and I should think they would want to make their stipend as quickly as possible. I understand that the county freeholders make their annual appropriations for bridges at the next meeting of the board. Will the city and borough be in shape to ask of the two boards that a good substantial bridge be built this summer, or will we have to wait another year? Let our commissioners get a move on them or resign.

Vox Populi.

FANWOOD.

For some time past that section of Fanwood Township situated in and around Willow Grove, have been very much dissatisfied with the treatment received at the hands of the Township Committee. They have desired more lights, more improvements and better fire protection. The committee have not given this section all the attention it should, hence the residents in that locality have petitioned the committee to set off their portion into a street lighting district, under the law of 1894, with the supplements and amendments thereto. In the meantime a fire company has been organized for protection. The citizens feel much incensed over the indifference of the Township Committee, and they are determined to secure their rights if possible. Just what will be the termination of their efforts is at present hard to tell.

There is much quiet speculation among the New Jersey Congressmen as to the probable decision of the Republican Congressional convention which will be held in Trenton on April 16th, in the question of endorsing one or any of the prominent Presidental possibilities. One month ago the drift of the sentiment seemed to be in favor of Speaker Reed, but since the McKinleyites have developed such apparent strength there is a disposition on the part of the members to make but few observations upon the probable action of the State convention. It is thought that the wiser course will be for the delegates to be sent without instructions, but the mandate of the "bosses" will doubtless be obeyed, and it is expected that whatever the Republican leaders decide upon will be rushed through without opposition.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed for ever; nine cases of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure Send for circulars, free.

ON TENEMENT HOUSES.

A Practical and Interesting Lecture Given in the Crescent Avenue Church.

Last Tuesday the lecture room of the Crescent Avenue church was well filled with people who had come to listen to and see what Mr. Arthur W. Milbury, of New York, had to tell and to exhibit. The attraction was a stereopticon lecture given by Mr. Milbury, illustrating his work in New York city in the tenement and lodging houses. The first picture cast upon the scene was one of the Saviour, the man who came upon the earth and spent his life time in the work of elevating the poor and needy.

Then three stanzas of Coronation were to be seen upon the canvas and with Miss French at the piano, everyone present was asked to join in singing the familiar hymn.

After the singing of this hymn, the lecture began. The first illustration was one showing a block of tenement houses in New York, with the walls of the several buildings so close, that an air chamber of only eighteen inches was left between the buildings, thus allowing little, if any, fresh air into a large number of the rooms of the houses.

While everyone's mind was thinking of the horrible situation in which these people live, Mr. Milbury gave some amazing statistics. In speaking of the death rate of these people, he said that where the death rate should be only twenty-one out of one thousand, as it is in the healthy parts of the city, it is nearly three times as large, being sixty-two out of one thousand. The death rate of children in healthy localities is fifty-seven in a thousand and in the tenement regions it is 104 in a thousand.

Several pictures of old New York followed in quick succession, among which was a scene in Mulberry Bend, a place which will soon be of the past, as it is being torn down and a beautiful park will be placed there for the benefit of the poor.

Mr. Milbury said: "New York is especially blessed by nature, being supplied with the greatest facilities for parks of any of the large cities."

Several pictures of the lodging houses in England were shown, displaying a great contrast between the English and the American houses. In London there cannot be found a single dwelling house that can be placed on the same level with the poorest of those in America, as in truth the poorest accommodations in London are far superior to the best of the New York tenements. In London the tenements are owned by large trust companies who have built their houses in a scientific way, having all rooms of the house opening into the pure air and warm sunshine in both front and rear. These houses rent for about 37 cents a week per room, and have all modern improvements. The companies are paying about 4 per cent. dividends, laying aside 2 per cent. every year as a sinking fund, and keeping their buildings in first-class repair. In fact they pay better than any railroad investment.

"Why cannot the American people do the same?" asked Mr. Milbury. "Well, they can and they are doing, or rather beginning to do it, and it is not long before America also will take a great step forward in this line."

Mr. Milbury's work is chiefly in the tenement and lodging house work and he is greatly interested in the building of new and the abolishment of the old tenement houses. At the close of the lecture a collection was taken up and given to Mr. Milbury to aid him in his work.

New Bridge at Finderu.

The Somerset County Board of Freeholders met at Somerville yesterday and decided to erect a handsome substantial bridge at Findern. It was reported that the work on the bridge at Neshanic was progressing favorably.

A New Factory Rumored.

The Daily Press has been informed on good authority that work on a new factory will be started in this city in about two weeks. It will require the employment of about 200 men.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

DEMOCRATS ON TOP NOW

YESTERDAY'S ELECTIONS RESULTED FAVORABLY FOR THEM.

In Elizabeth Mayor Rankin Was Elected, But the Rest of the Republican Candidates Were Defeated.—Other Results.

The charter election in Jersey City Tuesday resulted in a sweeping Democratic victory. The Democrats elected their two candidates for Street and Water Commissioners, and seventeen of the eighteen Aldermen. The total vote cast was 22,302, which is a falling off of 8,000 from the vote of last spring.

The Democrats were greatly rejoiced that the city has been redeemed and that the people have abandoned the Republicans, who got into power through the sham cry of reform.

In Elizabeth Mayor Rankin was victorious by 314 majority. P. J. Ryan, Democrat, was elected councilman-at-large by 241 majority. The common council will now stand eight Democrats and five Republicans. Last year that body was Republican. The board of education is also Democratic, whereas before it was Republican. Three Republican freeholders were elected. The election was not marked by any exciting incidents, though a large vote was cast.

The Democrats carried Newark by storm, even in Republican strongholds. The reform administration has been routed on every side. James M. Seymour, who ran against the present Mayor two years ago and was defeated by 4,700, was elected yesterday by 4,500.

In Rahway the Republican city ticket was elected, including a school commissioner-at-large and a water commissioner-at-large.

In Trenton the election resulted in the success of the reform excise ticket by over 500 plurality. The result will be a stricter enforcement of the liquor laws and a reduction in the number of saloons.

In New Brunswick the election resulted as follows: For alderman, First ward, Edward T. Runyon, Democrat; Second ward, Joseph Miller, Republican; Third ward, Henry C. Housell, Democrat; Fourth ward, Charles A. Oliver, Democrat. Indications are that the Democrats have elected C. A. Dunn, assessor; William C. Jaques, alderman-at-large, and William E. Florence, collector.

The number of Republicans who were scratching Mayor Rankin did not seem to be as large as was at first counted upon by the Democrats. A feature of the election was the presence around the polling booths of twenty-five Pinkerton detectives from New York, who were taken to Elizabeth by the frightened Democratic managers to prevent alleged attempts to influence voters with money, although there was no evidence of any such effort.

BACKED OFF THE CAR.

An Employe of D. C. Ivins & Co. Sustains a Painful Injury.

Edward Dooley, of East Fourth street, an employee of D. C. Ivins & Co., the lumber and coal merchants, of Watchung avenue, met with an accident Tuesday afternoon which will in all probability disable him for work for some time. He was unloading lumber from a car and in lifting a heavy piece, backed off the edge and fell to to the coal sheds below, a distance of about fifteen feet. He fell squarely upon his back. Some of his fellow-workmen ran to where he had fallen and found he was badly bruised about the back and hips and he was taken to his home on East Fourth street. Today he is able to walk about with the aid of a cane, but he will not be able to resume work for some time, as the injury is a very painful one.

Nimble Nut Crackers.

Four young lady members of the Obiter Dicta club, a reading society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church of this city, namely, the Misses Ernestine Smith, Ida Randolph, Louise Lewis and Louise Clauson, with Frank Hubbard and Everitt Kimball, Monday night cracked and shelled thirty pounds of nuts which was made into candy yesterday, and will be sold tonight at the Spring sociable held in the Seventh-Day Baptist church.

Saw the Field Marshal.

W. D. Murray, of West Ninth street, made a flying trip to Albany Monday when he argued a case in the Court of Appeals, the highest court in New York State. While Mr. Murray was speaking, Governor Morton and the distinguished Japanese visitor, Field Marshal Yamataga, came to the door and the case was stopped while the Chief Justice was introduced.

A little ill, then a little pill. The ill has gone, the pill has won. DeWitt's Little Early Risers the little pills that cure great ills. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

A DELIGHTED AUDIENCE.

An Enjoyable Programme Rendered at the Congregational Church.

It was a highly delighted audience that left the Congregational church last Tuesday after attending the recital held there under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society. The programme was all that could be desired and, although the mercury seemed to have a special longing for the top of the thermometer, the evening was a most enjoyable one. An enthusiastic audience comfortably filled the church and heartily applauded each number.

The programme published in Monday's Press, was followed out exactly. The opening selection was by that well known instrumental trio, Mrs. B. T. Barnes, organist, Mrs. M. E. Dwight, pianist and P. Ludwig Conde, violinist, and they rendered the selection with a finish that told of their complete command of their instruments.

Her simple but expressive manner of speaking and her pleasing method of delivery made Mrs. Herbert C. Williams, of Elizabeth, a favorite from the start. Her choice of selections was good and that the audience enjoyed them was shown by their applause. William E. MacClymont, is too well-known in this city to need comment as is also P. Ludwig Conde. Both rendered their selections in their usual excellent manner and deserved the hearty applause they received.

The fine contralto voice of Miss Katheryn Krymer, of Brooklyn, has been heard in this city before, but it was never heard to better advantage than it was last night. Her encores, "Little Doris" and "I Want Yer Ma Honey," were particularly well received.

Banjo music is always popular in this city, but never more so than when rendered by such excellent players as William J. Edwards and George B. Wheeler, of Bayonne. Their time was perfect and they played together most delightfully. Mr. Edwards showed himself as good an artist on the mandolin, and his solo on that instrument called forth loud applause that would not cease until he gave another selection.

The entertainment was gotten up by the social committee, of which Miss Adeline Parsons is chairman. Considerable credit is also due to some of the older members of the church who aided the success of the social.

THE GAY INDIANS.

Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe to Celebrate Their Anniversary Tomorrow.

Business men and others were surprised Tuesday afternoon by receiving a call from the runners of Paugh-Caugh Naugh-Sinque Tribe of Indians, announcing to them and the citizens of Plainfield that the event of the season would take place Thursday evening at the Columbia Cycle Academy, when the second anniversary of their tribe would be celebrated by a masqued ball and Indian peace dance. All were asked to attend and show to the visiting Indians of this reservation that the Indians with the long name know how to entertain their pale face friends. Go and join with them; you will find that the large dancing surface will be as free to you as it will be to the Indians.

It is not necessary that your costume should be an Indian one, as all kinds will be there and many new and original designs will be seen. Innocent fun and guessing the novelty will play no small part in the second anniversary of the tribe.

Reception for the New Pastor.

The members of Grace M. E. church who have always proved themselves to be very hospitable gave further evidence of it last Tuesday when they gave their new pastor, Rev. H. C. Johnston, a reception in the church. It was one of those exceedingly pleasant informal gatherings which is a feature at this church. There was a large number of people present who became better acquainted with their new leader and judging from appearances a great amount of good work will be accomplished in the future. The women in charge of the refreshments, which interspersed the good time, were Mrs. J. H. Carney, Mrs. Hoagland, Mrs. Sheppard, Mrs. William Lunger, Mrs. James Lunger, Mrs. Loomis, Mrs. Charles Hummer and Mrs. Andrew Lutkins.

An Affidavit.

This is to certify that on May 11th, I walked to Melick's drug store on a pair of crutches and bought a bottle of Chamberlain's *Pain Balm for in*flammatory rheumatism which had crippled me up. After using three bottles I am completely cured. I can cheerfully recommend it. Charles R. Wetzel, Sunbury, Pa. Sworn and subscribed to before me on August 10th, 1894. Walter Shipman, J. P. VOLUNTEERS TO RALLY.

A Big Meeting to be Addressed by Major Pattie Watkins.

Even though the weather may be warm and sultry on Thursday evening, every person interested in the new movement of the American Volunteers will find great enjoyment and profit at Reform Hall. An interesting programme has been planned and several officers of the Volunteers will be present and speak of the new work.

The chief feature of the meeting will be an address by Major Pattie Watkins, who is considered one of the leading spirits of the new movement and is ranked as second only to Mrs. Ballington Booth, and is now in charge of the battalions of New York and New Jersey. She is the one who secured Cooper-Union for the use of the Army. It was she who secured the first permit from Mayor Gilroy to hold open-air meetings in New York. Major Watkins, who is known as the "Welsh Nightingale" on account of her singing, will render several selections at the meeting.

The new uniforms of the Volunteers will be worn for the first time and the new flag of the army will be presented.

Captain Minns, who is one of the leading elements of the army and in command of the Plainfield post, will be present with several others of almost equal rank.

DORETHA DIX, PHILANTHROPIST.

An Interesting Paper on Her Read Before the Branch Alliance.

The Plainfield Branch Alliance of Unitarian and other Liberal Christian Women held their last meeting for the season in the Unitarian church Tuesday afternoon. After reports had been read by the religious news committee and mission secretary, the class subject, "Dorothea Dix," was taken up. A most excellent paper was prepared by Mrs. Fitch, of Erie, Pa., and read by Mrs. W. S. Adams. She was born in Maine, April 4th 1803, and was brought up in Boston by her grandmother. When she reached a proper age she taught school in Boston and Worcester. Her chief work was interesting herself in improving the condition of the insane poor. For this purpose she traveled all over the country, and presented her cause before many Legislatures. As a result many asylums were established in a number of States. She continued her work in Europe, and helped Florence Nightingale in the Crimean war. The asylum in the Isle of Jersey was established through her efforts. She was a nurse and organizer of hospital service during the Civil war, after which she gathered bodies of slain soldiers and superintended the erection of a monument. New Jersey offered her a home for life in the State hospital, which she accepted. Her death occurred in 1887. An interesting informal discussion followed, after which a vote of thanks was given to Mrs. Fitch for the admirable paper.

BAPTIST PARISH MEETING.

Annual Reports Made and New Officers Chosen for the Year.

The annual parish meeting of the First Baptist church was held last Monday in the Sunday-school room of the church. J. M. Hetfield was chosen chairman, and J. Herbert Case, secretary, in the absence of O. B. Leonard, who was detained on account of the death of his sister. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Treasurer, Alex. Gilbert, presented his annual report. It showed that over $6,000 had been received and expended and there is now a balance of $47.65 in the treasury. The trustees estimated that $6,500 would be needed for 1896. Martin I. Cooley and L. V. F. Randolph were elected trustees for three years, and John D. Runyon was chosen trustee for two years to fill the vacancy caused by the declination of Geo. Chapman. There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

A Pleasant Reception.

The Watchung Avenue Social club held a reception last Monday at the home of Miss Emma Angleman, 226 East Fourth street. Prof. Guttman furnished music for dancing which was continued until after midnight. Among those present were: Miss Gertie Skillman, Miss Lina Sargant, Misses Mamie and Susie Schaefer, Miss Annie Negley, Miss Mary Davier, Miss Emma Angleman, Mrs. G. M. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Angleman, and Messrs. Al Squires, Art Ford, Will Clifton, Walt Drake, Henry Ryno, Gilbert Apgar, Frank Schuck, Fred Meeker and George Schaefer.

EFFORTS APPRECIATED.

REV. FATHER SMYTH TENDERS A RECEPTION TO ST. MARY'S WORKERS.

The Choir and the Dramatic Society, Together With the Plainfield Orchestra and Friends, Have a Pleasant Evening.

During the past month the choir of St. Mary's church worked very hard preparing their special Easter music. They spared no pains, sacrificed engagements and gave up all enjoyment that the Easter music might be as near perfect as possible. Those who attended service Easter Sunday at St. Mary's church were assured that the efforts of the choir were not in vain, the musical part of the programme being one of the most elaborate and successful of all rendered in the city on that day.

The Plainfield Orchestra, consisting of ten members, who assisted the choir with the Easter music, also came in for their well deserved and generous share of commendation. The play recently presented in Music Hall, entitled "Shamrock and Rose," in which the parts were taken exclusively by members of St. Mary's church, was as great a success as the Easter music in the church, but the play was not presented without a vast amount of labor and earnest efforts by those taking part.

These three different groups had put forth their efforts successfully in the interest of St. Mary's church, and Rev. Father Smyth, of the church, determined to give them a small return for their services. Tuesday evening they were tendered a reception in the Parochial school at the corner of Sixth and Liberty streets.

The guests, to the number of sixty, assembled in the small hall of the school and were served by a number of members of the Sewing Circle of St. Mary's R. C. church. In the centre of the hall stood a large table which was loaded down with tempting viands and the delicious delicacies of the season. Banquet lamps, with shades of many colors, shed a mild glow of light over the assemblage, while the snapping of the bon-bons and the merry laughter of the banqueters made the scene one of pure pleasure, and was a fitting return for the earnest efforts which those present had put forth, without even thinking of any compensation in the interest of the church.

When the inner man had been satisfied, the assemblage adjourned to the hall above, where a programme of a musical and literary nature occupied the balance of the evening. M. J. Cashin proved a most successful master of ceremonies, and under his supervision the following programme was rendered: Piano solo, Miss Smith; vocal duet, Miss A. Keely and T. J. Comerford; vocal solo, Miss May Flanagan; recitation, M. Higgins; contralto solo, Miss Tessie Keely; tenor solo, T. J. Comerford; remarks, M. J. Cashin; vocal duet, Miss Flanagan and T. J. Comerford; recitation, C. J. Ward; selection by quartette composed of T. J. Comerford, F. W. Wharton, R. W. Light and M. J. Cashin, piano solo, Miss Kelly; remarks, Rev. Father Murphy.

Between each number of the foregoing programme, the banqueters enjoyed a dance, music for which was furnished by a full orchestra, under the direction of Prof. O'Reilly. While the dancing was being enjoyed, Father Smyth did the honors of the evening. The Rev. Father feels especially grateful to M. J. Cashin, director of the choir and Miss St. Leger, organist, for the special efforts which they put forth. The dancing and merry-making concluded about midnight.

The members of the Ladies' Sewing society, of St. Mary's church, who were the patronesses of the affair, were: Mrs. J. L. Slevin, Miss Annie Slevin, Mrs. Conway, Mrs. B. Grady, Mrs. McElroy, Miss Burdon, Mrs. Daniel McCarthy, Mrs. Knowlton, Miss Phillips and Miss Butscher.

Death of Miss Cornelia Leonard.

The community will be shocked to learn of the death of Miss Cornelia Leonard, daughter of the late James and Mary Leonard, which occurred Tuesday afternoon. She had not been ill very long and her confinement was not thought to be a serious one. She was well-known in this city and has lived here all her life, having been born here. The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 from the residence of her brother, O. B. Leonard, 915 Madison avenue.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

GUILD TEA AND SALE.

Grace P. E. Church Women Conduct a Profitable Event.

Despite the summer heat and sultriness that made Tuesday almost unbearable, the tea and sale given by the ladies of Grace P. E. church yesterday afternoon and evening in the chapel, was well attended and it proved a great success.

The room was cool and the tempting sights of cooling drinks and dainties attracted the passers-by. The decorations, although not elaborate, were very tasteful and consisted mainly of red bunting draped and festooned about the sides of the room. The tables also presented a very pretty appearance. A handsome display of flowers, mostly red and white, with their dark green leaves, looked very artistic against the white-covered stand. Those in charge of this table were Mrs. James T. Scott, Mrs. Pendleton Rogers, Mrs. Harry Stockton and Miss Dryden. Dainty little decorated cups and saucers contained chocolate which was sold at the next table by Mrs. S. A. Cruikshank and the Misses Holly. The receipts at this table were $12.25. Cakes, of all kinds and description, made a tempting picture on the snowy-linen cover of another table. Behind it, Mrs. Gilford Mayer, Mrs. T. S. Wheeler and Mrs. Howard Tracy sold the homemade good things.

Smilax, red flowers and ribbons gave a very pretty appearance to the candy table where a delicious appearing display of select candies, many of them homemade, was for sale. This table was looked after by Mrs. August Kleinecke, Miss Dryden, Miss Richardson and Miss Grace Langdon.

Despite the heat, the tea table attracted many. It was prettily decorated and the waiters were arranged in tempting display. The ladies in charge were Mrs. J. W. Reinhart, Mrs. Charles Lawson, Mrs. Van Boskerek, Mrs. Daniel T. Van-Buren, Miss Egan and Miss Peterson.

At the fancy table, fancy articles and pictures of the church were for sale. Mrs. Clay and Miss Tweedy were in charge.

The cooling lemonade was just the thing and the visitors appreciated the fact for they crowded around and kept the aides at the table busy supplying their needs. Miss Florence Waring, Miss Nancy Lawson and Miss Mary Anderson Reinhart presided over this table.

Mrs. O. T. Waring was in general charge of the sale which was given for the benefit of the fund for repairing the chapel.

In the corner of the room three Belgian hares and two white rabbits were on sale. Miss Lela Cruikshank and Miss Edith Arens had them in charge.

Handsome banquet lamps were placed on the different tables and, in the evening, shed a soft light over the room.

FOR THE FRESH AIR FUND.

A Pleasant and Profitable Experience Social of King's Daughters.

A pleasant and profitable "experience social" was held last Monday under the auspices of Advance Circle, King's Daughters, of the First Presbyterian church, at the home of Mrs. Howard Pope, on West Fifth street. The sixteen active members each earned one dollar and then told in rhyme how they earned it. Some of them made aprons, cake, pin cushions, filled and cleaned lamps, mended gloves, patched coats, and looked after the sick. Much amusement was afforded in listening to the different experiences. In addition to the $16 collected, $1 was donated by a friend. The amount will be given to the Tribune Fresh-Air Fund. There were about forty persons present, including the honorary members. After the experiences were related, games were played, a social time enjoyed, and refreshments, consisting of chicken salad, sandwiches, coffee and cake, were served. The affair lasted from 8 to 11.

Claimed He Was Attacked.

An Englishman stopped in Randolph's pharmacy early Monday morning for some medicine. He said that while on his way to town, passing through West Second street, he was held up by three men. He ran off and the men followed for a short distance when they stopped and he saw nothing more of them. He did not know the men and could not now describe them. He refused to give his name.

To Sing a Cantata.

The Cecelia will hold an extra rehearsal in the Y. M. C. A. hall on Thursday afternoon at 3:45 o'clock. This rehearsal is held in place of the one which was to be held on April 30th. A cantata entitled "The Fishermaidens," by Henry Smart, will be the principal work of the chorus, and will be sung by them at the annual meeting of the Choral society.

THE FASHIONS.

Notes on the Latest in the Line of Ladies' Dress.

Incipient paniers are appearing upon models for spring gowns.

Fancy taffeta silks will be in high vogue the coming season.

Muslins, chiffons, lawns of every thing and device, and many other dainty varieties of dog-day attire, now fill the shop windows of fancy dry goods and importing houses of the city.

Chine and bandillac ribbons for trimming spring hats show palm figures on Persian and glace grounds, shaded leaves in sateen broche, iridescent ribbons bordered with velvet, and exquisite Dresden patterns outlined with narrow threads of gold or bronze.

In Venetian and Pompadour laces, chiffon, point d'esprit and silk-wrought mousseline de soie, the graceful and picturesque Marie Antoinette fichu is now in highest favor. It forms a most becoming and effective addition to toilets for indoor wear, and during the coming summer it will be used as a model for light, dressy out-of-door wraps.

Many of the elegant costumes now worn are so striking and noticeable that it is imperative to have the bonnet or hat en suite, or there would be a disastrous mixture of colors and fabrics, but by following certain matters in the costume the likeness between the gown and the head-covering can be followed without actually duplicating any of the materials.

The detachable stock collars are a very handy bit of decoration. They are made of several yards of ribbon, satin, silk and velvet, in plaids of every clan, in tiny stripes and checks, in cashmere effects, and in Persian gauze in chine or Dresden patterns. One can hardly have too many of these useful and ornamental bits of finery. They are nothing if one has a knack of turning a pretty bow. Sold in the shops they range in price from 55 cents to three dollars each.

Smooth-surfaced ladies' cloth will take first rank this spring as a fabric for elegant gowns for visiting, church and dinner wear. Some of these will be made of the cloth alone, others will be elaborated by additions of lustrious corded silk and costly passementeries. Tweeds, checkeds and mixtures will form the leading goods for traveling and shopping gowns, made with gored skirts, box coats, or open-fronted princesse jackets, with machine-stitched edges and handsome buttons, these being the only bit of decoration on the gown.

Changeable effects in satins, silks, and silk and wool mixtures will continue to be the correct fashion, notwithstanding their prolonged favoritism. Shot repped fabrics are in great use, and will appear in many novel combinations. Changeable faille silks, broaded delicately with self-colored devices, or striped or dotted, make pretty vests and sleeves for fine wool toilets, and also the iridescent taffeta silks figured with small Dresden patterns woven in soft, beautiful colors.—N. Y. Post.

WASHING FLANNELS.

A Knowledge of the Proper Method Is Important to the Housewife.

It is important that every woman should know how the woolen winter underwear should properly be washed, and to insist that her laundress should follow her directions exactly. The time-honored joke that the father's new winter flannels will fit baby next year approaches too closely to the truth that some of us can hardly smile at it. Probably, however, in the hands of the average washerwoman the all-wool fabric will be converted into material so stiff and boardlike that baby would resent its touching the little skin.

Flannels should be soaked for several hours in water made soft by the addition of a teaspoonful of borax to each gallon of liquid. The water in which the flannels are washed must be warm, but not hot, and to it is added a large spoonful of ammonia. A strong suds is made of some mild soap and the flannels are put in and washed at once. As soon as they are clean they may be transferred to rinsing water of the same temperature as that from which they have just been taken. They should be pressed between the hands to remove the superfluous water, but must never be wrung. If properly washed they will be white and soft, and must be hung up at once until almost dry, when they are rapidly ironed. In bright sunny weather they can be dried out of doors; but if the weather be damp, so that the process may be protracted, or if the temperature is at the freezing point, they are best kept indoors to dry. They must not be allowed to become so dry as to require a second dampening. Flannels thus washed should be as soft and pliable through two seasons' wear as to make them amply repay the owner for the high price such garments cost. —Harper's Bazar.

Potatoes.

Potatoes baked in their skins should have a piece cut off the ends before baking, in order that the steam may escape. Prepared in this way they are light and dry when eaten. When boiled, they may be prepared in the same way, and the skin removed just before serving to each individual. Potatoes are unquestionably dryer and finer of flavor when boiled in this way, than when pared before cooking. The utmost care is necessary to prevent their being cold when eaten, as they grow cold rapidly after skins are removed, and of all things potatoes should be hot in whatever form they are served, unless it be in a cold salad. It is not regarded in good form to place boiled potatoes upon the table in their skins.—Womankind.

A Serious Infirmity.

"No, doctor; I have no infirmities whatever; I rise before daylight."

"Stop right there; that shows you are feeble-minded, to begin with."—Chicago Record.

THE NEGRO IN THE SOUTH.

Customs in Regard to His Treatment Are Slowly Changing.

The southern people say that a northern man, after living south a few years, is a fierce negro-hater, far outdoing the southern man in his antagonism to the negro race, much more intolerant of the negro's inherent characteristics. It is, however, the northern people who are helping the negroes to educate themselves. This is not said in criticism of the southern people, for conditions were made for them long ago, and their feelings and opinions in regard to the whole negro question are the result of hereditary environment, which will in time be changed by the new conditions.

It is simply impossible for them to look at the negro as we do. Illustrations of this are constantly met in going about the city. One morning, when starting for the fair grounds, a bus driver on his way back from the grounds drew up his horses to the walk, where several were waiting for the next load, and would not take up a load he would turn around. When we started off there was room for two more in the bus and room for one on the seat with the driver. I sat next to the driver on the inside, and we had gone only a few rods when a neatly dressed, very respectable young colored woman and a boy, also well-dressed, signified by a slight gesture that they wanted to ride. The driver did not see it, so I said: "There are two passengers." He drew up to the walk and the woman and boy got in. The driver looked around at them, and then, utterly regardless of their feelings, said in a loud voice: "If I had known it was a nigger I wouldn't have stopped." But he did not turn them out. A few rods further an Italian, dirty and ill-kept, stood with his harp by his side, as if he also were waiting for a ride, and our driver pulled up his horses and pointed to the seat beside him. Another driver was not ready to go, so we drove on.

It is simply a confliction of ideas, not personal antipathy. A young southern woman was shocked because two northern women went to lunch in the negro building. She acknowledged that a colored cook always prepared her meals, and a colored waiter always served her, but to go to a restaurant where a colored man's brain managed the kitchen, and a colored man or woman might occupy a table next to you—that she could not conceive of a white person's doing.

The negro has, however, made a great stride by this exhibition. Not so much by the simple showing that they can manufacture as by the fact that they are allowed to do it in such a peaceable and even friendly way, and have brains enough to manage their department, and to manage it so well. It seems there was some misunderstanding at the outset, for their are notices put up all through the negro building stating that colored people are restricted to their own building, but are at liberty as at present they please inside the grounds, enjoying the same privileges as their white neighbors.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

An Electric Hen.

An electric hen has recently been invented, which is claimed to be superior to the natural article of flesh, feathers and blood, except that it cannot lay eggs. When the electric incubator has produced the chickens, an electric foster-mother takes them in charge. The upper part is devoted to the fresh-ly hatched, while the lower part is so arranged that the young can run around on the ground and at the same time find heat and protection when they require it.—Chicago Chronicle.

TWO FISH PROBLEMS.

Observations and Reflections of a Rockaway Sage.

"Do fish feel pain?" I dunno—I never was a fish, says a writer in Outing. Yet I have observed freshly-landed fish to execute certain movements which seemed to indicate that the fish felt something; mebbe 'twasn't pain. It may have been simply agony, or anything like that. Those who used in their younger days to carry in their trousers pocket a cork stuck full of hooks may remember occasions when a hook worked free from the cork. Once I was startled from a sound nap by a dog by the ear, and the language he used and the way he ran out of line convinced me that he felt something. He may have felt only a pleasant sensation, but he didn't come within 50 feet of me for two hours. The desperate sagging back and zigzag resistance of a hooked fish, the wild flipflaps and straining gasps of a freshly-landed fish may be evidences of pleasurable sensations, but I am tempted to consider them as closely allied to that joyous thrill which prompts a man to rise above the insidiuous caress of a strong, well-bent pin. "Do fish feed at night?" Well, will—do fish swim? Country boys, however, don't fish fire beside the water? How about the boy who got first to the big boom and thus secured the boss place? How about the spiky-finned channel cats and mud cats that came up two at a time; the goggle-eyed rock bass, speckled perches; the hideous "mud puppies," which at once went into the fire along with a yard of line? How about the night lines? How about everything connected with the sport that used to get better and better as midnight approached, until the glorious fun and occasional profanity were interrupted by the sound of the "old man" falling foul of a wire fence or breaking a gad from the plum tree up the bank? Do fish feed at night? I dunno—they used to.

DOG DETECTIVE.

Does What Human Sleuths Had Worked Upon Three Months in Vain.

The Cincinnati papers contain an almost incredible story, which nevertheless, seems to be well authenticated. In the early spring of 1895, a business man of Cincinnati, Charles Hermann by name, disappeared, and no trace of him could be found. For three months detectives worked upon the case without avail.

Soon after his disappearance, Hermann's dog was found, badly poisoned, and near the point of death. The animal was carried to the house of friends and remained there two months under treatment, not being suffered to go out. But his life was saved.

When at last the dog was liberated, he began to search for his master; and after a good deal of running about, commenced digging on the banks of the Ohio river, opposite Cincinnati. There, after a time, he unearthed the body of Charles Hermann.

There are indications that a murder was committed, and that poison was administered to the dog at the same time. Very likely it was thrown to him by malfactors who dared not shoot or touch him.

The body was identified, but unfortunately the sagacious dog could do no more.

DIDN'T MAKE A CONTRACT

The Fact Brought Sorrow to an American Abroad.

A well-known Philadelphia lawyer who has just returned from abroad, tells the Record a rather remarkable story of his experience with a doctor in Paris. "Over there," he remarked, "everything is done by contract—a fact which I discovered to my sorrow. My wife caught a severe cold and was taken quite ill. I called in a French physician who had been highly recommended by the proprietor of the hotel at which I was stopping, and he paid five visits to my wife, after which she was so much improved that his services were no longer required. The next day I received his bill for 2,500 francs, which is equivalent to $500. Thinking a mistake had been made, I went to his office, where he smilingly assured me that the bill was correct. To my remonstrances he replied: 'But monsieur made no contract with me.' When I told him I wouldn't pay such an exhorbitant bill, he informed me that it would then be impossible for me to leave France. In desperation I consulted a friend of mine who resides in Paris and found that the frog-eating doctor had me where the hair was short, and in the end I had to pay it."

Never Saw Himself Before.

The London Globe relates a story of an old Hampshire peasant farmer who came to town to buy a hat, and was requested to look in the glass to see if the hat suited his face. The customer stood before the glass as though fascinated by his reflected image. Presently he slowly inquired: "Will—is that—me?" "Of course it is, guv'nor," was the shopman's reply. "Why, don't you know yourself?" "I be 60 years old," said the ancient, after another pause, "and I dunno as ever I seed my face afore!" And when, his purchase completed, he turned to depart, he walked up to the looking-glass again, saying: "I'll take just one more look at mesel', for I dunno as ever I shall ha' the chance again."

White and Red.

A white object of any size may be seen in sunlight at a distance of 17,250 times its diameter; that is to say, if it is a white ball 1 foot in diameter it can be perceived at a distance of 17,250 feet. A red object is not nearly so visible at a distance as one of white. A red globe a foot in diameter can be perceived clearly only at a distance of 4,500 feet, and a blue globe a little further.

FOR TOWN IMPROVEMENT

PROGRESSIVE WOMEN TO BEAUTIFY THE CITY AND BOROUGH.

The Women Will Co-operate With Public Officials in the Discharge of Their Obligations.—Officers and Committees.

The Women's Town Improvement Association of Plainfield and North Plainfield was organized in the Y. M. C. A. building on Wednesday. The meeting opened with Mrs. Horace Kimball, chairman of the committee on organization, in the chair. Mrs. Kimball introduced Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, who made a short address, in which she spoke of the great need of an association of this kind in this city.

Mrs. Horace Kimball, as chairman of the committee on organization, read the constitution and by-laws as prepared by that committee. The following extract from the constitution fully explains the object of the association:

"The object of the association shall be to arouse among all our residents deeper interest in the general welfare of our city and our homes, and of suggesting how women may discharge their municipal obligations, to assist the city authorities in securing the observance of all laws and regulations which have for their object the health, cleanliness and beauty of Plainfield and North Plainfield, and to interest the co-operation of all women in securing this end."

Any woman may become a member of the association by the annual payment of fifty cents, any person may become a sustaining member by the payment of $1 a year, a life member by the payment of $25, an associate member by the payment of $1 a year, and all young people under eighteen years of age may become a member by the payment of ten cents.

Mrs. Kimball took up the various sections of the constitution and by-laws and all were adopted, some as read and others as amended.

The president appointed a nominating committee of three, Mrs. Kimball, Mrs. Halloway and Mrs. Patterson, to select officers to serve until others are elected in their places. The nominations were as follows: President, Mrs. Edward D. McCarthy; first vice-president, Mrs. A. S. Patterson; second vice-president, Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph; recording secretary, Mrs. Harriett Burton Ford; corresponding secretary, Miss Mary Ellis; treasurer, Mrs. Alexander Gilbert.

The chairmen of the various committees were as follows: Street, Mrs. Mason W. Tyler; sanitary, Mrs. Dr. Ida B. Hunt; finance, Mrs. Alexander Gilbert; humane, Mrs. C. K. Myers; railroad, Mrs. M. H. Eaton; young people, Mrs. E. E. Kenyon; preservation of parks, etc., Mrs. E. D. McCarthy; prevention of cruelty to children, Mrs. Horace Kimball; prevention of cruelty to animals, Mrs. D. W. Pond; outlook, Mrs. S. R. Krom.

The foregoing were all unanimously elected, after which the meeting adjourned.

A CHURCH ELECTION.

First Presbyterian Society Hears Reports and Choose Officers.

The annual meeting of the members of the First Presbyterian church was held in the chapel last Friday and was largely attended. Rev. C. E. Herring, the pastor, presided. C. H. Bettman, the clerk, read the reports from all the societies in the church. Each one showed progress and improvement and the several societies are in a flourishing condition.

R. H. Radford, Jr., was re elected as elder and W. H. Shotwell was elected as an additional elder, making five elders in all. On the recommendation of the pastor the parish meeting was adjourned for one week. The reasons he gave were that in holding two meetings several of the members usually leave before the second meeting is concluded and those remaining were willing to vote for anything in order to finish the business. The pastor's suggestion was agreed to and the meeting adjourned.

A CHARMING HOME EVENT

MARRIAGE OF MISS ELEANOR A. UNDERWOOD TO S. B. PARROTT.

The Home of the Bride Made Brilliant With Floral Decorations, Pretty Gowns and Smiling Faces—Details of the Affair.

A charming wedding of Thursday evening was that of Miss Eleanor Alice Underwood, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Underwood, of 138 Crescent avenue, and Samuel Burrows Parrott, of Buffalo. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents by Dr. Cornelius Brett, pastor of Bergen Reformed church, Jersey City, and also an uncle of the bride. The maid-of-honor was Miss Blanche Collins, daughter of Hon. Gilbert Collins, of Jersey City, and the best man was George Vincent Wendell, of Boston.

The drawing room, in which the ceremony was performed, was superbly decorated with palms, southern smilax, bride roses, Easter lilies, white tulips and carnations, while a choice arrangement of white satin ribbon amid the flowers, presented a scene of decided beauty.

The bride was richly gowned in white satin, trimmed with Duchesse and point lace, pearl passementerie and chiffon. She carried a shower bouquet of white orchids and bride roses. She also wore a tulle veil with diamond ornaments and lilies of the valley, in shower. The maid of honor wore a gown of white organdie, trimmed with lace and white satin ribbon. She carried a bouquet of bridemaid roses. The bride's gift to the maid-of-honor was a wreath brooch of green enameled leaves, set with diamonds and pearls.

The hall and stairway was prettily decorated with palms, smilax and white ribbon, while the library was exquisitely arranged with pink satin ribbon, pink azaleas, tulips, carnations, roses, ferns and smilax. A pretty effect was created in the dining room through the use of Jonquils, white tulips and southern smilax. A profusion of flowers in endless variety was used in the conservatory, and a number of fairy lamps gave additional beauty to the scene.

A reception followed the marriage when Mr. and Mrs. Parrott received the congratulations of their many relatives and friends present. They left during the evening for a bridal tour and after April 20th will reside in Buffalo. The bride wore a traveling gown of light broadcloth, with vest of white satin embroidered in Persian colors, and a jeweled black kid belt and brown straw toque.

The music room, where Isler, of Newark, rendered choice selections, was decorated with palms, rubber trees, thorn blossoms and ivy pansies.

The ushers were L. A. Underwood, brother of the bride, and E. M. Bain, of Elizabeth.

A large and costly collection of presents were received by Mr. and Mrs. Parrott.

Guests were present Buffalo, New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, Elizabeth and Plainfield, making a most brilliant assemblage of wealth, beauty and culture.

OLD VETS ARE COMING.

Second Brigade, New Jersey Volunteers, Will Visit Plainfield in 1897.

Today the Second Brigade, New Jersey Volunteer, are holding their annual re union at Paterson, and an effort will be made to secure the brigade to meet in Plainfield next year. For this purpose Mayor Alexander Gilbert, of this city, Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., of the borough, Commander I. L. McVoy, of Post 73, Mrs. Brokaw, president of the Woman's Relief Corps, Past Commanders W. C. Smith, W. W. Coriell, William Hand and Comrades J. Goodwin and T. O. Doane, Sr., of Post 73, T. O. Doane, Jr., of the Sons of Veterans, and William Townley, whose father was a member of the brigade, went to Paterson to invite the brigade to this city. It is more than likely that the invitation will be accepted.

A telegram was received by The Press at 2:30 this afternoon from T.O. Doane, stating that the convention would come to Plainfield in 1897.

THE A. P. A. IN THE FIGHT.

Its Members Trying, It Is Said, to Defeat Frederick Severs.

The selection of Frederick L. Severs as a candidate for Freeholder by the Elizabeth Republicans has aroused the ire of the A. P. A. of Elizabeth. He is an active member of the Catholic Benevolent Legion.

The members of the A. P. A. intend, it is alleged, to knife both John C. Rankin, candidate for Mayor, and Mr. Severs. Never has there been so much interest manifested in a city election as in this one. The Democrats have put up such men as F. C. Marsh for Mayor and Judge P. H. Gilhooly, Benjamin H. Campbell, P. J. Ryan and George Ford, for Councilmen, and the Republicans have renominated their present officers, with the exception of Mr. Severs, who is a new man.

The city is naturally Democratic by 800 votes.

DAVID BODINE TAKES A LIFE PARTNER

The North Plainfielder Wedded a Pennsylvania Girl Yesterday.

The marriage of Miss Anna Sanger, of Scott, Pa., and David Bodine, of North Plainfield, was celebrated at the home of the bride yesterday morning at eleven o'clock, Rev. I. N. Moorhead, of Mt. Carmel, Pa., officiated. Only the relatives and near friends of the contracting parties were present. The bridemaid was Miss Gertrude Sanger, sister of the bride, and the best man was Lambert Bodine, brother of the groom. Both the bride and bridemaid were gowned in white Japanese silk, while the groom and best man were attired in the conventional black. A reception followed the ceremony after which supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Bodine were the recipients of many useful and ornamental presents.

They arrived in this city last evening about nine o'clock, and will reside on Somerset street, corner of Linden avenue, from May first.

Reckless With the Revolver.

A party of young men from this city went out riding last Sunday night. They took an old road to avenue towards Metuchen and as they went they fired several shots at several dogs that were barking in the yards. With a complete disregard for the consequences they pointed their revolvers in any direction. One bullet struck a neighboring house, just missing a bedroom window. The young men who made up the party are known by the authorities and steps will be taken to prevent any similar occurance.

THE NEEDS OF THE SOUTH.

Rev. Dr. Snodgrass Tells of the Missionary Work Among Southern Negroes.

The seventh anniversary of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the First Methodist church was celebrated last Friday in Vincent chapel by a very interesting meeting. After the usual devotional exercises, Mrs. Herbert Welch, of Brooklyn, sang a solo, "The Call for Reapers." The annual report of the secretary was then read. It showed the society in a prosperous condition, with a membership of 48, 18 of whom are life members. Some supplies have been sent to Alaska, but the principal work has been done among the needy home missionaries of the west and at the industrial schools of the south. Several boxes and barrels, containing supplies to the value of $331.90, have been sent out, while considerable financial assistance has been given to the colored industrial schools. Most of the supplies have been donated to the society, while $23.13 was received from the mite boxes.

The annual report of the Young Ladies Mission Circle was read by Miss Eva Jenkins. The circle has seventeen members. Its principal financial work last year was to raise $40 to support a colored girl in a southern industrial school. There was $6.23 received from the mite boxes.

After another solo by Mrs. Welch, Rev. Dr. Snodgrass, of Newark, made a short address. He spoke about the different fields for work in this country and divided it into three principal sections, viz: the people of the west who are laying the foundation for a future civilization, the south where there are four millions of colored people who until only recently were slaves and now, although they have the advantage of civilization, are utterly unprepared for it; the great uneducated masses in the large cities. He then told why a missionary society should be formed, for, said he, there must be a society before anything can be done. God's idea was co-operation. It is not the duty of everybody to go far away, but they should divide the work with someone else, doing their share in assisting to support the missionary. Some are better at one thing and others at another. He next referred to the relation of the home and foreign missionary societies and declared that both were necessary in their own line of work. He declared the work of the home missionary society particularly important. He gave as a reason why it should be the women's home missionary society as woman is the chief sufferer by sin, and he said she was particularly adapted for doing missionary work. He closed with a few words about the duty of the society, and the wonderful work it is accomplishing.

After the collection had been taken James McGee spoke about Monroe Avenue chapel and said that, although it was supposed to be a mission of the First M. E. church, they had begun to assist other missionaries themselves. He told briefly of the chapel and its growth.

Rev. W. C. O'Donnell spoke a few words in which he echoed the sentiments of the other speakers. The meeting concluded with a hymn.

PLAINFIELD'S BRILLIANT LAWYER.

A Picture and Short Sketch of Craig A. Marsh in the Law Journal.

The New Jersey Law Journal, of which A. V. D. Honeyman, of this city, is editor, this month publishes an excellent likeness of that brilliant Plainfield lawyer, Craig A. Marsh, and the following biographical sketch:

Craig A. Marsh, Plainfield, whose portrait appears in this number, is a well recognized leader of the bar in this city and holds a prominent place among the bar of the state. He was born in Plainfield in 1856, graduated from Union College at the age of 20, studied law with Hon. Amzi Dodd and J. Harvey Ackerman, graduated from Columbia Law School in 1879, and was admitted as attorney in this state at the November term of the same year, and counselor three years later. Before taking his counselor's license he became corporation counsel of Plainfield, and has held the position ever since, having been annually reappointed thereto, although the municipal government has been of all varieties of political complexion. His higher practice is chiefly in the higher courts, where he has established the reputation of winning his cases.

Some Trolley Talk.

The managers of the proposed trolley line between Elizabeth and Plainfield are working hard to get the preliminaries completed. It is said that the line will be completed to Westfield first. It is said that the interest of the old green line of horse cars will be purchased and connected with the Plainfield railway thus making the line nine miles long. The route will be from Elizabethport through Morris avenue, and thence through Sayre street probably, and the old road to the terminus, if the county road is not secured. The scheme has every flavor of success.—New Jersey Contractor.

EVENING DANCED AWAY.

A PLEASANT SOCIAL DANCE AT THE PARK CLUB LAST NIGHT.

First Event After the Lenten Season at That Popular Place of Society—Names of Those Who Were Present.

The social season after the Lenten vacation opened at the Park Club last Friday with a subscription dance given by the junior entertainment committee.

The young people of the city and borough gathered there and danced or conversed while the time flew swiftly by. The attendance was good, but not large enough to uncomfortably crowd the floor. There was the usual contingent of young men who spent part of their time amid the pleasures of bowling, pool and billiards on the lower floor and returned to whirl and glide about the waxed floors with some fair partner. As is usual with Park Club events, it was a great success and added more credit to the committee in charge, which consisted of Edmund Rusmore and Charles S. Cook. The patronesses were Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen and Mrs. J. H. Howell.

Among those present were: Mrs. E. P. Williams, Mrs. C. A. Reed, the Misses Shreve, Pond, Fannie Dryden, Marie Dryden, Edith Clapp, Cornelia Faber, Marion L. Henderson, Sarah Long, Laura Long, Florence Williams, Eleanor Williams, Mabel Vandeventer, Halla Van Deventer, Eleanor T. Van Deventer, May Shreve, Kathery McClure, Alice Thompson, Alice Barlow, Grace Barlow and Genevieve Daniel and Clara Woltmann; Messrs. Fletcher, Henry C. Wells, Walter Douglass, Ernest Swayze, Edward Rushmore, John Cothrell of Jersey City, Charles S. Cook, Everett J. Peck, A. Willis West, Harry A. Patten, Howard Turrill, Robert Suffren, S. THE LIEUTENANT-GENERALSHIP.

General Miles' Services Render Him Worthy of Appointment.

The more carefully we examine the objections that are offered to the revival of the office of lieutenant-general in the interests of Major General Miles, commanding the United States army, the less reasonable they appear. This office (and, indeed, that of general) is recognized as a fundamental part of every well organized army of the world.

General Miles' services since the war render him worthy of recognition as lieutenant-general, to say nothing about his services during the war. The office of lieutenant-general should not be bestowed grudgingly, nor, indeed, made the plaything of the executive department of a government. As a matter of fact, there should not only be the permanent rank of lieutenant-general, but also that of general. The idea that the lieutenant-generalship can only be held by an officer who has waded through seas of blood is an unwise and unpatriotic view to take of this subject. It offers a perpetual incentive to our officers to embroil us in war in order that they may win a coveted prize otherwise denied them. Our army is so small that every means should be taken to heighten its patriotism and dignify and ennoble it in the eyes of the public. Rightly the head of the army should be a general, and those in charge of the great departments lieutenant-generals. Such an organization would be in harmony with the practices of other countries and only appreciative of the needs of our army.

Everything indicates that congress is extremely friendly to General Miles; that the people are so there can be no doubt. His long connection with the army, his brilliant services on the frontier since the war and his gallantry during the great rebellion all attach them to him. His courage, skill and modesty are the attributes of a great man.

The plea that the office of lieutenant-general shall only be given to those who distinguish themselves in some great and bloody war will not bear examination or reflection. Whoever is thought worthy to be put in command of the United States army should have the title of general—or lieutenant-general at least. It is only merited recognition and only what the good of the country as well as the good of the army requires.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Country Club Election.

The following Board of Governors has been nominated at the Union County Country Club, to be voted upon at the annual meeting: C. J. Fisk, F. T. Baker, O. T. Waring, F. O. Herring, C. C. Burnet and H. W. Beebe. The nominating committee consisted of H. W. Beebe, Charles Schlipper and R. I. Jackson.

AN OFFICER ON TRIAL.

MARSHAL BARRY HELD TO AWAIT THE ACTION OF THE GRAND JURY.

William N. Pangborn Appeared as Counsel for the Plaintiff in the Case, Who Claims Assault—Counselor Reed for Defendant.

The case of Charles L. Vanduary against William Barry, special marshal, charging the latter with assault and battery, was tried last Friday before Justice Mattison. W. N. Pangborn represented Vanduary and Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed represented the defendant. It will be remembered that a short time ago both the plaintiff and defendant were at the Arlington Hotel and became engaged in a fight, and Marshal Barry attempted to arrest Vanduary. In the fracas it was claimed that the latter was assaulted, hence a warrant was issued for Barry.

The fact was brought out last evening that both men were under the influence of liquor, and the majority of testimony showed that both were very much intoxicated.

Julius Werts, the bartender, stated that on the night in question both men were refused drink. Vanduary then went out and the others followed.

There was conflicting testimony given as to where Vanduary was at tacked, but it was believed that it happened on the sidewalk in front of the Mrs. S. Baldwin, of Washingtonville, who saw the affair, gave the strongest testimony. He testified that he saw Vanduary assaulted. However, no one would swear positively that they saw the man kicked. Mr. Reed claimed that the complaint was wrong and that Marshal Barry was justified in his actions, there being no proof that he acted otherwise.

Mr. Pangborn made a short, but strong, plea on behalf of his client. The general opinion seemed to be that the witnesses knew more than they would tell.

The witnesses called were A. Baldwin, Marshal Line, J. J. Kleiner, T. Melcher, T. McGann, Frank Vermeule, A. Lutkins, Elias Southard, D. F. Drake, Chief Marshal Wm. Wilson, Jacob Hipp, and Marshal Barry. After both sides were given an opportunity to talk, Justice Mattison held the defendant in $200 bail to await the action of the grand jury, on Tuesday, April 11th. Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., furnished the bail.

ERIE PLANS IN NEW JERSEY.

Reported to be Arranging to Run Cars to Philadelphia.

The Erie Railroad, it is alleged, is trying to get a route to Philadelphia. The Erie Railroad system, which recently absorbed the New York and Greenwood Lake and the Watchung Railroads, will soon begin the work of double tracking the Orange branch of the line—the Watchung, and the Greenwood Lake roads, as far as Montclair Heights. The Erie also contemplates widening the cut at Kearny and building a bridge over the Passaic River. From West Orange the road will be extended across Main street, probably by depressing the tracks, to connect with the South Orange and Maplewood trolley line. When the road shall have reached the terminus of the present line of the trolley company, it is suggested that the extension to Philadelphia may be begun.

The Erie is now supposed to be controlled by the Vanderbilts. Neither the Erie, nor the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western has a route to Philadelphia and both are anxious to secure an acquisition. This would probably remove all obstacles in the way of the crossing at Milburn.

If the Erie extension to Bound Brook should be made, it would be possible at that point to make such connections as would allow the Lehigh coal being carried over the Erie to Jersey City through a section where it is now possible to secure Lehigh only by long, roundabout routes. The Erie would also shorten the coal route to Jersey City and New York. At Bound Brook connections could be made with the Philidelphia and Reading road that would enable the Erie passenger trains to be run on to Philadelphia.

A Very Considerate Friend.

Blinks—"Did you run over and ask Jinks for that umerella I lent him last night?" Office Boy—"Yes sir, he says he is very sorry, but the umbrella is not yet used to acquisition. This would probably remove all obstacles in the way of the crossing at Milburn. He says he will carry it home tonight and dry it by the fire." Blinks—"What shall I do, that is my wife's sun umbrella and she will need it Monday if the sun shines as that is her day to go to Peck's.

Loan Association Officers.

A meeting of the Plainfield branch of the State Mutual Building and Loan Association was held last night. H. O. Hance was elected a member of the Board of Directors in the place of A. Vanderbeck, George R. Rockfellow was appointed to represent the association at the meeting of the State association at Camden on April 22d. The annual meeting of the Plainfield society, was called for May 5th.

KATE GARDNER'S CHAT.

A Well-Fitting Tea Gown Is Indeed a Thing of Beauty.

Besides, During Lent, It Will Be the Most Popular of Costumes—The Blouse Still Holds Supreme—Dainty Petticoats.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

To make lovely woman lovelier still seems to be the aim and object of the new tea gowns. They are the most charming creations of the season thus far, and some show many novel and conspicuous features which make them almost irresistible to the majority of women.

There is a tea gown for every type of woman kind, from the pretty debutante to the stately society matron, and all milady has to do in making her selection is to bear in mind the wise behest of Dame Fashion that the gown be graceful and becoming; the rest will take care of itself.

It took the American woman a long time to learn from her wiser French sister that the loose gown stood for much else besides comfort and economy, but having once taken the lesson to heart it has no more enthusiastic supporter.

It is a great mistake to think the successful tea gown easily constructed. The best dressmakers claim it requires as much skill and attention in its making as the most elaborate ball gown. In their opinion there is no garment so entirely dependent for good results on its general effect as this. While the material and trimming should receive the most careful consideration they are really of minor importance when compared to the fit and finish which in the artistic gown shows the perfectly trained hand in every line and detail.

The tea gowns of the season are divided into two classes—the loose flowing robe, made dainty and pretty by yards upon yards of lace arranged in soft fluffy frills, and the more regal-looking one of heavy brocade, with its rich trimmings of fine fur and velvet. As to the money they cost, that is another and different story.

In the matter of material, much latitude is allowed. Printed velveteens, that seemingly were made for this purpose, are much in vogue, and the lovely flowered cashmeres, seen for the first time this season, make up most effectively.

Wool challie is not to be scorned; and that it is inexpensive does not detract from its charm. The broaded goods used show very large designs, which at first glance seem rather odd, not to say striking, when compared to those of last season, but its exquisite texture and harmony of color they are superior to anything of the kind yet seen, and, considering their use, a showy pattern is not inappropriate.

A tea gown may be fashioned in a variety of ways, but the newest and also the prettiest are made princess back, with the front cut to overhang a belt, and when properly managed this style will prove becoming even to the robust figure.

Much attention is paid to the sleeves, and every model is crowned by an enormous collar or Marie Antoinette fichu.

Many of the models show the full front made of chiffon or chine silk, and nothing could be daintier for this purpose. Not nearly so drossy, but yet very pretty, are those made with overhanging fronts of all-over embroidery on a colored foundation of silk or wool.

I want to chronicle the charms of three of the prettiest ones seen within the week, so that you may get a better idea of the present and coming styles in this direction; and if, perchance, the description seems rather elaborate, remember that often the handsomest garments can be copied in cheaper material with exceedingly good results.

One that seemed to me more than ordinarily pleasing was made of blue cloth of rather pale tone, the broaded design being four stars and fronts in the coral pales. The [illegible] front was of cream [illegible] to overhang a belt [illegible] was or[illegible] narrow[illegible] models the sleeves were the main feature. They were composed of five immense puffs, held in place by tiny plaitings of chiffon and ribbon, and over the hand fell a full frill of fine white lace.

Another, slightly different in design but just suited to the girlish figure of the debutante, was in material soft silk, in color gray—that delicate silvery gray ever becoming—cut a la princess back and falling in soft, slight-dragged folds in front, while over the shoulders came the quaintest collar-like cape lined with palest primerose satin, and edged all round with a double frill of closely-plaited chiffon. The girdle was of jeweled passementerie and the sleeves of chiffon, arranged in drooping puffs.

But the prettiest of all was one similar to that represented in the picture, made of the loveliest crepe-like silky material in cream-white. The monstrous fichu of lace had long, stole-like ends reaching to the hem of the gown and almost hiding the soft full front of chine silk. The loose sleeves, reaching only to the elbow, were trimmed with velvet which was so arranged as to show immensely full frills of plaited chiffon.

In looking around for something new in attire sacred to one's bedroom and boudoir, I came across some fascinating models in the way of dressing-gowns, tea-jackets and other like items. These dainty garments receive quite as much attention at the hands of the dressmaker as the most elegant street gown, and vary in price from one dollar up to $50.

For instance, a handsome dressing-gown marked at the latter figure was composed of heavy pink silk and given the luxury of a quilted silk lining, pale blue in color, and edged all round with narrow bands of mink fur. Wide folds of pompadour ribbon coming from under the arm were crossed in front and tied at the back in an immense bow with long ends.

Exceedingly pretty was a little French coat or house jacket, in light green cashmere, with accordion plaited bishop sleeves and rounded yoke of cream-tinted lace down the front, and forming the collar and trimming the cuffs.

Serviceable jackets made of fine French flannel are, after all, the kind to buy, and when made with a broad flaring collar, flounced with lace and ornamented by ribbon bows like some I have seen, it makes as dainty and pretty a negligee as one could desire.

Much is said and written about the reign of the blouse being on the wane. But I am loth to believe it, judging from the number of lovely stuffs turned out expressly for the making of this most cherished garment.

Taffeta and other fancy silks will be used quite as much as last season, and the fancy just now is to have them veiled under tulle when intended for evening wear. Tulle, however, should be used in the majority of cases with a very sparing hand, it being only suitable for the very young lady, and its days of usefulness are very few indeed.

There is a growing tendency towards plain bodice with puffed fronts. This style of waist calls for the richest material; and only in the Pompadour silks and velvets of the genuine Louis XV. designs can they be successfully treated.

Something entirely new are the silk handkerchief waists. Many handkerchiefs are required for one waist and usually those with bright plain ground and fanciful border are chosen. When fashioning by an inexperienced modiste they made up very effectively, the corners playing an important part as drapery and epaulettes.

Pretty petticoats are a positive comfort to the woman of means, and I cannot imagine anyone worthy the name contemplating their banishment. There is something very attractive in the frou frou of the silken petticoat, and as they are made nowadays they certainly add to the beauty of their charm. Some of the newest ones are made of soft, crinkly silk, lined with a thin wash silk, and trimmed with billowy cascades of lace. Another was in the most lovely shades of pearl, bordered with small roses and trimmed with a full deep frill of the same covered with green chiffon.

The one in the illustration is prettily trimmed with lace made of a silk dress that had done much service as an evening frock. I quite approved of it, for waste an opportunity of utilizing an ancient garment is surely unworthy of a woman, especially in these days when economy is the watchword in many homes.

KATE GARDNER.

An Emblematic Title.

Pharaoh is the Egyptian word for king. In the Old Testament Pharaoh is generally used without the addition of the individual name of the king. The title denoted also the king was an emblem of the god of light and derived his authority directly from Heaven. A fetarch, such as Herod the Great was called, was a ruler of a fourth part of a country. [illegible] was a [illegible] Roman republic and under the empire it denoted a petty tributary sovereign.—Chicago News.

MISS JOHANNA'S HAND.

Expert in Palmistry Studies the Chimpanzee's Lines.

She Is Intelligent, But Has a Murderous Disposition—Indications Are That She Would Not Hesitate to Kill with Cold Cruelty.

Since Johanna, the famous chimpanzee of the Central Park menagerie, drew a picture of herself and wrote letters to her friends she has become the object of study on the part of men of science, not a few of whom have visited her quarters in the Arsenal to ascertain, by her appearance and conduct, what it might be possible for her to do next. The general deduction is that Johanna is capable of doing almost anything that is good, together with a great many things that are wicked. For instance, it is believed that Johanna would commit cold-blooded murder, or, in a spasm of uncontrollable passion, treacherously assault her best friend.

As a matter of fact, says the New York Herald, Johanna's best friend is her keeper, McKay, and he says that he will always treat Johanna with his life. While acknowledging this, the keeper will not allow you to go within four feet of Johanna's steel bars, because her reach is long and her mind, if she has one, is constantly bent on destruction. She will laugh, sing, dance—almost speak—but she will tear to shreds that which you will give her, no matter how friendly the motive. With McKay it is different. Johanna is obedient to his commands. She is willing at all times to do what he wishes and when yesterday it was sought to read Johanna's traits by the lines in her hand, she submitted. This was because McKay held her hand, and because she felt assured that no hostile intention was contemplated.

Behind McKay stood a palmister, Mlle. Eleonore Panurge. It was Mlle. Panurge's first experience in the reading of character in a being not of the human family. The palmister at first scouted the idea that she would find anything at all in the chimpanzee's hand that would denote traits of any kind, but before her examination was completed she confessed that there were many things that surprised her.

"I find things that amaze me," she said. "I look at the palm and I look at the face, and I say to myself, is there, then, something of humanity in this beast?

"They are wonderful," she said. "I see the M and N, and both are in their proper places. These two letters, so clearly defined in the left hand, mean great things in the ordinary individual. In this case, I fear they must mean more. I cannot say that I believe in the theory of evolution, but I am at a loss to understand why these lines should so closely resemble, in shape and position, those ones I have found in many highly intellectual persons. Below the ball of the thumb, and running directly across the hand, I find the M. Many persons think that this letter in the hand stands for marriage. That is an absurd and ridiculous fancy. To the contrary, I will say that the deeper set is the M, the less inclined the subject is to marry.

"Johanna lacks refinement. There is no question about that, but there is no question, at the same time, that she is extremely sensitive. Both of these properties are indicated in the lines which border on the side of the hand opposite the thumb. The width of the lines shows Johanna to be coarse and the brevity of them is evidence of her sensitiveness. She will insult, but will not be insulted.

"Of those long fingers (almost twice as long as any others I have seen) I see power and originality, together with dangerous qualities. She has the fingers of a pickpocket and a tyrant. Imagine her shaking that long index at you, contemplate the alacrity with which those four fingers could fathom the depths of your pockets; think what a cruel and relentless grasp she would retain on an enemy!

"The formation of the ends of her fingers is in her favor, to a certain extent, because they taper. Unlike the tiger or the leopard, she would stop her mangling after being satisfied that she had conquered. I cannot say that she would fall in love with her thumb. It is too short and insignificant, and is set too far back on the hand. We look for principle in the thumb. Johanna has no principle. I think that little thumb is her weakest point. If the last joint were long in comparison to the other joints of her fingers I might forgive her, but such a contrast cannot be overlooked. I would advise her keeper to be careful.

"I have noticed that immense hollow in the palm of Johanna's hand. She cannot get rid of it, even if she were to try. It comes from a habit of keeping the hand almost constantly closed, and it shows that her nervous tension is great. It argues well for the activity of her brain."

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

Democratic State Convention.

The Democratic voters of New Jersey are requested to meet at such times and places as may be designated by their local committees to elect delegates to a State Convention, to be held at

Taylor's Opera House,

in the city of Trenton, on

THURSDAY, MAY 7th, 1896,

at 12 o'clock noon, for the purpose of selecting four (4) Senatorial and sixteen (16) District Delegates to the Democratic National Convention to be held to nominate candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States.

The basis of representation will be one delegate for each two hundred Democratic votes cast at the Gubernatorial election of 1895, and one for each fraction of the same over one hundred; but each ward and township shall be entitled to at least one delegate.

DEMOCRATIC STATE COMMITTEE.
E. F. C. Young, Chairman. Willard C. Fisk, Secretary.

Those New Jersey towns who have elections today are well provided for in the way of weather.

It is said that the Voorhees investigating committee will shortly probe into the municipal affairs of Jersey City.

Morristown is too wealthy to be progressive. Most of her influential citizens are opposed to the construction of a street railway in the town.

The bicycle has figured prominently in many of the State Legislatures this winter. In the New York Legislature yesterday, a bill was passed classifying bicycles as baggage on railroads.

The greater New York seems doomed. New York and Brooklyn Mayors are opposed to the consolidation bill before the State Legislature, and without their approval it will fail to become a law.

The article from the Chicago Times-Herald, published in another column of The Press today, relative to the appointment of Gen. Miles as Lieutenant General of the United States Army, is one filled with strong points in his favor.

Two Kansas editors have come to the conclusion that the gun in a mightier argument than the pen, and now one of them lives not to tell the reasons thereof, but the world of journalism has received a recruit to take the place of the missing Kansas scribber by the personality of the Buffalo Bill.

McKinley seems to be the man for the Republicans of New Jersey. In the Republican primaries in this city last night there was a strong feeling for the Ohio man, and much the same disposition seems to prevail all over the State. There is no doubt but what he is the popular candidate of the Republicans.

Governor Griggs has signed the bill which, it is thought, will put an end to the slipshod and careless manner in which boroughs and towns have been incorporated in this State during the last few years. The new law provides that hereafter no town or borough shall be incorporated except by special act of the Legislature.

In an interview yesterday Gov. Griggs, of New Jersey, who was the guest of the McKinley Club, of Hartford, Conn., said that he thought the New Jersey delegates to the St. Louis Convention would be instructed to vote for McKinley. He did not declare himself a distinctively McKinley man.

The New York World has been publishing letters from prominent Democrats all over the country as to whether or not they favor a third term for Grover Cleveland. The south and west are almost unanimously opposed to a third term. The eastern state leaders are not so bitterly opposed as the southern and western ones, but there seems to be a strong element for Whitney or Morrison.

There is an evident purpose on the part of the New Jersey Republicans to make a serious move for the nomination of Garrett A. Hobart for Vice-President. The ambition is laudable, but the discretion is terribly weak. If the nomination for President goes to the west, the great efforts of the managers will be to coax New York into the traces. They certainly will not feel with New Jersey.—True American.

Ballington Booth does not seem possessed with that brotherly love which Booth his family and professional ties would indicate. The constant bickering between the Booths is full of hypocrisy. Wordy warfare such as the American Volunteer leader is indulging in is not the kind of a campaign that the rules of his organization prescribe. It benefits neither organization.

A contemporary writer says that at twenty a man "knows everything and more too; at forty he has doubts, and at fifty he becomes very modest." We have heard something of the sort before; but it is not true. The man who thinks he knows it all at twenty will in most cases be conceited enough to be disagreeable when he is fifty. Age does not greatly alter a man's nature —Rochester Union.

We need a woman's college in Westfield, a college for the Education of Female Domestics. The education of domestics, in the enlightenment of their minds and the regulation of their tempers, is a pressing need. Give us such a college, not a kindergarten or a seminary, but a real out-and out college, where cooking, dusting, and all the household branches might be learned, and a large addition to the stock of human happiness might be made, and much misery prevented.—Westfield Leader.

It is very evident that Elizabeth Republicans are fearful that victory at the polls tomorrow will not be theirs. They are utilizing every method known in political warfare to accomplish the re-election of Mayor Rankin. When a candidate finds it necessary to resort to letter-writing to the public to bolster up his campaign, as Mayor Rankin has done, it shows plainly that he is in desperate straits. It is the opinion of sagacious political observers that Frederick C. Marsh stands an excellent show of being Elizabeth's next Mayor.

Many of the points made in the communication published in The Press today concerning the work of the Common Council are very good, and then again others are very bad. The observations show that it takes all sorts of people to make up a world, and that no matter how or what a public official does, he is bound to be catechised by some one whose ideas of public administration are widely different. The correspondent's conclusions that the Councilmen are in league with avaricious corporations is ill-advised and without truth, but his ideas of economy in municipal improvements are well-timed.

A Women's Town Improvement Association has been formed in Plainfield, and by its appointment of committees has shown with what comprehensive ambition it proposes to go about its work. One of its committees is to look after the condition of the streets, another is to see to sanitary matters, a third is to keep watch and ward over local finances, a fourth will watch out to see that the street railroad company does its duty and keeps within its rights. Committees on humane authority, on cruelty to animals and to children, on the training of the young, on the city parks and on the city's future advancement have also been appointed. The women start out hopefully and ambitiously, and though with other people of worthy ideals they will doubtless share the fate of accomplishing less than they desire, they may do more for the city than some of the lords of creation, looking at their enterprise with supercilious eyes, expect.—Newark News.

In every community there are a large number of improvements sought for that the busy municipal officials are unable to give proper attention to, not by any willful inattention on their part, but because of the lack of public funds and a widespread public interest in their accomplishment. Where there is one person with civic pride and a desire to accomplish something in that line, there are five who mentally agree with them, but make no effort to assist them. It is just this condition of affairs that the Town Improvement Association, which was organized yesterday morning, seeks to obviate. By organizing for agitation and work, they present a solid front to effect their ideas in local government. In other New Jersey towns the women have accomplished many things that are needful for the beauty of the place and its general desirability as a place of residence, and the efforts of the Improvement Association in this city will doubtless be much the same. The fact that their constitution provides for membership of young as well as old, shows their intention to interest and utilize all ages in the work of municipal improvement.

THE DOCTORS AROUSED.

PROBABILITY OF ANOTHER HOSPITAL BEING ESTABLISHED.

Dissatisfaction Over Some of the Rules of the Muhlenberg Hospital Has Resulted in a Movement for a New One.

The discussion over the apparent injustice of the Muhlenberg Hospital rules permitting only allopathic physicians to practice within the walls of that institution are taking form, and there is every indication that Plainfield will soon have another hospital in which the homœopathic physician will minister unto the sick.

Ever since the Muhlenberg Hospital has been instituted there has been more or less comment and dissatisfaction expressed over this prohibitive rule. Patients of homœopathic belief and support were admitted and their fees accepted, but in no case were they permitted to have their family physician attend them. During the course of a year there are more or less important surgical operations and examinations made on patients at the hospital, and at these only allopathic physicians could be present. As they are considered of great value to the medical science and practice of a physician, the homœopathists felt that they were again at a disadvantage with the branch of the profession with whom their methods of practice differ.

The differences of the physicians have found favor with a large number of their clients, and assurances have been given by many that they will assist them all that is possible in a financial and influential way in the plan to build and support an institution for their practice.

There is now some talk, however, that the Muhlenberg Hospital officials will make concessions to the homœopathists, rather than have another hospital started, which would naturally withdraw considerable support from them. A Press reporter was assured this morning by a prominent homœopathic practitioner that no concessions would be accepted at this late day by his branch of the profession, for it was only a matter of time when they would have an institution of their own.

A meeting of those interested in the new hospital will be held on Friday of this week at the home of E. B. Clark on Crescent avenue, who is the present President of the Board of Governors of the Muhlenberg Hospital, but who is said to be in sympathy with the new movement. At this time it is expected that some definite plans for the future will be made.

While no location for the new hospital has yet been suggested, it is thought probable that it will be built in the eastern end of the city.

SOMERSET COUNTY IGNORED.

The Republicans Angry Because They Are Refused a Delegate.

The Republicans of Somerset county are indignant over their treatment by the New Brunswick convention last week, when their delegates met with those of Monmouth and Middlesex to choose district delegates to the National Convention, says The World:

Somerset expected to name one of the delegates, and their right to do so had been conceded. L. A. Thompson, Clerk in Chancery, was their choice. When they reached New Brunswick they found that Middlesex and Monmouth each had a candidate and, as has been their custom ever since the Third District has had its present autonomy, they were prepared to ignore Somerset entirely. A sop was thrown to Somerset in the nomination of Assemblyman Charles A. Reed and Charles Place as alternates, but they refused to serve.

The Republican leaders are very angry at their treatment and threaten that they will attend no more conventions, nor will they assist in any Congressional election until they are accorded their rights. Congressman Howell will seek a re-election next fall, and his chances of success are endangered if their threat should be carried out, as Somerset gave him a handsome majority when he ran two years ago.

Somerset has only eighteen delegates to Monmouth's forty-one and Middlesex's forty-nine, hence can do nothing when the others combine.

THE MINISTERS AROUSED.

They Pour Hot Shot in the Councilmanic Camp Over License Matters.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—At a meeting of the Ministers' Association held Monday, April 13th, it was voted to ask the Plainfield papers to publish the sentiments of the association regarding some of the licenses to saloons granted this year.

The Common Council granted licenses at its meeting February 24th. At that meeting, before the vote was taken, a petition from this association was presented to the Council, which contained the following sentence: "We also enter our solemn protest against allowing a saloon to be placed directly across the street from an important church, viz: the Mt. Olive Baptist church."

Despite this protest the proprietor of the saloon in question secured his license by a vote of 7 to 1.

In the face of this vote the Ministers Association addressed the following protest to the Common Council:

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

Gentlemen:—Five years ago the Common Council of this city voted to license a saloon known as the "Elkwood," almost next door to the Trinity Reformed church on Second street. At the next fall election, by a very decisive vote, all but one of the Common Councilmen who voted for that measure failed of re-election. As political in the next day's Daily Press said truthfully in explanation of that result: "The thing which chiefly contributed to their Waterloo was their voting to license the Elkwood saloon in direct opposition to the will of the people." That vote cost them the offices would never forgive, and the people's wrath was strong enough to afford a chance for such a rebuke as they administered yesterday."

The "will of the people" as referred to above had been expressed in numberless petitions declaring that a drinking place so near a church or a school is a nuisance.

In spite of this bilegal consideration, and regardless of repeated petition and protest, the present Common Council has continued the license of a saloon almost directly opposite the door of the Mt. Olive church.

We do not believe that our citizens have changed their opinion of five years ago concerning this matter, nor do the facts were clearly brought to their attention that they would reverse the verdict then given.

We feel compelled, therefore, to place on record our most solemn protest against this action of our Common Council, deeming it injurious to some of our sister churches and to the good name of our city itself.

This protest was read and ordered to be filed at the meeting of the Common Council, April 6th.

G. Kennedy Newell,
Secretary Ministers' Association.

MRS. BOATE'S DIVORCE.

THE FANWOOD WOMAN'S PRINCIPAL WITNESS ARRESTED YESTERDAY.

Charles Corwin is Charged With Perjury by Thomas Boate—Mrs. Boate Wants to Whip Her Erstwhile Husband

Last January The Press made exclusive announcement of a divorce suit brought by Mrs. Annie Boate against her husband. The World this morning published the following concerning the case:

Annie Boate, who lives in a handsome $8,000 mansion on the Terrill road, in Fanwood Township, Union county, is trying to secure a divorce from Thomas Boate, who runs a bakery at Ocean Grove.

Mrs. Boate was married several years ago in Camden. She left two months later and went to Hoboken, where she became an actress in a variety theatre. She became tired of this life in a few years, and went to Fanwood to live.

While there associated with her was Charles Corwin, alias Collins, of New York city, about twenty eight years old. Last fall the woman determined to get a divorce with the intention, it is said, of marrying Corwin.

Mrs. Boate went to Fargo, N. Dak., and remained a month, but was unable to secure the divorce, as she had not the necessary papers to show the Court that her husband had abandoned her. She returned to New Jersey and, through a Plainfield lawyer, began divorce proceedings.

Testimony was first taken in New York, and afterwards before Justice Vincent W. Nash, in Plainfield, and afterwards before Lawyer Cook, in Asbury Park.

Corwin was her chief witness to prove that Boate had not only forsaken her, but also, it is alleged, that he had made overtures to her through agents for a monetary consideration to be paid him if he would agree not to oppose the divorce. All this Boate stoutly denied, as did his witnesses.

Corwin submitted a letter which he claimed bore an important part in the case.

The hearing has dragged along several weeks at Asbury Park, and yesterday when it was to be resumed Corwin was seized by an officer when they alighted from the Jersey Central train at Asbury Park, and was taken before Justice Godd to answer a charge of perjury made by Thomas Boate.

Corwin pleaded not guilty, and was held in $300 bail to appear at a hearing in Justice Dodd's office. Mr. Guerin, the counsel for Boate, the complainant, had Mr. Cook before the Court.

The Justice decided to hold Corwin for the Monmouth County Grand Jury, and, as he was unable to furnish bail, he will be taken to the county jail at Freehold.

Mrs. Boate was greatly excited over the turn affairs had taken. She wanted to thrash Boate, but was checked by her lawyer. She assurred Corwin that she would stand by him to the last.

The hearing in the divorce suit will be resumed Wednesday morning, before Lawyer Cook.

A FIRE IN THE VALLEY.

AN AREA OF A HALF-MILE OF FARM LAND BURNED OVER.

The Fire Was Started to Clear Off the Grass Previous to Ploughing, But It Got the Best of Farmer George W. Bullman.

Monday afternoon ex-Freeholder George W. Bullman, who leases Aaron Allen's farm in Washington Valley, started a fire on the place intending to burn the dead grass on a section previous to ploughing. The flames got beyond his control and had it not been for the timely assistance of friendly neighbors, it would undoubtedly have entailed much damage and loss. As it was, fences, lots of cordwood, an apple orchard and a very valuable timber tract on the second mountain suffered greatly as a result of the blaze.

When Mr. Bullman started the fire he had no thought that the grass ablaze could get the better of him, until the strong southwest wind fanned the flames to such proportions that they began to burn up everything in their way.

From field to field, through the orchard and on up into the mountain into a valuable timber tract that belongs to the farm, where is situated much large timber, the flames flew, covering an area of over one-half mile before they were extinguished.

The farm hands and the neighbors came to the rescue. Harrison Coddington, of Somerset street, who is a son-in-law of Aaron Allen, was notified, and sent a few of his men to fight the fire. All the afternoon they exerted their best efforts and after four hours of hard work, succeeded in beating the fire out with cedar brush. Luckily no buildings were burned and a few hundred dollars is all the damage as the result. The fire-fighters say that it was as hot a job as they ever came in contact with and they do not seek nor desire any more work of the same kind hereafter.

Free Attendant Service—The Northwestern Line.

A new departure has been inaugurated at the Chicago passenger station of the Northwestern line [Chicago and Northwestern R'y] which will be found a great convenience to the traveling public. A corps of uniformed attendants has been provided to render both incoming and outgoing passengers all necessary attention, directing them to carriages, omnibuses and street cars, carrying hand baggage, assisting persons in feeble health and making themselves useful in every way in their power. The attendants wear blue uniforms and bright red caps, and the service is entirely free. The Northwestern Line is the through-car route between Chicago and St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Ashland, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Sioux City, Denver, Salt Lake, San Francisco, Portland, and many other important cities of the west and northwest.

WOMAN TO THE FORE.

She is Getting Legal Offices and Can Now Become a Master in Chancery.

The New Jersey woman has come in for more or less misrepresentation since the law makers have yielded to public opinion and have recognized her right to make a living.

The statement has been made that New Jersey possesses the only woman commissioner of deeds in this country, in the person of Miss Marion Colgate, of Newark. This is an error. There are now eleven commissioners of deeds in New Jersey, which is the only eastern state that has them. There are are forty-six notaries public but only one lawyer. Miss Mary V. Steele, of Somerville, was the first woman to be elected a commissioner of deeds. She is the daughter of the late ex-Congressman William G. Steele.

Women commissioners are rare in the Eastern states, but not in the west. Those elected at the last joint meeting were: Mary L. Holdrum, Eastwood, Bergen County; Emily O'Connor, Newark; Frances B. Stewart, Newark; Marion Colgate, Newark; Caroline L. Cue, Jersey City. Mary R. Gray, Raritan; Hunterdon County; Bella M. Farnham, Raritan, Middlesex County; Mary V. Steele, Somerville, Somerset County; Alice M. Kyte, Fanwood, Union County; Alice M. Thompson, Plainfield; Mary F. Phillbrook, Hudson.

Miss Mary Phillbrook, the first woman lawyer of the State, won another victory at this session of the Legislature, by securing the passage of a bill to allow women to become Masters in Chancery. The bill which she had passed has now become a law, and she is the first candidate for appointment.

It is expected that next year Miss Beatrice Maybaum, of No. 7 Sidney place, Newark, will apply for examination, preparatory to an entrance to the New Jersey bar.

Women are coming to the front in other lines. Miss Elizabeth Compton is the first woman inventor in the State, and Chief Consul Robert Gentie, of the New Jersey Division, L. A. W., has recognized the bloomer bicycle girl and has appointed Miss Clara Bell Dunning, of Paterson, and Miss Ida Greely Ale, of Trenton, local consuls.

REV. HERRING SUPPORTS DR. MORGAN

And Criticises Dr. Lee for Making Public the Plagiarism.

The First Presbyterian church contained a large audience last Sunday who were present to hear the pastor, Rev. C. E Herring, preach from the subject "Ministers and Plagiarism." It was a sermonette and preceded the regular sermon from the subject "Foothold." The sermonette was a consideration of the recent action of Dr. Morgan in his use of a sermon on Easter Sunday which was preached by Dr. Putnam some years ago and afterwards published in book form.

Mr. Herring took the stand that the action of Rev. Mr. Lee, of Newark, in exposing the above fact was very unchristian. The fact that Dr. Morgan had been exceedingly busy gave him the perfect right to use the sermon in question. Mr. Herring's remarks were supported by texts of Scripture setting forth clearly the right in question.

He said there were times when the body and mind were so tired that it was simply impossible to collect original thoughts and prepare them for a sermon, and this was no doubt so in the case of Dr. Morgan. He thought that Mr. Lee had acted unwisely and had not shown a Christian spirit in attacking Dr. Morgan. The pastor then followed with his regular discourse on "Foothood," which was powerful and very instructive.

Prominent Volunteers Coming.

At Reform Hall, Thursday evening, Major Pattie Watkins, assisted by Captain Grady, Captain Lindsay, the cornetist, and Lieutenant Jennie Hughes, all from national headquarters, will address the local post and their friends. A street parade, in which for the first time will be displayed the new flag of the American Volunteers, will precede the meeting. Meetings will be held every evening during the week at 8 o'clock.

PLAINFIELD'S FINEST.

THE POLICEMEN ARE NOW UP IN MILITARY DRILL AND TACTICS.

For Several Weeks They Have Been Under the Tutelage of Councilman Barrows—Will Make a Fine Showing on Parade.

The last of the drills of the police force at the Columbia Cycle Academy was held Saturday afternoon before an audience that included many of the Councilmen and other city officials and prominent men. The verdict of all was that the police had been greatly improved in appearance, at least, by a little taste of military tactics.

The officers who passed through the different manœuvres were under the command of Sergeant Kiely and consisted of thirteen men, including the sergeant, two roundsmen and ten patrolmen. The men marched into the Academy where Councilman E. T. Barrows, chairman of the police committee, took command. They presented a very neat appearance in their blue uniforms, white gloves and helmets. The different evolutions were passed through very creditably, although the slippery floor made the turns rather difficult. They kept a very good line, however, and showed that considerable work had been done to get them in such good form in a short time. The audience appreciated that fact and applauded the movements of the platoon.

Councilman Barrows was seen by a Press reporter during one of the brief rests. The object of the drill was, he said, to give the men better position and prepare them to make a creditable showing at the head of a parade. He was much pleased with the present appearance of the force and thought it a great improvement over their old manner.

The men were put through a drill with their short, dress clubs and were then inspected by a committee of the audience. They then retired and, discarding their short clubs and removing their white gloves, took their heavy night sticks and lined up as for duty. Roundsman Mattox took command while Roundsman Frederickson brought up the rear of the column, wearing his bicycle leggings and leading his wheel. Roundsman Mattox then inspected the men and their keys and they were then marched away for duty while the audience gave a farewell round of applause.

THE BILL KILLED.

The Measure Providing for the Use of the Bible in the Constitution is Dead.

The regular monthly meeting of the American Sabbath Tract Society was held yesterday. There was a large attendance. Charles Potter presided. The reports of committees on special work were made and the principal business transacted was to provide for the more efficient circulation of their literature. Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., made a very interesting report regarding his recent mission to Washington in behalf of religious liberty. Dr. Lewis stated that the bills before the committee in Congress, in reference to inculcating portions of the Bible into the Constitution, and the law for the enforcement of Sunday observance, had been killed for the present session at least, and that the sentiment of the members of the committee that were considering the bill was that the provision in the Constitution giving religious liberty, would not permit religious legislation.

Favorably Impressed.

The committee from the State Poultry Association, which was to have met Charles Hand in this city on Saturday, for some reason did not put in an appearance. Mr. Haynes, a member of the executive committee, was present, however, and in company with Mr. Wiseman, of the Cycle Academy, visited the Academy. Mr. Haynes was favorably impressed with the place and thought it would be an excellent location and especially adapted for the exhibit. He will probably report to the committee and a meeting will be held later to decide definitely in the matter.

TWENTY-ONE YEARS OLD.

A Sermon Preached by Rev. J. W. Richardson Last Evening.

A very interesting sermon was preached by Rev. J. W. Richardson in the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday from John 9:21: "He is of age ask him: he shall speak for himself." Mr. Richardson said in part:

"When the Jews came to the young man's parents to criticise, in order to preserve their social standing and membership in the synagogue, they threw all responsibility on their son. But the young man faced Christ's accusers: and despite father, mother, friends and social standing, he defended his Helper. He exhibited the spirit of a true manhood, and the independence of his majority. Manly independence! have you arrived at this true majority? It is not the twenty-first birthday that makes the youth a man. He only arrives at a true majority, who has settled principles. The most pitiable sight on earth is a dough-man: he who is a Republican or Democrat because his father was; he who subscribes to some creed because his friends attend that church; he who adopts a certain mode of action because society indorses it. The dough-man goes through life without the vertebræ of principle. We need men who will weigh all questions in the scales of justice: form calm, righteous conclusions: and then engage in unflinching action, which knows no compromise. There is all the difference in the world between a life of honest usefulness and a lame life of worthless fluctuation. A young man of sterling principle cannot pass unnoticed through this world. Noble principles make the young man a unit: and a unit counts everywhere and every time. There are young men who are willing to adopt any sentiment or pursue any course, however false or belittling, provided that it be popular. In these days it is a refreshing sight to see a young man true to his manhood. Better a garret on the back street and the consciousness of clean hands. Better a limited acquaintance and a chaste life. Better no parties, no theatres, no going out evenings: than be king of a nation, or a social leader, and suffer the contempt of your own conscience."

FELL AND HURT HERSELF.

Mrs. Lauffer Was Trying to Capture the Pigs When the Accident Occurred.

Mrs. Edward Lauffer, the woman whom The Press some time since told about falling heir to a small fortune, met with a severe accident on Saturday that may prove fatal. Mrs. Lauffer and her husband recently moved a farm from John Wolff on Stiles's Hill on the second mountain, and they had been stocking the same with cattle, horses, fowls, etc.

On Saturday last, during Mr. Lauffer's absence in this city, several pigs escaped from their pen and were wandering off into the dense forest that surrounds their property. With the assistance of Mrs. Wolff, who was the only other person present at the time, they gave chase intending to drive their pigships into the opening and eventually get them back into their pens. Mrs. Lauffer, who is a stout woman, became excited and running at the top of her speed, fell and injured herself internally. Mrs. Wolff assisted her to the house and Dr. Adams was called and has been in daily attendance ever since.

The Riders and Bicycles Mixed Up.

Charles Butts and Fred J. Vieweg, both of Scott's Printing Machine Works, met with an accident Saturday afternoon while out riding on their wheels. They were riding moderately fast along the county road, when the front tire on Mr. Vieweg's front wheel suddenly came off. His wheel was thrown from him and it struck Mr. Butts' wheel, throwing him over the former's wheel. His face was severely scratched and his nose badly scraped. Mr. Vieweg escaped with slight injury, though both wheels were somewhat twisted. Both of the men walked home.

My Nerves are weak, many people say, and yet they do not seem to know that they are literally starving their nerves. Weak, pale, thin blood cannot give proper sustenance—that is why you are nervous, tired, exhausted. The cure for this condition is to purify, vitalize and enrich your blood. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla fairly and faithfully, and the rich, red blood, which it makes, will soon feed the nerves the elements of true strength they require; they will cease their agitation and will resume their proper place—being under the control instead of controlling the brain and body. Read Miss Bartley's letter:

"I want to express my gratitude for what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me. My health has been very poor for three years, due to trouble with my

Kidneys

I was nervous, had pains in my back. I cannot tell what I suffered. My eyesight became affected and I was so despondent I did not have any interest in life. I had two physicians, but my complaints became worse. I was told that I was affected with Bright's disease. A relative urged me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I did so and in a short time I began to notice a change in my condition. Things began to appear brighter, my eyes improved and did not trouble me so severely. My appetite returned and I gained strength every day. I am now able to do my own work, and feel perfectly well. I cannot find words to express my gratitude for what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for me and I gladly recommend it." Miss ELLA BARTLEY, 213½ S. Grant Ave., Columbus, Ohio.

ZEKE.

Awk'wardest gump you ever seen,
Slow an' clumsy an' raw an' green,
Lantern-jawed an' lank an' lean,
Homely as sin.

Kerried a kind of an honest face,
Spite of his general lack o' grace,
But he never fitted in very place
That he was in.

Never had nuthin' much ter say,
But whether he aimed ter work or play
He was nuther artin' in some un's way,
N' his Granny Root.

She said 'twas so from the time he crep';
He'd sure tail round the foot of he alep',
An' when awake he couldn't be kep'
From under foot.

Went ter a scrabybul one night,
Remember, of course, upset the light,
Spilled the carpet an' skeered Mis' Bripps
Plumb sick a-bed;

Got a spell on the parson's hat,
Trod on the foot of Widder Pratt,
An' split a saucer of hot tea pat
On Styke's bald head.

A queer sub allus. Did you was hear
What he done when the squire's house burnt last year?
Wal, the crowd was watchin' it disappear
In smoke an' flame,

An' Zeke was a-trompin' on folkses' toes
An' a-yellin' the total of human woes
In his blunderin' way, when the cry arose:
"Where's little Mame?"

"I know whar she's at," said the squire's boy,
Kit,
"For she done tol' me ter wait a bit
Till she went inter the house ter git
That cat o' hern."

My tellin' it, stranger, sounds mighty tame,
But our hearts jes' frore when the answer came
An' the mother a-screamin': "My child, my Mame!
Don't let her burn!"

We hearn the red flames siz an' crack,
An' seen 'em a-dancin' front an' back,
An' all turned skeery—the bull durned pack,
Cep'in' Zeke Pool.

An' that yer Zekel, he rushed pell-mell
Inter the heart of that blazin' hell,
A-grivin' an howlin' like all ter yell:
"Come back, you fool!"

That minute growed ter a full-sized hour
And we uns waited amid a shower
Of sticks, a-prayin' with all our power—
Then came a shout.

An' Zeke in a winder framed in flame
Shook that a-boddin' of little Mame!
We spread a blanket, an' down she came
As he heaved her out.

The gull—oh, yes, she was peart an' right,
Has Zeke, with his face all drawn an' white,
Reeled for'ard an' back till he sunk from sight
In a helpless way.

Soon the building tottered from roof ter floor,
Then buckled an' fell, with a crash an' roar,
An' Zeke won't git in the way no more
This judgment day.

—Clarence Henry Pearson, in Detroit Free Press.

STOPPING A RUN.

BY ANTHONY HOPE.

HERE was a run on the Sandhill and District bank. It had lasted the whole of one day, and had shown no signs of abating in the evening. If it lasted another day! Old Mr. Bradshaw wiped his brow. It had come just at the most awkward time—just after the farmers had got their usual loans, just when securities were hard to realize; in fact, just at the moment when the bank, though in reality solvent, was emphatically not in a position to answer a long-continued demand for payment in full. Mr. Bradshaw groaned out all these distressing facts to his son Dick.

"We shall have to put the shutters up. One day's grace would save us, I believe; we could get the money then. But if they're at us again to-morrow morning, we can't last two hours."

Dick sympathized, but had nothing to suggest, except that it would not make matters worse to be cried out his engagement to go to the circus with the Flirtington girls.

"Oh, go to Halifax with the Flirtington girls, if you like," groaned Mr. Bradshaw.

So Dick went—to the circus (the other expedition, as he observed, would keep), and enjoyed the performance very much, especially the lion taming, which was magnificent, and so impressed Dick that he deserted his companions, went behind the scenes, and insisted on standing Sig. Philippini several glasses.

"IS HE CHAINED?"

"Is that big chap quite safe?" he asked, admiringly.

"I can do anything with 'im," said the signor (whose English was naturally defective); "but with anyone helse 'e's a roarer, 'e is, and no mistake."

After the performance Dick took the Flirtington girls home; then, with a thoughtful look on his face, he went and had some talk with his father, and came away, carefully placing a roll of notes in his breast pocket. Then he sought Sig. Philippini's society once more. And that's all that is really known about it—if, that is, we discard the obviously fanciful statement of Fanny Flirtington that as she was gazing at the moon at two a. m. she saw a heavy wagon, drawn by two horses and driven by Sig. Philippini, pass along the street in the direction of the bank.

However these things may be, this is what happened next morning: When the first of the depositors arrived at seven a. m., they found one of the windows of the bank smashed to pieces and the shutter hanging loose. A cry went up that there had been a robbery, and one or two men began to climb in. They did not get far before a fearful roar proceeded from the neighborhood of the counter. They looked at one another, and said it would be more regular to wait for the officials. The roars continued. They sent for Mr. Bradshaw. Hardly had he arrived (accompanied by Dick, breathless and in shirtsleeves) before the backmost rows of the now considerable crowd became agitated with a new sensation. The news spread rapidly. Frantic men ran to and fro; several ladies fainted; the circus proprietor was sent for. A lion had escaped from the menagerie, and was supposed to be at large through the town!

"Send for Philippini!" said the proprietor. They did so. Philippini had started early for a picnic in the country, and would not return till just before the performance in the evening. The proprietor was in despair.

"Where's the beast gone to?" he cried.

A roar from the bank answered his question.

"Well, I'm blowed if he's not in the bank!" exclaimed the proprietor.

It certainly appeared to be the fact that Atlas (that was the lion's name) had taken refuge in the bank, and was in full possession of the premises and assets. Under these circumstances there was, Mr. Bradshaw explained, a difficulty in resuming cash payments; but if his checks would be accepted—the crowd roared almost as loud as Atlas at such an idea. Something must be done. They sent for the mayor; he repudiated liability. They sent for the fire brigade and the lifeboat crew. Neither would come. They got guns, and peppered the furniture. Atlas retired behind the fireproof safe and roared worse than ever. Meanwhile, the precious hours were passing. Mr. Bradshaw's money was also on its way from London. At last Dick took a noble resolution.

"I will go in at any cost!" he cried, and, in spite of Fanny Flirtington's tears, he sealed the window and disappeared from view. The crowd waited to hear Atlas crunched; but he only roared. When Dick was inside, he asked: "Is he chained?"

"Yes," answered Sig. Philippini from behind the safe. "Is the Aunt Sally business over?" and he came out with a long pole in his hand. He used the pole to stir poor Atlas up when the roars became deficient in quantity and quality.

"The money ought to be here in three hours," said Dick. "Have you got the back door key?"

Philippini reassured him. Then Dick took a rail, running lean at the window; Philippini stirred up Atlas, who roared lustily. Dick escaped with his life, and landed, a breathless heap, at the mayor's feet. The mayor raised him, and said he should write to her majesty, to request that Dick would be a proper recipient of the Albert medal, and the vicar (who had no money in the bank) indignantly asked the crowd if they could not trust a family which prayed at home like this. Several people cried: "Hear, hear!" and told Mr. Bradshaw that they never really meant to withdraw their deposits. Mr. Bradshaw thanked them and looked at his watch.

At half-past three Philippini ran up; he also was breathless, and his shoes were dusty from walking in the country. At once he effected an entry, and a second interest

THE PENCIL AND BRUSH.

MAGNIFICENT LOAN EXHIBITION OF THE CAMERA CLUB OPENED.

The Affair Attended by the Cultured People of City and Borough—Beautiful Things Produced by Artistic Hands.

Never before in the history of Plainfield has art ever received such a popular recognition as Friday evening at the opening of the loan exhibition of the Plainfield Camera Club. The exhibition was a grand success, both from an artistic point of view and as regards the attendance. The citizens of Plainfield responded generously when the club asked for their art treasures and then, last evening, they turned out in full force at the invitation of the club and spent a delightful evening amid a collection of paintings, sketches, porcelain and other works of art, the equal of which has never before been seen in Plainfield or any of the neighboring towns.

The exhibition was planned several months ago and the members of the club started out among their friends in search of exhibits. How well they succeeded was shown at the opening last night. Every bit of available space in the large rooms of the Camera Club, which are located on the top floor of the Babcock building, was crowded with the work of some artist, amateur or professional, and the guests were given some idea of the art resources of this city.

The rooms of the club were specially arranged for the occasion. The main room was papered to a certain height in dark green, a fitting back ground for the pictures.

Numerous electric lights illuminated the rooms and cast a bright light on the exhibits. In the main rooms tables and show cases were arranged, and on these the miscellaneous porcelain and works of art were displayed. Part of the photographing room in the rear was devoted to the etchings and engravings, while architectual designs and sketches filled the rest of the room. The hall contained its share of the exhibits, while the ladies' room was devoted to the work of the club.

The finishing touches were put on the exhibition late yesterday afternoon and all was made ready for the opening. Dressing rooms were arranged on the floor below and here the elevator deposited its load of passengers to allow them to lay aside their wraps. Soon after eight o'clock the guests began to come in a steady stream and the room presented an animated scene, with its occupants, many of them in evening dress, busily engaged in viewing some particularly handsome specimen and in discussing the merits of some rare old piece of porcelain. In one of the rear rooms, the Young Men's Symphony orchestra, led by P. Ludwig Conde, rendered a number of enjoyable selections.

Shortly arter nine o'clock. Otto Arens, president of the Camera Club, stepped to the slightly raised platform at one end of the room and, in a few appropriate sentences, introduced Mayor Gilbert as the first speaker of the evening. The Mayor spoke very highly of the energy and enterprise shown by the Camera Club in arranging for such a magnificent exhibition and complimented them on the results of their efforts. He also spoke well of the club and its regular work and thought it a very good way to pass the leisure hours. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., mayor of the borough, also made appropriate remarks and added to the expressions of pleasure and surprise over the many rich treasures that Plainfield has.

After an interval, during which the orchestra rendered several selections, George A. Audsley, chairman of the exhibition committee, delivered a very able address on "Art" and spoke of the training of the young to have have an eye for the beautiful. The audience was a representative one and a number of the leading citizens of the city and borough were present with their families.

Catalogues, which were a work of art in themselves, contained a short description of each article and were sold at the door.

It is beyond the province of a daily paper to give anything like a detailed description of the exhibition, although there was scarcely an exhibit there that did not merit especial mention.

As the visitor entered the room, after a casual glance at the tables, the most prominent objects to attract attention were two large Chinese religious banners hung at either end of the main room. One was made of scarlet cloth, embroidered with all sorts of fantastic characters in silk and gold. The other was of crimson satin, elaborately decorated in gold and brilliant. A number of smaller embroidered hangings and a Japanese court robe graced the sides of the room. They were all the property of W. G. Hockridge. Along the southern end of the room was arranged a number of large exhibits. One was a Japanese cabinet of carved wood, beautifully decorated. There were two seats, the work of Italian wood carvers, a Chinese cabinet of elaborately carved dark wood and a wonderful curiousity from Japan, a Buddhist shrine, richly carved and gilded inside and out, and containing standing figure of Quanon, one of the Japanese gods.

In front of these was a glass case containing a collection of Chinese and Japanese curiousities. In the corner a cabinet contained a choice collection of objects in porcelain painted by the late Mrs. W. H. Griffin. A row of three tables came next in line. On one an exhibit of Oriental and European porcelain. A number of pieces of Japanese porcelain and some American amateur and professional work from the collections of Mrs. George H. Babcock and Miss M. Clauson were contained in another. Work by the latter was also exhibited as well as specimens of china painting by Mrs. Philip R. Macintyre, Mrs. J. E. Mackintosh, and Miss Lilian Fritts. The third table was covered with handsome painted porcelain, the work of Miss Beatrice Doane Craig.

Opposite the entrance was a long glass case containing a beautiful display of embroidery and textile fabrics. Among the embroideries was the portion of a box cover of Chinese embroidered silk. It belonged to the Emperor of China but was stolen from the Summer Palace during the war between England and China. There was a handsome rich stock embroidered in colored silks and gold by Miss Mary Embury, and some of the work of Miss A. B. Contrelli, Miss Helen A. Coward and Miss E. B. Graham, beside a number of interesting curios.

In the centre of the room was a large table on which was displayed a magnificient collection of Oriental porcelain, chiefly Chinese, the property of T. E. H. Curtis, G. A. Audsley, Julian Scott and Mrs. George H. Babcock, and valued at over $10,000. Many of these are centuries old and cannot be replaced.

On one side of this central table was a glass-covered case, containing a fine collection of Japanese books and paintings, the property of G. A. Audsley. The books were finely illustrated by some of the most famous of Japanese artists, and were very beautiful. A miscellaneous collection of trinkets and curiosities, most of them of foreign manufacture, occupied another case on the other side of the central table. A small stand contained four pieces of very rare and valuable Sevres porcelain, the property of T. E. H. Curtis. On either side of this were long tables. A handsome exhibit of decorated porcelain, the work of Mrs. Colles T. Pond, occupied one. The plates of royal blue, with an elaborate scroll-work design in raised gold, were particularly pleasing in appearance. The other table held a mixed collection of porcelain and pottery, including some work of the late Mrs. W. H. Griffin, Staffordshire, Wedgewood, and Old Liverpool porcelain, and German stone work. There were also several photographs on porcelain.

The stand at the northern end of the main room was mostly devoted to the work of W. J. Audsley, one of the finest amateur artists in the country on porcelain and pottery. There were also plaques by G. A. and M. A. Audsley.

The walls of the room were covered with the oil paintings and water colors loaned for the occasion. There were a number of very good ones but lack of space prevents special mention. Among the local artists whose works were displayed were Julian Scott, H. Griffin, Harold Serrell, Miss Harriet French, Miss Kate Newhall, Mrs. A. M. Ross, H. Seymour Barnes, Mrs. Elizabeth Kitchel, George Wharton Edwards, Miss Ella Serrell, Mrs. Nelson Runyon, Mrs. John D. Runyon, Henry McBride, Miss Caroline D. Elliott, L. B. C. Joseph, Berthold Audsley, M. A. Audsley, A. M. Hicks, G. H. Schorey, K. E. DeGalm, Mrs. A. H. Burrows and E. B. Graham. The most valuable thing in all the collection is an original drawing in black chalk by Michael Angelo, entitled "The Lost Soul." It is now the property of E. C. Perkins.

On a painted cabinet in semi-medieval style, designed and painted by G. A. Audsley, are several famous pieces of Sevres porcelain. There are two highly ornamented vases, once in the possession of Marie Antoinette, and a beer jug of Vienna porcelain presented to Napoleon I. by an Austrian ambassador.

The wood and engraving department occupied part of one of the rooms in the rear of the main room. Here a handsome and valuable display was shown, a number of engravings by John Dalziel. Several specimens of wood carving and the different stages in wood engraving were also shown. The rest of this room was devoted to architectual designs, principally by Oscar S. Teale, G. A. Audsley and A. L. C. Marsh.

The photograph room was devoted to a very creditable display of oil paintings water colors and sketches from the Artists-Artizens Institute at New York. In the hall the New York Photogravure Company had an exhibit of photo-mechanical print in three colors from untouched negatives. The Saugstad School was well represented, while a number of curios occupied the rest of the space. In the ladies' room the Camera Club exhibited some of its own excellent work and made a very creditable showing. Miss H. A. French, teacher of drawing and water colors at Miss Day's School, exhibited the work of some of her pupils in another room.

The exhibition opens tonight to the public, who can only get an idea of what the exhibition really is by personal inspection.

Such a successful exhibition reflects lots of credit on somebody and the exhibition committee deserves plenty of it. The committee consisted of Geo. Ashdoun Audsley, chairman; H. C. Coward, J. Hervey Doane, Olaf Sangstad, Harold Serrell, G. H. Squires, J. E. Stewart, Oscar S. Teale and Guillermo Thorn. President Otto Arens also assisted. Special credit should be given to G. A. Audsley and his son Berthold for their indefatigable efforts in arranging and numbering the different exhibits.

RECITATION, TEA AND FLOWERS.

Delightful Social Event Held at a Washington Avenue House.

A delightful afternoon tea that was more than a tea was given Thursday afternoon by Miss Jessie Munger, daughter of H. Raymond Munger, of Washington avenue. Mrs. Munger and Miss Munger were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Talcott, of Middletown, N. Y.; Miss Munger, an aunt of the hostess; Mrs. Warren, of Fanwood; Miss Evarts, of St. Paul; Mrs. James Joy and Miss Erskine. After social chat, the guests were seated and entertained delightfully for more than an hour by Miss Evarts, who recited to a charmed audience. Her first selection was a scene from "Twelfth Night," followed by Mrs. Browning's "The Rhyme of the Duchess May." An encore elicited a humorous selection from Bret Harte.

There was then an intermission, during which Misses Margaret McCutcheon and Cora Haviland passed among the guests carrying large straw hat baskets filled with beautiful pink and white roses, from which they gave a long-stemmed beauty to each person. Miss Evarts' next selection was from one of George Elliot's long entitled poems. "The Spanish Gypsy." Every one was charmed with Miss Evarts rendering of her selections, which created a desire for indefinite encores. At the conclusion of the recitations ices were served, while friend talked with friend.

IN THE WRONG SEAT.

William H. Shotwell Looks at the Thermometer and Gets Frustrated.

An incident that created a titter of merriment at the expense of Trustee William H. Shotwell, of the First Presbyterian church, occurred on the 6 p. m. train from New York, Wednesday.

The car in which Mr. and Mrs. Shotwell were sitting was uncomfortably warm and as the train left Elizabeth, Mr. Shotwell stepped forward a few seats to look at the thermometer, which was fastened on the side of the car. The mercury registered 88 degrees and so surprised was he at the carelessness of the company in permitting such abnormal heat, that he temporarily lost his bearings and sat down. He mopped his brow and remarked, "Phew! but its hot in here, Marian." "Sir!" was the reply, and the trustee, looking up, discovered that his companion was not his better half, but a pretty young lady residing at Westfield. Mrs. Shotwell was two seats back, looking very lonesome. Mr. Shotwell politely apologized and beat a hasty retreat. A number of Plainfielders witnessed the mistake and enjoyed it hugely.

A. M. Dunham's Funeral.

The funeral of Augustus M. Dunham was held Thursday afternoon at 2:45 from the home of his son, M. M. Dunham, 514 Arlington avenue, and was very largely attended. Dr. Lewis conducted the services and spoke highly of the decedent. His words brought comfort and consolation to the bereaved ones in their hour of affliction. Dr. Livermore, who was to have been present, sent word that it would be impossible as he was away and could not get back in time. The pall-bearers, nephews of the departed, were F. A. Dunham, Charles Dunham, O. M. Dunham, Frederick Dunham, of Plainfield; David Dunn, of Brooklyn, and Allen Dunn, of Elizabeth. Interment was in the Seventh Day Baptist cemetery.

SAVED THE OWNER TROUBLE.

Burglar Opened a Safe When the Combination Was Lost.

The proprietor of a large store on High street went to his place of business at an unusually early hour one morning; in fact, the sun had not yet risen when he turned the key in the door. On entering he was surprised to find a man trying to open the door of his safe. He stood and watched him for some time, apparently deeply interested in the proceedings, says the West Bedford (Mass.) Windmill, when finally the burglar swung open the door of the safe with a self-satisfied chuckle, but happening to turn he saw that he was discovered, and became very much alarmed. He jumped up and was about to make his escape through a back window, when the merchant called to him:

"Don't be in a hurry, my friend; come back and sit down awhile and smoke a cigar, while I straighten things up a bit, and then come to breakfast with me. You have done me a great favor."

"Why, how's that?" asked the burglar, in great surprise.

"Well, you see, I had the combination of the safe on a bit of paper, and last night I carelessly locked it in the safe and forgot how to work it. I spent most of the night trying to get the thing open, and came in early this morning to have another try at it."

A DETECTIVE MYSTERY.

Was the Noted Sleuth Himself a Successful Bank Cracksman.

"The most mysterious affair I ever knew in detective circles," said a well-known sleuth to a Washington Star writer, "was the case of the vest. The detective had become famous by reason of his success in ferreting out heavy robberies. It seemed that none of the professionals could escape when he once started on their trails. After a time all such cases were placed in his hands. The first one that he could not discover the thief was a big bank robbery, then after a year or two another, then another; his reputation was suffering. He still held good, as during the same period he was successful in other difficult cases. He was taken sick with fever, and while delirious told how he himself had perpetrated the bank robberies, detailing every movement in detail. When he recovered, it was claimed that his failure to unravel the mysteries had caused the raving confessions, but other men were put upon them, and they failed to find any clew whatever. The detective retired and lives in elegant style, but whether or not he was as successful in eluding law as in enforcing it will probably never really be known."

QUEEN VICTORIA DRESSED UP.

She Is Then Quite Royal in Appearance, But Otherwise Only Ordinary.

Queen Victoria, in her best bib and tucker, is still a very good-looking woman. She has a kindly face and old-fashioned shawls the queen so constantly wears when not "on exhibition" she gives one the impression of being merely a nice, cozy motherly old lady to whom life's interest is centered in her family. One would never suspect her of being able to rise to the occasion and look the part of queen. With the assumption of court finery, however, she does. Philadelphia Times. Victoria doffs her homely manners and becomes at once the personification of a gracious sovereign.

To those who have seen her in both characters the metamorphosis has seemed little short of a miracle. On account of the queen's lack of height she is rarely photographed standing; for though she scarcely measures five feet, her waist line is abnormally long, so when she is seated she gives one the impression of being a tall woman—an advantage the vanity of any woman, even a queen, would never ignore.

Hypnotism in Medicine.

The Journal of the American Medical Association has an editorial, the general trend of which is to show that hypnotism has its uses and is practically being laid upon the shelf, or, at least, its use confined to irregulars outside of the recognized school of medicine. This is a rather curious statement to make, as it is one of the topics that interest of a medical topic by the number of articles written about it. There are few subjects upon which German physicians are writing more monograms at present or in which they seem to take a more active interest. The sensational side of hypnotism is certainly dying out, but a certain practical side, which is represented by the word "suggestion," has undoubtedly come to stay and to be used in therapeutics.

Early Piety.

D. L. Moody, the evangelist, told a story in Philadelphia recently about his life before his conversion, when a boy of 17. He said that while he was a pretty bad boy in his unregenerate days, deep in the follies and errors of the world, he never broke so far away from his early religious training as to forget to say his prayers at night. He used to sleep with my brother," he said, "and if either one of us happened to jump into bed without first getting on his knees, the other would swear at him vigously and kick him out on the floor."

Meat for Russians.

The officials intrusted with the arrangement of the details of the czar's coronation in Moscow this spring have ordered 15,000 hogsheads of meat, which is to be made of pure honey. It is an old Russian custom to regale the people with meat and honey during the festivities at the ancient capital.

New Parisian Food.

Camel's flesh is the latest addition to the Parisian bill of fare, Algerian butchers undertaking to provide the supply. The meat is said to taste like beef, though white like veal. The hump is considered a great delicacy by the Arabs.

THE QUEEN IS NO "DUMMY."

Some of the Prerogatives of the British Sovereign.

People on this side of the water are apt to attach too much credence to the oft-repeated but somewhat fallacious assertion that the queen of England has no power; is a mere figurehead, in fact, and nothing but a constitutional puppet in the hands of the cabinet for the time being. It is often stated that the president of the United States is possessed of far more executive power and prerogatives than her British majesty. This is, according to the "Queen" Jubilee Number magazine. The English sovereign has retained far more power than people realize. For instance, she has the power to dismiss every soldier in the army, from the commander-in-chief down to the youngest drummer. She could disband the navy in the same way, and sell the ships, stores and arsenals to the first buyer that presented himself.

Acting on her own responsibility, she could declare war against any foreign power or any portion of any section of the empire over which she rules to any foreign power. Acting strictly within her prerogative, she could make every man, woman and child in the land a peer or peeress of the realm with the right in the case of males who are of age to a seat and a vote in the house of lords. With a single word or stroke of the pen she could dismiss any cabinet that was in power, and could empower, pardon and illiterate every criminal of any grade that is confined in the British penitentiaries. These are only a few of the things that the queen could do if she desired.

JUMBO AND THE LAW.

A Deputy Sheriff Out After the Great Elephant.

It was eight or nine years ago, and the cars containing the animals were unloaded from the train at the circus freight house, says the Providence Journal. The animals were guided across Exchange place by attendants, and the elephants went along very peaceably.

They hadn't gone a great distance, however, when Jumbo's back began to itch. The big elephant tried to reach the place with his trunk, but didn't manage to. So he stepped from the line and looked for some suitable place against which to rub his back. There were two objects in sight—a big flagstaff and Paddy Burns' shanty, which stood in the rear of the Three Ones' fire station. Jumbo picked out the shanty, and the moment he had reached his feelings things inside were upside down, and the building had nearly been removed from its foundations and shoved into the water.

Paddy Burns looked for a lawyer, and found the late Ambrose E. West. The attorney issued a writ and gave it to a deputy sheriff, with instructions to attach Jumbo. The officer presented the paper to the treasurer of the circus and took a position near the elephant, but out of the reach of the swing of his trunk.

The bill for damages was promptly settled, but the officer said afterward he thought the animal had acted to walk away he hadn't any idea how he could have proceeded to enforce the law by compelling him to remain.

FRENCH JOURNALISM.

The Fifty Daily Newspapers of Paris and Their Readers.

The Paris press comprises nearly 50 daily newspapers, the aggregate not having varied greatly during the last few years. Most of them are sold for one sou. An extremely limited number is sold for two sous, and two or three only for three sous, or a little less than three halfpence. It is hardly necessary to say, by way of preliminary comment, that a dozen really able journals would be better supported and better serve the interests of the public. The French people, taken as a mass, have little money, says the National Review, and the circulation of the small amount of literary taste they possess. The novelist, Zola, declared in an interview a few months ago that reviews and magazines like those of England and America would not find in France a sufficient number of readers to justify their publication.

The Revue des Deux Mondes is supported by the professional literati, the learned professions and an aristocracy of birth and wealth, but is rarely seen outside these circles. Even the handsome and readable illustrated newspapers, such as the Illustration and Monde Illustre, have only a small circulation, confined principally to the cafes, though the literary matter they contain is generally of an elevated character and especially adapted for family use.

AN ABSENT-MINDED MAN.

He Was Driving to Pasture a Cow Still in the Stable.

There have been a great many stories about absent-minded men, where one man's house address, another what business he is in, and where no other has to refer to the mark on his handkerchief before he can remember his own name, etc. There is a lawyer in Fort Atkinson, Wis., by the name of Rogers, who possesses a very cow, which he used to drive, morning and evening, to and from the pasture, a few blocks distant from his home. One morning as one of his neighbors was passing along the street he met Mr. Rogers walking in the middle of the road, his mind apparently engrossed with some weighty question. The neighbor called out:

"Good morning, Mr. Rogers; where are you going?"

"Why," said Mr. Rogers, in a surprised way, "I'm driving the cow to pasture," and he waved his hand toward where the cow ought to have been.

"Well, where is the cow?" asked the friend.

"I guess I forgot to let her out of the barn," answered Mr. Rogers, humbly, as he realized his position. And he had.

AMBULANCE ON WATER.

Steam Launch Added to the London Hospital Service.

The managers of the Metropolitan asylums board, London, have just passed upon plans for an ambulance launch for river service. Her dimensions, says the Philadelphia Record, are as follows: Length between perpendiculars, 60 feet; breadth, 12 feet 6 inches; depth, four feet; draught of water when fully equipped, two feet eight inches. The hull is built of Siemens-Martin mild steel throughout to board of trade requirements for passenger certificate. She is built in five compartments. In the fore part of the vessel is a cabin for the accommodation of the staff and for visitors proceeding to visit patients in the hospital ships in Long Reach, Dartford, and is capable of accommodating about 20 persons. In the after part there is a cabin fitted up as a hospital, with four berths—two being fixed and two portable—and with all the necessary requirements for carrying four recumbent patients. Both of these cabins are heated with steam and are provided with sliding skylights and all the necessary fittings for a boat of its class.

The machinery is fixed amidships and is of the triple-expansion type, with surface condenser, and capable of driving the vessel at a speed of ten knots. A water-tight trimming tank is built at the fore end of the vessel of sufficient capacity that when filled with water it will bring the vessel to an even keel of two feet eight inches.

A HOLY TERROR.

But the Little Battenbergs Love Her All the Same.

The ruler of Balmoral castle, according to the Strand Magazine, is not the queen, but the housekeeper, a Mrs. Mussens, a typical personage of her class, gowned always in rustling black silk, lace cap and apron over white cap. She and the queen are said to be excellent friends, and many a gossip have they had together when affairs of state have been laid aside.

Mrs. Mussens also stands high in the favor of the Battenbergs, who are sure to seek her out as soon as they have landed at the castle, for she fairly idolizes the little ones and keeps many a treasure in her apartments with which to regale them.

To the world at large Mrs. Mussens is a holy terror. Her word is law, and she enforces it at the point of the bayonet or the broomstick. It is said that once the queen wanted a certain maid to attend to her wardrobe, which, attached to the care of her own room, but the housekeeper remonstrated, telling her majesty that it was quite out of order and she really must not spoil the service. Her gracious mistress was wise enough not to insist, and "dear Mrs. Mussens" won the day.

WHEN REPTILES RULED.

There Was a Time When the Globe Was Their Possession.

There was a time "in the wide revolving shades of centuries past" when the globe was wholly in the possession of walking, swimming and flying reptiles," says an exchange. Being the dominant race, it divided naturally into three great classes.

In the oceans they became gigantic, paddling enaliosaurians; on dry land—or, rather, wet land, for the whole surface of the earth was a marshless swampmire at that time—they became monstrous, erect dinosaurians, some of which had legs 15 feet or more in length.

Those which inhabited the regions of the air were the terrible flying pterodactyls. For a vast but unknown length of time these awful creatures literally ruled the earth. Then one by one the dinosaurs died out, more younger and more vigorous fauna until at the present time only a few miniature alligators and crocodiles, a few toy snakes and skulking lizards and geckos remain as reminders of the enormous reptilian types that once crowded land and sea.

The Modern Flat Building.

"You know, it's old enough and familiar enough," said a flat dweller, "but it's striking all the same, to hear the whistle blow in the kitchen, from somebody on the floor of the elevator, and may be at the same time to hear the bell ring from somebody at the front door. The servant throws up the door to the elevator shaft, to be ready to receive the things that the man is sending up, and she answers, and she swings around and presses the button and opens a door far away and in still another part of the house. All simple enough, but it interests me all the same. It is something like running the steamer from the bridge; or like throwing the levers in the switch house and controlling switches far away; it seems like business; it's modern and up to date."

South Africa's Joan of Arc.

Cecil Armitage, a young Englishman in Asanteland, tells of a strange West African "Joan of Arc," who is equipping an army for King Prempeh. Her appearance is more impressive than beautiful, and, unlike the famous French Joan, whose features we know, this African amazon is said to have only one eye, one ear and one arm and to wear her hair hanging long. With one touch of her magic wand she can bring armies together, and in an engagement a brass pan is placed before her, into which all the bullets of the enemy can conveniently fall without hurting her brave soldiers.

Cleanly Japanese Tramps.

A traveler in Japan says that the Japanese tramp takes his hot bath daily if he has a fraction of a cent to pay for it, or his cold bath if he hasn't a cent. He carries a comb, toothpicks, a razor and a toothbrush in a little bundle. A few Japanese tramps might well be introduced as missionaries in the American brotherhood, whose members do not seem to appreciate what cleanliness is "next to."

PROTECTION, NOT REVENUE.

A Well-Known Plainfielder Writes on the Issue of the Hour.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Very much has been said in Congress as well as outside of that body, by the Protectionists, of the necessity for increasing our present duties in order to collect a large revenue for the Government.

Who believes that would be the result? Is that the object? Not at all, the object is protection, pure and simple.

We have a right to judge the future by the past. The first year of the McKinley tariff the receipts fell off $42,761,431. Certainly that was not very encouraging in what were considered "good times," and when the circulation was being largely increased by Government purchase of silver.

Now compare the above with the first year of what the Protectionists call a free trade tariff, when the increased receipts from duties were $19,891,716, notwithstanding that the slow and uncertain action of Congress had almost created a panic in business circles.

What the country wants and ought to have for the greatest good to the greatest number, is a revenue tariff, and that very much lower than the present one, mainly on articles we cannot produce and that are too bulky to be conveniently smuggled. In this respect we might learn something from England. She raises a large revenue from eight articles, abandoning her former policy of protection fifty years ago.

Compare her present commerce with what it was at that time, and it will be found considerably more than double, while the condition of her laboring classes has greatly improved, even the farm hands, who were so much opposed to free trade in bread stuffs, are now getting nearly double the wages they formerly received, and at the same time can purchase the necessaries of life at a very much reduced cost. I am aware the manufacturers endeavor to make us believe the rate of wages depends on the amount of protection.

Did wages advance when the McKinley tariff went into effect? On the contrary; at least three manufactories lowered their wages where one advanced them.

Take the Trenton potteries as an example, they were among the first to reduce them, but many others followed.

What has been the effect of what is called a low tariff on mechanics' wages the past few months, say since it went into operation? The last statement I saw, and that was sometime ago, said that over a million of hands had received increased wages and very many were getting a second advance.

Wages, like all other commodities, are regulated by the supply and demand.

If the Protectionists are as anxious to protect the labor of the country as the profess to be, why not put a tax on the foreigners that are coming here by thousands, instead of taxing the workers that are here for everything they consume.

We exclude the Chinese, who are neither paupers nor beggars, but good laborers and servants, while we admit beggars and tramps from all the rest of the world. Great Britain is the largest manufacturer in Europe, and in her material resources surpasses other nations there, but in that respect this country is far in the lead of them all.

Look at our coal in inexhaustible quantities of every quality, and as for minerals of all kind (tin only excepted) where is the country that can at all compare with this?

Where do such bodies of superior iron ore exist, that can be mined and the product loaded on cars for less than ten cents per ton for cost of labor?

The facilities for all mining, as well as manufacturing, have been greatly improved within the past few years, as is shown by the Quincy copper mine.

In 1875 it cost that company for every pound of copper they produced 15.70 cts.; in 1894 the average cost was 5.68 cts.

This decrease in cost is not on account of any increase in richness of the mine but entirely owing to the improved machinery and general manner of working.

In a subsequent communication it will be shown that in the United States, taking the manufacturing as a whole, and the amount produced into account, the labor costs less than in Great Britain. Mahlon Vail.

The Act a Reprehensible One.

The Press, in reporting Rev. C. E. Herring's remarks last Sunday evening, was in error in saying that Dr. Morgan had a perfect right to use the sermon in question. Mr. Herring thought the act a reprehensible one. He criticised Rev. Mr. Lee's method of attack which he thought was very unchristian.

It is not a miracle. It wont cure everything, but it will cure piles. That's what DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will do, because it has done it in hundreds of cases. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THEATRICAL.

That high-class minstrelsy occupies a distinct place in the field of amusements and that it is not a peculiar fancy of a bygone generation is unquestionable. This opinion seemed fully warranted by the large and enthusiastic audiences that gathered at the opera house yesterday afternoon and night to laugh and grow merry over the witty sallies and ludicrous specialties and sweet singing of W. S. Cleveland's talented minstrel organization. The approval of the audience was frequently vociferously expressed at almost every feature of the unique and variegated entertainment. The sumptuous costumes and stage setting of the first part were greeted with merited and prolonged applause, and paved the way to a hearty reception of the participants.

The witticisms of John H. Blackford, Frank Cushman, Wm. Henry Rice, Dan Allman, Gil. Garay and Billy Woods were deservedly applauded, and are minstrel artists of pronounced merit and are masters of the art of entertaining. The variety of features that followed the adjournment of the first part was of a high order and exceedingly lively and interesting. And those wonderful Japanese! They are the greatest lot of gymnasts, balancers, jugglers, etc., that ever left the empire. To the lovers of minstrelsy the performance of Cleveland's allied shows last evening left very little to be desired and is a success of its kind and fully merited the approbation of the audience.—Dallas News. At Music Hall Friday night.

"The Last Stroke," the new Cuban drama now running at the Star Theatre, New York, is beyond question the strongest melodrama that has been seen in New York this season. Commodious as the Star Theatre is, it has been packed to the doors every night, and the New York papers unite in say that it has been many a day since a play has elicited such tremendous outbursts of enthusiasm. Several of the scenes are so strong dramatically and so patrietically inspiring that the audience is moved to cheers. The piece is magnificently mounted. All the scenes were gotten up especially for this engagement at the Star, and the production is a most complete and elaborate one in all its details. The company is a very strong one and is headed by that able actor Frederic De Belleville, whose portrayal of the Spanish spy is commended on every hand as the most finished bit of work that he has ever done. John T. Sullivan is another valuable member of the cast.

WESTFIELD.

Fred Miller and his wife Lottie came before the Court at Westfield Monday afternoon on a complaint made by Mrs. Perrine, a sister of Miller, of assault. By the testimony it was shown that the women quarreled over a couple of roosters that were fighting. The Court held Miller and his wife under bonds to keep the peace.

A couple of young women from Dunellen left their bicycles standing on Broad street Monday for a few moments. When they returned to the wheels some one had cut one of the saddles across the seat with a knife. Constable Todd took the matter in hand and is after the offenders.

Mr. and Mrs. Z. P. Osumn have been entertaining friends from Easton.

The public school anticipates giving an entertainment on the evening of Wednesday, April 22d, at Friendship Hall, to procure a piano for the school.

At the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-day Baptist church on Monday evening the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, A. Vars; vice president, C. Davis; recording secretary, J. A. Wilson; corresponding secretary, L. M. Titsworth; treasurer, Lulu Davis.

Arm Badly Lacerated.

L. C. Randolph, a farmer, living at Mt. Pleasant, met with a serious accident Monday afternoon at his home. He has a buzz-saw which he operates to wood for his own use, and while at work with it his left arm caught in the the teeth. The flesh midway between the wrist and elbow was lacerated, leaving the bone intact. He was brought at once to Dr. Long's office in this city and it was necessary to take twenty stitches in the cut. It was pronounced a most miraculous escape from loss of the forearm and hand. Mr. Randolph is improving favorably, and the doctor thinks the arm will be saved.

Flower Thiefs.

Some malicious person or persons entered Henry C. Nomer's yard at 432 La Grande avenue Monday night and stole all of the choice flowers available. If the guilty ones can be found they will be well looked after.

Its just as easy to try One Minute Cough Cure as anything else. Its easier to cure a severe cough or cold with it. Let your next purchase for a cough be One Minute Cough Cure. Better medicine; better result; better try it. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

PLAINFIELD-ELIZABETH BY TROLLEY

Silas D. Drake Says That the Proposed Road is an Assured Thing.

At a meeting of the Elizabeth Board of Trade Friday evening Silas D. Drake, of the committee on the trolley line to Plainfield, reported that communication had been had with C. W. Riker, of Newark, head of the syndicate, who said they were prepared to build the road on Westfield avenue, Elizabeth, and would lay the tracks on the sides, so as not to interfere with the telford pavement. Everything was in readiness now to apply to the city and township authorities for the franchise. The route proposed is to reach the depot in Elizabeth by way of Morris avenue. In is then proposed to run out to Westfield avenue through Sayre street.

Mr. Drake said there would be no objection to Sayre street; in fact, the property owners were ready to sign the petition. The street is unpaved at present, and the trolley company would pave it.

President Egenolf said for one he would object to the county roads being used for trolley roads.

Mr. Drake said that Westfield avenue is preferred, but Mr. Riker said if they could not get a franchise the company would build its line on the opposite side of the Central Railroad tracks. It would be necessary to run at least 300 feet on Westfield avenue. There is a man in that vicinity so interested he has offered to allow the company to lay its tracks through his back yard. Mr. Drake said a great stumbling block is found on Morris avenue. If the persons holding that franchise would consent or sell out they would be well paid. The syndicate was ready to buy the green line and make it a first-class trolley road.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

At a meeting of the Baptist church Monday night it was voted to increase the number of deacons by two. F.W. Westcott and G. E. Hall were chosen to fill those two offices.

The people of this place were startled yesterday afternoon to hear of the sudden death of Mrs. Robert Walpole, which occurred at her home on Park avenue. It was known that she had been ailing for the past day or two, but it was not known that she was dangerously ill. Sunday last she was taken with pains in her head and was confined to the bed. Dr. Westcott was called and prescribed for her. The pains disappeared during the night and Monday Mrs. Walpole did some rather hard household duties about her home. Yesterday she was again taken to her bed with the pains in her head, and as the day progressed they became more severe. Along in the afternoon her daughter was attending to her when Mrs. Walpole cried out that she could not stand the pains, and sank back in bed insensible. Her daughter thought that she had only fainted and commenced bathing her forehead, but as she did not revive after sometime, and her body commenced to grow cold, it was seen that something serious was the matter. Dr. Westcott was sent for, but as he was not at home, word was sent for Dr. Long, Plainfield. She was dead, however, before he arrived at her side. Mrs. Walpole was about fifty-five years of age, and was much thought of among her acquaintances for her kindly disposition. Besides a husband, she leaves eight children, all but two of whom are married.

DUNELLEN.

Arbor Day will be observed in the public schools May 8th.

Rev. A. I. Martine has returned home from his visit with friends in Nyack.

Miss Van Middlesworth has returned home from a pleasant visit with her aunt at Jersey City.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Carl, of Mountain avenue, spent Tuesday at Millington visiting Mrs. Marvin.

Howard Giles has moved into the store recently occupied by Undertaker Runyon, on North avenue.

F. H. Gise has been chosen to go to the Republican State Convention to be held at Trenton tomorrow.

Mrs. Batchelor and daughter Helen have returned home to New York after a visit with Mrs. Hetfield, of North avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Milliken will celebrate their tenth anniversary at their residence on Washington avenue tonight.

Joe and Lu Thomas, who have been visiting their parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. S. Thomas, of Washington avenue, have returned to Princeton College.

The Old Barn Door.

The picture entitled "The Old Barn Door," in the Camera Club collection, belonging to Mayor Gilbert, calls for more than passing notice. It is, indeed, a well-executed piece of still life. It was painted by James E. Simpson, Jr., of Brooklyn, formerly of North Plainfield, and not by John Ward Stimson, as stated in The News. The artist's name is correctly given in the catalogue.

Busy people have no time, and sensible people have no inclination to use a slow remedy. One Minute Cough Cure acts promptly and gives permanent results. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

CRANFORD.

The details of a plan to beautify Cranford by the construction of a natural fountain were set forth in an application to the Township Committee last night for permission to divert slightly the stream known as Casino Brook from its present course. The committee deferred action on the petition till an opinion from the Township Attorney stating their powers in the premises could be obtained.

An application was made by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company for a franchise to construct lines through several streets of the town. It was decided to inform the company that its application would be considered after it had obtained and presented to the board the consent in writing of the property-owners on the streets they desire to pass through.

An Ushers' Benefit.

A benefit for the ushers of Music Hall will be given on April 30th, when the comedy-drama "Coon Hollow," which is soon to appear at the Grand Opera House, New York, will be given.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube be restored to its normal condi*tion, hearing will be destroyed for* ever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

ROOT BEER CONDEMNED.

W. C. T. U. DECLARE IT TO BE AN ALCOHOLIC DRINK.

Other Things Considered and Exposed at the Spring Convention of the W.C.T.U. at Dunellen.—Plainfield Women Active.

The spring convention of the Union County W. C. T. U. was held in Dunellen Tuesday. Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson called the delegates from nine local unions to order soon after ten o'clock in the Methodist church.

Mrs. T. C. Bodide, president of the Dunellen union, led the devotional exercises, after which Rev. Mr. Custard welcomed the convention to his church.

Col. Deitrich, of Plainfield, who had been mobbed with Owen Lovejoy in old anti-slavery days, wished the women God-speed in their work. Miss Emma Starr, of Westfield, read a paper by Mrs. Mosher, on the "Best Methods of Distributing Literature." Mrs. S. R. Krom, of Plainfield, gave a report of the recent legislation in regard to the sale of tobacco to minors. Mrs. Noe, of Elizabeth, read a paper on finance.

The State President, Mrs. Emma Bourne, closed the morning exercises with a Bible reading. Luncheon was served in the lecture room of the church.

The afternoon opened in a very practical manner, with classes for secretaries, treasurers, superintendents, etc., led by the officers present, in in different parts of the church.

Mrs. Anna M. Hammer, President of the Pennsylvania W. C. T. U., then gave a Bible reading. Mrs. S. R. Krom spoke on "Temperance Drinks" Root-beer, advertised even in religious papers, was not a temperance drink, as it always contained alcohol and often as much as ale and lager beer.

Miss Mary Campbell, State secretary of that department, spoke on Young Women's Work. She said they had an influence with children and young men that they ought to use for temperance. The next exercise was of especial interest. It was a meeting of a model union conducted by Mrs. Tomlinson, in which most of the members of the Plainfield Union took part. They all sat together in the front seats and were decorated with immense white paper bows. Reports were read, business was discussed and everything was done in a correct, parliamentary manner. Even humorous resolutions were discussed seriously much to the amusement of the audience.

Miss Yates, Mrs. Cahoone, Mrs. Blair, Mrs. French, Mrs. McNaughton, Mrs. Bourne, Mrs. Case, Mrs. Parse, Mrs. Dobbins, Mrs. Maxon, Mrs. *Winters, Mrs. Tit*sworth, Miss Cahoone and Miss Tomlinson were among those who took part in the instructive exercise.

The resolutions adopted favored thorough temperance instruction in the public schools, the ballot for women, that pastors be urged to preach sermons on temperance every three months and the formation of anti-cigarette leagues. The afternoon session closed by replies from Mrs. Bourne to the inquires found in the "Question Box."

There was a large attendance in the evening when Mrs. Hammel gave an address on Christian Citizenship. One of the interesting incidents of the meeting was the sending off of three homing pigeons from in front of the church by Mrs. Noe, of Elizabeth.

Mrs. Noe found upon her return home in the evening that the birds had reached Elizabeth at 11 a. m., forty minutes after the start. The weather was very cloudy or the trip would have been made quicker.

Pleased With the Exhibition.

The attendance at the Camera Club exhibit Monday was quite large and all those who came expressed themselves as being pleased with the exhibition. This afternoon the teachers and pupils of the High School attended the exhibition in a body and the committee is on duty to explain the different exhibits to them.

HOLY SPIRIT FOR SERVICE.

Christian Alliance Members Hear a Missionary Talk of Her Work.

A very interesting and helpful meeting was held in the W. C. T. U. rooms last Monday by the Plainfield Branch of the Christian Alliance. The meeting was in charge of Miss Louise Shepard, of New York, assisted by Miss Margaret Suman, an outgoing missionary to the Congo. Miss Shepard sang a beautiful selection, "What would Jesus do," and made a few remarks. The subject of the meeting was "Filled with the Holy Spirit for Service." She spoke of Christian duties, that those who were called should immediately respond, and the blessings of so doing. Miss Suman told of her call to the foreign field and her joy and happiness in being able to respond. She sails the middle of next month for Africa.

Miss Shepard made a stirring appeal to those who wished the blessings of the better life to assist in the work. Her appeal was responded to by a liberal collection which will go to support of Miss Mary T. Maxwell Ford, whom the Plainfield Branch is now supporting at Jerusalem. The attendance at the meeting was very large.

WHAT GOOD ROADS DO.

Plainfield Real Estate Dealers Feel Confident of the Future.

The Mail and Express last Saturday published the following:

Plainfield is probably, with reason, expecting a better spring season than any of the other New Jersey towns, and already real estate men there report active inquiry. The town is looking very attractive in its spring dress, its detached houses, surrounded by fine gardens and lawns, being all kept in shipshape order, even in winter.

The roads are, as elsewhere in New Jersey, a surprise to new comers; the street committee of Plainfield spent $17,000 last year, and will spend about as much in 1896, and when to this is added the interest of a house-owning population—three houses in five are owned by their occupants—the result is a series of streets that would make Commissioners Hedges and Waring green with envy.

A great incentive to good roads in and around the city is the marvelous number of cyclists in the town—no less than 4,000 out of a total population of 18,000. A bicycle stands on the piazza of every house, and the wheel is considered a necessity in the household. The roads in and around Plainfield are undoubtedly as fine as any in the country, and just as every road led to Rome, so when one goes driving in any direction from the city, if he turns down a road leading either to right or left, it is pretty sure to bring him back to Plainfield eventually.

University Extension Lectures.

The University Extension committee announce a course of twelve or more lectures for the winter of 1896-7. Six will be on Astronomy by Prof. Robert M. Prentice. They will be illustrated by lantern slides and commence Tuesday, November 3d. The remaining lectures will be delivered by Prof. James F. Griggs on "Vital Forces in Modern History," and will begin early in January. The price of the tickets for the course will be $1.50

Fountain Must Have Stop Valves.

L. W. Randolph, the druggist, asked the Water Supply Company yesterday to turn the water on in the public fountain on Front street. The company said that if Mr. Randolph would have the fountain arranged with stop valves they would furnish the water. This action is taken on account of the many complaints made regarding the moist condition of the sidewalk when the water is continually running. Mr. Randolph will have it fixed.

How Many Letter Boxes Are There?

"Did you ever realize how many letter boxes we have?" remarked Postmaster Hetfield to a Press reporter Tuesday afternoon. The Press reporter had never thought much about the subject and said so. Mr. Hetfield then told how he had just completed a new list and that there were just seventy-six different boxes where the letters and other mail might await the coming of the carriers.

His Reins Were Crossed.

As the fruit truck belonging to William Hand was coming from the freight house Monday night with a heavy load of gas pipe, Jack Fillmore, who was driving, got his reins crossed and pulled the horses right into the iron fence that surrounds the grass plot there, breaking the fence. Luckily the horses escaped injury.

It is not a miracle. It wont cure everything, but it will cure piles. That's what DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will do, because it has done it in hundreds of cases. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

THE SCRAP CONTINUED.

CHAPTER NO. 2 IN THE TROUBLE BETWEEN D. VITROILO AND WIFE.

A Brother Assaults the Italian's Wife When She Went to Her Husband's Shoe Shop—The Brothers Will Meet in Jail.

The quarrel between Dominick Vitrollo, the Italian, who keeps a cobbler's shop on South Second street, and his wife, and its outcome at the city court, as was told in The Press several nights ago, was followed by another scrap which proved a sequel to the first. This one also was brought into the city court.

When Dominick Vitrollo went "down the road," or in plain English, was sent to Elizabeth, his brother, Antonio Vitrollo, proceeded to take possession of the absent man's shop. Tuesday Mrs. Vitrollo went to the shop and started to enter when her brother-in-law appeared on the scene. His love for Mrs. Vitrollo had not been increased by the knowledge that it was she that had had his brother arrested and locked up, and so his reception of her was anything but agreeable. He ordered her out of the place, but she refused to go as she said the place belonged to her husband.

A lively war of words ensued, and then he resorted to violence. He struck her, pounded her, kicked and beat her until she was one mass of bruises.

As soon as the police heard of the matter, Antonio Vitrollo was arrested and lodged in the rookery. Late yesterday afternoon the case came up for trial before Judge DeMeza and Mrs. Vitrollo was arrested and placed in the rookery. Late yesterday afternoon the case came up for trial before Judge DeMeza and Mrs. Vitrollo, with a black eye, and numerous black and blue spots, appeared against him There were several Italians among the spectators, and they took a lively interest in the case.

After hearing both sides of the case, Judge DeMeza gave the brother-in-law his choice between a fine of $20 or sixty days free board at Elizabeth. The Italian decided to join his brother in jail.

The Third Tea.

The third of Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen's charming teas was given Tuesday afternoon at her home on Berckyle avenue. Mrs. McCutchen was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Charles McCutchen, Miss Florence Marsh, Mrs. George Chapman, Mrs. Baldwin, of Montclair, Mrs. Robert Lowry, Mrs. William Boome, Mrs. Rogers and Mrs. Howell. The table decorations were smilax and white roses. Mrs. Walter McGee and Mrs. George Evans presided at the table. The young ladies assisting in the dining room were the Misses Grace Yerkes, Grace Cooley, Hattie Shreve and Ada Smock.

A Sociable Arranged.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Warren chapel held a meeting Tuesday afternoon that was largely attended by members. A letter was read from the missionary, to whom the society sent a barrel of necessities about a month ago, thanking them for their kindness. Letters from the home and foreign boards, thanking the society for recent donations, were also read. It was decided to hold a sociable some time in the near future, the entertainment at which will be mainly of a musical nature. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Gavett will be in charge.

Quarreled on the Street.

A well-dressed man and woman attracted quite a little attention Saturday evening at the corner of Fourth and New streets by their high words. The man finally attempted to drag the woman along, but one of the neighbors threatened to call a police*man and the man left on a run.*

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials, Address F. J. HUM OF THE TROLLEY.

IT WILL SOON BE HEARD ALONG THE NEW EXTENSIONS.

Notwithstanding the Slight Delay Caused by Rejection of Ties, the Work is Being Pushed Rapidly Along.

The street railway contractors are hard at work again after the delay caused by the rejection of the ties by Supt. Adleman, of the street railway. A new supply of ties has been received and the work is going on with its usual rapidity. Had not the delay occurred the track would have been laid and covered to Watchung avenue by last night, one day ahead of Supt. Yarnell's estimate. At 2 o'clock this *afternoon the track had been laid al*most up to Park avenue, and all of Fourth street will, probably be completed by tomorrow noon at the latest, unless another serious obstacle is met with.

The work of the contractors on Fourth street has been remarkable, especially on account of the rapidity with which it has been done. They labored under numerous disadvantages on the Netherwood extension, but now that the force is regularly organized, everything is proceeding smoothly. During the last five days 5,860 feet of track has been laid, despite the various delays, a record hard to equal.

VISION AND LIFE.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich Addresses Congregationalists at Newark Yesterday.

Rev. Charles L. Goodrich, of this city, the retiring moderator of the Congregational Association, who were in convention at Newark, Tuesday, made a short address, "Vision and Life" was his subject, and he said that it was largely because of the increase of material wealth that the poor were crushed and crowded into tenement houses. "Man," he said, "is not a tool that should be used by others. Those that labor for the intellect of men and for the material things for men are to be honored, but their labor should all be tributary to that done by the church. If one can put the likeness of Christ into a human heart it is more than to write a great poem or paint a great picture."

After touching upon the discipline of the Congregational church, which, he said, was simple in its machinery, the speaker said: "The church stands for liberty, progressiveness of thought for the spirit of religion and law."

Funeral of George Lissignolo.

The announcement of the death of George Lissignolo came with a sudden shock to many Plainfielders who had known to like and respect him. His remains will be brought to this city for interment in Evergreen cemetery Thursday. Inasmuch as Mr. Lissignolo was a man of extremely retiring and modest disposition, his relatives decided not to have a church service in this city, but to convey the remains direct to the cemetery where Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards will conduct a short service, and to which Mr. Lissignolo's friends in this city are invited to attend. The remains will arrive on the 4:23 p. m. train.

A Quiet Marriage.

Harry Bush, the tillerman on the hook and ladder truck, was quietly married to Miss Minnie Limbarger, of Netherwood, at Newark about six weeks ago. Mr. and Mrs. Bush are now residing at 340 East Second street. The marriage was a surprise to Bush's friends in the fire department.

A Pleasant Sociable.

The Friendship Social Club, Sons of Temperance, held a sociable in their hall in the Elkwood building last night. The hall was well filled. A programme of vocal and instrumental music, dialogues and recitations was rendered.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North venues.

We might tell you more about One Minute Cough Cure, but you probably know that it cures in a cough. Everyone does who has used it. It is a perfect remedy for coughs, colds, hoarseness. It is an especial favorite for children, being pleasant to take and quick in curing. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

HOME MISSIONS TALKED ABOUT.

First Baptist Church Women Elect Officers and Hear Reports.

The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church met in the Sunday-school room of the church Tuesday afternoon and heard the reports of the secretary and treasurer. The latter report showed that the society had contributed $692 during the past year to work among the colored people of the south, and the Indians of Oklohoma. Three barrels of clothing, etc., had been sent to Nebraska, and the balance of the money has been sent to the Home Board of Missions in Chicago.

The new officers of the society recently elected are as follows: President, Mrs. D. J. Yerkes; vice-presidents, Mrs. J. D. Runyon, Mrs. R. Knox, Mrs. Frank E. Kinsman; secretary, Mrs. S. T. Wilson; treasurer, Mrs. D. Bowman.

There are now 42 life members in the society each paying $25 a year. During the year two have died. The society is in a healthy, prosperous condition and is doing good work.

GIVE SKIN FOR THEIR SISTER.

Brother and Sisters of Maggie Cotter Trying to Save Her From Her Burns.

Miss Maggie Cotter, of Brooklyn, who was terribly burned about her body by her clothes catching fire from a gas stove, was taken to the Elizabeth City Hospital Tuesday and Dr. Vletor Mravlag commenced the skin grafting process.

A sister of the burned girl lay alongside of her and submitted to having large patches of skin cut from her body. The skin was quickly laid on the burns of the suffering girl.

The girl's burns are so bad that two other sisters have volunteered to undergo the ordeal of having skin cut from their bodies to help their sister.

Dr. Mravlag says that it will be necessary also to cut big pieces of skin from the girl's brother, who has offered to supply the deficiency. The girl by that time will have been made almost entirely over with the skin of her entire family, except her mother.

THREW ROTTEN EGGS.

Malicious Borough Youngsters Hauled Up in Police Court.

Certain residents of the borough have been much annoyed lately by boys throwing spoiled eggs at their houses. It was exceedingly difficult to detect them at it, but Tuesday some other boys informed the marshals who the guilty ones were, and accordingly Marshal Hansen arrested them. Last evening two were taken before Justice Crosley, and this morning the remaining one was arraigned. They were given a severe reprimand and upon their promise to cease their depredations were released. On account of the boy's parents their names are withheld, though The Daily Press is in possession of them. It would have been a better plan if the boys had been fined $10 each for their nightly amusement.

Elizabeth's New Water Supply.

One of the huge drive wheels which John Kean, Jr., president of the Water Company, is sinking at "The Hummocks," one mile from Elizabeth on Morris avenue, is completed. It was sunk to a depth of 380 feet, where they struck a vein of the purest spring water, which flows from the standpipe at the rate of 600,000 gallons a day. Another well is now being driven. S. W. Titus and John Heersdegen, of New York, and Arthur J. Connelly, of Newark, are under contract to furnish ten million gallons of water a day from these wells, and if the other wells yield as well they will do it, with a million gallons a day to spare. This water is cold, clear and very pleasant to the taste. It will be pumped to the big reservoir of the company's for Elizabeth's use.

Death of T. H. Clarkson.

Thomas H. Clarkson, aged 52 years, of 540 West Front street, died at his home last Monday after an illness of about four years with consumption. He was confined to his room since last August. He was a painter by trade, and several years ago was in partnership with his brother, James B. Clarkson. He was a faithful member of the Congregational church and attended service regularly when able. A wife survives him. The funeral will be held Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the house.

Junior Rally Proposed.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Superintendents of the local union are considering the advisability of holding a Junior rally during the coming Christian Endeavor State Convention. Some are opposed while others favor it. The question will be decided in the near future.

A NEW CITY TO ARISE.

LARGE TRACT OF LAND TO BE DEVELOPED NEAR PLAINFIELD.

A Syndicate Makes a Very Liberal Offer to the General Electric Light Company Who Will Give Work to 10,000 People.

All residents of this neighborhood will be deeply interested in an announcement to be made by the Electrical Review today. It will state that it is credibly informed that the General Electric Company will close its large factories at Schenectady, N. Y., Lynn, Mass., and Harrison, N. J., and will remove its entire manufacturing business to a new and modern plant to be erected by the company near Elizabeth.

"The deal," it says, "is one of great magnitude, and has been hanging fire for over a year and a-half. Nearly all the obstacles to its successful accomplishment have been disposed of, and it is expected that the final arrangements may be concluded this week.

"The idea had its origin with a syndicate of Elmira (N. Y.) and western capitalists, who have formed the New Orange Industrial Association. C. W. Manahan is general manager of the company. Matthew Arnot, a banker of Elmira, is heavily interested in the company. He is credited with being worth $16,000,000.

"The association has acquired a tract of land lying between Elizabeth and South Orange, aggregating five square miles in area. Five prominent railroads cross the tract of land. In order to make this tract of land valuable it was necessary to attract manufacturers, and to that end the company is said to have made a most liberal offer to the General Electric Company.

"This offer is stated to include the following: The land company will build, to the extent of $1,000,000, a manufacturing plant after the General Electric Company's own designs, the plant to be turned over in fee-simple to the General Electric Company on its completion. The land company is to give the electric company a cash bonus of $400,000 and a further allowance of $175,000 for moving expenses. The old factories belonging to the General Electric Company remain their property, and in time may be sold or leased for a considerable sum.

"The combination of the company's manufacturing interests in one place means that 10,000 or more hands will find employment in their factories, and that a good-sized town will be required to accommodate the workmen and their families."

THE ELIZABETH PRESBYTERY.

Opening Session Given to Addresses, Reports and Sermons.

The Elizabeth Presbytery opened its annual session in the First Presbyterian church, at Elizabeth, Tuesday. It will continue two days. About fifty delegates are in attendance. Rev. Chalmers Martin was elected Moderator.

An address of welcome was delivered by Rev. Dr. Kempshall, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of Rahway. Rev. Dr. John A. Liggett presided at the opening of the session and preached on the growth of the Presbyterian church in America. Rev. Henry D. Voorhees, of the Presbytery of Lehigh, was admitted to membership.

Last night a missionary service was held, and addresses were made by Rev. Dr. Dixon, of Trenton, and Rev. Dr. Richards, of this city. The session was resumed at 9 o'clock this morning.

SPECIAL COUNCIL MEETING.

The City Fathers to Act on Many Important Matters.

A special meeting of the City Council will be held Friday evening, when the bicycle, street sprinkling, sidewalk and tax ordinances will be taken up for consideration. A committee will be appointed to make assessments on the sewers and the petition of G. C. Phillips and others, regarding the laying of sidewalks on West Front street will be considered as will also the following licenses: J. L. Hand, auctioneer; J. Levy, N. Frank, peddlers; P. M. French, sprinkler; William Emmons, M. VanWinkle, truck; and T. J. McCann, cartman.

An Affidavit.

This is to certify, that on May 11th, I walked to Melick's drug store on a pair of crutches and bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm for inflammatory rheumatism which had crippled me up. MEMORIES OF CONKLING.

Some of the Peculiarities of the Great New Yorker.

The Senator Would Permit No Hotel Employe to Knock at His Door—How the German Minister Lost a Rooster.

[Special Washington Letter.]

"When I was a very young man, I used to wait upon Senator Conkling," says an old hotel servant. "I was in the dining-room, and for awhile I was bell-boy in Wormley's hotel. While I was in the dining-room I attended to Senator Conkling during an entire session of congress. He was a very particular man, but he was a very kind man also. I soon learned to know exactly what he wanted, and when I went to the kitchen and gave an order, telling the cook that it was for Senator Conkling, a great deal of care and attention was paid to the order. Of course you know that in hotel kitchens generally the cook and the assistant cooks are very busy and sometimes attend to their work in a careless manner, treating everybody alike as nearly as possible, but when a man of high standing like Senator Conkling is a guest of a hotel they take great care in preparing things in a manner satisfactory to him.

"Senator Conkling was a plain sort of an eater, and he was not very hard to wait upon. In the morning, sometimes before he was dressed, he would call a bellboy and send a written order down to me. He was very fond of shredded codfish on toast with a poached egg on a separate plate. He would take the shredded codfish and toast, place them upon his large plate, and cut them into very fine pieces. Then placing the egg on top of the hash which he had made, he would break the egg and mix it all together. I remember one morning, when he seemed to be particularly pleased with his breakfast, he said to me: 'Jim, there is nothing better for the nerves than codfish; and an egg is very strengthening to a man who works as I do. I learned to make this breakfast for myself when I was a little boy. My mother used to fix it for me, and I have always enjoyed it.'

"Senator Conkling usually had a cup of coffee with his breakfast, but he very seldom drank more than half a cup at a time. He did not use any cream or milk with his coffee, but simply put in a very small lump of sugar. He was very fond of butter, and would not only spread the butter thick upon his bread which he was eating, but would very frequently call for an extra piece, which he would mix in with his codfish, toasted bread and poached egg.

"Senator Conkling never would tell any story about whether he was in the hotel or not. I used to take cards to him, and if he was willing to see anyone he would answer very promptly, but if he was not there would be no response at all. He left an order with me to shove cards under his door and never to knock. If the cards were from persons whom he felt obliged to see, he would open the door and say: 'Tell the gentleman to come up here.' If he did not want to see anybody, he would simply pay no attention to the cards, and I would go back to the hotel office and say that the senator was evidently not in, as he did not respond to my knock; but that I had left the card under his door so that he would get it when he came in. In this way a great many people were kept away from the senator, and he was not obliged to tell any stories or prevaricate.

"Senator Conkling had a standing order that none of the bellboys were to knock at his door at any time. He would not respond to any knocks and did not want to be annoyed. One morning there was a new bellboy who took a card up, and before he went there I told him simply to shove the card under the door and not to knock and annoy the senator. He merely laughed at me and said that he would present the card to him in person. He did so and knocked several times until the senator opened the door and asked him to come in and sit down. He gave the boy a chair and required him to wait with him fully 20 minutes until the senator had dressed himself and was ready to come downstairs. He then took the bellboy by the ear, led him down to the hotel office and told the chief clerk that he did not want to be annoyed by that bellboy any more. He also told what he had done to with him if he ever came to his room and knocked on the door again. He was a very large and a very strong man, and if the bellboy had offered any resistance Senator Conkling would have probably thrown him down the stairs, because he was in a very angry mood that morning and was particularly annoyed because the bellboy had kept rapping on his door until he was exasperated.

"Senator Conkling never liked to be disturbed by any noises about the hotel. The German minister had a house adjoining the hotel, and kept a very large rooster which annoyed the senator by crowing early in the morning. Senator Conkling never said anything about it to anybody until upon one occasion, just after he had taken his breakfast and was walking to the capitol, he met the German minister who wished him a good morning and hoped he was well. Senator Conkling replied: 'I am feeling very well, thank you, considering the fact that I was kept from sleeping by that miserable game cock you keep under my window.' The German minister apologized, and that afternoon killed his rooster.

"I have seen the senator often when he came down to breakfast besieged by callers who wanted to tell him something before he went into the dining-room. He always pointed to the parlor with one hand, saying: 'You go in there;' and then, pointing with the other hand to the dining-room, he would say: 'I am going in there.' He would not waste any time with them, but went right on in to his breakfast. I have heard men swearing at him, when he left them in that way; and then, when he would come out and go to the parlor to see them, they would greet him with bows and smiles, as though they were coming into the presence of a king.

"Senator Blaine used to stop occasionally at Wormley's, and maybe you don't know how those men hated each other. Sometimes they would meet in the halls, in the parlor, on the stairs or on the elevator; but they never noticed each other. I think that Senator Blaine used to like to go out of his way to meet Senator Conkling in the presence of other prominent people. Mr. Blaine was always smiling and talking to people. Mr. Conkling would always wear a severely dignified look, and would not speak to Mr. Blaine, or to any of the people with Mr. Blaine. Then, after Mr. Conkling had gone away, Mr. Blaine would smile and say: 'It is a pity Conkling is so rude and ungentlemanly;' and the people would agree with Mr. Blaine. In that way, by purposely meeting Mr. Conkling, and making him appear to be rude, I think that Mr. Blaine managed to increase the number of Mr. Conkling's enemies.

"There is one thing, however, that always struck me as singular. Although Senator Conkling was always dignified and severe with public men, he was polite to servants, if they treated him with proper consideration. On the other hand, Mr. Blaine would smile and bow to public men, but he never paid any attention to servants, and did not put himself out to be kind to us. Consequently, the servants all stood in awe of Senator Conkling, but they liked him, too. But, while everybody talked of what a great man Senator Blaine was, the servants did not praise him very much.

"There was one man that always stood on good terms with Senator Conkling, and that was Senator Morton, of Indiana. Those men were almost like brothers. Senator Conkling was never dignified nor repellant with Senator Morton. I think that he was the only man with whom Senator Conkling ever walked arm in arm about the halls or in the parlor. When he was with Senator Morton and no one else was about, Senator Conkling was a different man. He would talk to Senator Morton, tell stories, and act as other men usually act when in the company of friends. He would laugh out loud when talking to Senator Morton; but he never showed any more animation than to occasionally smile when others were talking to him. He was the most dignified man I have ever known.

"There was another man whom Senator Conkling seemed to like very well, and that was Senator Edmunds, of Vermont. But their ways were very much alike. Both of them were very dignified. They were usually talking very earnestly together, and there was nothing of an jovial nature between them. They were simply prominent senators discussing public affairs in a confidential manner. Senator Edmunds was a large man with a full gray beard and a perfectly bald head.

"There was another public man who often called upon Senator Conkling. He came over from New York frequently, and whenever I showed his card under the door Senator Conkling instantly responded and told me to bring the gentleman up to his room. It was Chester A. Arthur, and he was collector of customs at New York. I remember his name very well, because he seldom had any unopened cards with him, but always leaned on the hotel counter and wrote his own cards. He was afterwards vice president, and when President Garfield died he became president of the United States.

"Whenever Mr. Arthur went upstairs, Senator Conkling would be waiting for him at the door, give him a cordial welcome, and shut the door. Mr. Arthur used to stay there sometimes until long after midnight. One morning, at about two o'clock, he came down from Senator Conkling's room, and asked for a room for himself, but the hotel was full and he had to go elsewhere to get a bed. He was very cross about it; but it was his own fault. He had not registered nor asked for a room. I guess if they had supposed he would ever be president of the United States, the proprietor would have gladly given up his own room." SMITH D. FRY.

A PROSPEROUS CHURCH.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS MADE ABOUT TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

A Little Pleasure Was Combined With the Business—The Amount Raised for Congregational Purposes Was $6,144.56.

The consistory of Trinity Reformed church tendered a social to the members of the church and congregation last Friday. The threatening weather no doubt kept many away, but the attendance was large enough to comfortably fill the room. After arriving, the people formed into groups and chatted until the business part of the meeting was brought up by the reading of the treasurer's report of the church for the year past by Robert Clark, Sr. A report was also read by the various secretaries of the Christian Endeavor society, Junior C. E. society, King's Daughters, Ladies Work society, and Rev. Cornelius Schenck reported on the spiritual condition of the church. Each report read was a very gratifying one and showed what a vast amount has been accomplished during the past year.

The amount raised during the year for congregational purposes was $6,144.56 and for benevolent purposes $1,573.96. These figures embrace all reports from branches of the church work. The membership of the church consists of 250 families; total members in communion, 535; received into membership during the past year, 36. The Sunday-school numbers 375. The Christian Endeavor society numbers 136, and the Junior Christian Endeavor society 82.

At the conclusion of the reports, George L. Van Emburgh made a few remarks in which he spoke of the work which had been accomplished during the year and added that there was no church where such a feeling of equality and friendliness existed among the members in a greater degree than it did at Trinity. Mr. Van Emburgh closed his remarks with prayer.

Robert Meeker, as chairman of the committee in charge, then invited all to stay and partake of refreshments. The good things were served by the gentlemen of the consistory and general sociability reigned.

The sociable was a novel affair in itself, it being about the first to be held in this city. Heretofore the reports have been made at prayer meetings, but this year the consistory endeavored to add a little pleasure to the business. The committee in charge consisted of Robert Meeker, chairman, George L. Van Emburgh and F. S. Cutter.

NOTHING DEFINITE YET.

The Meeting of Those Interested in the Proposed Hospital Adjourned.

The meeting of those interested in the proposed homeopathic hospital, held at the home of E. B. Clark, on Crescent avenue, last night, was not largely attended and adjournment was taken to an indefinite time. The threatening weather and the fact that a number of the supporters of the the movement were out of town accounted for the small attendance. The following physicians were present. Doctors H. H. Lowrie, D. C. Adams, T. S. Davis, Frank M. Hallock and O. L. Jenkins.

It is learned that the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg hospital are considering an amendment of the constitution permitting homeopathic doctors as well as other schools of practictioners an entrance into the hospital to take charge of such patients as may desire their presence. The matter will come up for discussion and action at a meeting to be held Monday, April 27th.

Whether this will be accepted to the homeopathic physicians will remain a question for the future to decide. Some of the homeopathic physicians express their desire to take steps to lease a house as a hospital and dispensary, believing that the time is up for such a step.

The Press is desirous of obtaining expression of opinion pro and con and will be glad to open its columns to the citizens of Plainfield who desire to agitate the matter.

MISSED A RICH WIDOW.

"Father" Noah Roby Broods Over His One Great Mistake.

Noth Roby, an inmate of the Piscat away Poor Farm, claims to be one hundred and twenty-four years old, and tells many stories that go towards substantiating his claim. He is withered, bent, and sightless, but still speaks and thinks clearly. He says the two mistakes of his whole life were his failure to propose to a rich widow, and his leaving the navy for a New Jersey farm. Several people seventy years old, are said to remember Noah as an old man when they were children.

An Ancient Agreement.

Harrison Coddington, of the borough, owns quite an ancient agreement. It is dated "febriary the 10 in the ye. 1793." It is between Gideon Allen and "Henery" Allen on one part and David Allen on the other, and is for the sale of a tract of land for five shillings. The paper is of an old-fashioned kind, almost like parchment.

A HEARTBROKEN WIFE.

MRS. LYONS TELLS A PITIFUL STORY IN THE CITY COURT.

Her Husband Would Not Support Her and Left Her to Shift for Herself—He Finally Returns by Order of the Court.

Tears flowed freely at the city court room on Saturday when an unhappy couple had to have their family troubles settled by the city. Patrick Lyons was charged by the Overseer of the Poor with refusing to support his family. He pleaded not guilty. His wife appeared in court carrying a wee baby and between her sobs told a pitiful story. Last Saturday, she said, he told her he was not going to support her any longer and that she would have to support herself. He gave her, however, seven cents with which she procured enough food and fuel to keep her and the children from starving. His mother, who was a hard-working woman, had given part of her scanty wages to support Mrs. Lyons.

"He told me he'd keep me in misery all my life," sobbed Mrs. Lyons, "and he couldn't make me more miserable than I am now."

Lyons listened to the testimony of his wife without a word and when the the Judge asked him his reason for neglecting his wife and he said that she was lazy and would not get up and work. She was not starving anyhow, he said, as his mother looked after her. Mrs. Lyons then went on to tell how he went off to attend fairs and the like where he made plenty of money but when he returned home it was all gone.

"What are you going to do?" asked the Judge.

Guess I'll support her," was the stolid answer, "suppose I'll have to."

The Judge then waked the prisoner out of his lethargy by giving him such a "hauling over the coals," as he had not received for many a day. Lyons was held in $200 bail on his own recognizance to support his wife which he promised to do.

GROVE STREET IMPROVEMENTS.

Many Citizens Are Beautifying Their Homes on That Thoroughfare.

In the spring when "a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love," the householders fancy, as naturally turns to thoughts of improvements. This fancy is indicated on Grove street by the following changes in the exteriors of homes: Miss Holton, corner of Lincoln place, is putting an addition to the southern rear side of her home; James Parker, corner of Mercer avenue, is making an extension to the northern side of his house; Mrs. Mitchell has removed the front fence from her yard; a hedge is being set in front of Mr. Grant's residence, corner of Park place, which will be extended past the vacant lot next, making a continuous hedge on the west side from Mercer avenue to Park place.

RUSHING THE WORK.

Twenty-Four Hundred Feet of Track Laid in Two Days.

Work on the West Fourth street extension of the street railway is progressing very rapidly at present. The contractors have only been working on that branch two days, not including today, and last night had completed the track from Grant avenue to the one hundred feet east of Plainfield avenue, a distance of about 2400 feet. The remaining portion, about 2,700 feet, Superintendent Yarnell estimate will be completed by Wednesday night at least. Work will then be begun on the Dunellen branch.

Free Attendant Service—The Northwestern Line.

A new departure has been inaugurated at the Chicago passenger station of the Northwestern line [Chicago and Northwestern R'y] which will be found a great convenience to the traveling public. A corps of uniformed attendants has been provided to render both incoming and outgoing passengers all necessary attention, directing them to carriages, omnibuses and street cars, carrying hand baggage, assisting persons in feeble health and making themselves useful in every way in their power. The attendants wear blue uniforms and bright red caps, and the service is entirely free. The Northwestern Line is the through-car route between Chicago and St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth, Ashland, Council Bluffs, Omaha, Sioux City, Denver, Salt Lake, San Francisco, Portland, and many other important cities of the west and northwest. 2

Better Pay Your Taxes.

Now is the time to pay your taxes unless you want your name advertised. The Delinquent Tax Collector has had a list sent to him to publish, and those wishing their names taken off the list had better see E. H. Bird, 186 East Front street, before the same are published. He can be seen at any time.

A Game Warden.

Gov. Griggs has appointed John D. Smith, Freeholder from Jefferson Township, Fish and Game Warden of Morris County in place of Robert Richards, whose term expires next month.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

TRIO OF HAPPY BRIDES.

THREE APRIL WEDDINGS SOLEMNIZED LAST EVENING

Two in St. Mary's Church and One at a Summit Avenue Home—Stylish Gowns, Beaming Faces, Fragrant Flowers

From The Press of April 16th.

HARRINGTON—FLATLEY.

The marriage of Miss Annie Flatley to Patrick Harrington was solemnized in St. Mary's church yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, Rev. Father Murphy officiating. The bridemaid was Miss Kittie Kelly and the best man M. J. Flatley. The bride wore a gown of white silk, trimmed with lace and ribbon, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridemaid wore a gown of swiss, trimmed with pink ribbon and lace, and carried a bouquet of pink roses.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Harrington proceeded to their new home, 461 West Sixth street, and last evening held a reception. The house was filled to its utmost by the guests. Dancing was the feature of the evening and continued until an early hour this morning. Music was furnished by an orchestra under the direction of Prof. Guttman. The newly-married couple received many handsome and useful presents.

Among the guests present were the Misses Gannon, Miss Keogh, of Governor's Island; the Misses Regan, Miss McCue, Miss McCluskey, Miss McKenna, Miss Flatley, the Misses Churchill, the Misses Kane, Miss Kelly, Miss Reynolds, Miss Dixon, Miss Cooney, Miss Egan, Miss Moran, Mr. and Mrs. Kane, Mr. and Mrs. Nugent, Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald, Mr. and Mrs. Regan, Sr., Mr. and Mrs Regan, Jr., and Messrs. Martin Flatley, of Newark; Martin Regan, Sr., Martin Regan, Jr., Dixon, Daniel Fitzpatrick, Thomas McCue, Michael Egan, Patrick Kane, Patrick Connolly, John Conneff and Thomas Kane.

SMITH—MILLS.

The marriage of Miss May Mills, daughter of D. A. Mills, of 104 Summit avenue, and Edward A. Smith, of Brooklyn, was celebrated yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride, Rev. Cornelius Schenck officiating in the presence of only the immediate members of both families. The bride was becoming in a gown of white French organdie over pink silk, and carried white and pink roses; the bridemaid, Miss Lillian Mills, sister of the bride, was gowned in Dresden silk and carried pink roses. E. R. Mills, brother of the bride, was best man, and Agnes Marguerite Van Norden, a little niece of the bride, acted as flower girl. She was gowned in white swiss, trimmed with white satin ribbon. A reception and supper followed, after which Mr. and Mrs. Smith left for a short wedding tour. They will reside in Brooklyn on their return. Many costly and useful presents were received by them from their relatives and friends.

SKULLY—CAUFIELD.

The marriage of Miss Katherine Caufield, of West Seventh street, to William Skully, of Jersey City, took place in St. Mary's church yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, Rev. Father Murphy officiating. The best man was Mr. Kenney, of Jersey City, and the bridemaid Miss Mary Ellen Kane, of this city. After the ceremony the couple left for Jersey City, and last evening held a reception which was attended by a large number of friends from this city.

MEMORIAL DAY DETAIL.

The Programme Arranged by the Joint Committee Last Night.

The Joint Memorial Detail from the G. A. R. posts and the Woman's Relief Corps met in G. A. R. Hall last evening, and formulated plans for the coming celebration. Principal H. M. Maxson, of the Public Schools, Revs. Fathers Smyth and Murphy, were present. The last two represented the Parochial School.

It was decided to have a parade in the morning of Decoration Day at 9 o'clock, and the school children will participate, the last three named gentlemen promising to do all in their power to make the parade a success. The Plainfield Cornet Band will also assist. The various cemeteries will be visited and flowers will be placed on the soldiers graves. In the forenoon the Sons of Veterans will go to Scotch Plains accompanied by the band, and appropriate exercises will be held there over the grave of the late John Hand. The citizens, fire companies and school children will assist in the exercises. Stages will be provided for this occasion. In the afternoon there will be a short parade, to be followed by a public memorial meeting in Music Hall, to be addressed by several prominent men. A large chorus of school children will render music, as will also the band.

The W. T. U. will, as usual, furnish the veterans with small bouquets tied with white ribbon.

Another meeting of the detail will be held soon.

Wonders never cease. A newspaper heading reads: "Lawyer Fleeced."

TABLEAU ANNIVERSARY.

UNIQUE AND APPROPRIATE AFFAIR OF THE MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB.

The Woman's Club Illustrates the Subjects They Have Studied During the Year Past—Remarks By the President.

It is doubtful whether a more fashionable or brilliant assemblage of people has been seen at the Casino than that of last Friday, when the Monday Afternoon Club celebrated their eighth anniversary. The cozy hall was graced by Plainfield's best society people, whose admiration for the club and its work is boundless. The temperature had not the slightest effect on the audience, that is, so far as the success of the event was concerned, and it can be said that the anniversary was a crowning triumph for woman and her art.

Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, on behalf of the club members, made an exceedingly appropriate address in extending the hospitality of the club to the visiting friends. She said that there was some doubt in her mind as to whether the emblem of the club, the Sphinx, was a suitable one. The Sphinx was given credit for knowing all things, yet she kept her knowledge to herself. "If our club," she said, "was composed of Sphinxs we would hardly succeed. We think that we have struck a happy medium, and are perfectly willing to transmit to others what we learn.

"During the year the club has been studying noted Florentines, such as Dante, Michael Angelo, etc., and tonight we continue the study with the illustrations, and we hope you will not be disappointed."

Miss Marion S. Dumont and Miss Ada G. Marsh gave the initial number on the programme, Faust, "Potpourri," by Gounod, and a more perfect rendition could scarcely be imagined. The harmony and unison was delightful. This was followed with a tableau, "A Scene from the Youth of Dante.' This was arranged by Mrs. A. Walter Haviland, and Mrs. C. A. Reed, Mrs. J. R. Foy, Mrs. W. C. Roome, Mrs. D. M. VanVliet and Miss Scribner assumed the characters. The next number, a vocal selection, Trio, "Erra Stella," was given perfectly by Mrs. C. F. Abbott, Mrs. G. A. Chapman, Mrs. M. I. Cooley, Mrs. R. Lowry, Mrs. D. W. Pond, Mrs. W. J. Roome and Mrs. W. L. Saunders. Mrs. Irving Howard Brown was the accompanist. "Dante Mourning for Beatrice" was the title of the next tableau. This one was arranged by Mrs. F. O. Herring. Those impersonating the parts were Dante, Miss Scribner, and Miss Elizabeth Stewart, Miss Mary Betts, Miss Lizzie VonBoskerck, Miss Nella Whiton and Miss Bessie Morgan. The last tableau in part first was under the direction of Mrs. Edward D. McCarthy. It was entitled, "Adoramus Te," Palestrina, Fanciulli che cantano, Bas Relief. Those taking the parts were Mrs. Lee Ashley Grace, Miss Cully Tracy, Mrs. C. J. Mellick, Miss Ellis, Mrs. E. C. Perkins, Mrs. Charles Lawson and Mrs. W. D. Murray. They were assisted by the female voices in the musical part.

Part second was introduced by Miss Ada G. Marsh, who rendered a piano solo, "Scherzo B minor," by Chopin. The selection was grandly given in every particular and deservedly won the hearty applause given. The tableau "Angels," arranged by Mrs. Alexander Gilbert, was a beautiful representation of the highest art. The parts were assumed by Mrs. H. M. Stockton, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Miss Elizabeth Stewart, Miss Hunter, Miss Bessie Morgan, Miss Florella Clark, Miss Lizzie VonBoskerck and Mrs. Gibb, and Mrs. Warren, of Fanwood. Mrs. W. L. Saunders had in charge the next Tableau "Tasso and Leonora d'Este," and the characters were taken by Mrs. J. W. Roome, Mrs. E. W. Hedges, Mrs. J. F. Hartman, Miss Grace Cooley, Miss Newton, Miss Maude VonBoskerck. This was followed with a vocal selection, trio, "Tirsi non mi seccar," by the female voices. It was finely given, the rich full soprano and alto voices, blending in perfect harmony.

The last tableau was a scene from the last lines of "Romola," by George Elliott. It was under the direction of Mrs. McCutchen. The rich silk hand wrought tapestries, used in connection with the silver candlebra and candlesticks, made the scene unusually beautiful. The tiger skin, rug and antique chair was kindly loaned by Mrs. F. O. Herring.

The parts taken were as follows: Romola, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman; Lillo, Mrs. W. L. Saunders; Tessa, Mrs. J. P. Harman; Minna, Mrs. Henry P. Stockton; Monna Brigida, Mrs. A. S. Patterson.

Mrs. McCutchen worked indefatigably and with pre-eminent success in the selection of her participants, the collection of accessories, and the grouping of the figures. All of the other tableaux were copies of paintings, while this tableau was the reproduction of a scene as described in Romola, taken from a rare portrait. At the conclusion the curtain was left drawn and the stage fittings presented a charming picure in themselves.

The illustrative readings by Mrs. Robert Lowry added greatly to the enjoyment of the tableaux. Mrs. Albert H. Attorbury was the accompanist. Each tableau was superb in every detail, and several encores were accorded them.

At the conclusion light refreshments were served. Those who received the guests were Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, Mrs. B. J. Shreve, Mrs. L. N. Lovell, Mrs. John Gray Foster, and Mrs. C. L. Goodrich.

CHURCH ELECTIONS.

Park Avenue Baptist and First Presbyterian Churches Hold Meetings.

There was a very large attendance of members at the annual parish meeting held in the First Presbyterian church last Friday. F. H. Martin was selected chairman and Howard A. Pope, clerk. W. H. Shotwell and Howard A. Pope were elected trustees for three years; C. E. Bond for two years, and John Abbott for one year. The report of the treasurer, W. H. Shotwell showed the receipts and expenditures for 1895 to be about $6,500, and there is now a balance of about $500 in the treasury. The church was reported to be in excellent condition, and the members expressed themselves as being much encouraged with the present affairs of the church.

Following the regular mid-week prayer service held in the Park Avenue Baptist church last evening, the annual parish meeting of the church and society was held. The pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, served as moderator, and I. B. Hill, as clerk. The choice of trustees for two years resulted in the election of the following: J. Wesley Johnson, A. D. Thompson, I. B. Hill and Augustus Runyon. A. W. Day, treasurer, presented his annual report, showing a net balance of $159.16 in the treasury. The report gave clear evidence that the church is in a first-class condition, spiritually and financially. The attendance at the meeting was very encouraging.

The annual meeting of the Congregational church and society was held last night. The reports of the officers were received and the officers for the next year elected. The church election resulted as follows: Deacons, A. J. Clarkson, L. B. Morgan and A. C. LaBoyteaux; official board, H. C. Nomer, Mrs. C. L. Goodrich and Rev. M. E. Dwight; clerk, J. A. Robinson. The election in the society was as follows: Trustees, W. B. Wadsworth, L. C. Batson, G. W. Rockfellow, J. E. Morse, J. E. Stewart and J. M. Whiton; clerk, George Fuller; auditor, John M. Burnett. A number of questions were discussed, including the continuance of the choir, but no action was taken in any and they were left to the discretion of the board of trustees.

TWO SCORE AND FIVE.

A Birthday Surprise Given to George McGinnis by His Wife and Daughter.

A birthday surprise party was arranged and given Friday by Mrs. Geo. McGinnis and her daughter, Miss Nellie McGinnis, of 208 Somerset street, to Mrs. McGinnis' husband, George S. McGinnis, it being the forty-fifth anniversary of his birthday. It was a complete surprise in every respect. Excellent vocal and instrumental music helped to pass the evening most pleasantly. Mr. McGinnis received a number of handsome presents. At a late hour refreshments were served, after which the guests departed for their homes wishing Mr. McGinnis many happy returns of the day. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. George Kirch, Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Mundy, Mr. and Mrs. I. S. Lance, Mr. and Mrs. Corrs Ryno, Mr. and Mrs. Joel Hedden, Mr. and Mrs. George S. McGinnis, Mrs. K. Bolsterli and Miss Nellie McGinnis.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Miss Loretto Flanagan Celebrates Her Twelfth Anniversary.

A very pleasant time was passed last evening at the home of Miss Loretto Flanagan on West Fifth street. Miss Flanagan is the daughter of Patrolman and Mrs. P. J. Flanagan and the occasion which brought so many young people together was the twelfth anniversary of the young lady's birthday. From 7:30 to 10:30 the hours passed too quickly, as all present enjoyed themselves greatly. Refreshments were served, after which games, singing, dancing, and musical selections on the piano were indulged in. The hostess was the recipient of many handsome presents. When the guests departed for their respective homes, they expressed themselves as having had a fine time and wishing the young lady many happy returns of the day.

Among those present were the Misses Jennie Summers, Lizzie Guinee, May Townley, Annie Galbraith, Mamie Whalen, Mamie Brady, Clara Flynn, Lizzie Day, Ada Westphal, Nellie Walsh, Mamie Higgins, Mamie Burke, Maggie Burke, Janie Conneely, Helen Lynch, Dottie Casey, Margie DeCourcy and Cathie Moynihan.

State President of the A. P. A.

J. M. Rockafellow, of Washington, N. J., publisher of The American Advocate, was Thursday elected State president of the American Protective Association of New Jersey.

OUT ON A HABEUS CORPUS

MRS. BOATE'S PRINCIPAL WITNESS RELEASED FROM CUSTODY.

Charles Corwin Will Now, It is Said, Commence a Suit for $10,000 Against the Man Who Caused His Arrest.

The divorce suit brought by Mrs. Annie Boate, formerly of Terrill road, exclusive mention of which was made by the Press last January, promises to be a most interesting one. A suit for $10,000 damages has already resulted from it, and all sorts of other unexpected proceedings may be looked for.

The suit was instituted in the district court at Fargo, North Dakota, some time ago. The Fargo attorneys of Mrs. Boate, under her instructions, retained Counsellor W. K. McClure, of this city, to take the testimony of her witnesses before Justice Vincent W. Nash, a notary public of this city. The principal witness for the plaintiff, Mrs. Boate, is a young man named Charles Corwin, whose testimony was so damaging to the defendant's case that, unless disproved, it would certainly enable Mrs. Boate to obtain her divorce.

The testimony for the defence was taken before Charles Cook, a notary public at Asbury Park, where the defendant, Thomas Boate, keeps a bakery. Attorney Guerin, of the defence, produced three witnesses, endeavoring principally to destroy the testimony of Corwin. All three, however, under the severe cross examination which they had to undergo, seemed in a measure to corroborate instead of destroying Corwin's testimony.

The next step of the defence was to allege that Corwin, in his testimony before Justice Nash, had committed perjury, and as soon as Corwin stepped from the train at Asbury Park last Monday morning in company with Mrs. Boate and her counsel, a warrant of arrest was served upon him by a constable. Corwin was paroled in the custody of the constable and the taking of the testimony in the divorce proceeding went on without interruption until 2 o'clock, the time of hearing at the justice's court on the charge of perjury. At the trial, Counsellor McClure appeared for Corwin and objected to the warrant of arrest on the ground that it was not under seal and that the court had no jurisdiction over the prisoner for if any offense at all had been committed, it was committed in Union county and not in Mommouth county. The Court overruled the objections and the case went on. After hearing the testimony of the witnesses produced on the part of the State, no witnesses being allowed to be called by the defendant, the justice held Corwin in $300 bail, in default of which he was committed to jail.

Counsellor McClure immediately returned to the city, and the next morning, Tuesday, he prepared his petition for a writ of habeus corpus, stating the case very clearly. This petition, duly verified, was taken before J. Clarence Conover, judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Monmouth county, at his home in Freehold on Tuesday night. The judge instantly allowed the writ and ordered it sealed, making it returnable the next afternoon at 2 o'clock.

At the appointed time, P. T. Dodd, the Asbury Park justice of the peace, who had been subpoenaed to bring the record of the hearing before him, and all the other interested parties, appeared and the case was then argued before the court. Judge Conover discharged the prisoner on the grounds alleged by his counsel that the facts set forth as the cause of the arrest and detention were not sufficient and that the warrant was improperly issued and was illegal. The judge then ordered that Corwin be released from custody, and after he had received the congratulations of those present, Corwin, accompanied by his counsel, left immediately for home.

The next step will be a suit in the Supreme Court for $10,000 damages for false imprisonment brought by Corwin against the man who caused his arrest.

The divorce proceedings are still going on.

An Overland Party.

A riding party, on their way from Lakewood to Montclair, stopped at Plainfield Wednesday afternoon for rest and refreshments. They were accompanying H. W. Potter, the well known riding master of Montclair, who was taking a number of his horses back to Montclair after wintering at Lakewood. The party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Potter, of Montclair; Miss Wilkinson, Schuyler S. Wheeler, Gano S. Dunn, and Robert Christy, Jr., of New York. Mr. Wheeler is the president of the well-known electrical company, the Crocker-Wheeler Company. They rode from Lakewood to New Brunswick on Monday and expected to make the rest of the distance yesterday.

—The case of James against the Bound Brook Electric Light, Heat and Power Company, will be tried before Justice Mattison, Wednesday, April 22d.

DON CARLOS' AMBITION.

Bourbon Prince Would Like to Be King of Spain.

Unless the War in Cuba Comes to a Close Very Soon a Revolution in Spain Is Inevitable—The Don's Little Game.

In the best of the Vienna cafes one may see a gentleman of a decided Spanish Bourbon type. He is of low stature, has very heavy jaws and chin, a thick black mustache now slightly tinged with gray, is dressed always in quiet black, wearing a silk hat and carrying a silver-headed cane. He is an embodiment of Spanish courtesy and dignity. He is now 48 years of age, and though he makes his home in a quiet street in Austria's capital, where he spent much of his youth, he often visits Venice and London, being as much at home in the latter city as elsewhere.

This man is Don Carlos, duke of Madrid, and a pretender to the Spanish throne under the title of Charles VII. For a number of years he lived in Paris, where, next to Madrid, he naturally felt most at home. In 1881 he was charged with conspiracy with the Duc de Chambode to promote the latter's ambition for the French throne, and was expelled from Paris. He used to be seen at the horse-racing in the Bois de Boulogne, and the story is told that he put up stakes against Louis Napoleon, and often beat the latter as judge of a horse's wind.

Don Carlos would be of no particular public interest at this moment but for the fact that persons both in and out of Spain believe that there is some sort of political crisis impending that the Spaniards will soon be called upon to face. This belief was accentuated by Marshal Campos' departure from Cuba after his failure to suppress the insurrection. If the insurrection continues for a few months longer, the Spanish government must levy a high war tax upon its home people to continue the struggle. It is believed, and with some reason, that this strain will break the camel's back, for the government would have to summon an army to collect this tax from a people taxed to despair, and a revolution would follow.

In the event of a revolution, which may not come, but which is slightly more than a possibility, there appear three players on the Spanish political chessboard—the present monarchy, the republicans and the Carlista.

Spain in the shape of a republic was a notorious failure. It was as bad as anything of the kind ever set up in South or Central America. The Spanish people are scarcely more fitted by nature and education for a republican form of government than the Dahomeso or Ashantees. Emilio Castelar, their most distinguished republican of a few years ago, has lapsed into monarchism, if reports of him are to be credited. In case of a revolution there is a chance that an ambitious man who could gather a strong force might set up a republic, but it would be knocked down in a few hours like a tenpin, for the reason that the Spanish are worship monarchy of the absolute character, as they have always done.

Since 1876, when Alfonso XII. mounted the throne, reestablished on the ashes of hopes of the republicans, Don Carlos has not lifted his finger publicly for his own cause in Spain. It is difficult to make any estimate of the strength of his adherents in Spain now. If Isabella had been a respectable woman, she, perhaps, would never made an effort to gain a crown that by the old Spanish laws of inheritance he thought himself entitled to. He never recognized his cousin Isabella as queen.

The first armed adventure of Don Carlos, says the Illustrated American, started in 1872, on the soil of Navarre, just over the Spanish frontier. It was so much like an adventure of Don Quixote that all Spain laughed—both friends and enemies. When this modern Don appeared, several thousand of his enthusiastic adherents gathered, many of them armed with only pitchforks and other farm tools. Don Carlos himself had a very beautiful pistol, given to him by a friend in Paris. He had come to gain his crown or die, and the first man that got in front of him to yield him from the enemy would be shot with this pistol. He appeared to be so "dead game" that his friends begged him to take care of himself, for without him his cause would be lost.

Soon after crossing the border the Carlists met the government troops, and the first volley from their chassepots sent the invaders hurrying in all directions. Don Carlos flying before his own men and as completely disappearing from the world as if the earth had opened and swallowed him.

But he was never a coward. The next year he issued another manifesto and again appeared on the frontier. The Catalonian mountaineers joined him in great force. Arms were smuggled to them, and soon he had a formidable army. It was in this war that Marshal Campos developed as the first soldier of Spain, and it was principally due to his genius that Don Carlos failed to get on the crown of his father.

DOUGLASS MONUMENT.

To Be Erected at Rochester, N. Y., by the Negroes of America.

Monuments to public men, in the majority of cases, come into existence at a snail's pace. It often takes a dozen or more years to raise the funds and complete the memorial after no end of committee reports and appeals for aid. An exception to these cases of lonely remembrance of the men whose deeds on earth entitle them to more than a mere obituary notice in the newspapers is the proposed monument to the late Frederick Douglass.

The colored men of the country have joined hands in the erection of a suitable monument to the noted leader of their race, and no time has been wasted in carrying out the project. The monument, according to the representative in New York city of the contractors, is now nearly ready for shipment to Rochester, N. Y., which city was chosen as the most suitable place for the memorial because Mr. Douglass lived there for a quarter of a century, and his body now rests there. He made Rochester his home during the war, and from that city carried on his campaign of negro education and the abolition of slavery. He there published his first paper, the North Star, and then Frederick Douglass' Paper.

When the monument is dedicated, in a few months—the exact date is not yet known—the 14th instant—it will be the event a memorable one in the history of the colored race in this country. Efforts will be made to secure the attendance of national and state officials, and there is talk of requesting Chauncey M. Depew to deliver the chief oration.

The pedestal for the monument is now being cut at Westerly, R. I. It is of Westerly granite and 9 feet high. It is to be surmounted by a bronze statue of the colored Moses 8 feet high, making the total height of the memorial 17 feet. Around the pedestal, which will be circular in form, will be four bronze panels, each of which will bear a suitable inscription. Between each of the panels will be carved in the granite a design representing a palm. Mr. Douglass is shown in the act of delivering an address. His head is uncovered, and he is adding emphasis to his statements with his outstretched right hand. His left hand holds the manuscript from which he has just been reading.

REPUBLICAN GAVEL.

Made for the St. Louis Convention from a Log Handled by Lincoln.

The gavel which will be used to call the next republican national convention to order is now on exhibition at republican headquarters in the Great Northern hotel, Chicago. It was brought to Chicago by W. B. Bartels, of Carthage, Ill., by whom it was tendered, to Chairman Manley, of the national republican committee, for use at St. Louis, and accepted. It is made of wood taken from the log cabin built by Abraham Lincoln at New Salem, Ill., in 1832. The presentation speech will be made by Senator Berry, nephew of Jonathan Berry, who was Lincoln's partner when the log cabin was built.

The mounting which was done by W. H. Winn, of Chicago, is symbolic of the two sides of the currency question, the ends of the mallet being respectively mounted in gold and silver. On the silver plate is inscribed: "Made by W. B. Bartels, of Carthage, Ill., from a log of the cabin built by Abraham Lincoln at New Salem, Ill., 1832." The gold end of the mallet bears this inscription: "National Republican Convention, held at St. Louis, June 16, 1896, nominating ——— for President."

Can Live Without Stomachs.

A London medical journal says the ancient idea that we owe our digestion chiefly to the stomach is being discarded. Koenig having shown that this organ may be completely removed from the living animal. Other German physiologists suggest that the proper function of the stomach is to render harmless all substances injurious to the bowels, the real digestive organs.

Democratic State Convention.

The Democratic voters of New Jersey are requested to meet at such times and places as may be designated by their local committees to elect delegates to a State Convention, to be held at

Taylor's Opera House,

in the city of Trenton, on

THURSDAY, MAY 7th, 1896,

at 12 o'clock noon, for the purpose of selecting four (4) Senatorial and sixteen (16) District Delegates to the Democratic National Convention to be held to nominate candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States.

The basis of representation will be one delegate for each two hundred Democratic votes cast at the Gubernatorial election of 1895, and one for each fraction of the same over one hundred; but each ward and township shall be entitled to at least one delegate.

DEMOCRATIC STATE COMMITTEE.
E. F. G. Young, Chairman. Willard C. Fisk, Secretary.

The milkmen of Newark have made a combine to keep up prices. It won't do for them, however, to water their stock.

Friday next, the 24th inst., will be observed as Arbor Day in the public schools of Plainfield, as well as in all the public schools of New Jersey.

Last week's issue of the New Jersey Contractor was an anniversary edition, and consisted of a number of extra pages. The Contractor fills a peculiar journalistic field with success.

Gov. Griggs has signed Assemblyman Bullock's Bread Bill. The measure provides that bakers must specify the weight of the bread they sell and use nothing but pure material in its manufacture.

Hereafter applicants for membership in the Union Fire Department of Roselle will be required to show their ability to run a foot race. Each will be required to run a quarter of a mile, and pull his share on the ropes. What a lot of exempts there would be in the Plainfield department if this rule was adopted and enforced.

The new Chancery Clerk came into possession of the sum of $734,398.10 when he took office last month. This was money in the hands of the court, held for creditors of estates, corporations, partnerships, etc., in litigation, and it appears to be at the disposition of the Clerk to an extent rather surprising to the lay mind.—Newark Call.

There is a movement on foot among the merchants of West Front street looking to paving that thoroughfare with asaphalt from Somerset to Grove streets. The movement is headed by Edward White, the dry goods man. It is proposed that the cost shall be shared jointly by the abutting property owners, the city and the street railway company.

"Free silver is a good thing for the silver-mine owners, who can then sell the product of his mines," the Richmond State says. "But for the south, which has no silver mines, which is entering upon a new era, which wants development and capital, for the south to fly in the face of sound business precedents, in the face of the monetary policy of the world, is folly that means a fixed disadvantage to the entire section."

It is, indeed, surprising that Plainfield people have not given more liberal support to the art and loan exhibition of the Camera Club. Nothing more creditable has ever been arranged by local enterprise, and the evident slight attention that has been given it in the way of paying attendtendance is no incentive for the club to make it an annual affair, as was their intention.

One feature of the Elizabeth Mayoralty campaign was the plethora of affidavids and public letters seeking to influence voters, and now Daniel J. Burke has got into a peck of trouble over the publication of a letter over his signature, in which he sought to represent the Federation of Labor as being favorable to Mayor Rankin. He had no authority to do this, and his resignation as president of the Federation has been asked for.

And now the Newark woman has arose from a talking position and will endeavor to accomplish something in a practical way. The work will be through an improvement association, and her especial line of attack will be the streets. If the Newark women will obliterate the clouds of dust that envelop the trolley cars between Newark and Jersey City, and which passengers are compelled to eat, they will be doing something worthy of praise from suffering humanity.

The women of Plainfield have formed a town improvement association, elected officers and propose to take an active interest in the management and beautifying our neighboring city. In Summit, Montclair and New Brunswick the ladies have been of much help in making those towns attractive by looking after the many details which escape the average aldermanic eye. We believe that Morristown with its many beauties could be made more attractive were an organization of ladies formed whose only object would be to improve the town.—Morristown Chronicle.

Senator Sewell's phrase, objecting to "putting a collar on the delegates to St. Louis," is altogether delightfully amusing. It demonstrates that the numerous attacks upon the Senator for placing his collar on Jerseymen have made the phrase a convenient one to him. It is the invariable rule that speakers who are not especially gifted with eloquence are driven to the use of terms which are most familiar; and that many men dislike most the treatment to which they subject others with greatest cheerfulness. —Newark Call.

The Sixth Congresional District Convention of New Jersey, of which Plainfield is a member, assembled in Commonwealth Hall, East Orange, last evening. The convention was called to order at 8 o'lock by Major Carl Lentz, chairman of the Republican county committee. Robert W. Hawkesworth, of East Orange was chosen chairman. The following were chosen secretaries: Frank J. Swasey, Joseph Johnson and Dr. John Wilson. The delegates elected were: J. Franklin Fort, of East Orange, and Charles Bradley, of Newark.

The Borough Marshal of Roselle, John F. Crest, rides a bicycle, and it is doubtful if even then he will be able to attend to the duties laid down for him by the Borough Council at its last meeting. He is to be Chief of Police, acting road overseer, sidewalk inspector, sewer inspector, report defective electric lights and kill all unlicensed dogs running at large. He is to take instructions from the Mayor and chairmen of committees and make reports twice each week. For all of this he is to receive about $500 a year.

It is said that James T. Bergen, of Somerville, will probably be selected as chairman of the Democratic State Committee between this time and the holding of the State Convention, on May 7th, for the election of delegates to the National Convention at Chicago. At the last meeting of the State Committee the subject of a chairman caused a good deal of discusion. Edward F. C. Young, who is the present head of the committee, refused to serve longer in that capacity. He said he could not spare the time, but he was persuaded to remain as the nominal chairman until the convention meets.

It is said that the commissioners for the opening of Watchung avenue are at variance with each another, and this is the reason why they have arrived at no decision to report to the Council. The Press further understands that there is a strong probability of the commission being discharged at the next meeting of the Council on the ground that it is illegal in having I. W. Bushmore as a member. Mr. Bushmore is a member of the Y. M. C. A. which expects to receive damages from the opening of the avenue, and it is claimed that he is an interested party and unfit to act as one of the commissioners. As a matter of fact. it is claimed that the contention in the commission is over the amount of damages that the Y. M. C. A. shall receive, Mr. Bushmore insisting on a larger amount than the other two commissioners think is proper. The opening of this avenue is an improvement that the city demands, and there should be as little delay as possible in accomplishing it.

Seriously, there is not room for two hospitals in this city, and if the Muhlenberg Board of Governors are willing to make concessions which will admit homœopathists to practice in that institution, that should be accepted as the best settlement of the present apparent injustice to the practitioners and patrons of the homœopathic school. It is doubtful if Plainfield can properly support two hospitals, and a significant fact appertaining thereto is that out of the $1,700 or $1,800 subscribed by Plainfielders for the maintnance of the Muhlenberg hospital, only about $300 is contributed by persons of homœopathic belief. Of course, if a new hospital was started it would doubtless receive a more liberal support from the homœopathists than is at present given to the Muhlenberg hospital, because the prohibitive rule of the present institution relative to homœopathic practice is a species of "taxation without representation" that many people are dissatisfied to countenance by financial support. But the practibility of each school maintaining an institution for the exclusive practice of their own methods seems doubtful. The best expedient is for the Muhlenberg officials to make the desired concessions and admit the two schools to practice in the institution. "Better late than never" in this instance.

DUTY TO ENDEAVORERS.

REV. C. E. HERRING TALKS ON THE ENDEAVOR CONVENTION.

Plainfield Enjoys a Reputation for Doing Nobly in Time of Conventions and This Year We Must Not Diminish Our Zeal.

"Plainfield '96" was the very appropriate subject taken by Rev. C. E. Herring for the prelude to his sermon last Sunday at the First Presbyterian church. It was right in line with the coming State Christian Endeavor Convention, and the large audience present felt deeply the force of the speaker's words. Mr. Herring's remarks were as follows:

The year 1896 is a year of privilege for the Christian Endeavorers of Plainfield. It is not a year of ordinary, but extraordinary opportunity, such opportunity as may not be ours again for many years to come. The young people of the State have been invited as our guests. Other places eagerly sought the honor, but victory was ours, and Plainfield has promised through her representatives to prepare the way for Paterson '97. Let us make Plainfield '96 memorable in our annals. Not only a year of privilege, but a year of promise. The outlook indicates the best convention ever held in this State. The future is big with promise. Judging from the calibre of the speakers the convention will be the greatest Christian Endeavor Convention ever held in the State. It is a year for the exhibition of public spirit. Plainfield enjoys a reputation of doing nobly in the time of conventions, and at this time we must not diminish our zeal. Local pride must be preserved. The privilege and the promise should intensify our zeal. The convention will be a spiritual blessing and a financial blessing as well. Storekeepers will profit by this great gathering, and we therefore appeal for the most generous contributions to aid us in making this gathering the greatest ever held in this State. We want Plainfield to come up boldly and bravely to our financial help.

This must not be a year of indolence or indifference, bu push. We must not only have a plan but push the plan into execution. The prodigal planned to arise and then he arose. To make this convention a success we must push persistently from now on. It is the year of preparation. Plan, pride, push, will not carry us through without preparation of prayer. Let us pray that this may be a time long to be remembered. Plainfield conquered Christ, and then we can push on to Paterson. Plainfield '96 is the year of our privilege. Let us come up to the help of the Lord at once.

WORKED, AND YET HE BEGGED.

An Italian Labored Six Days and on the Seventh He Asked For Alms.

One of the Italians employed on the street railway extensions had a brilliant idea. He worked six days in the week and on Sunday he decided to try his luck at begging. He wanted a place to work his scheme where the houses were large and handsome and where the policemen were few and far between, and so he selected Central avenue and West Eighth street as a good place to start operations. He was having fair success, when he tried to get something at the house of F. H. Andrews, of Central avenue. Mr. Andrews notified the police over the telephone, and in a short time the enterprising native of sunny Italy felt the grip of the law in the shape of a policeman.

If everybody would telephone to the police immediately on the appearance of tramps and beggars the police would arrest them at once and soon rid the city of these troublesome visitors.

Real Estate Transfers.

The following transfers of property have been filed at the County Clerk's office from April 9th to 15th inclusive:

James G. S. Dey, Syracuse, N. Y., to Wm. A. Garrigues, Plainfield, lot Watchung avenue, $4,200; Watson Whittlesey et ux to Wm. Crook et ux, Scotch Settlement, $250; Wm. Crook et ux to Charles H. Hand, Plainfield, lot, Netherwood, $250; Charles H. Hand to Elizabeth M. Hand, Plainfield, lot, First street, $1; Central N. J. Land and Improvement Co. to Wm. Kelly, Plainfield, lot, Watchung avenue, $200; Miney Perrin, Plainfield, to Central R. R. Co., same place, $1; Plainfield Borough, $5,000; Alexander Sargeant et ux, Plainfield, to W. E. Taylor, lot, Old road to Bound Brook, $1; Mary C. Drake et ux, Plainfield, to W. E. Taylor, Hackensack lot, Columbia avenue, $1; Mary Andrew et ux, Plainfield, to J. Fred Macdonald, Hackensack lot, Columbia avenue, $7,500.

Removed to Boston.

The numerous friends of Harry Bartling, of Washington Park, will regret to learn of his departure to Boston, where he moved today with his family, having secured a lucrative position in that city. Mr. Bartling was one of the charter members of the Park Club and an earnest worker in the Holy Cross church. The borough's loss will be Boston's gain.

SOMETHING NEW.

How Some People Follow Every New Fad.

But the Majority Prefer That Experiments Should Be Tried Upon Somebody Else.

Some persons are always so anxious for something new that it is astonishing they still continue to eat plain bread and butter. They have always thrived well on beef, eggs, and potatoes, but somebody writes an article for a scientific journal, and attempts to show that these foods are neither as cheap nor as nutritious as some other kind of food. Therefore, some persons drop this standard diet and take up whatever some young scientist directs. We cannot understand this. When anything has been thoroughly tried and tested, and found in every way satisfactory, why do some people persist in running after some new-fangled notion? Take cod-liver oil for instance. It has been used for two hundred years with most marvellous success, and in a large variety of complaints. Its success has been no greater in the past than it is now. More skillful methods of preparing it, and emulsifying it (for it is generally acknowledged that it should always be given in the form of an emulsion), gives assurance that its future use is bound to be even far greater than ever.

And yet some people talk about a "substitute for cod-liver oil"! Substitute? Why, it is almost laughable. It certainly would be so, were the question not such a serious one. If there can be no substitute for cod-liver oil, for there is nothing at all like it known to medical science. When Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with the Hypophosphites has been used for over twenty years, and when thousands have testified to its curative properties, is it not strange that any one would think of trying an experiment with some new preparation of oil? Why don't you know you are safe in taking Scott's Emulsion, is it not too risky business to try something new? Do you think Scott's Emulsion could have stood these twenty years, and have a larger sale to-day than ever before, unless it had true, genuine merit. Where do you suppose these substitutes, which do not contain a particle of oil, will be twenty years from now? And where will all the fancy preparations, by various wines of cod-liver oil, be at that time? It is perfectly safe to predict that before they are half as old as Scott's Emulsion is, they will be forgotten. Do not allow yourselves to be experimented upon; be satisfied with the best; take advantage of twenty years of ever increasing prosperity.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor

SONS OF OLD ELI ENTERTAIN.

Successful Concert of the Yale Glee and Banjo Clubs.

Yale has the reputatation of making it warm for the other colleges in football, baseball and rowing and her Glee, Banjo and Mandolin clubs sustained her reputation Saturday evening. It was Plainfield, however, that was warm this time. A large and fashionable audience sat in the Casino and sweltered and enjoyed the delightful programme as best they could. The Glee Club was excellent. Their selections were all good and at times pleased the audience so much that they forgot the heat and heartily applauded the collegians. The instrumental clubs were also good and rendered their selections in a manner pleasing to the ear of the most critical of their listeners.

There was one surprise for the audience that completely drove away all thoughts of the high mercury for the time being. When the Glee Club came out for the first time in the second part, the familiar form of William N. Runyon was among them and he stepped to the front. Then came a burst of applause that reminded one of a Yale-Princeton foot-ball game, only the Yale yell was missing. After bowing repeatedly, he was allowed to sing. He first sang "Romeo" in his usual pleasing manner and as an encore that he drowned song about what the parrot said.

The audience was essentially a Yale one, for the Yale alumni and their families turned out in force and filled the Casino.

The concert was a success despite the very warm weather, financially as well as from a musical and social point of view.

In the afternoon, the committee in charge gave a reception and dance in the Casino in honor of the Yale men. It was a very enjoyable affair and was largely attended by the young people of this city and the borough. The guests were received by Mrs. L. N. Lovell, Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen, Mrs. Henry A. McGee, Mrs. C. F. Abbott and Mrs. Walter Stewart. The committee that arranged this pleasing social event consisted of William N. Runyon, Walter F. Murray and Arthur Lovell. The music was excellent and was furnished by P. Ludwig Opdis.

GEO. LISSIGNOLO DEAD.

WELL-KNOWN PLAINFIELDER SUCCUMBS TO THE INEVITABLE.

Mr. Lissignolo Had Lived in This City for Twenty Years Where He Was Universally Respected.—Died at His Summer Home.

George Lissignolo, for over twenty years a resident of Plainfield, died at his summer home in Belmar, N. J., early Tuesday.

Mr. Lissignolo is well-known among the older residents of this city, as a man of substantial character and of kindly disposition, and his friends were many. He was 73 years old and was in unusually rugged health until about two months ago, when a severe cold developed rheumatism. This in turn affected the heart, and his death was unlooked for, although his condition was known to be serious.

Mr. Lissignolo was born at Frankfort-on-the-Main in Germany, and he came to this country when a young boy. By honesty and a strict application to business he found the road to a successful business career in a short time. He became a foreign exchange broker in New York, and for a great many years did a large business and acquired considerable wealth. Later he met with reverses and lost most of his fortune, though he always had a paying business. He owned a beautiful home on East Front street. He was prominently identified with many local enterprises, 'and whatever was for Plainfield's progress and benefit he was always willing to assist by both his individual efforts and money.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Manhattan Bicycle Club, of New York, will hold a run to this city next Sunday. On June 20th a double century run is scheduled, and the course will be over New Jersey roads. There will be only one condition attached to it, namely, that all participants must cover the distance within twenty-four hours.

The bicycle craze has struck Hackensack squarely. Almost every man, woman and child owns a wheel, and the streets are alive with wheelmen at all hours. Saturday night as many as sixty-five new members were admitted to the Hackensack Wheelmen, making the total membership 215. The club is about to move into handsome and more spacious quarters on Main street.

There is one thing about the tire that should receive frequent inspection by the cyclist and that is its connection with the rim. The tire is very apt to work loose on the rim, especially after being kept in the house all winter, and it will then begin to "creep." This always ends, unless looked after at once, by the pulling or cutting off of the valve stem as the tire gradually creeps around the rim.

Syracuse seems to have the same trouble Plainfield did last year, for her correspondent to the American Wheelmen writes: "The wheelmen of the city ought to take steps to prevent the sprinkling of the streets just at the time the average wheelmen thinks of starting out for a spin. They are compelled to ride in about two inches of water and many accidents have been caused by the slippery condition of the pavement."

One of the most novel features of the coming century runs will undoubtedly be the racing division of the Twenty-second Regiment Cyclers' "hundred" to Patchogue and return on Sunday, May 3d. To the man in this division who first arrives in Patchogue (about fifty miles) a handsome gold record medal will be presented. It is expected that this innovation will result in some lively scorching. Several Plainfield young men are planning to go on the run but not with the racing division.

The racing team of the Jersey Wheel Company this year will consist of A. B Barnett, Jay Eaton and H. B. Mosher. They will not enter any road races, but contest in all the professional events in race meets in this part of the country. They will begin training as soon as the Crescent Oval is placed in good condition. Barnett is well known here, the reputation he made first as a Class A and then as a Class B man while riding for the Crescent Wheelmen having made him very popular among the Plainfield people. Eaton and Mosher are comparatively unknown here, but are both speedy riders.

The Holbrook ten-mile handicap road races, to be held on Saturday, May 10th, near Philadelphia, are attracting a good deal of attention from riders in both classes throughout this section of the country. Starbuck and Bartholomew, two of the professional riders who rode so well here in the night meets on the Crescent Oval last fall, intend to compete. Starbuck says that he is in much better condition than he was this time last year. He expects to start from scratch and win both the race and the time prize. The great event of the day will be the race between triplets.

The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company has received a '96 Crescent tandem and it has been placed in the rental department. It is a road wheel, weighing about thirty-four pounds and geared to 80. This tandem embodies several new features. The frame is somewhat different from the usual style, but the greatest difference is in the arrangement of the chains. Instead of the chain from the first large sprocket connecting with the second axle, it extends to the rear wheel passing about a small sprocket wheel on one side of it, while on the other side is a similar sprocket wheel about which passes the chain connecting with the second axle.

The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. will do their part in the formation of the Y. M. C. A. Cycling League, the plan for which was exclusively published in The Press sometime ago. A meeting will be held Friday evening for the purpose of reorganizing the bicycle section of the local Y. M. C. A. Of this meeting and the plans for the league, the Y. M. C. A. bulletin says: "It is intended to hold a number of runs during the season to the Y. M. C. A.'s in the surrounding cities at which places entertainment will be provided by the home club. In all probability clubs from several places will have the same destination on the same evening, thus attaching importance and guaranteeing a large number of participants to each run. All members interested in such runs are invited to meet at the Y. M. C. A. Friday evening at 9 o'clock."

The Punnett Companion Machine, the latest substitute for the tandem, is to be introduced to the New York public under circumstances that can hardly fail to attract general attention to it. No less a personage than Lillian Russell is to act in the office of agent of the wheel. She won't give up her old profession, of course, but will carry the wheel as a "side line." Miss Russell is to make the beautiful new machine famous a little ahead of time by showing it in the new opera in which she is to appear at the New York Casino during the coming summer. It is expected to appear in Plainfield also very shortly and will be represented here by the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company. Speaking of it the American Wheelman says: "The Companion is really a machine of great beauty. Its structural lines are artistic in the extreme, its white enamel gives the fine effect that no tint can impart, and although built for two, it is anything but cumbersome or difficult to manage.

The Children to Help.

The Woman's Township Improvement Association, of Cranford, held a meeting Saturday afternoon at Miss Day's, and at its invitation a large number of children were present and a children's Auxiliary was formed. The women have commenced the work of tidying up the village streets, the station grounds, and the neglected house lots, and the town promises to be one of the most attractive places on the line of the Central Railroad.

RACE EVENTS ARRANGED.

CRESCENT RACING BOARD DECIDE ON THE DECORATION DAY MEET.

Several Contests to Bring Out the Best Professional and Amateur Racing Talent—Many Valuable Prizes Offered.

The events and prizes for the Decoration Day meet of the Crescent Wheelmen were definitely selected at a meeting of the Racing Board of the Crescent Wheelmen held last night. George H. Cobb is the chairman of the board and Samuel P. T. Wilbur was elected secretary and Clarence E. Teal treasurer.

It was decided that the entrance fee for the professional races shall be $1 for each event and the amateur entrance fee shall be fifty cents. The track will be open for training from May 1st to October 1st, and a contract has been made with Captain William Hand to keep it in first class condition during that time.

The list of events and the prizes are as follows:

One mile novice, amateur; first prize, gold medal valued at $20; second prize, silver medal valued at $10; third prize, a bronze medal valued at $5.

Two-third mile scratch, amateur; three prizes, all diamonds valued respectively at $35, $20 and $10.

One mile, 2:30 class amateur; three prizes, all diamonds, valued respectively at $30, $20 and $10.

One mile novice race for club members only.

One-half mile professional, four prizes of gold coin consisting of $50, $25, $10 and $5.

One mile handicap, amateur; three prizes, all diamonds, valued respectively at $35, $20 and $10.

Two mile handicap, professional; four prizes of gold coin, consisting of $50, $25, $10 and $5.

DIRECT TRAINS TO NEWARK.

The Central Railroad Make Changes for the Benefit of Plainfielders.

Superintendent Peddle, of the Jersey Central, has often recognized the needs of Plainfield and The Daily Press is glad to announce that once more this fact is evident. Commencing May 1st two direct trains will be put into service between Plainfield and Newark. There will be one each way morning and evening and there will be no changing of cars. This is done to accommodate the Newark commuters and those who will reside at Mt. Park Inn on Johnston's drive. The exact time has not been decided upon yet, but the trains will be run to suit the largest number of people.

With these two trains there will be better mail facilities. This will also be welcome news to Plainfield people making it possible to send a letter to Newark and receive an answer the same day.

Credit should be given to French & Vail, proprietors of Mt. Park Inn, for their efforts to secure the above, and Mr. Peddle's quick response in giving what was desired. These trains will only run during the summer months.

Town Improvement Association.

The various committees of the Town Improvement Association are being organized as rapidly as possible. Until they are fully formed communications may be addressed to the president and membership dues may be forwarded at once to Mrs. Alex. Gilbert. The dues are as follows: Active members, (women) 50 cents; young people, (under 18), 10 cents; associate members, $1; sustaining, $10; life, $25. The work proposed appeals to all, and the hearty co-operation of all is earnestly solicited.

Cut by Eyeglasses.

Miss Miria Coles, of East Sixth street, is confined to her home through a most peculiar accident. She was returning from the Park Avenue Baptist church a few day ago, and in crossing the street, she slipped and fell. At the time she was wearing a pair of eyeglasses. In the fall the glasses broke and severely cut her face. Since then she has been unable to leave her room.

POULTRY SHOW COMING.

CACKLE OF THE ROOSTER WILL BE HEARD HERE NEXT DECEMBER.

J. L. Wiseman Guarantees the Rental Free—The Society Will Divide the Profits With the Muhlenberg Hospital.

A. A. Parker, W. J. Andrews and J. A. Lewis, the men composing the show committee of the Garden State Poultry and Pigeon Association, met J. L. Wiseman, of the Columbia Cycle Academy, in this city on Saturday and after a conference decided to hold the next exhibition in the Academy, December 2d, 3rd, 4th and 5th, 1896, every day and evening. Mr. Wiseman promised them that the money for the rental of the place would be raised in this city, and they in turn promised to give fifty per cent. of the net receipts to Muhlenberg Hospital. The committee thought that if everything was satisfactory the association would probably locate here permanently. It is expected that there will be nearly 1,000 exhibits.

All that is required now is that the people of Plainfield show a generous heart and give Mr. Wiseman a hand in raising the $225, which is necessary to bring the association here and which amount he has pledged. Mr. Wiseman has been authorized to collect subscriptions for the affair, which will no doubt surpass anything of the kind ever held in this State.

The exhibition will bring a very large number of people to this city and everybody will profit alike in this respect.

DEVIL MASK DANCERS.

A Weird Lot of East Indians Who Perform Curious Dances.

Bright-eyed Madras dancing girls, sacred silver dancers from Kandy, Cotta dwarf dancers, dancers from the Hydrabad Theatrical Company, and many more of an equally strange kind are with the Barnum & Bailey Greatest Show on Earth. One kind, however, called the devil mask dancers, are probably the most weird and uncanny ever seen in a civilized country. The troupe, with the others, perform in the exhibition called Illustrated Oriental India, and when executing their outlandish terpsichorean exhibition, cover their heads with enormously large devil's heads, which serves the purpose of completely hiding their faces from the gaze of the people. In the masks are cut holes through which the flashing eyes of the dancers shine brilliantly, giving a life-like appearance to the uncanny heads. The dance itself cannot be described, as it consists more of posing and gesticulating than anything else, and is only performed before the priests in the sacred temples, upon certain occasions. When executed, however, in the uncertain light shed by lamps the influence wrought upon the spectators is of a mysterious and absorbingly interesting character. All the dances, songs, and music of the curious people taking part in this entertainment are interesting because of their extreme novelty, while the trim and jaunty maidens are themselves subjects of surprise, most of them being handsome in face and figure. They will all be seen in the menageries, together with all the huts, temples, musical instruments, and other concomitants of the natives when the show comes here on May 6th, while such features as the horseless carriage, representations of living sovereigns, and the military of all nations will be seen in the street parade.

SOMERSET COUNTY COURT

THE SPRING TERM OPENED AT SOMERVILLE THIS MORNING.

Several Cases in Which North Plainfield People Are Interested—A Suit Against a Railroad Company For Damages.

The spring term of the Somerset county court was opened in Somerville Tuesday with Judges McGee and Bartine presiding. Judge McGee charged the grand jury with reference to the case of the three colored men who are held for causing the death of the colored man who died at Muhlenberg hospital some weeks ago from injuries received at their hands in Bound Brook on Christmas morning.

Licenses were granted to Henry Wedemeyer for the Arlington hotel and to Gustav Sutterlin for a bottling establishment in North Plainfield. The application for a license from a man by the name of O'Hara of Millstone was refused and the judge absolutely declined to even give him a hearing. A number of cases were put over the term.

Five cases are docketed for trial in the Supreme Court and ten in the Circuit Court. In the former Augustus McCullough has a suit against John G. Sutphen. Samuel T. Hoffman, who was struck by an engine at a crossing between Somerville and Raritan last winter while driving a milk wagon, brings suit for damages against the Central Railroad Company. Hillpot & Ayers, of Bound Brook, have brought suit against Lemuel E. Miller, for breach of contract. North Plainfield has cases between Spicer & Hubbard against Valentine Utzinger, and Pangborn against Teal. The Grand Jury will undoubtedly furnish a few cases, perhaps one of bigamy. Ex Marshal Van Horn is one of the court constables.

C. Frank French is a member of the grand jury from the borough. Marshals Wilson and Lines were subpœnaed before the grand jury in reference to the case brought against Marshal Barry.

Hurt His Leg.

While a gang of Italians were placing a rail into position on West Fourth street Saturday afternoon, in the construction of the street railroad, one end slipped and fell on the left leg of one of the Italians. A severe bruise of the skin resulted and the man was obliged to lay off for awhile.

Official Count at Elizabeth.

The official count of the Elizabeth election was finished Saturday. It gave John C. Rankin, Republican, for Mayor, 1,321 plurality over Frederick C. Marsh, Democrat. Patrick J. Ryan, Democrat, for Alderman-at-large, has a plurality of 238 over John D. Barr, Republican.

MY QUEEN.

When and how shall I earliest meet her?
What are the words she first will say?
By what name shall I learn to greet her?
I know not now, but I will be engraven
Some day hence as my loveliest hue.
Many a girl I have loved for a minute,
Worshiped many a face I have seen:
Ever and aye there was something in it,
Something that could not be her's, my queen.

I will not dream of her, tall and stately,
She that I love may be fairy lithe:
I will not say she must move sedately—
Whatever she does it will then be right.
She may be noble or proud, my lady,
Or that sweet calm that is just between:
And whenever she comes she will find me ready
To do her homage, my queen, my queen!

But she must be courteous, she must be holy
Pure in her spirit, this maiden I love;
Whether her birth be noble or lowly,
I care no more than the spirits above.
But I'll give my heart to my lady's keeping,
And ever her sternest on mine shall lean:
And the stars may fall, and the saints be weeping
Ere I cease to love her, my queen, my queen!

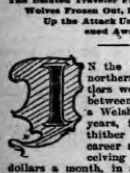
A BOY'S ADVENTURE.

Night in an Ice Fort Surrounded by Wolves.

The Belated Traveler Frozen In and the Wolves Frozen Out, But They Keep Up the Attack Until Frightened Away.



N the early days of northern Ohio, when settlers were few and far between, Frank Corwin, a Welsh lad of sixteen years, found his way thither and began his career as a laborer, receiving at first but two dollars a month, in addition to his board and home-made clothing. He possessed an intelligent, energetic mind in a sound and vigorous body, and had acquired in his native parish the elements of an education in both Welsh and English. The story of his life, outlined in a curious old diary containing the records of sixty-two years, and an entry of more than twenty-two thousand days, would constitute a history of the region, and some of its passages would read like high-wrought romance.

His first term of service was with a border farmer on the banks of a stream called Grand river, in Ashtabula county. It was rather crude farming, however, consisting mostly of felling trees, cutting wood and logs, burning brush and digging out stumps, the ax and pickax finding more use than ordinary farm implements. Seven miles down the river, and on the opposite bank, lived the nearest neighbor, among them a blacksmith, who, in his trade, served the whole country for twenty miles around. One especial part of his business was the repairing of axes, called in that day "jumping," or "upsetting."

In midwinter Frank's employer left a couple of axes with the blacksmith for repairs, the job to be done within a week. At this time the weather is what is termed "settled," with deep snow and good "slipping" along the few wildwood roads. But three or four days later there came a "January thaw." Rain and warmer vampers, then melted away much of the snow, the little river was swelled to a great torrent, breaking up the ice and carrying it down stream, and the roads became almost impassable. When the week was up the farmer needed the axes; it was not possible for the horse to travel, and, after waiting vainly a day or two for a turn in the weather, Frank was posted off on foot to obtain the needed implements. Delighting in the change and excitement of such a trip, the boy started before noon, expecting to reach home again ere dark, as it was not considered quite safe to journey far by night on account of the wolves.

Three miles below, at a narrow place in the river, was the bridge, consisting of three very long tree trunks reaching parallel from bank to bank and, covered with hewn planks. When Frank arrived here he found that this bridge had been swept away, but, pushing on down stream among the thickets, about half a mile below, he came upon an immense ice jam, stretching across the stream and piled many feet high. Upon this he at once resolved to make his way over to the road on the other side, for he was already wearied threading the underbrush. Grand river, which is a narrow but deep and violent stream, ran roaring and plunging beneath the masses of ice as if enraged at being so obstructed; but the lad picked his path in safety, and soon stood on the opposite bank. Away he hurried now to the blacksmith's, so as to complete his errand and return by this precarious crossing before dark. But the smith had neglected his duty, and Frank had to wait an hour or more for the axes. At length they were done, and, with one tied at each end of a strong cord, and this hung about his neck, he was off on the homeward trip. To aid in walking he procured from the thicket a stout cane. He had hardly gone two miles when the duskiness gathering in the woods denoted the nearness of night; yet, as the moon was riding high, he pushed on without fear.

But as he was skirting a windfall of trees, he came suddenly upon two or three wolves, apparently emerging from their daytime hiding place for a hunting expedition. Frank was considerably startled; but as they ran off in the woods, as if afraid of him, he took courage in the hope that they would not molest him. In a few minutes, however, they set up that dismal howl by which they summon their mates and enlarge their numbers; and Frank discovered by the sounds that they were following him cautiously at no great distance. Frequent responses were also heard from more distant points in the woods, and from across the river. By this time it was becoming quite dark, the moonlight penetrating here only along the roadway and in occasional patches among the trees on either side. Finally, just as he reached the ice-bridge, the howling became still, a sign that their numbers enabled them to venture in earnest on the pursuit. The species of wolves once so common in the central states, and making the early farmers so much trouble, were peculiar in this respect—they never attacked singly, and would trail the heels of a traveler, howling for recruits, and not daring to begin the attack until they had collected a force that insured success; then they became fierce and bold, and more to be dreaded than any other animal of the wilderness.

In the emergency he thought of the axes, and, taking them from his neck, cut the cord, and thrust his walking stick into one as a helve, resolved to defend himself to the last. At this instant he espied among the thick, upheaved ice cakes two great fragments leaning against each other in such a way as to form a roof with something like a small room underneath. Here he saw his only chance. Springing within, he used the ax to chip off other fragments with which to close up the entrance, and almost quicker than it can be told had thus constructed a sort of fort, which he believed would withstand the attack of the wolves. At nightfall the weather had become colder, and he knew that within a few minutes the damp pieces of ice would be firmly cemented together.

Hardly had he lifted the last piece to its place, when the pack came rushing about him, snapping and snarling, but at first not testing the strength of his entrenchment. When soon they began to spring against it and snap at the corners of the ice, the frost had done its work, and they could not loosen his hastily built wall. Through narrow crevices he could look out at them, and at one time counted sixteen grouped together in council. As the cold increased he had to keep in motion in order to avoid any extra exertion, action on his part increased the fierceness of the wolves. At times they would gather in a circle around him, and, after sniffing at him eagerly, set up a doleful howling, as if deploring the excellent supper they had lost.

Ere long one of them found an opening large enough to admit its head; but Frank was on the alert and gave it such a blow with an ax as to kill it. Soon another tried the same thing, and met with the same reception, withdrawing and whirling round several times and then dropping dead with a broken skull. One smaller than the rest attempted to enter, and, receiving the fatal blow, crawled, in its dying agony, completely into the inclosure, and lay dead at Frank's feet. For this he was not sorry, for his feet were bitterly cold, and now the warm carcass of the animal served to relieve them.

Toward morning, as the change of weather continued and the waters of the river began to diminish, there was suddenly a prodigious crack and crash of the ice-bridge, and the whole mass settled several inches. At this the wolves took alarm, and in an instant fled. Perhaps they might have returned had not the crackling of the ice repeated frequently. At length Frank became alarmed for his safety, lest the ice should break up in the current, and, bringing his ax to bear, soon burst his way out and fled to shore. But, not seeing the ice crumble, he ventured back to obtain the other ax, and then hastened home to his employer's. During the day he skinned the wolves, and within a fortnight pocketed the bounty money, amounting in all to about one hundred and fifty dollars. With the money in his pocket he now began to look around for a location for a large farm, which he long lived to cultivate and enjoy, and under the sod of which he found a quiet grave.—N. Y. Recorder.

Proceedings of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County.

[OFFICIAL.]

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, held on Thursday, April 2nd, 1896, at 2:30 o'clock p. m.

The following members were present:

Director Hubbard, Freeholders Badgley, Clark, Ehrlich, Haliday, Farrell, Hulskamper, Krause, Littell, Miller, Ogden, Swain, Tier, Woodruff.

Absent—Morrell, Woodruff.

The minutes of the previous meeting were on motion (reading of bills being omitted) approved as read.

COMMUNICATIONS, PETITIONS, ETC.

Freeholder Farrell presented the following:

Mr. John Farrell,

Hahnville, N. J.

Dear Sir: Union County deserves, and has received, great credit, not only within the State of New Jersey but, in fact, throughout the Eastern and Middle States, for the great progress it has made in the establishment of a good road system. It has become famous, and other counties, notably Middlesex have built and are building miles of stone road. They have just completed a road from the county line near Rahway through to Perth Amboy, and expect next season to continue it up to the new Dover road, to connect with the system of stone roads already made in Metuchen. The Metuchen system connects with our Plainfield macadam.

There is, as you know, a little piece about 3,000 feet in length on St. George's avenue from Lake avenue to the Six Roads, which if built would connect the systems of Middlesex and Union and make a continuous macadam road from Perth Amboy to Newark.

You will remember that last fall I called with you upon one of the Freeholders to discuss this matter, and at that time urged the necessity of the building of this small piece of road, that Middlesex county and myself were about to construct the road to Perth Amboy above referred to.

Now that road is built I want to call your attention to this matter to the attention of your Board of Freeholders. Meeting as I do so many people from Middlesex county, who complain that as soon as they strike the Union county line they strike mud, which is a fact. I hope your Board will appropriate money sufficient to build this piece of road.

St. George's avenue, formerly King George's Highway, has been for a hundred years or more the principal highway from Woodbridge or country to New York, and it seems too bad that a small part of that highway, less than 3,000 feet, now unimproved, should stand in the way of giving it its former prominence.

I would be very glad to appear myself, or with a delegation before your board and urge the necessity of the immediate improvement of this avenue.

Yours very truly,

Freeholder Roll moved that the communication be received and filed. Freeholder Farrel briefly addressed the Board with reference to the benefits which the macadamizing of the section of road in question would confer, and after some discussion as to funds available for the purpose, the motion of Freeholder Roll was adopted.

From W. R. Codington, County Attorney, April 2, 1896.

To the Honorable, the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J.

Gentlemen—I am informed by Hon. T. E. McCormick, that there is now on deposit at one of the banks in the city of Elizabeth, the sum of $500 to the credit of Henry Kessling, who is an inmate of the asylum for the insane of this State, and a charge upon the County of Union.

Mr. McCormick thinks some steps be taken for the recovery of the money from said bank for the purpose of applying the same toward the re-imbursement to the County of Union for monies paid on behalf of said lunatic, and for the purpose of indemnifying the county against further payments to the extent of said deposit.

(Signed.)

Yours Respectfully,

W. R. Codington.

On motion of Freeholder Clark, referred to the Lunacy Committee and County Attorney.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

From South Street Bridge Committee:

To the Honorable, the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, N. J.:

Gentlemen—The committee that was appointed in August last to examine the South street bridge in Elizabeth, and report as to the feasibility of building a new bridge, respectfully report that we have examined the present bridge, and believe that a new one should be built, and we recommend that the matter be referred to the new Board for action.

Signed—Fred Miller, J. Martin Roll, John A. Halliday, George W. Littell, W. H. Huiskamper, committee.

On motion of Freeholder Farrell, the report was received, and adopted without dissent.

By Freeholder Miller.

Resolved, That the County Collector be authorized to pay the sum of $8,840.40 for the maintenance of the patients in the New Jersey State Hospital, when the bill is properly audited.

Freeholder Littell moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was unanimously adopted.

The following bill was read:

March 31, 1896.

County of Union:

To Justus Morris, Dr. To and for damages done to me and my property by the backing up and flooding of water running through West Brook, caused by and on account of a certain bridge built by the Freeholders of said county over said brook on St. George's avenue, at or near Trinity, large farm, which he long lived to cultivate and enjoy, and under the sod of which he found a quiet grave.—N. Y. Recorder.

arches at bridge not being of a sufficient capacity to carry the water, $900.

On motion of Freeholder Krouse laid on the table.

NEW BUSINESS.

Freeholder Littell of the special committee appointed appointed for the purpose presented an agreement between William Howard, County Clerk, of the County of Union, of the first part, and the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, of the second part, relative to re-indexing the records of deeds and mortgages of said county, etc.

The said agreement was read in full, after which Freeholder Littell presented the following resolution, viz.:

Resolved, That the contract this day presented by William Howard, County Clerk of Union county, to this Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, for the re-indexing of deeds and mortgages of said county be accepted, and the Board do accept the same, and authorize the Director and Clerk to execute the same as the act and deed of said Board, and on roll call it was adopted unanimously.

STATE ENDEAVORERS PROGRAMME.

Speakers Who Will Address the Big Convention in October.

A meeting of the Christian Endeavor programme committee was held last week. The programme is completed as far as it is possible to make arrangements at this time. On the first evening, Wednesday, October 7th, there will be the annual address of the State President and a sermon by Rev. T. De Witt Talmdage, D. D. On Thursday morning the session will be devoted to evangelistic work. Reports will be given by the unions in which special work has been engaged in during the year. The last period will be given to an address by Rev. B. Fay Mills. Thursday afternoon will be devoted to missions. The address will be given by Rev. Courtlandt Meyers, D. D. The evening of Thursday will be given to good citizenship, addresses being given by His Excellency, John W. Griggs, Rev. Chas. H. Parkhurst and Hon. Theodore Roosevelt. On Friday morning representatives from the Theological seminaries of the State will give addresses, as also Rev. I. J. Lansing, D. D., of Boston, and Rev. F. E. Clark, D. D. Friday afternoon will be devoted to junior work and committee conferences. At the closing session on Friday evening there will be committee reports, the consecration sermon and consecration service led by Rev. B. Fay Mills. The committee make the announcement thus early in order that more than usual preparations may be made by the Endeavorers of the State to attend this convention. No effort will be spared by the local committee to make this the best convention New Jersey has ever had.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR McCLURE.

Charles Corwin is Discharged on a Writ of Habeas Corpus.

Charles Corwin, one of the principal witnesses in the divorce suit brought by Mrs. Annie Boate against her husband, who was arrested for perjury as he stepped from the cars at Asbury Park while on his way to attend the taking of testimony before a notary public there, was discharged from crstody upon the application of Counsellor W. K. McClure his attorney. The discharge was granted by the Court of Common Pleas of the County of Monmouth, upon the ground that the indictment was void and that perjury had been committed. The complete facts will appear in tomorrow's Daily Press.

SUNSHINE AND FESTIVAL

ONE OF SUMMER'S EVENTS HELD IN THE SEVENTH-DAY CHURCH.

The Cooling and Sweet Articles Met With a Ready Sale, and the Treasury Increased—Names of Those in Charge

The Spring Festival at the Seventh-Day Baptist church last Friday came most opportunely. The warm weather, although it kept many away, made those that did come only too anxious to partake of the cooling drinks and the frozen delicacies that were on sale. The Sunday-school room, in which the festival was held, was tastefully decorated with orange and white bunting The young women who assisted at the different tables were all charmingly gowned in white, and with their orange aprons added to the pretty effect.

In the centre of the room there was a triangle shaped table loaded with delicious home made candies, displayed in tempting array. Miss Louise Lewis and Miss Ida Spicer presided over this table.

Small articles are often the best, and so it was with the lemonade table, and the large bowl of that cooling drink had to stand the continual attacks that were made on it by the visitors. Miss Mabel Maxson presided over it.

The platform at one end of the room was transformed into a flower booth, and here potted plants and cut flowers were sold by Miss Louise Clawson and Miss Mineola Tomlinson, assisted by Miss Edith Titsworth.

Pretty decorations and charming aides attracted many to one of the little class rooms at the other end of the room, where they were persuaded to drink chocolate or tea and purchase dainty little tea cups and saucers. Mrs. Frank Clawson poured the tea while Mrs. D. E. Titsworth presided over the chocolate. Miss Bessie Randolph and Miss Mertie Randolph assisted at this booth.

In the next class room the visitor found an old German kitchen where milk, buttermilk and pot cheese were on sale. To make it more realistic, the buttermilk was kept in a churn. The room also contained a number of curious old relics of Germany, many dating back to 1778, and from then until 1804. A pewter set, kindly loaned by Mrs. Gotthell, was among the oldest and was examined with considerable interest. There were some old fashioned blue and white dishes shown from the light, instead of coming from the electric lights, was furnished by several candles stuck in candle sticks of "ye olden times." Miss Ida Randolph and Miss Ruth Maxson, attired like German peasants, were in charge of this quaint old stall.

Last, but not least, were the refreshment rooms where those that had been persuaded to drink the hot tea or chocolate, might cool off by enjoying the ice cream and cake that was served. The good things were prepared in the kitchen by Mrs. J. G. Tiller and Mrs. J. P. Allis, while the waiters were the Misses Grace Lewis, Myra Clark, Ernestine Smith, and Maud Mosher.

The festival was given by the Christian Endeavor Society and the committee from that society deserves lots of credit for the very pleasant evening they arranged so successfully. The committee consisted of Miss Elizabeth Allis, chairman, Mrs. Henry M. Maxson, Miss Lou Clawson. Miss Maud Mosher, and Dr. Frank Clawson.

THURSDAY'S FIRE.

It Was a Barn in the Rear of Compton's Bakery—Horse Burned to Death.

When flames were seen shooting upward Thursday apparently from the rear of the Compton building on West Front street, many thought that at last the Plainfield fire department would have a big conflagration to deal with.

The fire appeared to be in the very heart of the business section, but after the firemen had hurried through the dark recesses of Compton's alley and located the blaze, it proved to be in a shed belonging to S. C. Conklin, in the rear of the Compton building.

The alarm was sent in by Patrolman Cooney from box 12 at about 9:45 o'clock. The chemical engine was the first to reach the scene and had a stream on in short order. There was a corrugated iron roof to the shed, which confined the fire mostly within the building, and the stream from the chemical engine did excellent work, extinguishing most of the fire.

A stream from the hose completed the work. There was a horse belonging to Mr. Conklin kept in the shed, and an effort was made before the department arrived to lead him out, but he broke away and rushed back to the shed, while his would-be rescuers were driven back by the flames. When the firemen had finally made an entrance it was discovered that the horse had been smothered by the smoke. Although the shed was a frame one and was partially filled with hay, the progre s of the flames was stayed and most of the frame work saved.

At about 2:50 o'clock this morning, another alarm was sent in from the same box. The walls of the shed were filled with hay and straw. The fire had smouldered here until it burst out anew. This time the remains of the shed were given a thorough soaking. While this was being done, the stream was accidentally turned on C. K. Compton's candy factory near by. The water entered under the door and found its way into the stock room and part of the contents were destroyed by the unexpected flood. The damage to Mr. Compton's stock is estimated at between $100 and $200. Mr. Conklin's loss, including the horse, will not reach $100. Both were insured.

The fire is supposed to have been caused by rats, who gnawed the matches that were kept there.

THE WOMEN IN CHARGE.

A NOVEL ENTERTAINMENT AND SUPPER AT MONROE AVENUE CHAPEL.

Every Detail of the Affair Was Looked After by the Gentler Sex—Their Originality Made it an Enjoyable Event.

According to the good old custom, leap year is the time when the young women have a chance to try their hand, and as 1896 is that eventful year the young women of the Monroe Avenue chapel determined it was time to assert their rights.

The Young Men's Association has been giving most of the entertainments at the chapel and so the young women decided to give one that would far outshine any previous efforts. This charming leap year affair took place place last Friday under the title of a 'Conundrum Supper."

The supper was served in the long alcove at one side of the chapel. Tables were charmingly arranged here while the soft light from several handsome banquet lamps placed on the tables made the room appear all the more pleasing. The new hangings also added to the effect. When the guests had seated themselves, the fair waitresses presented them with a strange menu. Each article was named by a conundrum, and the patrons of this "Conundrum Supper" had to guess of what their repast should consist.

The names on the menu, with their translations, were as follows: A cold vowel, coffee; New England brains, baked beans; an unruly member, tongue; a chariot-ed in the ark, ham; tid bits from a fashionable watering place, Saratoga chips; a girl's name with an Ad, salad; what a woman most needs, bread; food of the spinning wheel, rolls; Boston's overthrow, tea; fruit of the vine, vinegar; tabby's party, catsup; spring's offering, water; celestial pabulum, angel cake; nuts without shells, doughnuts; ivory manipulators, lady fingers; what I do when I see a mouse, ice-cream; tropical dainties, oranges and bananas.

The kitchen, from which this wonderful meal was served, was presided over by the Misses Georgia Beekman, Florence Burt and Hattie King, while the waitresses were the Misses Grace King, Kittie Ackerman, Edith L. Burt, Mary Beekman, Lizzie Foster, Annie Stafford, Minnie Whitley and Bertha Wenzel.

The supper lasted from 6 to 8 o'clock, and then the assembled guests adjourned to the main room of the chapel where an entertainment was held. They were shown their seats by the charming ushers, while those that came only to the entertainment found young women at the door. The ushers were the Misses Berth Helena LaRue, Amy G. Burt, and Charlotte Beekman. The tickets were sold by the Misses Kate Agpar and May Pound, while the Misses Leora Wenzel and Charlotte Aldrich collected the tickets at the door.

The entertainment was a delightful one and, despite the August weather, everybody had a good time. Miss Florence Burt announced the different numbers on the programme, which were as follows: Overture, "Golden Sceptre," Schubert Orchestra; vocal solo, "Past and Future," Miss Jessie Haynes; recitation, Miss Addie Parker Jackson; piano solo, Miss Charlotte Aldrich; waltz, "Mandolin Serenade," Schubert Orchestra; cornet solo, "In Happy Moments," Mrs. J. D. Anderson; recitation, Miss Jackson; piano trio, "Faust," Mrs. J. H. Buckley, and the Misses Nelson and Day; vocal solo, Miss Jessie Haynes; march, "Broadway," Schubert Orchestra.

Miss Jackson's selections were especially enjoyed; they were all new and her delightful manner of giving them added much to their excellence. Her description of a fishing party of young ladies kept the audience shouting with laughter while the story of how little Frantz won the violin was full of pathos. The Schubert Orchestra of Dunellen and New Market, led by Mrs. J. H. Buckley, was very good, while all the other selections were rendered in an excellent manner.

After the programme had been concluded, there was another rush for the refreshment rooms and the remaining good things speedily disappeared.

Too much credit cannot be given to the committee of young women who so successfully planned and carried out this charming affair. The committee consisted of Miss Florence Burt, chairman, and the Misses Leora Wenzel, Georgia Beekman, Hattie King and Charlotte Aldrich.

ONCE MATRON, NOW PRISONER.

Mrs. Cahill Sent to the Elizabeth Jail for Sixty Days for Intoxication.

Several years ago Sylvester Cahill, Jr., was Warden of the Union County Jail and his young wife was Matron. Through illness she fell into the habit of using stimulants and this has since proved her ruin. Yesterday morning she was found in the grounds of the New Jersey Jockey Club at Elizabeth lying helplessly intoxicated. She was arrested and sent to the jail where she was formerly matron.

IMMIGRANTS SHOULD BE WELCOME.

A Writer Believes That the Worthy Foreigner Has a Right Here.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—It was with much interest that I read the letter in your issue of Wednesday last, headed "Protection Not Revenue," but while I agree with the writer in his views regarding a revenue tariff I must take exception to the remarks he makes concerning immigration. I will not go into the subject of the desirability of immigration at length, not wishing to take up your valuable space, but it seems to me that the writer of the letter referred to must be ignorant of the immigration laws and the manner of their enforcement when he makes a statement to the effect that we admit the beggars and tramps from all the rest of the world. Perhaps he is not aware that every immigrant is carefully examined by the United States immigration authorities before being permitted to land, and that all those who cannot clearly show their right under the laws passed by Congress and the regulations issued by the Treasury Department to enter are detained and must appear before a board of special inquiry, which orders every immigrant to be returned who has not sufficient money to satisfy the authorities that he will not become a public charge, or, failing in this cannot produce relatives or friends who will give satisfactory assurances that he will be cared for. I will not proceed further, but believe that the slight description given of the mode of treating arriving foreigners shows that there is a substantial bar to the admission of undesirables who can be called undesirable, and that the gates are not thrown open, as it seems to be implied in the letter in question, to all who desire to come here. Nor do I think that any party will ever be condemned for a policy which permits the honest and industrious of all nations to enter this Republic and add to its strength and resources.

I would merely add that I hardly think that Protection vs. Tariff Reform is the issue of the hour. I believe it is the opinion of impartial observers that the verdict has been decisively given in favor of tariff reform, and that whatever defeats the Democratic party has met with have been due to neglect to enact a genuine tariff reform law. I trust that the writer of the letter I have mentioned, in a later communication will touch on the subject of sound money, which in importance far outweighs the question of the tariff, and will lend his influence towards the election of delegates from Plainfield to the Democratic Convention shortly to be held who will be absolutely opposed to the free coinage of silver and who will work for a candidate and platform declaring for the maintenance of the present gold standard of value. PROMISED AND WERE LET OFF.

Eight Youngsters Arrested for Malicious Mischief at Netherwood.

For some time the police have been looking for a gang of boys that have been playing havoc in the barns of the Hotel Netherwood. Windows and sashes have been smashed and someone deliberately removed the panes of glass from several of the windows with a knife. Last Sunday, Bounds man Fredrickson saw a number of boys about the barn and investigated. Some were throwing stones at the barn and several were trying to pull the shingles off the roof. When the boys saw the officer, they fled, but the officer finally learned who they were and they were arrested.

This morning eight of them, Doty, Stevens, Andy Stanford, Fred Ammon, Fred Fleming, Frank Drakes, Charles Miller, Harry Drake and a colored boy named William Parsons, were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza. Several of them, especially the colored lad, did not enjoy their position and promised to "never do so no more," so the Judge severely reprimanded them and suspended sentence.

TOOK THE NEW, LEFT THE OLD.

Liberty Given to a Man Who Was Thought to be Honest, But Was Not.

Jesse Eckart, of Brooklyn, who has been stopping for the past week with Mr. and Mrs. George Kirch, of Somerset street, played a very clever trick on the latter Tuesday afternoon. He very politely took a new black suit of clothes, a derby hat and a pair of shoes belonging to Mr. Kirch's son, Philip, and left, as it is supposed, for his home. At the time there was no one at home but Miss Marguerite Kirch, as her father had gone to Bound Brook.

Eckart, during the winter, was employed by Mr. Kirch as a driver, and as the latter had secured a more experienced man Eckart was laid off sometime ago, but he returned about a week and stopped with Mr. Kirch who allowed him to go about the house and do as he pleased and little did he expect that he was dishonest.

Mr. Kirch has written to Eckart's mother telling her that unless her son returns the stolen goods by Friday he will have a warrant issued for his arrest. The man wore the new clothes and left his old suit behind.

SHE DIDN'T WANT HIM.

BUT THE ITALIAN HUSBAND PERSISTED AND WAS ARRESTED.

The Wife Did All the Work and Earned the Money and the Husband Was Anxious to Have the Benefits Thereof.

Two natives of sunny Italy were the principal characters in a case in police court on Saturday. It was a family affair. The husband was the offender. His name was Dominick Vetrillo and his home has been in "Paradise Alley," known on the city map as Cottage place. Neither the husband nor the wife were particularly efficient in the art of speaking English, so Miss Marguiteuer, a friend of the family, was sworn in as interpreter. Vetrillo was charged with being disorderly at the home of his wife, and pleaded not guilty. They have been living apart for sometime and day before yesterday the husband went to the house where his wife was staying.

Through the interpreter, Mrs. Vetrillo said that she didn't want her husband in the house, but that he persisted in coming in to do some cooking. He does not support her and she takes care of herself and children by taking in washing. He had often beaten her, so she said, and about three months ago gave her a black eye. Mrs. Vetrillo was a quiet woman and it was apparent that all she wanted was to be let alone.

The prisoner was an excitable little man and could scarcely sit still while the trial was going on. His version was that he just wanted to go in the house to cook his supper, but she would not allow him to stay, and told him to go to his own house and cook on his own stove. Then the husband had become excited and done those things which he ought not to have done.

The judge decided that Vetrillo was guilty and ordered him to pay a fine of $10 or go to jail for thirty days.

Vetrillo had previously told the judge that he wanted to go to jail. The prospect was not quite as alluring as it had been and been, and the excited Italian, whose command of English had suddenly come back, begged with tears running down his cheeks that he be allowed to pay the fine at the rate of $2 a week. Meanwhile Mrs. Vetrillo quietly left the courtroom and returned to her washing.

BIG FIRE AT CRANFORD.

Factory of the Law Battery Company Burned to the Ground.

The factory of the Law Battery Company, one of the principal industries of Cranford, was totally destroyed by fire at an early hour on Saturday. It was at 11:50 o'clock last night when the engineer at the watering tank of the Central Railroad at Cranford, which is near the factory, noticed a flickering flame leaping up alongside of the factory. He quickly gave the alarm and the hose and hook and ladder companies responded with as much alacrity as volunteer firemen usually do. Before they could get to the conflagration, however, the flames had got too much headway, and with their limited facilities for fire-fighting they were unable to save the factory or an adjoining residence. They did succeed, though, in saving several other residences and a lumber yard nearby. The firemen did not stop their work until 3 o'clock this morning.

The factory was a story-and-a-half frame building and was filled with valuable machinery. Between twenty-five and thirty men were employed there in the manufacture of medical appliances. The factory was owned by New York capitalists, and was insured. The occupants of the dwelling house that was burned had their household goods. The origin of the fire is thought to have been of an incendiary nature. The loss is estimated at between $10,000 and $12,000.

WILLING TO DIVIDE.

The Poultry Show People Anxious to Come to Plainfield in December.

President Parker, of the Garden State Poultry Association, was in town on Tuesday and met Mr. Wiseman of the Columbia Cycle Academy. The question of the association bringing their exhibit to Plainfield was thoroughly discussed, and while Mr. Parker's visit was not official, he stated that if the citizens of Plainfield would raise the rent for the week for the exhibit he thought the association would come here and be willing to divide the proceeds with the hospital. The proposition has been placed before the Board of Directors of the hospital and at their meeting on Friday, April 24th, they will discuss the same.

Mr. Parker also said that the association was looking for a central place to locate permanently and it might be that Plainfield would be chosen.

Milkmen in a Combine.

Seventy-five milkmen of Essex and Union counties have organized for mutual protection. They complain that a concern in Newark to cut rates and supply milk at six cents a quart, was recently formed, two cents less than the dairymen have been selling it. This concern sells wholesale and retail. A meeting will be held at Irvington next week to decide upon action.

MINING CAMP SKETCHES.

How Obscure Localities Are Changed Into Cities.

The Process of Evolution Is the Same in Every Instance—Conditions Peculiar to the Mining Districts of America.

[Special Denver (Col.) Letter.]

The evolution of a mining camp is perhaps one of the strangest and most interesting features of western life. Towns spring up quickly and in the least expected places, like the usual castle in the wilderness to accommodate belated lovers—in fiction. In many instances these towns are as quickly deserted, but not at the command of any lady in white appearing in her ghostly garments. There is not a better object lesson than a deserted mining town—the empty stores and the abandoned mines tell the story of lost fortunes and innumerable hardships and privations in the pursuit of wealth. A site tells of blasted hopes and ruined lives. There are in the west hundreds of deserted towns that were once prosperous. When the mines were worked out, the people stampeded as if from a plague, and good frame residences and hotels business houses were left tenantless to decay.

Life in a mining camp or town is more varied and exciting than elsewhere. A mining town of 20,000 population, which is styled a city in the east, is referred to as a camp. The population is also more varied, being composed of people of every grade in life—especially of the immoral and criminal class. No sooner does a wandering prospector discover a rich mine than others flock to his "diggings" like sheep in a panic.

Prospecting is generally done on government land, for, when a mine is located, the locator can get title to it and the government price for mineral land, whereas, if gold is discovered on private land, the prospector must pay the owner his own price, or get off the "ranch." In the Rocky mountain regions nearly all ranches have at least a prospector on a small scale. When his crops are "laid by" and he has nothing else to do, he goes out and digs for gold. Many of them make "spending money" by this extra work. One out of a dozen strikes it rich," when he throws aside his farming implements, stakes off a number of claims for himself and sells others to the incoming tide of prospectors. A town is then staked off, and, of course, is named for the lucky rancher. The lots at claims are each sold at from $50 to $200 or more, and the plodding rancher is now wealthy; is perhaps elected mayor, and becomes the honorable Mr. Colonel. Within a few weeks the ranch is a lively camp, dotted with hundreds of tents and board houses called "shacks," and for three or four miles in each direction shafts are being sunk for gold. In the center of the district is the town, or "acmp," so-called because no one lives there—they only are camping, and no one intends to remain—after he has made the fortune he expects to get.

There are numerous instances in Colorado, and several during the present boom, where ranches have been turned into populous camps of several thousand people, with electric lights, opera houses, and exhibiting houses, and all within a few weeks. Yet, in the greater number of instances, the towns are the outgrowth of mines located by prospectors on government lands. In each case, however, the development of the town is by the same process, excepting perhaps that the rancher becomes rich by selling his lands and organizing a town, while the prospector is frequently swindled out of his location by adverse claimants, who allege prior discovery, and often prove it by perjured testimony of confederates.

While working a claim the prospector lives in a "dug-out"—a hole in the ground, curbed as a cistern, the roof being on a level with the earth through which is a small door. When he strikes a bonanza, and the crowd flocks in, a mass meeting is called, a mining district is formed and a town staked off. The first public improvement decided upon is a saloon; next a hotel is considered; a mayor is elected, and the man with the greatest reputation as a killer is elected as "city marshal." It is soon seen that his office is not a sinecure. In a few days the usual country store is opened, then a blacksmith shop, and, of course, several gambling dens and the usual dance hall. In the first stages of the camp's life the houses are tents.

As the camp gives indications of solidity "shacks" are put up, and, with increased prosperity and firmness, frame dwellings of a more substantial nature, and even brick houses, are constructed. Before it reaches this metropolitan stage, however, the camp passes through a purifying ordeal of vigilance committees and a thinning out of the undesirables, male and female. When the camp is young and its existence uncertain, the rough element rules, though not always in the majority. As it becomes more prosperous, property becomes more insecure by the numerous robberies of the tough element. A few aggravated murders or incendiary fires lead to the formation of a vigilance committee and the purifying process begins. This is the history of every mining camp in the west of any considerable importance, and the history of others also which are now inhabited only by the graves of the outlaws who were hanged by vigilantes.

When a district is very prosperous there is the usual town site rivalry. Each "gulch" or mountain wants a town and a separate individuality. So that within a district of 12 miles square, Cripple Creek, for example, there are as many towns. Then they begin to fight, each trying to incorporate the other, and frequently there is bloodshed. The town site fights are instigated by real estate boomers, politicians who want office and lawyers who want litigation. The real business men (mine owners) do not want a town, and would wipe out all of the saloons and other resorts of that nature.

Adventuresses, elocutionists, "French teachers," and even teachers of dancing flock to the camps and do a land-office business in teaching deportment to the new rich, who abandon their old ways and attempt to lead a life for which they are unfitted, and cannot be acquired. The ranchman or the prospector who has developed into a millionaire at once moves into the city. He is too good to be a farmer, and as he generally has a family he moves the entire brood into the city and employs a corps of teachers to fit them for society. Their old associates are tabooed, and after awhile the west becomes too small, and they flock to New York or to Europe—and are laughed at.

THE FIRST SALOON.

Being located without reference to commercial advantages, the life of the average mining camp is short. Only when immensely rich mines are discovered does the camp grow into a city and bring commerce and railroads to it, instead of going to them. While 5,000 or 10,000 miners are at work, each receiving three dollars a day, the city is lively—the gambling houses, saloons and low resorts getting the larger portion of the large pay-day. Many of the upper stratum who buy worthless mines from sharpers, and the transient element that flock in and drop out, but not until after spending no trifling sum, for living is high, both as to altitude and price. Business is much overdone in a mining camp than elsewhere.

Everyone thinks that he can easily pick up a fortune where there is so much gold, and nearly everyone is disappointed. The work is uncertain, not so much from the rough element as from sickness and whisky. The high altitude is a region of perpetual winter, snow and rain. The life is naturally an exciting one, and whether prosperous or the reverse whisky is taken as a stimulant or to quiet the nerves, which are usually at fever heat.

Summing up all this, from a financial standpoint, it is doubtful whether mining is profitable, generally speaking. When one man becomes a millionaire several millions become impoverished. There is more money lost at mining than is gained, taking all of the camps as a whole. The world hears only of the very rich camps—like Cripple Creek, Leadville and the now almost abandoned Virginia City. These camps produced millions upon millions, and evolved day laborers, saloon keepers, boarding-house keepers and washerwomen into millionaires, United States senators and would-be social leaders. But the world does not hear of the other mining camps throughout the west where fortunes are lost in delving for hidden wealth. As in the trades and professions, the successful are heard of—the millions of plodders are unknown.

CONSTANTLY IN A TREMOR

4 New York Street Has a Curious Case of the Shivers.

A section of Twenty-sixth street, New York, daily enjoys sensations similar to those caused by a constant succession of earthquake shocks. Every thing in the vicinity trembles as if suffering from a mild attack of the ague. It is really, says the New York Journal, perpetual motion. There is a clubhouse in this section, right in the center of the trembling district. A recent visitor, one who had not been there before, noticed that objects on the mantel or elsewhere always moved slightly, and that he himself felt a strange vibration.

The friend with whom he was dining laughed at his uneasiness. "It's always that way here," he said. "It's only a little shake, perhaps the hundredth part of an inch, but it's perpetual. Some day I expect the trembling will shake to pieces all at once, just like the 'wonderful one-horse shay.' The cause? Oh, it's that electric light plant opposite. Engines and dynamos running all the time. The steam power is exerted to blow the block to Jericho; enough electricity generated to light a square mile brilliantly every night. All the houses around here shake. I remember when this block was a most exclusive residential neighborhood. Now at least half of it—the half that shakes most—is given over to small shops and cheap theatrical boarding-houses. There's one pleasanter aspect, however, to this vibration."

Then the clubman performed a pleasing experiment. He requested the caterer to bring him a glass of milk, some rum, ice and sugar. These he blended, after which he placed the glass upon the window ledge on three nothings," said the clubman, "it will be a perfect milk shake."

It was no exaggeration. The vibration, though annoying, at least supplied one want.

ELOPERS STOPPED.

Bride's Father Didn't Want the Expense of a Town Trip.

Riding along a West Virginia road I was interested in seeing a young man and young woman on horseback coming down the road on a gallop. Not far behind them was an old man giving chase. By cutting through the woods at one place he succeeded in heading them off and stopping them. As of the bridle just as I drove up, said C. E. Wardleigh to a Washington Star reporter.

"Whar yo' all goin'?" he demanded.

"You can't stop us now but we'll get married," answered the young man, defiantly.

"I hain't tryin' ter stop yo' all. Et yo' is boun' ter marry yer kin, but I wanted a talk. Yo' all's gwine ter town. How long yo' spose yo'll stay?"

"Two or three days," answered the groom.

"At $3 a day," said the father, "besides hoss feed an' hoss hire, for I'll make yo' pay for them hosses, shore. Then let me tell yo' suthin'. I wanted Lindy ter marry Sam, fer I owed him $3 an' he wouldn't say nothin' 'bout it if she'd her 'im. Parson Long owes me an' he'll marry yer fer nothin'; that won't be no board bill an' hoss feed. It would cost $20 ter make the feller say give me $10 so I kin pay Sam an' hev suthin' fer wha's an' t'ar of the hosses, an' we kin go home an' hev a bigger time than at 'own."

The proposition was accepted, the money paid, and the three turned their horses' heads homeward.

NO TASTE FOR FLESH.

How the Study of Animal Life Affected One Naturalist.

A man who has made a careful study of the habits of animals and birds, and who firmly believes that birds think and are controlled by brain action in a great measure—about, if not quite as much as human beings—has long had the "overrated instinct"—told a few nights ago of the odd effect natural history had on him.

"Do you know," said he, "that since I learned that birds and animals think, I have had a sort of spleen against flesh? When I eat a partridge I think of the bird's wiles used in its endeavors to escape the hunter's merciless shot. I feel the same about ducks, geese, turkeys, deer and beeves, and all other flesh, but not fish. I have the dread, or feeling, that I am eating a rational being. I think that if vegetarianism ever becomes universal, it will be when we understand the thoughts of birds and mammals and are able to converse with them. We are just now entering on a wonderful field of research. We have found the door to real natural history knowledge, and we are now groping for the keyhole."

An Indian Legend.

The red men of the west have many curious legends concerning nature's marvels; none more weird than that concerning Rock lake, Washington. Since time out of memory the Indians of that section have believed the lake to be the abode of a sea monster, which never grows old, and whose chief diet is Indian flesh. According to the legend, no Indian ever entered its waters and returned alive, no matter how strong a swimmer he was or how understand the thoughts of birds and mammals and are able to converse with them. We are just now entering on a wonderful field of research. We have found the door to real natural history knowledge, and we are now groping for the keyhole."

Dusky Politeness.

A story of the colored man's fondness for good words is furnished by the New York Tribune. It is well up to date, and is about a venerable Philadelphia butler:

He was helping a visitor to put on her walking jacket the other day, and after having succeeding to push in her rebellious lit sleeves, he said, in his most respectful manner:

"Please you will hab de goodness to allow me to suppress dem puffs, madam."

A GREAT WORK.

William D. Murray Tells of What the Y. M. C. A. is Doing for Men.

President Murray spoke yesterday at the young men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. building on "The World Wide Work of the Young Men's Christian Association." The lines of work of which he particularly spoke were those carried on among the railroad and college men of the country. In speaking of the former, he referred to the magnificent structure to be erected for the use of the 3,700 railroad men who centre at St. Louis. The same architect who planned the finest railroad station in the world for the Terminal Company at that point has designed the building for the Y. M. C. A. at a cost of $75,000. The Terminal Company has leased to the St. Louis Y. M. C. A. a piece of land immediately adjoining and at the rear of the station that cost the company $35,000. The rental is to be one dollar per year on demand.

The expense of maintaining this building will be met by the railroad companies, while the management will be entirely under control of the Y. M. C. A.

The speaker gave a most encouraging account of the college work and in speaking of the work among young men in foreign lands told of a subscription of $20,000 which was secured for one of the Y. M. C. A. buildings in India by Mr. McConaughy, who spoke before the Y. M. C. A. of this city, last November.

In closing, Mr. Murray spoke of the work of one of the Y. M. C. A. Training Schools which is located at Springfield, Mass.

Music was furnished by members of Prof. Conde's Young Men's Symphony orchestra.

THEATRICAL.

There is an unquestionable healthier demand for stage entertainment, and the public appears to grow even more particular about the quality of the offerings. There promises in "For Fair Virginia," which will engage the boards of Music Hall next Friday, a very superior dramatic treat. The play owes its creation to Mr. Russ Whytal, a young author of great promise whose work secured a remarkably encouraging hearing at the Fifth Avenue Theatre last season. "For Fair Virginia" has certainly received more than ordinary attention in all the cities where it has been presented this season, and the verdict everywhere must be a source of deep gratification to one who has secured a firm position to his initial work. The play while belonging to no one of the familiar types of Southern romances, deals with the South during the critical period in an entirely original and delightfully interesting manner. Mr. and Mrs. Whytal and an exceptionally competent company of players are engaged in the production which it is assured will show some very beautiful scenic ideas.

A Talk by the Mayor.

About twenty-two members of the First Baptist Church Boys' Brigade met in regular session Saturday evening in the lecture room of the church, and after going through their drill in an excellent manner they listened with a great deal of interest to an admirable address by Mayor Gilbert. He spoke concerning the essential qualities necessary toward the making of a good soldier of discipline, and especially of the Christian side of the Boys' Brigade which, he said, was a potent factor in the organization. He gave many valuable points and suggestions which will be of great benefit to the members, who enjoyed the talk very much. The brigade is making excellent progress and its rapid growth and advancement is cause for much encouragement on the part of those in charge.

A Bicycle Stolen.

A mean, contemptible theft of a bicycle was committed Saturday evening about 7:15 in front of Marion Ackerman's home on Crescent avenue. Owen Fleming, of Park avenue, in company with several companions, had left their wheels in front of the above residence and they were only absent a few minutes. When they returned Fleming's wheel was gone. It was an 1895 Crescent No. 1 and was the only one with a lighted lamp. The young man's father is so indignant about the matter that he says if he could capture the person he would give him the full penalty. The matter has been placed in the hands of the police.

READY TO TAKE $5,000,000.

Mr. Schroder Believes He is the Heir to a Famous Opera Singer's Estate.

Henry Schroeder is the village barber in the little borough of South River, six miles from New Brunswick. Before he was the barber he was the Postmaster and he lost the latter for nothing worse than offensive partisanship. Now Mr. Schroeder has determined to give up his shop and return to Germany to take possession of a fortune to which he believes he is the heir. Some time ago he saw an advertisement in a German paper for heirs to the fortune of Terese Titiens, the famous singer. He hears that she left an estare now valued at $5,000,000, all of which he thinks he is entitled to. Titiens sang in this country in 1875. She died, Mr.Schroeder learns, in 1877.

She left the greater part of her wealth to her nephew, Peter Titiens, or Titjens, but the will was contested, and then legal controversy which followed dragged along for many years. Meanwhile the nephew died. Schroeder's mother was a first cousin of the singer. Having gathered together what proofs he had, he sent them to the attorney's mentioned in the advertisement, and a few days ago he received news that his claim was the best that had been discovered to the estate, and that it would be to his advantage to come to Hamburg. Mr. Schroeder is about fifty five years old. He has a family.

SPRINKLING MAY COST MORE.

A Correspondent Says Under New Ordinance Street Sprinkling Will be Double.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—

In two letters published in last Sunday's Sun, two points of view are represented on the street sprinkling question in New York. The first is a complaint from a wheelman because of the sprinkling of a certain street, paved with asphalt, on which he happened to slip up while riding his wheel. He modestly requests The Sun to use its great influence toward having the sprinkling stopped on this particular street, to which the editor replies as follows: "This makes us ponder. When will the wheelmen so overawe the land that the watering of streets will have to be stopped for their benefit? We suggest to our correspondent to permit the dust to be laid and to ride more carefully." The second letter is a "kick" in the opposite direction and the writer says in effect that Col. Waring's "white angels" seem to be trying to keep the air filled with germ-ladened dust and filth in their efforts to keep the streets clean; all because they do not have the streets sprinkled enough, and compared the business to a sort of Japanese game,the principle of which is to keep the dust always in the air. The foregoing is apropos at this time, as our city fathers are considering the adoption of an ordinance which, if passed, will enforce the use of the wagon used in New York, but with a valve so much smaller that within thirty minutes after a dirt or macadamized road has been sprinkled, the dust will fly again. What will do the work on a block or asphalt pavement will not answer for our streets.

I learn on good authority that the agent for the wagon specified in the proposed ordinance says that it will be necessary to sprinke the surface five times, where two times should suffice. Thus causing two and one-half times the work. Have you any idea, Mr. Editor, that the people of this city want to pay double the price they are now paying for street sprinkling.

CORDAGE PLANT TO BE SOLD.

Valued at Nearly a Million Dollars—May Be Rebuilt.

The plant of the United States Cordage Company, of Elizabeth valued at nearly a million dollars, will be sold at the Court House by Sheriff Kyte to satisfy a mortgage held by the United States Trust Company, of New York, May 20th.

The tracts of land included in the big mortgage are located in various parts of Elizabeth, the largest being the site on which the cordage works once stood. It has a large water frontage. It is said that after the sale the works will be rebuilt and rope making resumed. The plans are now out.

How New Brunswick Views It.

Over in Plainfield they have an excellent institution known as the Muhlenberg Hospital, but on account of allopathic physicians only being allowed to attend patients,there is much dissatisfaction, and friends of the homœopathic physicians threaten to withdraw their support from it and start a hospital of their own. The place is not large enough, however, to support two hospitals, and the presence of two of opposite methods of practice would be too much of a good thing for the pocketbooks of the benevolent to stand. Allopaths are employed exclusively in our Wells Memorial Hospital, and to that there has been little or no objection.—New Brunswick Home News.

At the meeting of the Dunellen Building and Loan Association, Monday evening, the following directors were re-elected for three years: R. J. Swackhamer, Jacob Fisher and Eugene Runyon; George W. Day was elected to fill the unexpired term of John P. Apgar.

An old resident of Dunellen was in Plainfield yesterday morning, and in conversation with a Daily Press reporter, regarding the trolley question, said that the Street Railway Company had made no concessions to the Dunellen people, hence their objection to the trolley entering their town. He said that Superintendent Adleman had told him the fare to Plainfield would be 10 cents, in case the road passed the city line into Dunellen. This would be no benefit as the Central Railroad had promised to put their fare down, and if the street railway fare is five cents the Central will come down and charge the same.

OAK TREE.

There was a large attendance at the Marconnier chapel Monday evening, when old and young turned out to celebrate the second anniversary of the founding of the chapel. The occasion was a joyful one and happiness was the predominating spirit. Rev. Mr. Jones made a short address, and told his flock, which during the last two years has grown from a handful to over 200, the story of the founding and life of the now thriving chapel, and his hopes for its future. At the close of his interesting talk a general reception and sociable was held, and every man wrung his neighbor's hand and planned to work harder during the next year. The women of the congregation were not idle, and all enjoyed the refreshments they had provided.

Nature's Own Painting.

Consult any book on natural history and you will find a description of the curious looking beast in Barnum & Bailey's show called a blue-nosed mandrill. Most persons imagine this animal is painted the beautiful and brilliant colors which appear on its nose and on other parts of its body, but nature is the only painter the beast has ever had. The one with this show is the only one now in captivity anywhere, and with Johanna, the gorilla, a very great source of wonder.

A. D. Cook, of East Sixth street, has purchased a '96 Columbia wheel of the Eldridge Bicycle Company.

C. W. Gilbert, of Westfield is having a special racing wheel made for him through the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Co, at the Western Wheel Company's works. The wheel will differ considerably from the regular Crescent wheel especially in the bearings which will be somewhat similar to the roller bearings. The gear will be 90. When the wheel comes from the factory Mr. Gilbert is going to have aluminum tubing put inside of the frame and and will make several other changes. He expects to do some fast riding on both track and road and will probably appear at the Crescent Wheelmen's meets. He already has the reputation of being a speedy road rider and has won several events on the road.

In Memoriam.

Elston M. Dunn was born in Plainfield, N.J., September 9th, 1832, and died in Milton March 30th, 1896. He was the eldest of seven children born to William and Hannah Marsh-Dunn.

Mr. Dunn spent his boyhood in his native town. He was a precocious boy, but winning in his manner and always had many friends. He was a regular attendant especially in the Sunday-school wherein he made rapid advancement under the tutorship of a Presbyterian. While attending school at Dellwyne Institute, in Delaware, N. Y., he had religious impressions and was baptized. Afterwards he attended the University at Albany, and Union College, Schenectady, both in New York. From the latter, but for failing health, he would have been graduated in the class of 1857. This institution subsequently conferred the degree of Master of Arts upon him.

Ill health not permitting him to enter the theological school, his attention was turned in other directions. For eight years after 1861, he was postmaster in his native town. He then entered upon the duties of United States deputy collector of internal revenue, which place he occupied for ten years.

At this time Mr. Dunn entered the Baptist Theological Seminary in Chicago, from which he was graduated in two years. While yet in school he supplied the pulpit of the S. D. B. church in Milton and soon was called to be its pastor and was ordained.

Mr. Dunn was married in 1857 to Miss Helen Clarke, daughter of Ephraim and Angeline Clarke. To them came three children. The eldest, Clara, is the wife of Prof. J. N. Humphrey, of the Whitewater Normal School. Alexander C. is the city passenger and ticket agent of the Union Pacific Railway in Omaha; the youngest, Imogene, was married, last October to H. Lewis Beltzhoover, of the Creamery Package Manufacturing Company, of Chicago, in Oak Park, Ill.

At one time during his pastorate Mr. Dunn was professor of Greek and mental and moral philosophy in Milton College, which position he very ably filled for three years. He was for many years a member of the board of trustees of the college. In 1890 the degree of D. D. was conferred upon him by Milton College.

His death was the result of bladder trouble with which he had suffered somewhat for several years. About February 1st he was taken severely ill. A surgical operation and the best of medical aid, combined with the tenderest care, prolonged his life nearly two months.

To Elder Dunn belongs the rare distinction of having held only one pastorate, extending from ordination to death—from the theological seminary until his death—a period of almost twenty years. He was a bright and sunny disposition. His cheerful nature combined with tact and good judgment enabled him to surmount difficulties and to endear himself to the hearts of his people in an unusual degree. He was a scholarly man, a ready debater and was celebrated, not only throughout the entire denomination but quite generally in southern Wisconsin.

JOKE NOT APPRECIATED.

John Nelson Thought the Wrong Man Was Calling Him Names.

Jokes are not always the most profitable sources of pleasure as was clearly evidenced Tuesday on West Third street. John Nelson, a German, who lives on New street, was stopping near the saloon on West Third street for awhile, apparently doing nothing, when Martin Kane and Fritz Miner began calling the man names. They were near the house occupied by Louis Coombs, who was seated on his porch. This made Nelson angry, and he began calling Mr. Coombs names. The result was that the latter left his porch and a scuffle ensued. Some boys happened to see the affair and called Patrolman Saunders attention to it. When he first saw them they were rolling about in the street. He inquired what the trouble was and learned the above facts which were brought out at the hearing before Judge DeMeza. Nelson insisted that Coombs was calling him names, as he did not see the other two men. He now carries an enlarge facial expression as a result. Judge DeMeza heard both sides of the case and imposed a fine of $3 or 30 days on Nelson and $5 or 20 days on Coombs. Both fines were paid by Mr. Coombs. Nelson showed signs of appreciation and was profuse in his thanks.

BULL MAY BE INSANE.

A Former Resident of Lyons Farms Arrested for Assulting His Family.

James H. Bull, a former well-to-do resident of Lyons Farms, was arrested Tuesday morning at his home on a complaint made by his wife that he had committed assault and battery on her and their children. The prisoner was taken before Justice Tiernan at Roselle, who committed him to the county jail in default of $500 bail.

He will be subjected to an examination to determine his sanity, as his family fear he is deranged. The prisoner belongs to a good family and at one time had a fine farm at Lyons Farms, and operated large clay pits there, but he lost all his property. His brother is a wealthy resident of Elizabeth and does business in New York city.

He called to see the prisoner on learning of his arrest, and there was a touching scene at the jail, where both brothers wept copiously when they met.

The prisoner blames his wife for all his misfortunes, and is very bitter against her.

MRS. M'CUTCHEN'S LAST TEA.

End of a Number of Pleasant Events in Borough Society.

The last of Mrs. S. St. John McCutchen's series of teas was given Tuesday afternoon at her home on Rockview avenue. The weather combined with other circumstances to produce a state of affairs aptly described in the series of old plays, "The last the best of all the game." Mrs. McCutchen was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Charles McCutchen, Misses Florence and Minnie Marsh, Miss Kingman from New York, Mrs. Strong, Mrs. Atterbury, Mrs. A. Gilbert, Mrs. F. S. Grant and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr. Mrs. Charles Reed and Mrs. Henry McGee were assisted in the dining room by Miss Baldwin from Montclair and the Misses Maud Middleditch, May Shreve, Edith Van Boskerck and Ada Marsh.

Elizabeth's New Railroad Depot.

The Pennsylvania Railroad's new station at Elizabeth will be ready for use by May 1. It is a beautiful structure of yellow pressed brick and will cost about $40,000. A tunnel will connect the two tracks and an elevator will convey passengers to the track elevation. The Pennsylvania crosses the Jersey Central at this point, making three tracks very high.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it insurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

EXCISE VIOLATOR FINED.

DOMINICK PARRON CONVICTED OF SELLING LIQUOR ILLEGALLY.

Assemblyman Codington Was His Counselor and Entered a Plea of Non Vult—Fined $50 or Sixty Days in Jail.

The first of the three violators of the excise law to appear for trial was Dominick Parron, the keeper of the Italian shanty on North avenue. He was charged with selling beer without a license. He runs a sort of store, hotel and saloon on North avenue, just west of Netherwood station, but he is very select about his guests, allowing only natives of sunny Italy to enjoy his lodgings and drink his beer.

The police have suspected the existance of such a place for some time, but evidence was very hard to secure as most of the purchasers were too good friends of Parron to testify against him. Sergeant Kiely worked the case, however, and secured the necessary evidence but it was not necessary to produce it. Roundsman Fredericksen captured the wily Italian on Front street yesterday noon as told in Tuesday's Press. He loudly declared his innocence and claimed that he had not sold any liquor. He could not get anyone to go his bail and so he was locked up for trial this morning.

He was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza Wednesday at the latter's office, Assemblyman W. R. Codington appearing as his attorney. Assemblyman Codington retracted his client's plea of not guilty and pleaded non vult instead. Parron was, he said, a foreigner and did not understand that the laws of this city prevented him from selling beer to his friends.

The Italian was really a noble looking fellow with classic bow, and features somewhat like that of the Roman, but the bravery of the Roman was absent, and Parron sat meekly in his seat and let his counsel do all the talking.

There was a horde of Parron's countrymen at the trial and they watched the proceedings with great interest.

As there was no attempt made to claim that Parron was innocent, Sergeant Kiely did not produce his evidence. The Judge, of course, declared him guilty and ordered him to pay a fine of $50 or go to jail for sixty days. He paid the fine.

Wm. Ross came up before City Judge DeMeza this afternoon and he plead guilty to the charge of selling liquor without a license. He was represented by Adam Beck. The Judge sentenced him to pay a fine of $50 or go to jail for 60 days.

Died Too Soon to Get the Benefit.

After an illness of a little over a year with consumption, John T. Winn, of 455 West Third street, surrendered to that terrible disease, as exclusively reported in The Daily Press of Tuesday. A benefit was arranged and given to him in T. A. B. Hall on Monday evening, and death occurred Tuesday morning about 11:45. He was a plumber by trade and worked for A. M. Griffen for a long time. His parents are both dead and a sister passed away a short time ago. He had many friends who will mourn his death. The funeral services will be held Thursday morning at 8:30 from the house and 9 o'clock from St. Mary's church.

Wished Them Bon Voyage.

Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Deland, of Westerly, R. I., who are about to leave for London, were given a reception last evening at the home of Mrs. Deland's mother, Mrs. Nichols of New Brunswick. A large number of guests were present among whom were many from Plainfield. Among those from this city were Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis and wife, Mrs. J. P. Allis and daughter, Rev. L. E. Livermore, and D. E. Titsworth and wife.

Fix the Sidewalk.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—

Why don't the street committee of the borough order the crosswalk extended to the end of the culvert at Sycamore and Mercer avenues? That is their business and not the freeholders. Ex-Freeholder.

During the winter of 1893, F. M. Martin, of Long Reach, West Va., contracted a severe cold which left him with a cough. In speaking of how he cured it he says: "I used several kinds of cough syrup but found no relief until I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved me almost instantly, and in a short time brought about a complete cure." When troubled with a cough or cold use this remedy and you will not find it necessary to try several kinds before you get relief. It has been in the market for over twenty years and constantly grown in favor and popularity. For sale at 25 and 50 cents per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

MARRIED AT HIGH NOON.

Mrs. Lydia S. Bogart, of This City, Wedded to H. B. Paul, of Trenton.

The wedding of Mrs. Lydia S. Bogart, of this city, and Henry B. Paul, of Trenton, was solemnized at noon Wednesday at the home of ex Postmaster and Mrs. E. R. Pope, 420 Park avenue, Rev. M. H. Hutton, pastor of the Second Reformed church, New Brunswick, officiating. The palatial home was beautified through the use of choice roses and palms. F. A. Pope, Jr., acted as page, and was prettily dressed in pink satin vest, trimmed with lace. The bride wore a gown of pearl gray silk, trimmed with Duchess lace. Congratulations followed the ceremony, after which a luncheon was served. Mr. and Mrs. Paul left during the afternoon for New York. On Saturday they will sail for Glasgow by the Anchor Line steamship Ethiopia, and will travel extensively. They received many valuable presents. The groom's gift to the bride was a set of costly diamond ear-rings. Among the guests who witnessed the marriage were the following:

Mrs. Mary Borden, Mr. and Mrs. Cox. R. S. Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Sailer, Miss Linda Blackwood, Miss Emma Sailer, Miss S. A. Sailer, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Keasby Pancoast, Miss Florence Pancoast Augustus Sickler, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Shaull, of Camden; Mr. and Mrs. Eli Ale, of Trenton; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Pope, Edward Pope, Plainfield.

A MYSTERIOUS FIRE.

A Borough House Damage to the Amount of $1,000.

A mysterious fire broke out Tuesday morning at 1:15 in the house located at the corner of Harrison street and Greenbrook road. The upper part of the house is occupied by Mrs. Laing, a widow, and the lower part is vacant. David C. Allen was returning home from a lodge meeting and saw smoke coming from the roof. He pulled Box 154 at the corner of Rockview avenue and Rockview Terrace. As quickly as possible the department responded. When they arrived they found that the whole upper part was in a blaze and the kitchen range was upset. Mrs. Laing had left the house and gone next door with a neighbor after being aroused. In short order a line of hose was laid and the fire extinguished. The damage will amount to $1,000 and there was no insurance. The top and upper inside was almost completely destroyed, together with a quantity of valuable papers, including a will.

Hydrant No. 53, from which water was taken, was partly out of order and caused some delay. The cause of the fire is unknown and is a puzzle to the firemen.

BICYCLE RIDERS COLLIDE.

They Came Together While Scorching Along Central Avenue.

Everett Sherwin, of Orchard place, and James Conway, of West Front street, both about fifteen years of age are enthusiastic riders of wheels. Last Tuesday the two engaged in a trial heat along Central avenue. While passing under the railroad bridge over that thoroughfare the wheels came together and there was a spill of wheels and riders being strewn about the street. Neither of the riders were able to move after the fall, both having sustained severe bruises all over their body. Sherwin had a bad cut over his eye and the skin was also torn from his arm. The wheels were both badly damaged. Lawrence Benner, of Orchard place, who happened along, carried the prostrate boys to the sidewalk and later assisted them to their homes.

Died Suddenly.

Mrs. Sarah M. Coddington, aged 75 years of age, died very suddenly of heart disease this morning at the residence of her son in-law, William A. Stites, of 200 Grove street. She retired as usual last evening, and this morning was found in a paralyzed condition. She died before medical aid could be summoned.

A little ill, then a little pill. The ill has gone, the pill has won. DeWitt's Little Early Risers the little pills that cure great ills. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

NOT AN ICE-CREAM NIGHT.

Still People Wanted It and the Committee Furnished It.

Tuesday was not what might be called an "ice-cream" night, but nevertheless it required two extra supplies to satisfy the purchasers at the ice-cream and cake sale given in the Sunday-school rooms of the First Presbyterian church last evening. The sale was given by the social committee of the Christian Endeavor Society for the benefit of Mareonnier chapel. The main room was hung with Japanese lanterns, while the tables in the class rooms were decorated with roses and other cut flowers.

During the first part of the evening the visitors were entertained with a very enjoyable programme which was as follows: Selection, the Schubert Orchestra; recitation, Miss Mary A. Luckey; vocal solo, Miss F. May Grant; report of the secretary of the Mareonnier chapel, Miss Stover; selection, the orchestra; two songs, the Misses Carroll; recitation, Miss Mary A. Luckey; selection, the orchestra. This was the first appearance of the Ladies' Schubert Orchestra, of Dunellen and New Market, at the First Presbyterian church, and they made a very good impression.

Their selections were well rendered and there was universal praise for Mrs. Buckley and the excellent manner in which she had trained the orchestra. Miss Luckey's recitations were very good and elected great applause, especially her story of the painting of a baby. The vocal selections were also very much enjoyed. At the close of the programme the visitors were invited to sit down at the tables in the small class room and purchase ice cream and cake. The audience responded to the invitation and the committee had to send out twice for another supply of ice cream.

The committee consisted of Miss Bessie Blair, chairman, the Misses Flora Petrie, Jennie Abbott, Mary Kellogg, Lettie Remson, Lizzie Bittenbender and Agnes Blair, and William Coriell and Guernsey Nevius. Miss Joshine Petrie, president of the society, exercised a general supervision over all. The aides who assisted in serving the numerous patrons with ice cream and cake, were the Misses Nellie Van Winkle, Jessie McKillop, Edith L. Pruden, Gertrude Hazeltine, Eleanor T. Van Deventer, Grace E. Overton, Katherine Nevius, Lillian Glen, Eva Dayton, Pansy Herring, Charlotte Messersmith, Nora Williams, Evelyn Searing, Margaret Vermeule, Mary A. Luckey, Fannie Mills and Edith Bond.

OPERATION SUCCESSFUL.

Skin Grafting Repeated in Elizabeth Hospital on Maggie Cotter.

Dr. Victor Mravlag and Dr. James S. Greene, in the Elizabeth General Hospital, Tuesday successfuly repeated the skin grafting process on Maggie Cotter. The patient's sister Mamie supplied the skin, a large patch of which was taken from her limb and transferred to her sister's burned arm. The next operation will be performed in about ten days, and the patient's other sister will supply the skin.

Her Fourth Birthday.

Mrs. Wm. H. Hillman, of Sherman avenue, gave a pleasant birthday party Tuesday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock, in honor of her four-year-old daughter, Evelyn McHarg Hillman. The table was very prettily decorated, and in the centre was a a large cake, surmounted by four candles, denoting little Miss Hillman's age. Cake, fruit, ice cream and candy were served during the afternoon. Those present were Elizabeth McClay, Ross Woltman, Elena Woodcock, Grace Kinsman, Edith Marsh, Jack and Will Douglass, May Batcheler, Gideon Guion and Marie Fountain.

An Honorable Family Record.

The New York Tribune of Monday contains an interesting sketch and picture of Rev. Samuel Miln Studdiford, who has had a pastorate of thirty years in length at the Third Presbyterian church, Trenton. He was pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Plainfield for two years, his pastorate beginning in 1869. Dr. Studdiford belongs to a family that has preached the Word of God to Jerseymen for 119 years.

Peaches Will Be Plenty.

Two hundred and sixty replies out of 300 inquiries sent out to the largest peach growers regarding the prospects for this year's crop substantially report that the prospects for an immense yield are good.

A Borough Scheme Dying.

The Westfield borough project has fallen flat before the law. A meeting of the committee is called for Thursday evening, when a final attempt will be made to revive the plan.

FOR THE BOYS IN BLUE.

WINFIELD SCOTT POST GIVE A RECEPTION TO G.A. R. OFFCERS.

The Woman's Relief Corps and the Sons of Veterans Also Present—Reminiscences of the Late Unpleasantness Were Given.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G.A.R., gave Department Commander White, Department Council Member John Lawrence and Past Department Medical Dr. Youngloves a reception last Monday in their rooms on East Front street. Major Anderson Post, No. 109, G. A. R., Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, and John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, were also present. Post 73 held a short business meeting at which time a recruit was mustered. After the business, all adjourned to the room below where the Woman's Relief Corps had prepared a most bountiful collation for the guests. While the act of filling the inner man was going on the Plainfield Cornet Band appeared and enlivened the occasion with patriotic airs. In the midst of the festivities Department Commander White was called on and in his usual happy way gave a most excellent talk along Grand Army lines. He brought out many important facts in regard to the veterans, and spoke at some length on the coming department encampment at Asbury Park, which is to be held in June.

Dr. Youngloves was next introduced and gave the boys a rousing talk, including a toast to the women. He is a talented speaker and having a thorough knowledge of the "Boys in Blue," he interested those present by recalling many things to their minds. Remarks followed by Department President Mrs. Morse, of the Woman's Relief Corps; President Mrs. Brokaw, of Corps 10; John Lawrence, of New Brunswick; Dr. Livermore, Commander J. T. Dunham and Past-Commander C. H. Randolph, of Post 109; and Past Commander M. C. Dobbins, of Post 73. Interposing the remarks the band favored the gathering with music.

At 11 o'clock the visitors accompanied by the comrades and band, left for the station, where they left by the 11:28 train for home.

Those who had charge of the refreshments consisted of Mrs. Cox, chairman; Mrs. Brokaw, Mrs. McVoy, Mrs. Morse, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Woodruff and Mrs. Walker.

WOOED WHILE AT SCHOOL.

Ruth Letson's Romantic Courtship and Marriage in Plainfield.

Residents of the little village of Stelton, are talking about the romance of Miss Ruth Letson, a pretty daughter of Benjamin Letson, who a few nights ago surprised her family by announcing that she was married.

Miss Letson was graduated from a school in Hightstown last summer. While there she fell in love with William Eldridge, a student. Eldridge came from Camden. His father is a wealthy business man in Philadelphia, and goes his son plenty of money.

Young Eldridge was very devoted to Miss Letson, and the two attracted much attention as they drove about in his fashionable dog cart. When the young woman returned home Eldridge visited her frequently, but Miss Letson's parents never suspected that there was anything serious in the attachment and when at the supper table the girl announced that she was a wife none could believe her.

The father, in his astonishment, let a cup of tea that he had raised to his lips fall, and the other members of the family uttered exclamations of surprise. The girl, in the midst of her blushes, said that she and Mr. Eldridge had driven to Plainfield last August and had been married there.

"He has sent for me to come to Camden, and I am going, she continued. "I would have told you all long ago, but I have been waiting for him to get started in business."

The young woman then burst into tears. She has joined her husband, leaving home with the good wishes of her parents.

West Into the Brook.

A lad living in the borough was trying to see how close he could ride to Green brook last Saturday, near Brook avenue, when his wheel slipped and both bicycle and rider took an involuntary plunge. Neither were injured by the fall or bath.

An Affidavit.

This is to certify that on May 11th, I walked to Melick's drug store on a pair of crutches and bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm for inflammatory rheumatism which had crippled me up. After using three bottles I am completely cured. I can cheerfully recommend it. Charles H. Wetzel, Sunbury, Pa. Sworn and subscribed to before me on August 10th, 1894. Walter Shipman, J. P. For sale at 50c per bottle at Armstrong's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

A LONG RUN FOR FIREMEN.

A House Burned at the Corner of North Avenue and Terrill Road.

A fire broke out Tuesday at 11:40 in the house at the corner of North avenue and Terrill road, owned by Bernard Flynn. The supposition is that it was set on fire. Adolph Carman, a member of Engine Company, No. 2, was out during the evening with the Plainfield Cornet Band, and while returning home on South avenue he saw the blaze. He sent in an alarm from Box 28 opposite Hand's coal office. The department responded quickly, considering the long run, and found the house in flames.

The Fanwood fire department was also present, and both departments did exceedingly good work. The Fanwood department laid 700 feet of hose from the hydrant on South avenue and the Plainfield department used hose for the balance of the distance 1,000 feet. The pressure of water for that distance was very low, but the firemen succeeded in extinguishing the flames, and prevented the nearby houses from burning. The departments returned home by 2 o'clock. A singular fact is that Mr. Flynn, who is an engineer on the Central Railroad, tried to sell the property yesterday but could not.

DEATH OF MRS. JOSIAH MONCTON.

Former Plainfield Woman Dies at the Home of Her Daughter in Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Josiah Moncton, a former resident of this city, died Monday at the home of her son in-law, Matthias Benson, at Bangor, Pa. Her remains were brought to this city today and interred in the M. E. Cemetery.

The deceased was the wife of the late Josiah Moncton, who at one time in the early history of Plainfield had a locksmith and gunshop on Front street, where the First National Bank is now temporarily located. Mr. Moncton for a long time, before the Central Railroad was elevated, was flagman at the Peace street crossing, and died at his home on Church street several years ago. They had eight children, five boys and three girls, William, Josiah, George, Frank, John deceased, Rachael, wife of Matthias Benson, who lives at Bangor, Pa., Susan, wife of Arthur Davis, who resides in Missouri, and Cecelia, deceased, who was the wife of Isaac Squier, deceased, and who was a well-known person in this city a few years ago.

Mrs. Moncton was a sister to the late Theodore Adams, who died about a year ago, and who resided on Duer street and Linden avenue.

NOT YET ORGANIZED.

Some Brief Political Gossip About the New Jersey Republicans.

The Republican State Committee selected at the recent State Convention has not as yet organized. Nor has any call been made, so that it is not known whether it will organize before the National Convention or not. At the present time Franklin Murphy is at the head of the general organization, and Garret A. Hobart is at the head of the Executive Committee.

There is no doubt that John Y. Foster, who has been secretary of the committee for the last twenty-five years, will succeed himself. Colonel Toffey, who has been treasurer of the committee for eighteen years, is being urged as his own successor.

Paid the Rent After All.

A year ago when Mrs. Marion Knight ceased running a millinery store on West Front street, where the New York candy store is now located, she owed J. O. Campbell, the owner of the property, $130 for rent. She was unable to pay at that time and afterwards showed no disposition to liquidate the debt. Mr. Campbell put the matter in the hands of Lawyer S. S. Swackhamer. He found that she had moved to Milford, Conn., and from there to Arkansas. He commenced proceedings against her and learned that she possessed some property in Connecticut. An attachment was then issued, and after the legal formalities were gone through with, the bill was paid.

Roasted Chickens by the Dozen.

Leigh Back, a wealthy resident of Bound Brook, is a great chicken fancier. He had a patent incubator in the cellar of his residence, and thought it about perfect. One night recently he adjusted his latest appliance to the incubator and retired. Before morning his slumbers were disturbed by a strong odor of burning chicken flesh. The next day he raked the ashes of 120 chicks into a dish pan and patched up a large spot that the fiery furnace had scorched in the ceiling.

It's all the same, a slight cold, congested lungs or severe cough. One Minute Cough Cure banishes them. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

OLD CARROLL MANSION.

One of the Most Interesting Residences at Washington.

It Has Just Been Purchased by Chief Justice Fuller—Clay, Webster and Taney Were Frequent Visitors in This Historic House.

Chief Justice Fuller has just purchased a home in Washington which is one of the old landmarks of the capital. It stands at Eighteenth and F streets, in that section of the city largely given over to the old residents, and is called "Old Carrollton." In the neighborhood of the mansion are the homes of Gen. Miles, Secretary Herbert, and only a block off is the famous old "Octagon" house, which was once inhabited by the Taylors. On the corner of G and Eighteenth is the dingy old building now used as a place for the war records office, but which was in days gone by the home of Jefferson Davis, when he held a position as a member of the president's cabinet.

The Carroll mansion was built in 1830 by a gentleman named Ringgold and was purchased later by Mr. William Thomas Carroll, at that time clerk of the supreme court. This gentleman was a nephew of old Daniel Carroll, of Duddington, Mrs. Carroll, widow of William Thomas Carroll, lived in this house for many years and did not die till a few months ago. Belonging to the Carroll family of Maryland, a family which is one of the most prominent in America, the Carrolls were leaders in the society of that day, and during all the administrations prior to the late war it was at this house that the finest entertainments were given. Old Daniel Carroll owned the greater part of Washington, but his lands lay in the east, and he held them so high that he drove buyers to the west, where now the fashionable section is situated. When the house was built the grounds around were extensive, and there were but few houses near. Large gardens and dirt drives then filled what is now asphaltum streets and row on row of brick houses.

THE OLD CARROLL MANSION.

In the Carroll mansion such men as Clay and Webster were frequent visitors, and old Justice Taney used to come every Sunday to dine with the family. The father of Mr. William Thomas Carroll was Charles Carroll, of Belleview, the grandfather was Charles Carroll, of Carrollsburg, who was a first cousin to Charles Carroll, of Carrollton. The family of Carrolls are descendants from one of the early kings of Ireland. William Carroll had eight children, the only surviving girls being Mrs. Bowles, Mrs. Brown and Countess Esterhazy, who resides in Philadelphia.

While originally on a level with the street, the mansion is now on a terrace formed by the cutting down of the streets during the time that the city was beautified by the direction of Shepherd. The house is large, square, red brick, with a high wall, which incloses an old-fashioned garden on the right side. In the front hall one finds the stairway leads down to the front door, and all of the numerous rooms are grouped about this central stairs which form a sort of an open court in the center of the house from top to bottom. The mansion was furnished in things which had been in the family for years, but most of them have been disposed of at private sale to the members of the immediate family.

It is not known why Chief Justice Fuller wished to desert the popular part of the city in which he now resides for the sober and more somber quarter in which the old Carroll mansion now stands. His present home is a fine one, on the corner of Massachusetts avenue and Eighteenth street, right in the heart of the fashionable section of town and surrounded by many magnificent homes of diplomats and wealthy private citizens.

Carmens in Real Life.

Seville, Spain, has been having a picturesque and exciting strike of the 5,000 cigarmens employed in the tobacco factory. They rose in their wrath one morning, smashed the windows and everything they could lay hands on, and then paraded the streets. For ten days the stores were closed, the women harangued and buttonholed the passers-by, and won the whole town over to their side. At last the government made some concessions, and the women went back to work before any blood was spilled, though two officials, same near being torn to pieces by the maddened "Carmens."

Emperor William's Bumps.

An English physiologist who has examined the head of Emperor William II. says that there is nothing unusual about it. He says, "a medium head, of the military type, such as can be found by the score in the army. The bumps of self-love and combativeness are abnormally developed. He will never let himself be stopped by an obstacle. There is no power on earth that could exercise the least pressure upon him. His self love is so great that it would not surprise me if he should proclaim himself infallible. He would be perfectly sincere in so doing."

AN EVENTFUL CAREER.

Slatin Pasha's Experience in the Famous War Against the Mahdi.

When the Anglo-Egyptian expedition starts up the Nile it will be accompanied by a man who will know more of the country to be conquered and its people than any other one in the expedition. This is the famous Slatin Pasha, who for 11 years was a prisoner of the khalifa, the successor of the mahdi, in his capital in the East Soudan. Slatin's career is one that is as full of color as that of any other traveler in Europe, with the exception, perhaps, of Henry M. Stanley. In 1876, at the age of 20, Rudolph Slatin, born and educated in Vienna, fired with a desire to travel, and wishing to take part in the exploration of Africa, first went to the Soudan. After a short stay he returned to complete his military service, and it was not until three years later that he returned to Egypt, where he was appointed to a high post under Gen. Gordon. He conducted a successful campaign against a pretender to the Darfur throne, and was made governor general of the province by the khedive. Then the wave of mahdism swept the whole of the Soudan. Gordon was murdered and the British expedition was compelled to retreat. Slatin was captured and placed in seclusion by the mahdi. When the mahdi died Slatin was released by his successor, the khalifa, but was kept under close surveillance. After much weary watching he managed to escape, and returned to Europe last year. Since his return to civilization he has resided in London and has written a book on the Soudan question. While governor of the Darfur province Slatin fought numerous battles against great odds. He has much private and valuable information concerning the affairs of the Soudan and will be an immense acquisition to the expedition.

PREMIER BERTHELOT.

The Head of the French Government is a Scientist of Note.

M. P. E. Marcelin Berthelot, the minister of foreign affairs in France, who has become politically conspicuous through the British Soudan expedition affair, is more a man of science than a diplomat or statesman. In fact, his great reputation is due solely to his proficiency in chemist. In 1886 he took a trip into politics—for almost every Frenchman is a politician at one time in his life—and was for a short time a member of the cabinet. Apart from that his entire attention has been devoted to science, and his original researches have won for him the praise of the whole world. The son of a physician, M. Berthelot early began his scientific studies, his work being chiefly in the line of organic chemistry. He was honored with the degree of doctor of sciences in 1854, and awarded the academic prize of 3,500 francs for his work in thermo-chemistry. A new chair was created for him in the College de France in 1865. He is a member of the French scientific academies and was elected a foreign member of the Royal society of London. In 1870 he was president of the scientific committee of defense, and during the siege of Paris directed the manufacture of nitroglycerin and dynamite for the government. As president of the committee on explosives his labors discovered the new smokeless powder. In 1876 he was made inspector-general of higher education. His researches have had for their object principally the reproduction of the substances which enter into the composition of organized beings, and his labors, being synthetic, opened up a new field of science. The dyeing trade has benefited infinitely by his experiments in extracting dyes from coal tar. He has written many valuable scientific works and is a commander of the Legion of Honor.

False Teeth for Pet Dogs.

There are in New York city several dentists who earn their living making sets of teeth for dogs; many of the flowing tails of the horses that one sees in Central park are as false as the black hair on nine-tenths of the fair sex, and now the fact has been brought to light that a considerable number of the most successful race horses on the British turf are provided with artificial wind pipes made of silver, the object being to prevent them from roaring

BLUE LINER WHIZZED BY A KNIGHT OF THE ROAD HAS A NARROW ESCAPE.

A Tramp Made an Unsuccessful Effort to Board a Coal Train and Had to Drop to Escape Being Hit by a Flyer.

Those who happened to be around the North Avenue station Thursday afternoon shortly after 4 o'clock thought they saw a man struck by one of the Blue Line flyers. It was only a narrow escape, however, in which the victim had his arm cut by a projection on the engine.

A "knight of the road" on his way from Cleveland to Jersey City, came to Plainfield yesterday and tried to ride the rest of the way on an eastbound coal train. About 100 yards east of the Richmond street bridge he attempted to board a coal train but could not. He started to return across the main track, but seeing a Blue Line flyer close upon him he threw himself on the ground between the two trains. His arm was badly cut by a projection on the engine. As soon as the Blue Liner had passed the man arose and walked away. He was very pale and trembled like a leaf. He told a lad who helped him to bind up his wound that he was going to quit railroading and walk after this.

NINE TOWNS AFFECTED.

The School Board Treasurers' Salary Act Declared Unconstitutional.

Justice Magie, in the Somerset Court, in Somerville, has filed an opinion which takes away the compensation of treasurers of Boards of Education in towns and boroughs where the Board of Education is under a special charter. There are nine such towns: Fort Lee, Englewood, Ridgefield, Irvington, Caldwell, Princeton, Morristown, Long Branch and Somerville. The decision also requires the treasurers to refund any compensation they have already received.

In 1878 a law was passed providing that the treasurer should receive the same compensation as township collectors for like services. In Somerville, L. M. Codington was elected treasurer and served five years without compensation. In 1891 and the three successive years he presented his bill at the rate of three-quarters of one per cent. of the amount of moneys disbursed, and the township committee, under advice of counsel, ordered the bills paid. The present township committee, under the advice of their counsel, Theodore Hoffman, refused to pay the bill, whereupon a friendly suit was instituted.

The decision of Justice Magie just handed down leaves the Board of Education with a treasurer, but without power to receive any public money from the collector of the township and without compensation for services previously rendered for disbursing the money of the district. The law of 1878, providing for the compensation of the treasurer, and under which he disbursed moneys, is declared unconstitutional by reason of the exclusion from its provisions of districts in certain towns and boroughs, this being held special legislation.

FIRST ANNIVERSARY AND RECEPTION.

Lucetta Council, Daughters of Liberty, Enjoy a Pleasant Evening.

Lucetta Council, No. 28, D. of L., celebrated their first anniversary in their rooms, the Fireman's Hall, last Thursday. The programme arranged for the evening was to have been an initiating contest between the teams of the local council and the Pride of the Juniors Council, of Newark, but the latter team failed to put in an appearance. So as not to disappoint the visitors present, which included National Secretary W. O. Staples, of New Haven, Conn., National Treasurer G. H. Burton, of New York, and large delegations from the various councils in this vicinity, the home team showed their skill and ability by initiating two new members, which was highly complimented by all.

After the meeting closed the visitors were invited to attend the reception which was then in progress in Central Hall, where they enjoy dancing until an early hour this morning. The grand march was led by the team in full uniform, preceded by Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Stratton and G. S. Martin and Miss Bertha Rockfellow. During the evening National Secretary Staples in behalf of the Council presented Mrs. C. L Stratton with a handsome gold badge, consisting of the emblem of the order, for bringing in the most members for the past five months. At midnight refreshments were served.

Unwelcome Picnickers.

Companies of Polish Jews have visited Westfield on picnic excursions for the past three Sundays, and have occupied the barn on the Renney farm as their headquarters. The excursionists numbered about forty last Sunday, and the people in that part of the town have asked the authorities to forbid the practice. Constable Marsh will be on hand Sunday and see that they transfer the scene of their festivities.

LET CRANKS REJOICE.

THE Y. M. C. A. TO FURNISH A GOOD ARTICLE OF BASEBALL.

Conveniently Located Grounds and Bang-up Ball Tossers Will No Doubt Make a Successful Season—Schedule.

Plainfield is to have at least one strong baseball nine in the field, and this year it will be under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., as was exclusively announced in Tuesday's Press. New grounds have been procured as was exclusively stated in this paper, and now the management makes the schedule public.

The team will be much stronger than last year, and games have been arranged with some of the best amateur clubs in this vicinity. Some exciting contests may be expected, and the cranks will have a chance to root to their hearts content. Regarding the new team, the Y. M. C. A. bulletin says:

The Association takes pleasure in notifying the public that they have secured the old Plainfield Athletic Club grounds in the rear of West Front street near Washington avenue, for the purpose of playing baseball and other sports during the coming season.

Among those who will represent the Association on the diamond are: Rev. J. O. McKelvey and Messrs. Burt, Schoonmaker, Johnson, Major, McLoughlin, Symons, Townley and Dennis. They will open the season May 16th with the Cranford Club. Other games have been scheduled as follows:

May 23—Westfield.
May 30—Woodbridge Athletic Club, morning and afternoon.
June 6—Woodbridge.
June 13—Rutgers College.
June 20—Montclair Athletic Club.
June 27—Flemington.
July 4—Original Acmes, morning and afternoon.
July 11—Woodbridge.
July 18—Elizabeth Athletic Club.
July 25—Flemington.
August 1—Riverdall Athletic Club.
August 8—New Jersey Athletic Club.
August 15—Seventh Regiment, of New York.
August 22—Elizabeth Athletic Club.
August 29—
September 5—
September 7—
September 12—Elizabeth Athletic Club.
September 19—

The balance of the schedule will be filled with the Englewood Field Club, Harlem Athletic Association, Original Acmes and others.

The management would be pleased to give any one desiring to play on the team an opportunity to do so, and by addressing the Baseball Department, Y. M. C. A., they will be furnished with full particulars.

To properly prepare the field and equip the team, about $300 is needed. Any contribution toward this fund will be gladly received by the Baseball Department. The earnest support of all is solicited.

The committee in charge of the Baseball Department consists of George R. Cornwell and Joseph Gavett. John McLoughlin will manage the team.

PARLIAMENTARY CLUB ELECT.

Besides Choosing Officers They Start a New Department of Work.

The semi-annual meeting of the Parliamentary Club was held this morning in the Y. M. C. A. building, at which time the following officers were elected: President, Miss C. B. Yates; vice-president, Mrs. Stephen Cahoone; recording secretary, Miss May Cahoone; corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. I. Cooley; treasurer, Mrs. Carman Parse.

Several short papers on Shakespeare were presented and read by the members, and this formed an interesting feature of the meeting.

The question of annual dues was laid on the table till the next meeting. It was decided to give a tea and reception during May in honor of Mrs. Benjamin, of Portland, Mich., who expects to come east. She will meet the women of New York who are interested in parliamentary work, after which she will be invited to this city. The committee having the matter in charge is as follows: Mrs. J. M. McNaughton, Mrs. DeWitt C. Brokaw, Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, Miss May Cahoobe, Mrs. M. I. Cooley, Miss Brown, Mrs. Oliver King, Miss C. B. Yates.

A new branch of work was started this morning entitled the "Art and Science Department." Mrs. M. I. Cooley is the chairman. Mrs. Cahoone, chairman of foreign affairs, will make a report at the next meeting of the club.

Building at Netherwood.

Charles H. Hand, who recently purchased of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association the lot on LaGrande avenue, Netherwood, has decided to erect three dwelling houses on the lot.

AMONG WORKS OF ART.

HIGH SCHOOL DAY AT THE LOAN EXHIBITION OF THE CAMERA CLUB.

Many Students Avail Themselves of the Special Pride of Admission and Are Entertained and Instructed by the Show.

The second week of the loan exhibition of the Plainfield Camera Club promises to be more successful than the first, as far as the attendance is concerned, for the Plainfield people seem to be awakening to the realization of the fact that there is an art exhibition in Plainfield well worth a visit.

Thursday afternoon was especially devoted to the pupils at the public schools and a special price of admission was set for them. There was a good attendance throughout the afternoon and evening, also a number of the young people spent the afternoon very pleasantly and profitably there.

One of the most interesting exhibits which has, in previous descriptions of the exhibition, received but slight notice is the collection of oil paintings, tapestry paintings, watch color sketches and drawings, all of which were loaned by residents of this city.

Of course, the most valuable of all this exhibit is the original sketch by Michael Angelo of "The Lost Soul," but there are other pictures of considerable value. One of the largest of the oil paintings is a view of the snow-capped mountain "Jungfrau" with a little village nestling at its base.

There are two small pictures of the Puritan maiden, which arrived too late to be catalogued. One shows her on her way to church and the other in the field. They were loaned by Mrs. R. A. Meeker.

Plainfield's great military artist, Julian Scott, has several of his works on exhibition, loaned by other people. Among them is "Changing Guard," a country scene apparently in the time of the Revolution with a group of American soldiers in the foreground. "The Recall" is a watercolor sketch of an incident in the Civil War. A large portrait of J. H. McVey is all the work of Julian Scott.

A painting of considerable value is one of the "Madonna" of the Christ child, which is said to have been the work of Murillo, the famous Italian artist. A series of three oil paintings entitled "Winter," "Autumn" and "Summer," are the work of a local artist, Harold Serrell. They are all landscapes and the effect in each is very pretty. A marine view, "The Coming Shower" is another of his works. Another marine view, painted in blue by Mrs. Nelson Runyon, is quite striking in its effect.

An attractive picture of a stormy night at sea is "The Life Boat," in which the artist has reproduced the rolling and foaming billows in an excellent manner. "Marguerite," painted by Mrs. John D. Runyon, is very attractive. A number of her other paintings were also displayed. A charming ocean scene is exhibited although catalogued from the catalogue. It is the work of Miss Kate W. Newhall. A water color sketch, "After the Masquerade," is a winter street scene in which two masqueradrers discover the identity of the other. The color effects are remarkable in the sketch "A Burning Mountain" done in pastel by F. Keppel. Several sketches of Plainfield and vicinity are shown as the work of Miss Flora R. Petrie.

There are many other paintings and sketches that deserve mention and are as well done as those already spoken of but lack of space prevents a more complete description of the best way, however, to learn what is there is to make a personal visit to the rooms of the Camera Club in the Babcock building where the exhibit is being held.

BUILT ON THE WRONG LOT.

A Warrenville Man Erects a House on Land Owned by Another Man.

A very amusing incident has just come to light which is now puzzling those interested. Some time ago Harry Morrison, son of T. W. Morrison, of Mountain avenue, purchased two lots on the latter avenue from a New York lawyer. One of the lots was purchased by Assessor J. H. Cooley, who shortly afterward sold it to a Mr. Holcomb, of Warrenville. Mr. Holcomb commenced the erection of a house which is now nearly completed. A few day ago while investigating, he discovered that he had built his house on Mr. Morrison's lot. As both lots are the same size and there is scarcely any difference in the price, it is thought quite likely that an exchange of deeds will be made. The result is now awaited with no little interest.

ENTICED TO JAIL BY BEER

A SOMERSET COUNTY CONSTABLE'S RIDE WITH A CRAZY MAN.

Big Hank Lake Gave a Little Constable a Rattling Ride Over Country Roads, But Was Finally Landed in the County Jail.

Constable George Cray, of Montgomery township, had a thrilling fifteen-mile ride with a lunatic Wednesday, over the hills and through the valleys of Somerset county. Hank Lake has been subject to strange hallucinations and was in the Trenton asylum for a time, but was recently discharged as a sound man. He weighs 260 pounds, has styled himself "the king of hell," and on Sunday began to show renewed signs of insanity. He amused himself by setting fire to a lot of wood land near Kingston, and subsequently found pleasure in shooting out his neighbor's window lights with a shotgun.

One of the neighbors more daring than the others handed him a jug of Monmouth county applejack, and he boozed on that for two days. Then he began his antics again, and Constable Cray started out to find him early Wednesday morning. He found Lake on a by-road near Griggstown. The constable is a small man, and no match physically for big Hank. He persuaded the man to enter the wagon by promises of beer, and they started for Somerville.

Soon Lake began urging the horse and imagined the animal had wings. "See how he flies along," he exclaimed gleefully. Then Lake urged him faster. The little constable was in terror lest there would be an accident, but could do nothing.

Over the hills they sped, the crazy man constantly endeavoring to increase the speed.

The fifteen miles to Somerville was made in little more than an hour. Cray pulled his foam-covered horse up in front of a hotel, and induced his charge to alight by promises of a drink. He finally got Lake to the county jail, where he was turned over to the Sheriff. When the iron doors clanged behind the crazy man the little constable nearly fainted from exhaustion. Lake will be sent back to the asylum.

MYSTERIOUS PACKAGES.

LOTS OF FUN AT THE SALE OF UNCLAIMED U. S. EXPRESS PACKAGES.

A Maiden Lady Gets a Box of Collar Buttons and a Bachelor Buys a Dozen Corsets—Funny and Worthless Purchases.

There is a certain attraction in anything mysterious or uncertain and that idea drew a large crowd to the auction store of T. J. Carey, on West Front street, Thursday afternoon, to the sale of unclaimed property that has been left in the hands of the United States Express Company. All the articles were wrapped up and it was utterly impossible to guess their contents. But that was just where the fun came in.

The sale began at 2 o'clock and the crowd was ready for it. It was an enthusiastic crowd and many of them came out of curiosity to see who would invest some large sum in a package of dirty towels or else purchase some valuable piece of jewelry for almost nothing. There were those who confidently expected to know the good things on sight and buy them at a ridiculously low price.

The bidding was lively, and the size of the package or box had very little to do with the price, as the buyers remembered that the best are sometimes to be found in the smallest parcels. None of the packages were given out until all had been sold, and then from 6 o'clock until nearly 9 Mr. Carey and his assistants were kept busy distributing the trunks, boxes and packages, about 500 in all, that had been sold.

There was lots of excitement when the packages came to be opened and there were surprises, pleasant and unpleasant for all. Mrs. Boice paid $1.50 for a dress pattern, while William Baldwin received two hundred cigars and a gold watch for $3.15. Mr. Carey's daughters were unlucky in their purchases, one finding in her packages some very dirty clothing, while the other unwrapped some collars and cuffs. Mrs. Carey, on the contrary, found a stock of handsome new dresses and underclothing. It was very amusing to see one old bachelor look with dismay on a package of corsets while an aged maiden lady was equally surprised by a quantity of collar buttons.

Many of the purchasers did not reveal the contents of their packages in public, but hurried to their own private apartments and there to tear off with eager hands the paper covering only to find, perhaps, a number of circulars, a genealogy of a family by the name of Smith, or some other equally worthless article.

NEW HOTEL AND RESTAURANT.

A Well-Known Caterer to Start a Hostlery on East Front Street.

A new hotel (dry) will be opened at 141 East Front street on May 1st by S. C. Rogers, whose advertisement will be found in another column. Mr. Rogers has for some time occupied a store in the Yeoh building as a restaurant, but his rapidly increasing business and a demand for hotel accommodations make it imperative that he shall have larger quarters.

The entire building will be used for the purpose. The main restaurant will be on the first floor. On the second front floor will be a private dining room, which will not only be in daily use but which will make a festive and secluded place for private supper parties. On the same floor will be the ladies' bath, dressing and toilet rooms.

Those for men will be in the basement, and will be supplemented with hot and cold shower baths for weary and dusty wheelmen. An artist in his line will wield the brush and put a polish on the pedal extremities of guests.

A commodious kitchen is being erected in the rear. The remainder of the house, other than that described, will be tastefully furnished for temporary and permanent patrons.

The main restaurant will be the lightest and airiest room in the city. Mr. Rogers, who comes to Plainfield after eight or ten years' experience at Saratoga and Lakewood, says that his mottoes will be "Cleanliness is akin to Godliness" and "No Flies."

The hotel has been spoken of as a "dry" one, but a handsome and up-to-date soda fountain will supply citizens with their favorite and innocuous tipple.

As Mr. Rogers will cater largely to the cycling contingent of both sexes he will call his place the Hotel Tuileries (Two-wheeleries). He says further that his buns and other edibles will be better than his puns. All bespeak for him the success he evidently deserves.

Sues the Central for $25,000.

A suit for 25,000 damages was begun in the Supreme Court, Jersey City, yesterday, against the Central Railroad of New Jersey by Herman N. Lay, administrator of the estate of the Herman Lay, who was killed at the Avenue E station, Bayonne, on April 27th, 1895. The deceased was a photographer in Hoboken and Bayonne, and was crossing the platform when an express train struck and killed him. His income was $3,000 a year.

QUARRELED AND MADEUP

TWO COLORED WOMEN SETTLE THEIR TROUBLE BEFORE GOING TO COURT.

Etta Miner Called Her Friend, Mrs. Emma Connett, Names and Threw Stones at Her—Went to Law and Then Repented.

There was a strange scene in the city court room on Saturday when prisoner and complainant came up side by side in the most loving way and smiled in the most friendly manner at each other. They both were colored women and one, Miss Etta Miner, was arrested on complaint of the other, Mrs. Emma Connett, on the charge of disorderly conduct and throwing stones.

"You were the one that had her arrested?" asked Judge DeMeza of Mrs. Connett, as he inclined his head in the direction of the prisoner.

"Yes," was the reply, "but we've made up," and the two colored women snuggled up together in a most loving manner. Mrs. Connett then went on to tell how they had become good friends again and how Miss Etta went to "that gentleman," pointing at Sergeant Kiely, and "he acted real cross and angry" and would not let them settle the matter themselves.

The Judge censured her for making a complaint and then trying to withdraw it and said that he expected they would quarrel again and another complaint would be wanted. Mrs. Connett protested that they were good friends now and made an eloquent appeal in behalf of the prisoner.

After a severe lecture, Judge DeMeza suspended sentence and the newmade friends departed arm in arm.

IONA COUNCIL ENTERTAIN.

A Pleasant Social Event Given in Red Men's Hall.

An enjoyable sociable was held in Red Men's Hall last night by Iona Council, D. of P., I. O. R. M., and the attendance was such that the hall was comfortably filled. A programme had been arranged by the committee in charge and the part that was rendered was encored to the echo, but the committee was disappointed in a part of the talent which failed to appear.

The following was the programme as rendered: Overture, orchestra; piano solo, Miss Lillian Epner, accompanied by Miss Mabel Benner; recitation, Miss Lucy Casper; piano solo, Miss Mabel Benner; piano solo, Mr. Lawson.

After the programme had concluded, dancing began and continued long after midnight. The music was furnished by Bert Naylor. A repast was enjoyed about midnight.

The committee in charge consisted of Mrs. Charles Holstein, chairman; Miss Lizzie Dunlap, Mrs. James Radin, Mrs. Stiglitz and Mrs. Bowman.

PARK AVENUE TO BE MACADAMIZED.

The Ante-Election Foster Promises Soon to Be Made Good.

A long-suffering public will be glad to learn that Park avenue between Front street and the railroad bridge is to be repaired. Those who ride on wheels have become almost exasperated, as they have not only had their wheels racked, but their bones also. Their minds have wandered back to the recent local election, when flaming posters urged all to vote for good roads, and they have wondered as to whether it was not all a dream. But a change is in sight and everybody will be delighted to know that Park avenue, between the above points, is to be torn up and a fine macadam, road will take the place of the present condition of the avenue. Other streets in the city will receive attention as soon as possible.

Conveyance to the Mountain Park Inn.

Hereafter on Fridays and Saturdays a stage will be run from the end of the trolley line on Somerset street to the Mountain Park Inn. Superintendent Adleman, of the street railway, this morning told a representative of The Press that the trolley road would doubtless be extended to the hotel within the next six weeks. While nothing definite has been decided, it seems probable that the route for the extension will be up this side of the mountain, which will avoid the dangerous curves that would be necessary to make in the track if the road was built through the Notch and then back to the hotel from Washingtonville. The cars to be used on this branch will be equipped with double sets of brakes so as to reduce the danger of a runaway car to the minimum.

Against Trolleys on County Roads.

The Elizabeth Board of Trade will put itself on record as being opposed to the building of trolley roads on the fine roads of Union county. The board Thursday night discussed the matter, and requested the joint committee on railroads and streets and highways to prepare a resolution on the subject to be acted on at the next meeting.

Trolley Line to be Sold.

The Rahway and Middlesex Electric Railway, which is now in the hands of a receiver, will be sold next Monday, and parties are now negotiating for its purchase with the view of extending it from Rahway to Boynton Beach, Sewaren and Woodbridge by June 1.

THE INFANT INDUSTRIES.

Mahlon Vail Makes a Comparison With European Industries.

The protectionists boast of their free breakfast tables, and if we could make a meal of tea and coffee it might be true. But what else can we name on our tables at breakfast or any other meal that is not taxed, and that heavily? Even the starch in our table cloths under the McKinley tariff paid 86 per cent.

It is now somewhat less, but why any duty when we have the raw material cheaper than it is in any other part of the world, and are shipping the manufactured article to Europe by hundreds of tons.

The same question may be asked of a good many others who are sending their products to foreign markets.

Nearly a dozen iron and steel goods men have been named as doing so by the "Iron Age" within the past few days.

Amongst others the steel filemakers state they are shipping, with profit to Canada, where their goods pay a duty of 35 per cent.

Several of the concerns alluded to claim that but for the foreign duties they could greatly increase their business in that line.

If our manufacturers can compete with the cheap labor in foreign markets, where their goods have to pay a duty, they ought certainly be able to do so at home without a high protective tariff.

Let us look into this cheap labor matter so often spoken of as so hard to contend against.

We will begin by making some necessary comparisons.

In the United States in 1890 our manufactures amounted in value to $9,372,437,283, the number of hands employed 4,251,613, the average product for each employe was $2,204.44. The aggregate amount of wages paid was $1,891,224,321, making the average wages paid to each employe $444.83. In the United Kingdom of Great Britain in 1888 the manufactures amounted in value to $4,100,000,000. The number of employes 4,535,000, average product for each employe $903.52. I cannot find that the English statistics include the entire amount of labor paid, but, from the most reliable information obtainable, find it to be about thirty per cent lower than in the northern and eastern States. In the southern States it is just about the same as in England.

We will now compare the annual production of coal in this country and other countries per employe:

United States	418 tons
England	256 "
Prussia	200 "
France	127 "
Belgium	108 "

From this it will be noticed the average difference in our favor is about 120 per cent.

Mulhall says "in farming one man produces more in the United States than three men in Europe."

This seems like a great difference, but the larger scale on which it is conducted, and the labor saving machinery now in general use in this country, gives us a very great advantage not only in farming, but also in manufacturing and mining as well. By comparing the above statements and their results, it is seen that labor costs considerably less here than in Europe, when the amount of production is taken into account.

At the same time it will be observed our "Infant" has increased in stature until he is head and shoulders above anything that can be shown elsewhere, and on that account the consumers are beginning to think it time he should be doing something for his own support.

It is a moderate calculation after we have for years paid forty to fifty per cent protective duties, to estimate twenty per cent on the value of the entire manufactures as tax on the consumers.

A tax amounting annually to more than three times the entire expense of the general government.

This bounty, large as it is, goes to enrich a very small per centage of our population, it would be safe to say two per cent, for which the ninety-eight per cent are taxed by increased prices.

A Man Behind the Times.

He was not exactly a Rip VanWinkle, for he was quite young in appearance, but he must have been asleep, as he stated in court that he had been carting in Plainfield for the last ten years and had never heard of an ordinance requiring a truckman to be licensed. His name was James Burke, and he was arraigned before Judge Demeza on the charge of carting without a license. Burke obtained a license as soon as he learned that it was necessary to have one, and, on learning that fact, the Judge suspended sentence on him.

Death of Dr. Charles A. Gregory.

The Press has just learned from reliable authority of the death of Dr. Charles A. Gregory, who in 1890 lived in Plainfield and conducted a truss business in New York city. He died in a home for the aged in New York during last summer. Miss Gilbert, his ward, who also lived in Plainfield at the time the doctor did, is also dead. She died of hemorrhages while living at Litchfield, Conn., last summer.

AS IT OFTEN HAPPENS.

BY W. J. LAMPTON.

WAS nineteen, and pretty Lois Tanner was three years my junior. Sweet sixteen! Is there in all this world anything sweeter? There may be other sweet sixteens, but the comparative degree of the adjective in this connection has grown rusty from long disuse and sweet sixteen remains positive in kind and superlative in degree.

And Lois Tanner was sixteen.

From the first day of our meeting—we were the children of wealthy parents and were summering by the sea—some intangible influence, some inexplicable force seemed to draw us to each other and to run the lines of our lives parallel. For two years we had known each other, and one day—it was the third summer after our meeting—we sat on the rocks by the shore and as the waves beat in rhythmical measures upon the silver sands stretching out at our feet, I looked into her sweet blue eyes and knew that Lachesis as she drew two threads from Clotho's spindle was twisting them into one cord, forever indivisible.

In early youth, how far the eyes, undimmed by years, can see into the future, and how keen is young love to decipher the handwriting on the wall.

"Lois," I said, as we sat there in the fading twilight, "do you know how much you mean to each other?"

"Does it seem long, Mr. Belden?" she replied, with a coy little smile.

"It has been two entire years, Miss Tanner," said I, falling into her mock formality of address.

"And one learns a great deal in two years," she added.

"In one direction I have learned nothing, Lois," I said, with a quietness I did not feel.

"Why, Jack!" she exclaimed, "I don't see how you could stand still."

"But I have," I insisted.

"How?" and her eyes looked her guilelessness.

"In loving you, Lois," I broke forth. "I couldn't love you any more in a thousand years than I loved you after our first meeting."

"Oh, Jack!" she cried, nervously; "what made you say that?"

"Why shouldn't I say it?" I answered, with a dogged resolve not to be put down by any woman's whim.

"Because, Jack," she said, very earnestly, "papa has been saying all along that you and I were together too much, and the first thing the family knew there would be a case of puppy love to cure."

"Did your father say that?" I asked, with the anger showing in my face.

"He did, Jack, and he says—"

"Well, I don't care for what he says, or has said or will say," I interrupted. "If he says anything like that he doesn't know what he is talking about and hasn't the most remote idea of what a man is truly in love with the one woman in all the world for him, feels."

"Papa isn't so awfully bad, Jack," she said, in extenuation of the paternal weakness.

"I never thought he was, either, until you told me what you have," I admitted. "But, Lois," and I grew hard again, "you surely know that no father who regards the future happiness of his daughter can take the position he does and assume to dictate the course of two lives which in the nature of things must be independent of his."

"Papa says young people said the same thing and agreed with him thoroughly," she replied, arguing as women do.

"Lois," I said in my firmest tone, "don't speak to me about your father again. If you do I shall be tempted to do him some bodily injury."

The dear little woman laid her hand on my arm restrainingly and smiled with such irresistible sweetness that I even forgot the wound my own father had given me.

"Perhaps I'd better," she said coldly. "You have acted so childishly that Mr seems scarcely an appropriate title."

"You shan't talk that way to me, Lois Tanner," I exclaimed as I stepped in front of her and blocked her path. "I have done wrong, and I apologize humbly for it. Now as a lady you cannot do otherwise than accept it."

"I accept the apology, and pray, let that end the matter."

"No, it shall not. I insist upon your accepting the apology and the apologizer as well. I want you, Lois, and that's what I started to tell you down there on the rocks. Answer me now with only the sea and sky and the sweet twilight as witnesses."

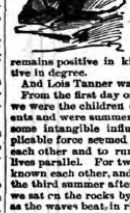
I was about to take her hand and more tenderly urge my claim to an answer, when she gave a slight scream and sprang to one side as if she had stepped on a mouse in the sand.

"Look there," she whispered, pointing to a couple seated on an old spar half in the sand, and which until then was not visible. I looked and saw Verder and Miss Swann, very close together and talking earnestly.

But it was too dark for them to see, and when Lois and I walked by them in the duskier shadows of the later evening, she had promised to be my wife, and though the great sun of the heavens had set over the world and the earth was full of shadows, the greater sun of love had risen in our hearts and they were filled with the light inextinguishable.

That was a dozen years ago, and today Lois is the proud and happy mother of three of the prettiest and sweetest children in the world except four that I am the proud and happy father of.

She is Mrs. Charles Verder and Mrs. Belden was Miss Swann.—Detroit Free Press.



"DO YOU LOVE HIM?" I ASKED.

moments ago?" I asked, returning to the previous subject.

"What did you say?" she replied, trembling a little, I thought, for she surely could not have forgotten so soon.

"I said, darling"—it was the first time I had ever called her that, and it almost frightened me—"I said that there was one thing I had not learned in the last two years, and that was to love you better than I did when I first met you. Do you think I should have learned?"

"Perhaps, Jack," she blushed, "if you had you would have gone ahead of me in the class."

"Oh, Lois," I began to say, and then began to stammer and grow red in the face. I could feel the blood fly along my neck, and my hands shook so I could not have put them out to her if now and asked me to. I had never spoken of love to a woman, and now my inexperience was painful to me I knew that the brave man could win a triumph now, but I was not brave. On the contrary, I was a coward, an arrant coward, and in my fear I slipped down off the rock, where we had been sitting, and walked out upon the sand.

"Where are you going, Jack?" she called to me. "I don't want to be left here all alone. I'm sure Charlie Verder wouldn't treat me like that."

That was enough to set me wild. Verder was the one fellow I dreaded, and he hadn't known her six months, either. I went back to the rock and stood at the foot of it, just near enough to touch the hem of her gown—such a sweet, white gown with a bit of blue showing through it as the blue sky peeps in and out from the fleecy white clouds.

"Do you like him?" I asked suddenly

"Not any more, I guess, than you like Mattie Swann," she retorted, with a perk of her nose and a shake of her fluffy hair.

"Then you like him pretty well," I said in worse humor than ever, and quite insistent upon nagging her all I could.

"Perhaps I do," she snapped, "and if I do, I'm sure he is a very nice fellow."

"Not any nicer fellow than Mattie Swann is a girl," I put in as mean as I knew how.

"Well, I don't care," she said, as she slipped off of the rock and touched the sand as lightly as a thistle down. "I'm going home, and when you get me to come away off down here in this lonesome place again at this time of day, or any other time, I think you'll know it."

Then she started off along the beach toward the row of cottages. It was a mile or more, and I thought I would keep within call, so I let her get some distance ahead of me. I poked along behind, gazing out to sea and wondering where all the beauty of the purple shadows had gone, and why it was the waves looked so cold and cruel and clammy. They were the same shadows and the same waves, and there I was, and—but where was Lois? Fifty yards up the shore and hurrying along as if she were afraid of twilight ghosts or other strange inhabitant of the crepuscular air. I looked over my shoulder nervously, and all around, and shivered. What it was I don't know, but on the instant I called to her and went after my call as fast as I ever ran after a football.

HURRYING ALONG AS IF SHE WAS AFRAID.

"Lois, Lois," I kept on calling, but she gave no heed. Her face was set away from me and she was going with it rapidly. But not so fast that I could not catch her in the next fifty yards or so.

"Oh, Mr. Belden," she said in a tone of scorn that was as keen as any pointed by her side, "how you frightened me. I had no idea you were on the beach this evening."

"O'i, Lois, Lois," I pleaded, though I puffed as I did so. "Don't talk like that. We are not children to let a trifle come between us and our love. You know I love you and I know I love you. It was because I love you so that I grew mad with jealousy when you spoke of Verder. I don't care a rap of my finger for Mattie Swann, even if you do like Charlie Verder."

"Mr. Belden," she began very stiffly—"Call me Jack, if I please," I broke in, my feeling come again. "Call me Jack, as you have always called me."

"Perhaps I'd better," she said coldly. "You have acted so childishly that Mr seems scarcely an appropriate title."

"You shan't talk that way to me, Lois Tanner," I exclaimed as I stepped in front of her and blocked her path. "I have done wrong, and I apologize humbly for it. Now as a lady you cannot do otherwise than accept it."

WORTH A FORTUNE.

Fals Dog Possesses Fifty Thousand Dollars in His Own Right.

There's a dog in Denver, Col., at this writing who fell heir to $50,000 and enjoyed the legacy so far as canine enjoyment of such a sum is possible, until ordinary consumption marked him for a victim.

Now there is a skilled surgeon retained at a big fee to attend him; he has a nurse whose sole duty it is to feed him and care for him and administer medicines at the times designated by the surgeon who has the case under consideration. Incidentally the whole family of the dead man has accompanied the dog to the west, where the canine was ordered to be taken for his health.

This particular dog, which is without doubt the richest dog in the world, is a small fox terrier, and he literally fell into his good fortune. He was a waif in the streets of Philadelphia when a wealthy native of the Quaker city named Davis found him and took him home. That was some years ago.

Davis conceived a great fondness for the terrier, and the terrier manifested a great deal of affection for Davis. The poor dog and the rich man got on together famously and became inseparable companions.

When Davis fell ill the dog seemed to realize that the illness was of a serious nature and refused to be comforted. He neither ate nor slept while Davis was sick. Davis was touched by the devotion of his canine friend. And when David had died and his will was read it was found that he had left to the dog a legacy of $50,000. No provision was made for the disposition of the legacy in the event of the terrier's death.

Soon after the dog fell heir to the fortune he, too, became ill. Skilled medical men were consulted, and they said the dog was suffering from consumption.

This legatee was treated with all the consideration which would have been accorded a human being who had a bank account of $50,000. A trained nurse was engaged to care for the terrier to see that the orders of the dog's physicians should be carried out to the letter. Cod liver oil was administered in prescribed doses and at regular intervals throughout the day and night.

But the condition of the terrier did not improve. He grew worse steadily, and finally the physicians ordered a change of climate. It was decided that he be taken to Denver. He was taken there in the hope that the change of air might benefit his lungs, says the Denver Republican. At the present time the dog, surrounded by the family of the dead man, is quartered at the leading fashionable hotel of Denver.

It is an interesting question whether the $50,000 reverts to the family in the event of the dog's death, which is certain, or goes to the state of Pennsylvania.

COMMANDER BRICE.

The Gallant Record of the New United States Fish Commissioner.

Commander John J. Brice, of California, whom President Cleveland has just appointed fish commissioner, is one of the most popular naval men on the Pacific coast. He has been identified with the work of the United States fish commission since 1890. When first ordered to that duty he became intensely interested in the work and soon became very proficient. His appointment as fish commissioner was made at the solicitation of Senator White, of California, who was backed in his recommendation by a large number of persons interested in the fish culture of the coast. Commander Brice entered the volunteer navy in 1861. His first duties were with the United States steamer Freeborn. He was twice promoted for gallant conduct, and in 1868 was transferred to the regular navy. He served in the Atlantic squadron until 1870, in which year he was transferred to the hydrographic office. After that he served the navy department in many capacities, until 1878, when he was ordered to the navy yard at Mare Island. In 1885 Commander Brice was ordered to the Iroquois, of the Pacific squadron. In 1889 he was stationed at the navy yard in Washington.

Number of Stars Visible.

To the average eye not more than 5,000 stars are visible; some persons having extraordinarily strong eyes can see about 8,000 stars. Through the Lick telescope and other powerful instruments about 50,000,000 stars are visible.

Democratic State Convention.

The Democratic voters of New Jersey are requested to meet at such times and places as may be designated by their local committees to elect delegates to a State Convention, to be held at

Taylor's Opera House,

in the city of Trenton, on

THURSDAY, MAY 7th, 1896,

at 12 o'clock noon, for the purpose of selecting four (4) Senatorial and sixteen (16) District Delegates to the Democratic National Convention to be held to nominate candidates for President and Vice-President of the United States.

The basis of representation will be one delegate for each two hundred Democratic votes cast at the Gubernatorial election of 1895, and one for each fraction of the same over one hundred; but each ward and township shall be entitled to at least one delegate.

DEMOCRATIC STATE COMMITTEE.

E. F. C. Young, Chairman. Willard C. Fisk, Secretary.

Democratic Primaries.

The Democratic voters of North Plainfield Borough will meet in the basement of the School House on Saturday evening, May 2d, at 8 o'clock to elect 2 delegates to attend the State Convention at Trenton, May 7th. The voters in the Township of North Plainfield will meet at Demler's Hotel at 8 o'clock in the afternoon of same day. May 2d, to elect delegates to attend the same convention.

Somebody played tag in the Eighth District Republican convention and Riker collared the nomination, remarks the Newark News.

The new woman in New York is to have a club house all to herself. Think of the excuses for tardiness that the old man will have to accept when the thing is in full blast.

If Pennsylvania ruled the roost Senator Quay would be the next President, for the Keystone Republican State convention yesterday declared their sentiment to be such.

An Elizabeth real estate dealer says that the reason there are so few sales of land in that city is that the prices are too high. But a better description is this interrogation: Why go to Elizabeth when you can come to Plainfield?

Up in New York State farmers are burning potatoes for fuel, because they are cheaper than coal. Down here in New Jersey farmers say that they are willing to give them away in order to clear out their cellars. It is a sad condition for the farmers to face.

Franklin Murphy seems to have decided that Mayor Lentz can make him the next Governor of New Jersey, while Foster M. Voorhees appears to have come to the conclusion that Frank Bergen and William P. Corbin will perform a like feat for him.—World.

The countips to elect Senators this year are Essex, Monmouth, Somerset, Union, Gloucester, Camden, Salem and Warren. All of these counties except Warren are now represented by Republicans. The Democrats are certain to elect in Sussex, Monmouth, Somerset and Warren, and probably in Salem and Union in November next.

There is something winning in the personality of ex-Gov. Russell, of Massachusetts. His ideas of Government are the accepted ones of the eastern States, and ought to make him strong with the people. By established precedent his age is against him, but today people are beginning to realize that it is not always the oldest man who knows how to do best. But "favorite sons" seldom show up well in the convention. It is a difficult thing to enthuse people for someone whose reputation is almost local to their native State.

The Common Council displayed a good deal of common sense in defeating that section in the proposed bicycling ordinance which made it compulsory for all vehicles to carry lights on the streets after dark. A vehicle with four iron tire wheels preceded by the clattering hoofs of a horse, cannot be classed with the silent, swift-running bicycle, in the possible risk of accidents from collision, and to have compelled owners and drivers of vehicles with horse locomotion to carry a headlight, would have been a usurpation of rights which precedence and common sense have already established.

It is quite probable that the McKinley fight will crop out in the new State Republican Committee when it organizes, says the New York Journal. Franklin Murphy, the present chairman, is for McKinley. While he has made a splendid chairman and helped pull the party through to victory last year and for two years previous, he is not liable to be re-elected. John Kean will doubtless be elected. He is understood to be sure of the support of most of the committee. The new committee, like the old, is said to be anti-McKinley in its make up.

The Sun calls it "a small Harrison boom." But it has considerable time to grow before the convention meets in St. Louis.

Averaged up, New Jersey people are very law-abiding. Here is a Cape May county Grand Jury reporting without a single indictment.

The severe penalty which Justice Mattison imposed on John Barry, of the borough, this morning, will meet with the hearty approval of every citizen who has one speck of humanity left in them.

Plainfield is essentially a city of conventions this year. Already a half dozen big events that will attract a large out-of-town attendance are scheduled to be held here. Welcome to them all and as many more as will come.

Advertising will not make a fortune for you in a day, but if done judiciously, it will pay handsomely in the long run. If the business is of a kind that can be profitably increased, it will pay to advertise it.—Charles Austin Bates.

This is odd. Dave Martin, notorious as one of the most corrupt politicians of Pennsylvania, says he is for McKinley for President in face of the fact that the Keystone State Republicans have declared for Matt Quay. Martin believes that the Presidential candidacy should not be joked with.

In Westfield the Epworth League, so a newspaper report says, has failed to make the Italian shopkeepers close on Sunday. The League doubtless is in need of that essential thing so much desired in all reformatory movements—backbone. Editor Pearsall certainly ought to have some to spare.

If it is true that the bicycle manufacturers are forming a trust, they must indeed want the earth. Comparing the cost of labor and material in a bicycle with the price that has to be paid for it, it would seem as if the manufacturers must be already riding on the top wave of opulence.—Newark News.

The Press is surprised to hear that Elizabeth is without a Young Men's Christian Association. Plainfield has long realized the great benefits of that institution for the young men of this city, and the best advise we can give to the Union county metropolis is get one as soon as possible. It makes manly men in a manly way.

The rank and file of the New Jersey Republicans may favor McKinley for the Presidential candidate, but it is evident that the leaders are for some other man, judging from the action of the State and the Eighth District Congressional conventions. There is a growing idea that Harrison is regarded favorably by the New Jersey bosses.

The Plainfield Street Railway Company has at last struck a spurt. The road is to be extended to New Market. The distance to only about three miles, but it is something. If Plainfield does not stir itself the Brunswick Trustee Company will get into the game some fine morning, and folks will be coming over here to shop before summer is half over. Keep your eye on New Brunswick.—New Brunswick Home News.

All of the above sounds very nicely to the ears of those who live in the rickety old Duteh town. Plainfield is not worrying, however, over an rash enterprise from her sleepy neighbor in Middlesex.

After all the efforts of those who have an eye for rugged and natural beauty to preserve the Palisades from destruction, by having the Government establish a military and National park thereon, it seems probable that the proposition will be defeated in Congress. Senator Sewell says that New Jersey should take steps to acquire the Palisades, and thus show to the country that it is desirous of preserving the magnificent region from the quarry vandals who are engaged in despoiling it.

James E. Martine, resoureeful in ideas as any man, says that the Women's Town Improvement Association should do anything better for the beauty of Plainfield than to agitate the subject of planting shade trees on the business streets. The Farmer Orator is an enthusiast in this direction, and believes that the accomplishment of such an idea would add inestimably to the worth of the city as a desirable residential place while it would in no way interfere with its commercial progress.

Assemblyman Queen, of Hudson County, had the stamina to demand legislation from the last legislature which was offensive to railroad corporations, and it is now said that Rufus Blodgett, a somewhat influential Democrat, is bound to humiliate Assemblyman Queen by using his power in the State committee to defeat him as chairman of the coming State convention. The Democratic party is not in a condition, at the present time, to allow such proceeding within their own lines, and if Mr. Queen is really anxious to be chairman of the State Convention, the party cannot better recognize his brilliant services in the Legislature than to accord him that honor. This is no time for bickerings of this sort.

LIVES WERE IN PERIL.

NARROW ESCAPE OF A JERSEY CENTRAL EXPRESS TRAIN.

The Driving Rod of the Engine Broke While Crossing the Bay Bridge—The Cars Came Within an Inch of Going Over

Three hundred souls were within an ace of going to eternity Saturday owing to the breaking of the driving rod of an engine as it was crossing the trestle over the Newark Bay at a high rate of speed. The locomotive was lifted from the track, and the forward truck went over the guard which protects the rails, and the wheels were within one inch of the edge of the ties. The cowcatcher projected over the great expanse of water, and if the train had not been stopped there might have been one of the greatest railroad tragedies of the age to report, as there is nothing to prevent trains leaping into the bay should they get off the track. The bay is a mile and a quarter wide, and no help could get to the spot.

The train left Somerville at 9 o'clock a. m., and when it reached Elizabeth at 10:56 it was well filled with passengers among whom were scores of women going to New York on shopping bent. It makes no stop until it reaches Jersey City, and it usually travels at about forty-five miles an hour.

Across the trestle it was rushing, with the Philadelphia flyer close at its heels, when suddenly there was a report like that of the discharge of a pistol. The train rocked from side to side, and passengers were forced into close and informal acquaintance with one another. There was a lurch or two, and finally the train stopped.

"Git out, boys; git out for your lives!" cried the brakemen, as they rushed frantically through the cars. Then there was pandemonium. The women began to scream, and the men had to carry some of them bodily from the train.

"What shall I do? I've got to buy a new bonnet, and I can't die yet," wailed a young Plainfield dame as she stepped from one tie to another, and was in constant fear of falling between them into the water below.

The good looking conductor gave her solace by saying that it was a narrow squeak, but that the danger was all over and that a train would soon come along and obviate the necessity of walking to Jersey City.

One man, a stout German fish dealer named Muller, who hails from Plainfield, also became so frightened at being thrown full length on the floor of the smoking car that he tried to get through a window in his haste to escape.

He became wedged and it required the combined efforts of three train hands to get him back into the car again.

The engineer, "Pat" Lynch, had a narrow escape from having his head smashed. The rod broke, which had broken off, flew back through the cab window and struck him on the head. His thick golf cap broke the blow, but nevertheless he had a bad bruise to show.

The engine was right across the track, and the steam was blowing through the valves with a deafening roar. The draw bar had become disconnected from the forward driving wheel and fallen to the track. It caught one of the ties, and the impetus of the train forced the engine up in the air and off the track. The track was twisted and torn for some distance, and the ties for several hundred yards were forced into the bay.

The reason that the train was unloaded so unceremoniously was a fear on the part of the trainmen that the Philadelphia flyer, which travels from Philadelphia to Jersey City in an hour and forty minutes, could not be flagged in time to prevent her from crashing into the derailed train.

For a minute or two the passengers had their hearts in their mouths, because they knew that if the Philadelphia train should collide with the one lying helpless before it they could not avoid witnessing a gigantic accident. It happened, however, that the flyer was two minutes late.

It was switched to another track and flagged to pick up the passengers who stood clustered on the bridge. They reached Jersey City ten minutes late, but it was ten minutes of terrible anxiety.

BARRY'S BADGE ASKED FOR.

Mayor Hegeman Found That the Borough Officer Was Guilty.

The case of Special Marshal Wm. Barry, of the borough, has been settled by the police committee, and Mayor Hegeman has asked for his badge. It will be remembered that it was claimed that he assaulted Edward Vanduary at the Arlington Hotel recently. The case was taken to the Somerset county court, and the evidence was strongly in favor of Vandury, hence the authorities have asked for Barry's badge.

STRUCK BY A CYCLIST.

John Chandler Seriously Hurt By an Unknown and Reckless Rider.

John Chandler, of East Third street, who had about recovered from a severe illness, sustained serious injuries Saturday night which will keep him closely confined for some time. He had some business down town which he wanted to attend to, and it was his first appearance since his recovery. While crossing Somerset street, near the bridge, he was struck by a cycle rider with such force that he was knocked down and the rider was thrown from his wheel. The latter as quickly as possible regained his wheel and rode off, leaving Mr. Chandler in the road. Mr. Chandler's face was severely cut and bruised and one eye almost closed. The wheel struck him in the right side, making him exceedingly lame and sore.

He was taken home and Dr. Lowrie called. The wounds were dressed and the patient made as comfortable as possible. Today his left side is affected and he suffers great pain. It was impossible for him to tell who the cycler was, as he disappeared so quickly.

The Annual Convention to Be Held in This City May 21st and 22d.

The annual meeting of the New Jersey Forestry Association, May 21st and 22d, will be held in the Casino. The afternoon meeting will be on the "Elements and Principles of Forestry," especially arranged for schools. An evening meeting will be addressed by B. E. Fernon, of Washington. Gov. Griggs will be present. An exhibit of maps, photographs and wood specimens, will be displayed in adjoining rooms. On the 22d an excursion is planned to the Palisades. Many delegates and scientific visitors will attend the meeting.

A Dog Tries to Bite a Child.

A dog belonging to the Galloway family, of Westervelt avenue, was taken with a fit Saturday night and attempted to bite Miss Sadie Winkler, of Park place. The dog was finally captured after biting several of the neighbor's dogs.

DRANK THE RED WINE.

A CHURCH BROKEN INTO AND THE SACRAMENT IMBIBED OF.

Pitiable Sight of an Intoxicated Boy Who Gained an Entrance to the Plymouth Brethren's Edifice and Drank the Wine

One of the most pitiable sights ever witnessed in this city, and undoubtedly the only one on record, transpired Saturday afternoon. Three boys, young in years, broke into the church on Grove street, formerly occupied by the First Church of Christ congregation, but now used by the Plymouth Brethern. Whether they had any object in view is not apparent, but after effecting an entrance they discovered a quantity of wine which is used for communion services. They were anxious to learn the contents, and after doing so, they indulged in the liquid. It tasted pretty good and one drink was not enough. They tarried until a considerable quantity was taken from the bottle. One of them was immediately affected, while the other two boys, escaped without any apparent harm.

The boys came out of the church into the street when it was noticed that the imbibing lad was unable to walk straight. The sidewalk was not wide enough to hold him and so he took the street. The other boys became frightened and ran to Barker's drug store. They told Mr. Barker about their comrade and then skipped. A woman happened to be passing and she noticed the boy lying in the street. Thinking he was ill she picked him up and took him to the drug store, where Mr. Barker examined him. He at once detected the odor of wine, and found that he was completely under the influence of it except that he was able to talk fairly well. Dr. Long was sent for and administered proper treatment, after which the boy was taken home. His father feels badly about the affair, and cannot account for his son's desire to act so.

GOOD THINGS TO EAT.

Successful Supper Given by the W. C. T. U. Saturday Evening.

A success and profitable supper was given in the W. C. T. U. rooms Saturday afternoon and evening from 5 to 11 o'clock, under the auspices of the Union. Every effort was put forth to make the affair and enjoyable one and in this the committee did not fail. Promptly at 5 o'clock supper was ready and soon afterward patrons began to arrive. They were received cordially by the committee and made to feel at home.

A most excellent supper was served for twenty cents and no one complained of not having enough. During the hours that supper was served the Misses Cahoone rendered pleasing selections on the violin and piano.

The committee who arranged the supper and were in charge consisted of Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, Mrs. Isaac Brokaw, Mrs. J. M. McNaughton, Mrs. R. R. Case, Mrs. Andrew Cox, Mrs. Ramsey Blair, Mrs. Cahoone and Miss May Cahoone.

WATCHMAN WAS AWAY.

During His Absence Officer Rockafellow Tried the Door—Hot Argument.

John P. Emmons, the mason and builder, who has the work at the First National Bank building, has for sometime employed a man to watch the building nights. Of late there has been several complaints made that the man did not attend strictly to business. Saturday evening the watchman left the building for a time and went down Front street toward Madison avenue. While he was returning Night Watchman Geo. Rockafellow tried the back door to see if it was locked and while doing this the other watchman appeared and wanted to know what business he had in trying the doors. The result was a heated discussion, and the bank watchman did not hesitate to use any word that entered his mind. He was threatened with arrest but the threat was not carried out.

SURPRISED AT DUNELLEN.

Chandler Riker Talks About the Extension of the Street Railway.

Chander Riker, of Newark, president of the Mountain Park Inn, was in town Saturday and together with Superintendent Adleman, of the street railway, drove to Johnston's to select a route for the proposed extension of the road to the hotel. The result of their investigation will be made known later. In speaking about the proposed extension into Dunellen, Mr. Riker said he was somewhat surprised at the attitude of some of the Dunellen officials. Heretofore they were inclined to treat the company kindly, and wanted no more than what was right.

He also said the New Market and South Plainfield people were urging the company to extend their tracks through their towns and he thought it would result in a big boom in case the road ran in that direction.

MILK-RATE WAR.

To Offset an Exorbitant Advance in the Price of Ice.

It looks as if there would be a milk-rate war in Newark as an offset to the exorbitant advance in ice prices. One hundred milk vendors from every section of Essex and Union counties met in Irvington to canvass the situation. Facts were produced showing that the Alderney Dairy Company had commenced cutting prices. This concern has twenty wagons and thousands of patrons.

Wilkinson, Gaddis & Co., of Newark, were accused of advancing the interests of the Alderney Company, but sent in a denial.

Assurances were received from the Grocers' Protective Association promising the milk dealers every assistance in retaliation.

Another meeting will be held at an date, when measures will be taken to fight the price cutters by lowering the present delivery milk rates.

A PLAINFIELDER'S RISE.

William H. Dunn Now Visiting Superintendent of the New York City Schools.

"The School," a paper published in New York city, has in its last issue an excellent portrait of William Henry Harrison Dunn, a native and former resident of this city, but now visiting superintendent of the New York public schools. The following sketch accompanies the picture and will be read with interest by many residents of Plainfield.

"Among the principals who come into the New York schools with the new district from Westchester, is Wm Henry Harrison Dunn, one of the most conscientious and painstaking. He has devoted himself to the profession of teaching as a life work. Mr. Dunn's genial and kindly nature has made him at all times a favorite with the pupils and the parents. He comes of old American stock of Scotch-Irish ancestry, having been born at Plainfield, Union county, where his family have had their homes since Colonial times, previous to the Revolution. Mr. Dunn was educated at Alfred University, New York. He began his studies for the ministry, but becoming interested in teaching, he determined to devote himself to that profession. He has been one of the most active teachers in the Weschester County Institutes, and with Mr. Delvin, he acted for several years as an assistant to State Commissioner Sandford in the direction of these institutes. Mr. Dunn is a close and careful student with progressive ideas of education. He is a member of the Schoolmaster's Club of of the Pedagogical Society and the Teacher's Association and of the central committee of the last named association. In his suburban home he is a citizen in good standing, a member of Huguenot Lodge, F. and A. M., and of Bronx Council, Royal Arcanum."

Mrs. Albert Drake, of 303 West Second street, is a sister of Mr. Dunn.

SAVE THE ELMS.

To Do This the Elm Leaf Bug Will Have to be Destroyed.

During the past few years the elm tree beetle, a little yellowish creature, not more than a fourth of an inch long, has done a tremendous amount of injury to the elm trees in this city. In its larval stage it does its most harm. When it preys upon the tender leaves, causing them to turn brown and finally to fall from the tree.

This insect can be exterminated in its larval state by applying a solution of Paris green and slacked lime to the trees them selves, and later, about the first of July, in its pupal state by saturating the ground under the elms by a kerosene emulsion. For further information concerning this treatment, see Bulletin 121 of the Connecticut Agricultural Experiment Station. This report may be obtained from the Park Committee of the Town Improvement Association of which Mrs. E. W. McCarthy is chairman.

Aiming to Pay Off the Debt.

A sociable will be given at Marconier chapel Thursday evening by the Christian Endeavor Society of the chapel. The entertainment will include music by the Metuchen Glee Club, the Rose Game and the Jewel Loaf. Ice cream, cake and lemonade will be on sale. The proceeds are to be devoted to paying off the debt resulting from the building of the chapel. If the night is stormy the sociable will be held on the next pleasant evening.

A Mock Trial To Make Fun.

A mock trial will be held in the Mt. Zion church on West Fourth street next Thursday night, in which the characters will be impersonated by members of the congregation. A like event was held there sometime ago and proved to be a very funny affair and this will doubtless prove the same. William Wilson is the one who will act as the accused, and he will be charged with holding up a train and robbing the mail agent of $65,000. Daniel Upshaw will act as his attorney and Lemuel Perry will argue for the commonwealth. The judges will be W. Groves, G. Cannon and A. Smith. J. Perkins will act as sheriff of the court and A. White as clerk. After the trial is finished the ladies of the church will furnish refreshments.

WANT A SETTLEMENT.

HEIRS OF WILLIMER J. LOWE ANXIOUS TO GET HIS MONEY.

It is Deposited in the First National Bank and Cannot Be Divided Until an Order is Received from the Chancellor

The New York World says Monday that the widow of the late Willimer J. Lowe is going to issue a citation against Assemblyman W. R. Codington, who has been acting as attorney for the administrators, Mrs. W. J. Lowe and Hezekiah Hand. The story goes on to say that the widow has not received any of the money coming to her and that she is in want.

A Daily Press reporter met both Assemblyman Codington and Assemblyman Charles A. Reed this morning and learned the true facts of the case. Mr. Reed said that about one year ago the Chancellor ordered him to sell the hotel property located at Morristown, and belonging to the late Willimer J. Lowe.

The sale realized about $2,050 and was purchased by Thomas Lowe, a brother of the former owner. As the living brother had an interest in the property, according to law, one half of the whole value reverted back to him. The remaining half was placed in the First National Bank by Mr. Reed and is now there awaiting an order from the Chancellor to divide the money and give Mrs. Lowe her share.

Mr. Codington told the Press reporter that he was only acting as attorney for the administrators and had never held one penny of the money, neither had he received a penny for his services. He also said that nothing could be done until the Chancellor issued the necessary order.

Mr. Lowe was a well known Jersey politician. He died rather suddenly on New Year's eve 1893. He didn't leave a will and there was litigation over his estate between his brother, Thomas E. Lowe, of Morristown, and the widow. The Union County court sustained the widow's claim.

FOR THE BENEFIT OF THE LIBRARY.

St. Stephen's Guild Held a Profitable Sale and Tea.

The parish house of St. Stephen's church, Netherwood, presented an attractive scene Saturday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock, when the sewing class of the Guild, composed of young girls, gave their second tea and sale for the benefit of the Sunday-school library. The attendance was excellent, and the articles for sale were readily disposed of. The members of the sewing class have become quite expert in the use of the needle, and their work is really meritorious. Everything on sale was made by the girls, and they take considerable pride in the sales. Mrs. E. P. T. Finch and Mrs. A. J. Beal received the guests and also poured tea.

The domestic table, which was brimful of household necessities, was in charge of Laura Christiansen and Mamie Erickson, while the fancy table was presided over by Louise Peterson and Betty Bartlow. Anna Borrup looked after the cake, and Nellie Clarkson, the fruit. A feature was a table filled with all sorts of bags for household use. This was in charge of Anna Bartlow.

At the last tea and sale nearly $25 was cleared, and an effort is being made to raise $65. Miss Florence R. Beale had a general oversight of the affair and assisted very much in making it a success.

The Newark "Advertiser," or rather a correspondent of that journal, is responsible for the statement that the Democratic leaders of this state are disturbed at the possibility of a control of the State Convention by the silverites. This danger is purely imaginative, and not at all real. The people of New Jersey are too deeply interested in the general prosperity of tht country to be carried away by the theories of those who imagine that a plentiful and debased currency is a sign of prosperity.—True American.

After all, Louisiana shows up well with 23 000 plurality for the Democratic candidate for Governor.

MUCH FOR LITTLE.

An Exhibition Worth Ten Times the Price of Admission.

No circus ever exhibits in New York except Barnum & Bailey's Greatest Show on Earth. Nothing else need be said. But even then the Madison Square Garden, in New York, big as it is, is not large enough to contain more than one half this show. It is only under the enormous tents on the road that the entire show can be seen to perfection. It is a bitter pill to all other show managers to realize that their shows are not large enough nor good enough to place before the critical audiences of the Metropolis. Every large city of the country is visited by Barnum & Bailly, for their greatest patronage is derived from the intelligent and educated classes of the people, as the wonderful attractions and features appeal to the refined everywhere. In the menageries one can see the giant and dwarf animals of all kinds, witness the wonderful power of man over the brute creation, as shown in the marvelous performances of the troupes of wild beasts doing everything at the word of command of a weaponless trainer. Besides, all the cages of animals are properly classified, so as the smallest child can readily comprehend and understand the different species, while those studiously inclined will find ample material for study in the strange people from India. Herds of elephants, open dens of wild beasts, droves of camels, 400 superb horses, ponies, zebras, quaggas and animals in leash are distributed everywhere. Three rings, three stages, a racing track, besides a veritable cobweb of aerial apparatus are required to show the 100 acts of the varied entertainments. Certainly in no other show can so much be seen for so little, and no matter what the admission price charged it would still be the cheapest show to visit, because no one can see so much, learn so much, and go away all the happier for the visit. Among the many other new and novel performances in the rings are the equestrian May-pole dance, the bunkers' meet, the high jumping horse contests, the new woman on horseback, two lady clowns, the flight of the human arrow, 50 trained horses performing in one ring, and tumbling and leaping tournaments, not mentioning anything about the novel aerial feats by the champions of all countries. Sixteen champion bareback riders, all in fact of any consequence to be had, are a magnificent addition to the long list of expert performers. While gorillas are the giant gorilla—as long as she lives, will remain the greatest living attraction ever seen at any time in the world's history. The crowned heads of the world, with their military escorts, will be grandly depicted in the new free street parade when the show arrives in Plainfield next Wednesday.

UNITARIAN WOMEN TO MEET HERE.

Members of the Metropolitan District to Come to Plainfield.

The New York League of Unitarian Women, an association for the study religious and ethical subjects, numbering some three hundred members from New York, Brooklyn and neighboring towns, has accepted the invitation of the Plainfield Branch Alliance to hold its last meeting for this season in All Souls's church, this city, Friday, May 1st. The morning programme, beginning at 11 o'clock, will consist of papers by Mrs. William I. Nichols, of Brooklyn, and Mrs. Robert H. Davis, of New York, on "The Service Which Rational Religion Demands," followed by discussion. All Plainfield women who are interested will be welcome. An intermission of an hour for luncheon will be taken at 1 o'clock, and at 2 the league will be called to order again for its annual business session, which will be concluded in time for the out-of-town members to take the 4 o'clock train for New York.

Jersey Central's Earnings for March.

The New Jersey Central Railroad earned gross for March $934,049 a decrease of $106,799 and net of $272,578, a decrease of $133,795.

Health

Depends upon keeping the blood in a pure condition, free from disease germs, and yet there are very few people who have perfectly pure blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla eliminates, vitalizes and enriches the blood, throwing out the impurities that clog and irritate the system and permits no lodgment of the seeds of disease. Read the following:

"I cannot recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla too highly for it has done wonders for me. I was

and all run down and my health was so poor I could not get out of doors. I was not able to do anything, being troubled with asthma and heart disease. I was nervous and could not sleep nights. I had become completely discouraged when I happened to read an advertisement of Hood's Sarsaparilla and concluded to give it a trial. After taking the first bottle I felt better and since taking five bottles I am so much improved that I feel like a new man. I am now able to do a fair day's work and sleep at night. My heart does not trouble me and I have realized great relief for asthma. I feel full of courage once more and life seems brighter and worth living. I would recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all afflicted as I have been, for I know it will help them. If this statement of facts will be of benefit, you are welcome to use it as you please." HENRY J. Townsend's

Well

Marble and Granite Works,

30

Somerset st., North Plainfield.

If you have not engaged your work I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertise for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

TROPICAL EARTHQUAKE.

Hairbreadth Escape of Two Americans from Death.

Terrible Experience in the Volcanic Virgin Islands. A Whole Island Shattered and Almost Submerged by These Terrible Visitations.

[Special Kingston (Jamaica) Letter.]

There is probably no phenomenal manifestation of nature's supreme power on the earth more awful and terrifying to man and beast alike than the earthquake. Thunder and lightning are common; of the tornado and even the volcanic eruption one has some warning and the consolation of the excitement of fleeing for safety. The earthquake is rare; it comes upon you suddenly, with an overwhelming roar and rush that paralyzes the faculties, and you can do nothing but stand where you are—or more frequently lie where you are thrown—until it is over or you are swallowed by the yawning earth or drowned by the advancing sea wave.

My life has been one of active movement, mostly in far-away, wild lands, where earth's reserve store houses of mineral wealth do mostly lie; and it has naturally been interspersed with more or less thrilling adventure. But of all my experience "not on the programme" my first earthquake easily makes the best assay for horror and utter dismay. I have felt many since, and tolerably severe ones, too, in Chili and Peru, but none quite came up to the standard of that in the system of the Central American volcanic belt, the story of which I am about to relate.

I had been detailed by our syndicate to go down to look after some mines in Venezuela. En route I was to stop off at St. Thomas and proceed to Virgin Gorda, one of the larger Virgin islands, to examine and report on a copper mine of alleged enormous value that was in the market by order of the British court of chancery. I was to stop at Tortola to present my credentials to the governor, or "president," who centered in himself all the local authority of the little archipelago colony, and obtain permission to explore the property. This was done, in due course, and I further received permission to occupy part of Cooper hall, the residence of the mine managers and officers when the mine which was now abandoned was being worked. It was a kindly concession, as I found on arrival, but it might have cost me my life and that of my ten-year-old son, who accompanied me.

Leaving the long and straggling, and withal desolate but preeminently picturesque "capital," Road Town, behind us, we started on the final stage of our trip early one mid-winter morning, in a climate like unto that of our northern Indian summer; a cloudless gray sky, fast deepening into azure, arching overhead, and a sparkling expanse of waveflecked sea spreading away before us until at the horizon it merged invisibly into the sky line. But at first the horizon was seen only in sections, for to the eastward lay a long chain of some of the smaller "Virgins," half a dozen of them, that had to be passed ere we gained the open sea and bore away for our destination, which lay 20-odd miles off to the north and east.

Soon we were skimming along the chain, which rose, gaunt and arid, elevated, rugged, rocky, precipitous and deep-caverned, from the blue depths of the ocean. Quite waterless, not a trace of verdure except cacti and some species of marine scrub could be seen on their slopes. Yet fishing hamlets were to be seen at intervals, and occasionally we bounded along the ragged riggers. The scene was too novel, however, not to be attractive; and its monotony was easily escaped by looking westward at the superb spectacle of the towering, verdant heights, cloud-capped and glittering in the level morning sun rays of the larger islands of Tortola, Jost Van Dyke and St. John, which overlapped one the other in exquisite gradations of green and gray and purple coloring.

WENT DOWN LIKE A CARD HOUSE.

But soon we were plunging and'd the choppy waves of the open Caribbean, that made my boy sicker than did the long, sweeping rollers of the Atlantic. It was a tropical meridian sun that now beat on us from the same unclouded sky, and whose rays intensified the discomfort of the stinging saline spray that ever flecked our hands and faces.

So that we were glad when the evening brought us under the northern cliffs of Virgin Gorda, and our shallop ran through a turmoil of reef-broken waters into a land-locked bay, crowning whose precipitous bluff stood the palatial pile of buildings called Copper hall.

Within a week my work was done, the mine promised a bonanza, indeed—but the report I was destined to make proved as sensational as it was disappointing. My traps had already gone down to the village on the leeward coast, and we, my son and I, were to sleep there also so as to make an early or "forecday" start for St. Thomas. It was yet early afternoon, about four o'clock, and preparatory to the ride across the island we had been for a last dip in the cool and inviting waters of the bay under Mine hill bluff.

As we gained the edge of the cliff fronting the hall a stallion—a savage brute with which I had already had trouble—came snorting around the hill inclosure, full tilt at us. There was no escape from his furious charge other than by climbing on some huge bowlders that dangerously overhung the precipice. This I succeeded in doing, only to find that the snorting was not from the animal and that he was not now enraged, but overcome with terror. For we were perched on the rocks the "snorting" had waxed to a terrific roar that filled the air. The horse, unable to go farther, sidled up to the rock as though seeking human companionship; with my outstretched hand I patted his erected head, and he whinnied in the most friendly manner.

The rumbling roar continued till, as it were, its very vibrations shook the earth and made the bowlders oscillate. Then came a crashing shock that seemed to shake the whole island, and instinctively I knew that it was an earthquake. Another, heavier, longer shock, and the sparkling waters of the bay clouded like a mirror that is breathed upon, and the gentle waves on a sudden began to rage as under the impetus of some submarine force. One or two fishing boats that were running in were instantly swamped. As I gazed horror-stricken on this scene, watching the ineffectual struggles of the doomed men, a crashing sound from inland not of the earthquake attracted my attention, and I looked behind just in time to see the entire mass of stone buildings go down like a card house! In a moment it seemed as though literally not one stone was left on the other. Even the lookout tower, a heavy granite affair, split down and broke across, the top part plunging to the ground. Completer ruin I never witnessed.

But the worst was to come. Whilst I gazed at the falling pile a third shock rent the earth. So severe was this that the bowlder actually started in its bed, almost precipitating us off it. Clasping the boy securely to my side, I glanced seaward—and then sat spellbound, fairly paralyzed with terror. For a gigantic wave was advancing up the bay, its curving cavity black and ominous, its foam-fringed crest towering with a luster yet more ominous, fully a hundred feet above the level! With a roar like a thousand elephants it burst along the cliffs and came rushing over the land.

Perched high up on the rock as we were, my son and I were only drenched and almost smothered in the cataract of spume that flew over us; but the powerful horse was swept from his feet and borne along like a log. At this moment a fourth shock shook the island, and a curious thing occurred. As I dashed the spray from my eyes I noticed that the wave was receding—sucked back by a great whirlpool that had formed in the bay. Presently with a mighty roar a vast column of water was projected from the mine shaft, charged with earth, rocks, fishes and other debris.

Now, in very truth, I felt that death was nigh. That last shock had rent the island through its base, and I momentarily expected to find it crumbling into the sea! Clasping my son yet closer to me, I lay back as to meet my end. But it had already come. The earthquake's work was done there, and it had passed on to the south. Even so far as it went, however, it was terribly complete work. The island was shattered in every direction and its springs almost entirely dried up.

It lasted only ten minutes altogether—but another such terror-filled experience I hope never to pass through.

T. P. PORTER.

Formidable Engine of Death.

Eugene Paul Brand has just submitted a fearful weapon to the German minister of war. It surpasses all inventions in the sphere of death-dealing instruments in the shade. The Brand contrivance is a gun, which is not loaded with powder, but with compressed gas. A single charge will suffice for 2,500 shots, and volleys of 50 shots each can be fired in rapid succession. This Brand-new invention is one of the numerous and improved methods of killing people that advancing civilization is now demanding. His activity in destroying human lives will doubtless win for him a monument.

RIGHTS OF THE CYCLISTS.

A LONG DISCUSSION IN THE COUNCIL OVER THE BICYCLE ORDINANCE.

Councilman Serrell Argued That Lights Should be Carried by All Vehicles at Night—Confined to Wheelmen Only.

When President See called the special meeting of the City Council to order last Friday all the members were present except Messrs. Dumont and Ginna. Clerk MacMurray read the call, after which the business specified was taken up in order.

The bicycle ordinance was the first matter brought up for consideration. On motion of Mr. Fisk it was placed on its second reading. Mr. Fisk objected to the part which referred to the placing of lamps on road vehicles. He thought that in a town like this it would be impossible to enforce it. The proper thing to do would be to place the matter in an ordinance to regulate cabs, coaches, etc. Mr. Serrell thought that as wheelmen were obliged to have a light on their wheels, though coming from out of town, it was a poor rule that wouldn't work both ways.

Mr. Barrows stated that the Police Board had under consideration such an ordinance which would probably be offered soon. The section referring to lights on road vehicles was stricken out by a full vote. The section referring to bells was read and discussed. Mr. Serrell thought if bells were rung at crosswalks, and when approaching vehicles, pedestrians, etc., less accidents would occur. Mr. Westphal thought it left a chance for dispute as probably there would only be two persons present, leaving no one to swear as to who was right.

On Mr. Fisk's motion the portion referring to where pedestrians and occupants of vehicles do not recognize the presence of a cycler, was stricken out.

Section four regulating the speed of a wheel, and granting children the priviledge of riding on the sidewalks was also stricken out on Mr. Fisk's motion. Mr. Fisk said that the children were with us and would continue to be with us. They had always ridden on the sidewalk and would continue whether they were allowed or not. The balance of the ordinance was ordered engrossed and advertised. As the street sprinkling ordinance was referred to the street committee at the last meeting it was improperly placed in the call and was laid over.

Mr. Fisk suggested that the street committeeite given till the next meeting to consider the sidewalk ordinance and the same was granted. The ordinance referring to the appointment of commissioners to make assessments for damages and benefits in connection with the sewers and the ordinance relating to the assessments of taxes for 1896 were both adopted on final passage. The petition of Mr. Phillips regarding sidewalks in the West End was referred to the street committee.

The license applications, as published in these columns, were brought up and granted, except the one of J. L. Hand, as auctioneer. Mr. Fisk opposed it on the ground that he understood the applicant only made short visits to a town and then went away. Mr. Westphal thought the city merchants should be protected and the men who make a business of jumping from town to town should be discouraged as much as possible, unless they are entitled to a license. On a vote the application was rejected, all voting no. The Council then adjourned.

V. M. C. A. CYCLERS ORGANIZE.

Road Officers Named and Summer Runs Prepared For.

Cycling in the Y. M. C. A. is likely to prove a very attractive feature of the athletic department this year. The season, as far as the cyclist's division was concerned, opened last evening when the annual meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Cyclers was held. President T. A. Cuming called the meeting to order.

A nominating committee, consisting of John V. Beekman, Jr., Charles Butts and T. H. Stafford, was appointed, and after a consultation, nominated the following officers: President, Robert A. Meeker; vice-president, Horace J. Martin; secretary and treasurer, C. W. Nichols. The road officers were nominated as follows: Captain, Thomas A. Cuming; first lieutenant, Edward A. Laing; second lieutenant, T. H. Stafford; first bugler, Raymond A. McGee; second bugler, D. W. Littell, Jr.; color sergeant, Clarence Bronard. It was decided to leave the arranging of runs, and all matters pertaining to them, in the hands of a committee composed of three members and the captain, ex-officio. The following committee was appointed: Charles B. Morse, Curtis M. Thorpe, Clarence Bronard and Captain Thomas A. Cuming.

A WAR OF WORDS WAGED.

A MIXED UP AFFAIR AIRED IN CITY COURT THIS MORNING.

Mrs. Schuck Talks Severely to Her Husband, Who Tries to Reform, and Kreitling Thought the Words Applied to Him

Improper language was the principal cause of trouble in the case of Mrs. Kate Schuck which was tried before City Judge DeMeza on Saturday. Mrs. Schuck was charged by a neighbor named Kreitling with using profane and improper language. The case was an adjourned one from last Saturday.

The trouble that caused the arrest happened sometime ago. George Schuck, the husband of the prisoner, was at the home of Kreitling with a number of companions spending the evening when Mrs. Schuck appeared on the scene and tried to get her husband to go home. Her language was not of the most select and slanderous epithets flew around at a lively rate. Kreitling thought that most of them applied to him and was very indignant. The war of words raged for some time and then the party broke up.

Ex-Judge W. A. Coddington appeared for Mrs. Schuck at the trial this morning and entered a plea of "non vult." He said that the names had been meant for Mr. Schuck, but Mr. Kreitling, who was standing nearby, thought they were meant for him, and he also said that the facts that Mrs. Schuck told Kreitling she gave only as what Mr. Schuck had told her. Her husband, he said was in the habit of going out in the evening and leaving her at home and she tried to break up that habit.

Kreitling appeared in court and said he did not care to press the case but he wanted the calling of such names stopped. Mr. Schuck promised and after administering a severe reprimand, the Judge suspended sentence.

A PASTOR'S RECEPTION.

Members of First M. E. Church Get Better Acquainted With Dr. Barnes.

The rain that poured down early last Friday prevented a large attendance at the reception given in honor of Rev. C. B. Barnes, D. D., and family by the Ladies Aid Society and the Epworth League of the First M. E. church at Vincent chapel. But those that were present spent a very enjoyable evening. The early part of the evening was spent in conversation and then an informal programme was given.

It was filled with the hymn, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," which was sung by all. Then James McGee made a few remarks welcoming Dr. Barnes back to the church and wishing him success. A well executed piano solo by Richard Menzel followed and then Dr. Barnes replied to the address of welcome with a few well-chosen words. The programme concluded with a pleasing recitation, "Uncle Daniel's Prayer," given by Miss G. Elsing Overton which was loudly encored.

While the guests settled down for a period of sociability, the young people passed light refreshments which were greatly enjoyed while all indulged in lively conversation.

The committee from the Ladies Aid Society, which looked after the good things, consisted of Mrs. J. P. Homan, chairman; Mrs. James Hallock, Mrs. J. P. Hmmble, Mrs. Hoffman and Mrs. N. Y. Hull. The entertainment was provided by the Epworth League.

Owing to the inclement weather, a number of those who were to take part in the programme were detained at home.

The social committee in charge consisted of Miss Elsie Horne, chairman; the Misses Saidee Douglass, Amelia Day, Bessie Day and Madeline Day, Messrs. Walter B. Rittenhouse, J. V. Rittenhouse, James A. Stafford, Ralph Campbell and Frank W. Cornwell.

DECLARES FOR PROHIBITION.

And Would Have A Constitutional Amendment Passed at Trenton.

The Elizabeth Presbytery finished its annual session Thursday and elected four delegates to the General Assembly, which meets in Saratoga in May: Rev. Dr. J. L. McNulty, of Woodbridge; Rev. George Backie, of Elizabeth; Elders A. W. Marshall, of Metuchen; and I. J. Ayers, of Clarksville.

The Presbytery passed a resolution favoring prohibition and appointed Dr. Kempshall, of Elizabeth, to lay the matter before the Synod of New Jersey and urge that body to appeal to the next Legislature to pass a Constitutional amendment for the suppression of the liquor traffic.

The Presbytery has thirty-three churches and three chapels within its jurisdiction.

To Appear Before the Cadi.

Four young men from Netherwood, John Angleman, Adam Beek, Frank McClearn and Charles Angleman, will appear before City Judge DeMeza next Saturday morning on the charge of throwing stones and calling names. Mrs. John Wolf, of Netherwood, is the complainant.

THE PAST AND PRESENT.

MEDIAEVAL AND MODERN ILLUMINATIONS AT THE CAMERA CLUB.

Some of the Exhibits Date Back as Far as the Twelfth Century, and the Color Work is Something Wonderful—Initial Letters.

It seems strange that Plainfield should not give the loan exhibition of the Plainfield Camera Club something of the support it really deserves. There has been an increase, however, during the last week in the number of visitors and the people of this city are beginning to realise the wonderful and beautiful display of works of art that the Camera Club has collected. The attendance last evening was very good while a number attended during the afternoon.

A small but very interesting collection is that of the mediaeval and modern illuminations, loaned by G. A. Audsley. The oldest is one from the twelfth century and is an initial letter from a Choral Book of that century executed on fine vellum. The color work is something remarkable. There are three illuminations from the fourteenth century, one of which is said to contain one of the finest initial letters known in color. It is most delicately executed in rich colors on a raised gold ground. A frame contains a series of designs for illuminated card backs drawn in gold and colors by W. and G. Audsley. The other two frames, that complete this collection, also contain the work of W. and G. Audsley. They are two pages from probably the last illuminated book that has been gotten out. This is called "The Sermon on the Mount," and came out in about 1861. The subject of one is the Lord's Prayer marvelously executed in gold and surrounded with a rich colored border. The other contains the opening verse of the seventh chapter of St. Matthew in gold and richly colored letters. The cover for this book, which was designed by the authors, is exhibited at another place. It is a large red morocco cover with a fancy design in gold stamped upon it, and is the largest machine-struck morocco binding ever produced. This same cover was the finest example shown in the London Exhibition of 1893.

One of the most remarkable exhibits that adorn the walls of the main room, is a small piece of Florentine mosaic work, representing a hen and rooster. The different colored marbles are united together into a wonderful combination and the likeness is exact. This exhibit was brought in too late to be added to the catalogue.

Three Indictments Against Culver.

Nathan V. Culver, the man who has been staying in this city for the past year, has had three indictments presented against him by the Middlesex county Grand Jury. He is charged with indecent exposure at Piscataway on March 10th, and also on the same date of assaulting and carnally abusing Julia Grisley and Gertrude Coddington, two young girls under sixteen years of age. He pleaded not guilty to all three indictments and trial was set down for May 10th.

Another Big Bargain at White's.

Having closed out a big line of porch chairs and rockers from one of the largest factories at a big discount from the regular price that will be placed on sale the end of the week at prices that will move them more solidly. Those in need of solid comfort will find a big variety to select from. One hundred to go at the small price of 59 cents, and one hundred others at the small price of 98 cents and up.

A Church on His Hands.

Rev. J. B. Jennings, the Episcopal clergyman, who has caused no end of trouble in Westfield, is anxious to get Grace church off his hands, the courts having given him the building to satisfy his claim for salary. Mr. Mills, who holds second mortgage, interposes objection, and the people of St. Paul's P. E. church are reluctant about a deal, as the property is in a bad condition. The ex-rector begins to think that he has a white elephant on his hands.

City Bank Contracts.

H. G. Runkle, J. Fred MacDonald, J. F. Hubbard and J. B. Coward, the City National Bank building committee met yesterday and gave out the contracts for the new building. John Abbott has the carpenter work, J. P. Emmons, mason; George J. Tobin, plumbing; and W. T. Kirk, iron. The inside cabinet work will be given out later.

Vestry Resolutions.

At a meeting of the vestry of Grace church, held on Tuesday evening, April 21st, the following preamble and resolution was adopted:

The vestry of this parish, in entering upon the discharge of their duties for a new convention year, desire to convey to the members of the corporation who have for so many years served the church, and who have now declined re-election, an expression of their sense of the faithfulness and devotion with which they have labored for the best interest of the church.

We take this opportunity to testify that it is to their liberality and careful attention to duty that the present prosperity of the parish is largely indebted.

Resolved, That this minute, duly signed, be entered on the record book and a copy forwarded to the retiring members of the vestry, and that it be published in the local papers.

SOME TROLLEY TALK.

The Netherwood Line to Be in Operation by May 6th.

A set of new trucks for the narrow guage track of the street railway arrived in town today and will be placed on Car No. 6. If the wiring can be finished in time it is the intention of Superintendent Adleman to run a car from Watchung and North avenues to the switch on Putnam avenue, Wednesday, May 6th, the day Barnum's circus shows here. A new dynamo will be placed in the electric light station, and the plan is to have a sufficient amount of power to run twelve cars by July 1st. In regard to the extension on Johnston's drive, the question of choosing a route remains to be done, then the work will be pushed. The only correct list of the officers of the Mountain Park Land Company, and the only one published, is as follows: President, Chandler W. Riker; vice president and manager, John H. French; secretary and selling agent, Silas D. Drake; treasurer, Joseph T. Vail.

ENDEAVOR OFFICERS ELECTED.

The Congregational Society Hear Encouragingly of Their Work.

The quarterly business meeting and the semi-annual election of officers of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Congregational church was held last evening in the church. The reports of the old officers and committees were made, and showed the society to be in a flourishing condition, especially in a financial direction. The reports of the work done during the last quarter were very cheering. The only important business transacted was the election of officers, which resulted as follows: President, Harold Tomlinson; vice-president, Charles Belknap; secretary, Miss Bessie Pound; treasurer, Miss Stella Winkler. The chairmen of the various committees are as follows: Prayer meeting, Miss Eda Beckman; lookout, Robert Suffren; missionary, Joseph A. Robinson; social, Miss Julia Belknap; music, Mrs. A. C. Laboyteau; good literature, John V. Beekman, Jr.; flower, Miss J. Louise Jenkins.

CONVERTED IN THAT CELL.

Supt. Hadley Prays on the Spot Where He Reformed.

Supt. S. H. Hadley, of the McAuley Mission, New York, who is well-known in this city, Sunday night entered the East One Hundred and Twenty-sixth street police station and asked permission to pray in one of the cells. His request was granted. He said he had been locked up in that cell fourteen years ago for drunkenness and had there become converted. He had been discharged on his promise to reform, and for eight years has been in charge of the McAuley Mission.

At White's.

Never were there greater attractions at Plainfield's busiest store than now. Every department is filled with the newest and brightest of spring and summer goods, and it is remarkable what small prices are asked for fine goods. Their advertisement tells of many good things that will interest you.

THE STORY OF A BOY LOST.

CHARLES HAND'S SON HERBERT WANDERS INTO THE COUNTRY.

Failed to Come Home at Nightfall and Aroused the Family to Excitement—Found in a Terrill Road Farm House.

There was excitement at the home of Charles H. Hand, of East Fifth street, last Friday, when his little son, Herbert Charles Hand, who is about five years of age, did not come home. The first warning of the impending trouble was given by a little colored boy, late in the afternoon, who told Miss Sadie and Miss Edith Hand that he had seen their little brother riding in a long wagon with only one seat, going in the direction of Westfield. In company with Mr. Kyte, the two excited sisters rode out the county road in search of their missing brother. They went as far as Westfield and inquired all the way but no trace could be found of the missing land.

Mr. Hand was very much worried over the disappearance of his son, especially when he learned that the gypsies were encamped near North avenue and Terril road. He notified Sergeant Kiely and that officer, accompanied by the anxious father and another policeman, started early in the morning for the gypsies camp. Sergeant Kiely asked them if they had seen anything of the child and on their negative reply, told them that their camp would have to be searched.

The roving Bohemians offered no objection and the camp was thoroughly searched, but without avail. The searching parties next visited the houses in the rear of Netherwood Hotel, but still unsuccessfully.

In the meantime, Mrs. Andrew Mead, called, an aunt of the missing lad, and Mrs. William Crook, a friend, went hunting on their own account. They walked as far as Netherwood station, inquiring as they went, and at last heard from a family living near the station that a boy, answering the description of Herbert Hand, had ridden past, late in the afternoon, in Farmer Farley's wagon. The two women set out immediately for the farmer's house which was on Terrill road, some distance from South avenue, and there found the lad safe and well and enjoying himself immensely amid the novel sights of an agricultural variety.

He was taken home and reached there at about 10 o'clock when the family was in a state of distraction over his prolonged absence.

His story was that his school teacher wanted some dandelions and he had a friend, Eddie Moore, expected to get them at noon but as there was not time they decided to go after school. The little girl was compelled to remain in school so Herbert went alone. He walked as far as Berckman street and then asked Mr. Farley, who was passing, for a ride. Herbert went home with him, had a glorious farm supper and had about decided to buy a farm of his own when the searchers found him.

*There was great rejoicing at his re*turn and the police departed glad that the lad had been found.

Business From All Over.

Curtis M. Thorpe, of Park, avenue, dealer in tiling, mantels, etc., has many designs to select from. Among the recent houses that have been furnished are the following: J. B. Mills, Carleton avenue; Mr. Moody, East Sixth street; and J. E. Martine, two houses, East Ninth street. Mr. Thorpe has also been doing work at New Brunswick, putting in vestibules and tile mantels. This house makes a specialty of bathroom work, and the prices are reasonable.

Prices Marvelously Low.

The large variety of fine seasonable goods of almost every description now being kept at Edsall's Commercial Palace, and sold at as low prices as in the large cities, make it practically unnecessary for Plainfielders to go out of town to trade. Edsall says that in all his business experience he has never been able to offer such extraordinary inducements in such a great range of useful and ornamental articles as just now.

An Endeavor Anniversary.

Dr. Brett, first vice president of the State Christian Endeavor Society, will deliver an address at the anniversary exercises of the Warren Chapel Society on Thursday, May 14th. His address will be relative to the coming State Convention to be held in this city.

Remarkable Health Record.

There have been fourteen cases of measles at the Children's Home, one of which proved fatal last Saturday night. This is the first death of a child at the Home since October, 1831. This is a most remarkable record in a family numbering twenty children.

Delinquent Taxes Being Paid.

As a result of the item in the Daily Press columns on Monday, urging delinquent taxpayers to settle with Collector E. H. Bird, several hundred dollars has already been received. Mr. Bird says the response was most gratifying.

THE BICYCLE MAIDEN.

More Numercus at Washington Than Anywhere Else.

Many Who, a Few Years Ago, Looked with Horror Upon Wheels Are Now Enthusiastic Devotees of the Sport.

[Special Washington Letter.]

There can be no doubt of the truth of the couplet: "In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love." It may also as truly be said that in spring a young woman's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of bicycles. At any rate, there is no doubt that the ladies of the national capital are infatuated with the wheel.

Whether our girls are braver than the girls in other parts of the United States or not, it is certainly true that there are more lady riders in Washington than in any other city in the country. The riding of bicycles by women was a few years ago regarded as one of the wonderful things to come in the 20th century; one of those events that are to precede and foreshadow the coming of the millenium. The ease with which the world has accepted this advance of progress, contrary to the general expectation, is, perhaps, but characteristic of the present civilization, which takes everything that comes as a matter of course, and simply wonders what the next move will be. Washington has the honor of having harbored the mind that conceived the idea of making a bicycle suitable for a lady's use, as well as of owning, as one of its fair citizens, the first lady who had the courage to brave the world and push pedals from a saddle hung between two wheels instead of three. Women on wheels had then long been an ordinary sight on the streets, but there were always more than two wheels to each woman.

Mrs. Belva Lockwood, at one time a candidate for the presidency, rode a bicycle in this city for several years before any other woman in the country dared to do so. She used a very heavy machine, and did not present a very graceful figure on the public highway, but she was a fearless, independent character and pursued the even tenor of her way regardless of the gibes and sneers of youths who gazed at her with wondering eyes as she traversed our streets.

When women first began to use the wheels, many physicians looked lugubriously at them and made all sorts of predictions indicative of disasters not only to the health of the venturesome ladies, but also to the future health of the human race. But the majority of people, it would seem, do not take much stock in the theory that the exercise gives rise to spinal complaint, if one may judge from the great success of the dealers in wheels. Notwithstanding the hue and cry, there are several instances in Washington of well-known physicians buying wheels for their daughters simply because they believe that the exercise would be good for them. It is said that one never sees a really woman riding a horse, and it will just as surely be the case, according to the enthusiasts, that one will never see a girl on a bicycle who has not some claims to beauty. Good health and physical vigor are the only two claims to genuine beauty.

Healthful exercise, not severe nor excessive training, brings into play all of the muscles of the body, while it does not fail to give an impetus to the blood that it would get otherwise. Both of these results can hardly fail to be healthful. The warm, bright color that comes to the cheeks is a sign of health. The hearty appetite that is engendered by a brisk run before dinner is the healthiest sort of hunger. The feeling of weariness that makes the pillow so inviting means a strong body in the morning; and all combined serve to complete the work of healthgiving and health-preserving that is begun when a person makes his or her initial bow to the world, but is often broken off at an early point in life.

The springtime here is not of long duration, for we speedily rush into summer, because we live in the south temperate zone. But by our proximity to Chesapeake bay, which is really a part of the Atlantic ocean, we are constantly favored with cool breezes from the south and southeast, so that it is very seldom that any of our days are too hot for cycling. Consequently the girls enjoy themselves as they choose, in coteries, groups or clubs, as well as singly. They traverse the miles and miles of asphalted streets of the city, and also travel the country roads over the historic heights surrounding Washington; and very often they wheel across the Aqueduct bridge, over into Virginia, to Arlington cemetery, where they draw from the depths of the well in the rear of the Lee mansion the pure cool water, and drink from the rim of the old oaken bucket, the iron bound bucket, the moss covered bucket, which hangs in that well.

Our pretty girls are brave, and do not want long to suffer the humiliating presence of a man's hand on the rear mud guard to steady the machines. It is some little trouble to learn to ride, but the girls become very independent when once they feel that they have mastered the wheel. When first venturing to ride the treacherous steel steed a girl feels that if she could only wear trousers she could easily learn to ride; but she wears dresses, and dresses she must continue to wear. Moreover, she cannot ride on a side saddle. She must bestride the bicycle like an Amazonian and fight her own battle for success. If she would not have the wheel eating up whole yards of flounces and furbelows she must have a dress made for bicycling and for nothing else, in order to attain the greatest proficiency. There is nothing so constantly fruitful as accident to a beginner, whether on a bicycle or off of it, and the more a lady observes the rule never to go to the bicycle school in her street dress, but to have a special costume for the purpose of being torn to pieces by the raging wheel, the quicker she will learn and the more graceful she will look when she has fully mastered the art of sitting upright on a wheel's saddle. Our girls very speedily learn this fact, and therefore very speedily learn to ride like Centaurs.

With many miles of smooth paved streets, which are kept scrupulously clean, our girls have a variety of room for their exercise and enjoyment, while the roads contiguous to the city are always kept in excellent condition. Therefore it is that our girls are exceptionally graceful riders. They do not lean forward and become round-shouldered. In our riding schools the teacher does not try to impart very much grace to his pupil at first. He insures his patient, as it were, and lets her have about her own way. When she has learned to make her wheels go round without tumbling and can manage the machine without help, then he begins to tell her things about style in riding that make her blush a little, perhaps, but which are wholesome truths. He shows her how to sit on the saddle without having more than half her dress skirt on one side, and then he gives her modest and respectful points as to the disposition of her garments when on the wheel that she often thanks him for afterward when he is not around. He adjusts the saddle and handle bar so that her arms are stretched out to their full extent when she holds the handles and her feet reach the pedals without any length of limb to spare. Should he fail to do this and let her wheel go without proper adjustment she would present a most awkward appearance, with her arms crooked and her back bent over, while her knees would threaten at every revolution of the pedals to knock against the handle.

Thus, with good morning, good roads, good company and a good climate, it is no wonder that the girls become graceful, healthful, strong and wholly ignorant of the meaning of "that tired feeling" of which the parlor plants are all through life.

The girl who is a parlor plant can never know the real happiness which is the companion of health and strength. There is no immodesty in exercise, but there is supreme folly in laziness and shiftlessness. Every girl should be cultured and ladylike, always gentle and affectionate; but no girl should be sickly, weak and helpless, for lack of proper exercise. Bicycling is commendable, because it is sensible and beneficial. It is better than dancing, and equal to horsewomanship. Try it,

SMITH D. FRY.

Glass of Fifty Years Ago.

"The glazier of 50 years ago," said a Maine man of experience in the business, "worked differently from what we do to-day. Glass was very costly then compared with present prices and much of it was so warped and crooked it would be a curiosity in these times. Owing to the care we had to be very careful in setting it and the glazier of that day had to be a woodcarver as well as a man of putty. The warped panes had to be laid into the sash and their shape scribed on the wood underneath. This was then cut away so as to make the glass fit into place. Nowadays the glass is tolerably true, and besides it is so cheap that we never stand for a fit. It is sprung into place and if it breaks it is thrown aside. The old crooked glass was, some of it, of superior quality. This was known as Boston crown glass or Berkshire crystal. It was clearer and more brilliant than most modern glass. Only the better quality of houses had this kind, but there are still many old residences throughout Maine in which it may be found."—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

Good Cause for Doubt.

TO CONVERT DRUMMERS.

Commendable Mission of a New Religious Society.

It Is Called the "International Commercial Travelers' Circle, Order of King's Sons"—Special Aims of the Unique Association.

Representatives of a brand new religious society have arrived in Chicago. They came during the week, fully equipped and prepared to convert the city by a novel method.

The society is called "The International Commercial Travelers' Circle, Order of King's Sons." As the name of the circle is composed of commercial travelers in the United States and Canada, making it international in character. Its members, realizing the need of definite and systematic work for the upbuilding and enlargement of Christ's Kingdom among their fellow-travelers, have thus organized to aid in the work by the power of members, example, and right living and precept.

While still few in numbers, the small proportion of traveling men who are at work, quietly and conscientiously, feel that they can better the spiritual condition of their associates and stimulate Christian activity, and induce their fellow-men to throw their influence for good with the circle.

The special aim of the association is of course to reach the commercial travelers—who, the society claims, are sadly in need of reform.

The requirements for membership are stated in a printed circular, as follows:

"That a man be a lover of the Lord Jesus Christ. That he serve Him according to the dictates of the Holy Spirit. That he abstain from practices evil in His sight and strive to be a power for God. 'In His Name,' according to the motto of the order."

The badge of the Order of King's Sons is a silver cross, which members are earnestly requested to constantly wear.

Nor are dues forgotten, for every applicant must send his one dollar (the annual dues) with his application for membership.

But the novel feature of the whole organization is the method they have chosen to bring their work before the public and to distribute well-meaning advice and Scriptural texts and warnings among men, and of course the new women.

Tracts, whether they are presented under the guise or disguise of books, pamphlets, cards, or pictures, have long since lost their power to attract attention.

To reach the public something new had to be devised.

And if novelty alone in the manner of presenting religion to the public will carry conviction, the "King's Sons" have certainly struck it, for each member is provided for general distribution with 100 or more enameled disks, on which are inscribed appropriate texts, such as: "Jesus died for thee, seek ye Him;" "The gift of God is eternal life," and "Life is short, Death is sure, Sin is death, Christ's the cure."

The unsuspecting man, woman or child is handed one or more of these disks by the zealous brethren who belong to the King's Sons' society, and curiosity, if nothing else, will, it is hoped by the association, impel whoever receives them to read the good, if not original, verses inscribed upon them.

The officers of the society are: President, John De Witt, Brooklyn, N. Y.; first vice president, Gus Hannock, Albany, N. Y.; second vice president, R. M. Neilson, Baltimore, Md.; third vice president, C. P. W. Nims, Boston, Mass.; fourth vice president, H. G. Adams, Plainfield, N. J.; fifth vice president, John Cook Bill, Philadelphia, Pa.; secretary and treasurer, Edwin S. Robbins, Waterbury, Conn.

Longest Lawsuit on Record.

A law case which lasted 300 years has again come on for a hearing in a Bavarian court. It was waged between the market community of Burgkirn, at Unterfranken, in Bavaria, and the Lords of Thungen. The case was commenced on the 21st of June, 1595, when the legal advisers of this community appeared before the legal tribunal which then held its sitting in Speier, against the Lords of Thungen for a number of 2,000,000 marks as owners of a forest of noble oaks and beech trees. Centuries gradually thinned the ranks on each side, but others took up the cause, and when the case came up for its other day matters seemed as fresh as ever. It is hoped, however, that the 21st of June, 1896, will see the last of the venerable suit.

GEN. WILLIAM BOOTH.

The Salvation Army's Founder Is Something of an Autocrat.

Gen. William Booth, the founder and head of the Salvation Army, has just returned from India, and said on his arrival, concerning the defection of his son, Ballington Booth in America, that although his heart was torn and he was sorely wounded, he was nevertheless determined to conduct the government of the army irrespective of persons. If he had been willing to make an exception in favor of one person, in order to retain the loyalty of that person, he would deservedly have lost forever the confidence and respect of all honest-hearted men and the approval of his own conscience.

The Salvation Army is an absolute despotism as regards government. A though America is its most promising field, it will not modify its methods to conform to American life and American spirit. That is why the new movement of Ballington Booth, adapted to this country, has a bright outlook. Gen. William Booth was born April 10, 1829, at Nottingham, England, was brought up in the Church of England, was converted at Wesleyan chapel, and broke away early in life from the Methodist church to inaugurate the Salvation Army work. His wife, Catherine Mumford, who died some years ago, was a remarkable woman, whose religious experiences were much like the general's own.

"GEN." WILLIAM BOOTH.

The new couple in command of the army in the United States are Commissioner and Mrs. Booth-Tucker. Pending their appointment, Miss Eva Booth, who was sent from England as a commissioner, was at the head of the organization.

THE KHALIFA ABDULLAH.

He Is Not as Great a Leader of Men as Was the Mahdi.

Khalifa Abdullah, the Soudanese potentate against whom the Egyptian army is now marching, and against whom England will send more troops, is the successor of the mahdi, whose name was upon everybody's lips a few years ago. That the away which the great religious soldier held at his death has gradually shrunk under the rule of the present khalifa there is no doubt. The present ruler assumed all the power and authority attaching to the position of his predecessor, but he never proclaimed himself mahdi or prophet. The fanaticism which blinded the Soudanese to the deception practiced upon them has lost much of its influence. Abdullah's rule has been as tyrannical and rapacious as that of the mahdi, but the Soudanese have been by no means as patient with him as they were with his predecessor. Slatin

KHALIFA ABDULLAH.

Pasha, who will accompany the English expedition up the Nile, says that the extent of the territory now governed by Abdullah is little altered in extent from what it was under Egyptian rule, but the condition of the country is very different. Prosperous districts teeming with population have been reduced to barren, lateral deserts, and the fertile plains over which the western Arabs roamed are now occupied by wild animals. Homesteads of the Nile dwellers are now tenanted by nomad tribes who have enslaved the rightful owners to till the soil for the new masters; or so says Slatin. Many of the tribes, weary of Abdullah's cruel rule, have revolted and become independent, but the khalifa has sufficient friends left to make him a powerful enemy and to give the invading expedition all it can do to reconquer the territory in question.

Remarkable Exodus of Dunkards.

An exodus of Dunkards from Indiana and other states to North Dakota is taking place, the Great Northern railway the other day hauling on one train from St. Paul 1,036 of these people to points on its line to the North state. It is doubtful if as large a number of actual settlers ever before moved at one time by any railway in this country. So far over 3,000 of them have been taken to North Dakota and the movement seems to be gaining strength every day.

Torpedo Boat by Rail.

A torpedo boat was successfully transferred by rail from St. Petersburg to Sebastopol a little while ago, and a number of others will now be sent in the same way to the Black sea fleet.

KIND WORDS FOR MR. CRANE.

A North Carolia Paper Writes of His Successful Evangelistic Work.

The Elizabeth, (N. C.,) Weekly last week published the following about Rev. Arthur Crane, of this city, who has been conducting a series of revival meetings in that place:

Rev. Arthur Crane and H. A. Wolfsohn have just closed a two weeks' revival meeting at the Baptist church. About forty persons professed conversion, or sought restoration to the different churches as a result of the work. But the work cannot be so well measured by the additions made to the churches, as by the conditions changed in the churches. As a matter of fact all the material that is impressible by personal and emotionable motives has been gathered into the several churches during the revivals in recent years. Only the gospel hardened element is left. In this meeting many cases noted for strong resistance in the past yielded and were happily converted at this meeting. Animal excitement and emotional effects were scrupulously avoided by Mr. Crane. He is an expert expounder of God's word. His method is to take some great fact in experience, like "Sin," "Responsibility," "The Atonement," "Procrastination," the "Throldiom of Character," etc., and expound and apply God's word of promise or punishment to the condition, and then leave the question of action upon the will and conscience of the hearer. He does this work with keen anglitical insight into human nature, and rare adaptation of the divine law and testimony. In speech he is plain, pointed, graphic, and at times startling in vividness, but never a word of slang. He is always chaste and frequently classic. He never poses for effect. He fears not the face of man, though he depends for his financial support upon the voluntary offerings of the people night after night. His scathing rebuffs of popular and social sins and shams fall without mercy and irrespective of persons. The tonic effect upon the soul life in all churches cannot fail to be uplifting. The building was full, crowded and thronged from first to finish. The meeting closed at high tide with several conversions the last night.

The singing of H. A. Wolfsohn was marked by the devoutest spirit, and executed with tenderness and almost irresistable pathos of appeal. The Spirit of the living God breathes through every note of his sweet songs.

Death Sentences Commuted.

Pretoria, South Africa, April 29 — The sentences of death imposed upon John Hays Hammond, the American engineer; Col. Frank Rhodes, a brother of the former Premier of Cape Colony; Lionel Phillips, President of the Chamber of Mines of Johannesburg, and George Farrar, proprietor of Country Life, of Johannesburg, have been commuted.

A Fact for an Argument.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Below is an article taken from the New York Times of the 27th inst., which is a reply to X's strictures on what I read in regard to the admission of foreign tramps and beggers, which is as follows:

Crouched on Park Row, with infants in their arms, Emelia Remma, of 33 Cherry street, and Cornelia Spero, of 34 Cherry street, were found at 1 o'clock yesterday morning by six Gerry society agents. With them was twelve-year-old Marie Pisarro, also with infants in their arms. The women told a story of poverty. When placed under arrest, by the agents, their lamentations turned into a choice assortment of Italian profanity. An investigation showed that the women had an equal income as the average Italian, and had been in the country but ten days. They were sent to the Workhouse by Magistrate Simms, in the Centre Street Police Court, and the little girl and the two infants were turned over to the care of the Gerry Society.

Mahlon Vail.

A Funny Sort of an Animal.

A. C. Vail, of West Eighth street, returned last Saturday night from a trip bringing with him a strange animal called a racoon cat. It resembles a regular pussy very much except that it has an immense tail of very long silky hair. It eats in the same manner as a racoon, holding its food in its forepaws. When brought home it was put in the harness case and climbed about the smooth varnished sides without the slightest trouble.

Convention of the New Jersey Diocese.

On Tuesday, May 5th, the 112th annual convention of the Diocese of New Jersey will meet in St. John's church, Elizabeth, at 10:30 a. m. The Rt. Rev. John Scarborough, Bishop of the diocese, assisted by several of his clergy, will conduct the opening services, after which the convention will organize. Luncheon will be served in the parish house at 1 o'clock, the business meeting beginning at 2:30. The usual diocesan missionary meeting will be held in the evening.

Free Mail Delivery.

A postoffice inspector has been examining Summit and Westfield, with a view to preparing a report on the question of establishing free mail delivery in both places, the receipts for the past year having exceeded the amount required to insure the system.

1,001 RARE SIGHTS.

Features in Barnum & Bailey's Show For This Season.

Go and see Johanna, the giantess gorilla, with the Barnum & Baily Greatest Show on Earth. Take the children with you, and amaze them and yourselves by a sight of the most wonderful human-like creature known to exist. It, together with the circus, will be here on Wednesday, May 6, when a visit will repay every one. This giant of the jungle and forest is so nearly allied to some races of human beings as to startle every one with the remarkable similarity, and some zoologists, like Garner, claim that it has a language. Go and see the young lady shot from a crossbow away up into the air; the 50 trained horses performing in one ring, the 24 elephants, blue-nosed mandrill, 40 horses, 40 ponies, lady clowns, new woman on horseback and the numberless other features. The performances in the main tent—which is waterproof by the way—in addition to the equestrian feats by 12 champion riders in three rings, the specialists on three stages, the trapeze artists, the racing on the track, are supplemented by a trained animal exhibition of most wonderful performances, including 50 trained horses and 24 elephants. By all means see the charming entertainment given by the strange natives in Oriental India, as it is one of the most picturesque and delightfully refreshing exhibitions ever offered. Men, women and beautiful maidens dance before Buddist priests in real temples, while jugglers, tree climbers and others, offer various sights of an interesting and instructive character. The show in its entirety is so meritorious and wonderful withal, that all should see it this year. A new street parade will be given on the morning of arrival, with living reproductions of the crowned heads of the world, the military uniforms of all nations, and the horseless carriage.

Resolutions of Condolence.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Home Building and Loan Association of Plainfield, N. J., held on the evening of April 27th, 1896, the following resolutions were unanimously passed:

Whereas God, in His all-wise Providence, has removed from our midst our fellow-director and vice-president, Warren F. Bartlett, therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the Board of Directors of the Home Building and Loan Association, do hereby express our appreciation of his long and faithful service to this association from its organization, both as director and officer, and we realize that he has done much towards making it the success that it is.

We do further express our appreciation of his upright character, his strict attention and fidelity to all duty, his pleasant and friendly greeting, and his great interest in our work.

Deeply feeling the loss we have sustained in his death, we would hereby extend to his bereaved family our sincere sympathy in their great affliction, and be further

Resolved, That a copy of these minutes be presented to the bereaved family and also published in the minutes book of this association, and also published in the local papers.

NETHERWOOD HOTEL SOLD.

Dr. Shermer Bought the Property and Is to Open a Sanitarium.

Dr. Shermer, a celebrated New York physician and practioneer, has purchased, through J. Fred MacDonald, the Hotel Netherwood, and will open a sanitarium at that place about the middle of May. The sale was consummated yesterday when the papers were signed. The amount realized from the sale was very satisfactory. It is the intention of Dr. Shermer to organize a stock company at an early date and the same will probably be incorporated.

They Won the Wager.

Two students from Rutgers College visited this city Saturday night at 6:45 o'clock. They had made a wager with some of their companions that they could walk from New Brunswick to New Brunswick again, via Bound Brook, Plainfield and Metuchen, in 7½ hours. They reached New Brunswick at 9:23 o'clock, just five minutes before they were due.

A Lecture on Italy.

An illustrated lecture on Italy will be given by Rev. T. Logan Murphy, under the auspices of the Willing Circle, King's Daughters, in Holy Cross parish building, Friday evening. Refreshments will be served after the lecture at a moderate charge.

It will be an agreeable surprise to persons subject to attacks of bilious colic to learn that prompt relief may be had by taking Chamberlain's Colic Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In many instances the attack may be prevented by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms of the disease appear. 25 and 50c bottles for sale at Armengol's pharmacy, Park and North avenues.

We might tell you more about One Minute Cough Cure, but you probably know that it cures a cough. Every one does who has used it. It is a perfect remedy for coughs colds, hoarseness. It is an especial favorite for children, being pleasant to take and quick in curing. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

WIENBERGER WILL STAY HERE.

The Clothing Man Says That He Intends to Fight the Opposition.

Mr. Wienberger, the West Front street clothing dealer, against whom action has been taken in Justice Newcorn's court, charged with violating a state law, was interviewed by a Daily Press reporter Tuesday in reference to the above trouble. Mr. Wienberger was asked if he intended to continue his business at the present store. He replied that he did and furthermore he intended to fight the case to the end and secure his rights. He said that he had secured the services of Craig A. Marsh and if there was any justice he was going to have it. He stated further that he had rented the store till next May, the unexpired term of the one held by Powlison & Jones. He showed the reporter two bank books, one on the City National and the other on the First National. In the former he had a deposit of $1,000 and in the latter $1,500. He had been informed by his lawyer that he had a clear case.

"I am not inclined to think that the best business people in town are against me, but that it is the small houses," said Mr. Wienberger. "I consider that I have as much right to locate here as anyone else when the purpose is to carry on a legitimate business, and that is what I intend to do. I have a certified bill of sale of my goods which I can produce if necessary."

Lawyer H. C. Runyon will represent Geo. Dean and Matthew Coon, prosecutors, against M. Wienberger at the hearing which will be held Friday morning in Justice Newcorn's court. Lawyer Winfield S. Angleman will appear for Mr. Wienberger. On account of Craig A. Marsh representing the city he is unable to appear for the defendant.

TRIED TO THROW THE OFFICER.

But Two Bolsterous Men Finally Landed in the Rookery.

Two men were conducting themselves on West Second street, near Park avenue, last Monday in a manner that Patrolman Myers thought was disorderly. They were Christian Weigel and Otto Fish, both of whom are employed as bologna makers. They had been drinking, but thought that they were behaving themselves. The officer thought differently and attempted to arrest them. They resisted and tried to throw the officer into the cellar of the small building recently torn down to be rebuilt as a grocery store. Patrolman Cooney arrived opportune on the scene and collared one of the men. Myers marched his man along and both were locked up. They paid $3 apiece this morning, preferring that to ten days in jail.

Mission Band Hear a Report.

The Young Ladies' Mission Band of the Presbyterian churches held it's regular meeting in the parlors of the First Presbyterian church Tuesday afternoon. Miss Emily Tracy, the president, presided for the first time since her return from New York, where she has been spending the winter. Miss Josephine Petrie, delegate to the recent assemblage at Clinton, N. J., gave a very interesting report. The meeting was one of great interest

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by continually failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

How To Treat a Wife.

(From the Pacific Health Journal.)

First, get a wife; second, be patient. You may have great trials and perplexities in your business, but do not therefore, carry to your home a cloud or cloudy brow. Your wife may have trials, which, though of less magnitude, may be hard for her to bear. A kind word, a tender look, will do wonders in chasing from her brow all clouds of gloom. To this we would add always keep a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. It is the best and is sure to be needed sooner or later. Your wife will then know that you really care for her and wish to protect her health. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

Eczema is a frightful affliction, but like all other skin diseases it can be permanently cured by applications of DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. It never fails to cure Piles. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

DEMOCRATIC PRIMARIES.

Delegates Elected to the State Convention to Be Held Tomorrow.

From The Press of May 6th.

The Democratic primaries were held in all the wards of the city last night to elect delegates to the State Convention to be held at Trenton tomorrow:

FIRST WARD.

The primary of the First ward was held in the office of James MacIntyre on North avenue. John Rafferty was chosen chairman and J. F. MacIntyre secretary. Michael DeCourcy was elected delegate to the State convention and John Kenney alternate.

SECOND WARD.

The Second ward Democratic primary was called to order last evening in the chapel of the Bryant School at 8 o'clock by James E. Martine. Mr. Martine was elected chairman and Charles Stover, secretary. Messrs. Martine and Stover were appointed judge and inspector of election. The delegate to the State Convention as elected by the primary was Frank Vosseler, and his alternate Lewis G. Thompson. The delegate is uninstructed.

THIRD WARD.

The Third ward Democratic primary was held at the Hotel Revere last evening at eight o'clock. The meeting was called to order by Albert H. Atterbury and J. Morgan Brunson was selected as chairman. Mr. Atterbury was the choice for secretary and Geo. B. DeRevere was chosen teller and judge of election. The choice of a delegate centered on Carl Pfeiffer with James Clark as alternate. The following resolution was then introduced by Mr. Atterbury and adopted:

Resolved, That the delegate elected this evening be requested to use his best endeavors to procure the election of delegates from New Jersey to the National Democratic convention, who will favor a platform declaring for the maintenance of the present gold standard as the sole standard of value in the United States.

FOURTH WARD.

The Fourth ward primary was held in Blimm's hotel. The meeting was called to order by Michael R. Flynn, who was chairman of the last primary. He was made the permanent presiding officer. T. A. McCarthy was elected secretary and Ira G. Hulburt, judge. Michael R. Flynn and Ira G. Hulburt were elected delegates to the State convention, and were empowered to appoint alternates if they were unable to attend themselves.

About Helen Hunt Jackson.

At the regular meeting of the Young Friends' Association last Monday an enjoyable time was passed. After the reading of the "History of Friends", the subject of "Current Topics" was taken up, and many other interesting subjects touched upon. Miss Nettie Haviland, a friend of the association then read a biographical sketch prepared by herself on the life of Helen Hunt Jackson. She also gave some of the instances that led up to her writing some of her best prose and poetry. This paper was followed by a discussion, and after the roll call, which was responded to by sentiments on "Peace," the meeting adjourned to June 3d.

Patroness at a Notable Event.

The name of Mrs. Augustus D. Shepard, of Nice Blocks," appears among the notable women who are to act as patronesses at the garden party and flower sale to be given on May 13th, by the Alumnæ of Barnard College, for the benefit of the new college buildings on Morningside Heights. The grounds where this garden party is to be given are on East Thirty-seventh street and once belonged to Gov. Morgan, who preserved the old trees on the place and made the grounds an attractive garden.

Crop Report.

The weekly crop bulletin of the New Jersey Weather Service has the following report from Weather Observer John Neagle: Average temperature for week, 52 degrees, with 0.28-inch of rainfall on the 3d. The month of April was dry in this section. Grain is in need of rain. Grain looks better than it did early in season. Potatoes and garden truck in. Oats up and look well.

Hood's Pills cure all liver ills.

—Dr. Lowrie, of Park avenue, has opened an office at Scotch Plains in the residence opposite Emery's hotel.

A. L. Wooster, a prominent citizen of Osseo, Mich., after suffering excruciatingly from piles for twenty years, was cured in a short time by using DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, an absolute cure for all skin diseases. More of this preparation is used than all others combined. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

A MODEL ENGINE.

The Westinghouse Single-Action Can be Seen at The Press Office.

Sometime ago The Daily Press found it necessary to increase its power for the press room and in looking about for an engine that would be practical for its peculiar work the Westinghouse single-acting engine was selected. An order was placed with the manufacturers, the Westinghouse Machine Company, Cortlandt street, New York, and in a brief time the engine was placed in position. It has now been in use in running the presses which print this paper and execute the large jobbing patronage of the office for two weeks, a sufficiently long time to demonstrate its working qualities. The best that The Press can say for the engine is that it does its work in a very satisfactory manner. The single-acting pattern is essentially a high-speed engine, and besides furnishing all the power that is needed, it, to speak figuratively, runs like a top, or in other words it makes no perceptible noise. It is almost superfluous to say that this is a quality highly appreciated about a newspaper office, especially when it is known that the editorial rooms are directly over the press room. By its extreme simplicity in construction the engine is independent of the careless attendance of an unskilled engineer, and is, therefore, not liable to easily get out of order. The engine can be seen running any week day in the press rooms and anyone who is interested in viewing one of the best engines on the market is welcome to visit this office.

MAY NOT BE JUSTICES.

Through an Error Thomas and Smalley May Be Barred From Qualifying.

There is a seeming possibility that D. D. Smalley and H. S. Thomas, of the borough, will not fill the office of Justice of the Peace to which office they were elected at the last borough election. It seems that their names were not received by the Secretary of State, but he did receive the name of J. A. Karet who ran for the office and was defeated, and as the other names were not received the State Secretary considered the name of J. A. Karet. A Daily Press reporter was informed this morning that Mr. Karet would receive his commission today.

Both Mr. Thomas and Mr. Smalley have been wondering why they did not hear something in regard to their commissions, and it is understood they wrote to headquarters in reference to the matter, and were informed that only the name of J. A. Karet was received. The result will be awaited with no little interest.

Interment of Mrs. McGinley.

The burial of Mrs. Ann McGinley, widow of the late Roger McGinley, of New York, took place Tuesday after noon in St. Mary's cemetery. Rev. Father Murphy, of St. Mary's, officiated at the rites. A large circle of friends were present, both from New York and this city. The floral tributes were large and beautiful. One piece was sent by the policemen of the first and second platoons of the Twenty-second Precinct, New York city. Another piece was a large pillow bearing the inscription "Mother."

Too Anxious to See the Parade.

Soon after the parade had passed by the corner of Second street and Park avenue, the crowd surged out into the street. The dog-cart of Percy C. Ohl was just passing by and a lad of about five years of age was knocked inside the wheel of the cart. One wheel passed over the lad's back and head but did not seriously injure him. Several men examined the frightened child and found no bones broken. He was given a drink of water and sent home.

Killed By a Train.

Peter Muldoon, aged thirty-eight, living at Darby road, near Philadelphia, was struck and killed by an east-bound express train on the Pennsylvania Railroad at 7 o'clock Tuesday morning at Bayway. He was a mason and was looking for work at the street depression there. A man named Hary had been with Muldoon but did not know how he was struck.

Johanna at Westfield.

Johanna Healy, a woman tramp and beggar, who claims this city as her home, was arrested in Westfield Monday afternoon by Officer Marsh, and was sent to the county jail for fifteen days.

Road racing is going to be a popular pastime among the New England cities this season, and already announcements come from many cities of numerous road races.

Mrs. R. DeYoung, Middleburg, Ia., writes. I have used One Minute Cough Cure for six years, both for myself and children, and I consider it the quickest acting and most satisfactory Cough Cure I have ever used. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front Street.

A PROGRESSIVE NATION

DR. BRADFORD TELLS OF THE RAPID ADVANCEMENT OF JAPAN.

The People of This Island Are Adopting All the Improvements of the Western Hemisphere—Even the Trolley is There.

An unusually interesting lecture on Japan was delivered Tuesday in the Congregational church, by Rev. Dr. Bradford of Montclair, one of the four gentlemen recently sent out to Japan by the American Board to look into the real state of affairs in that country.

The point emphasized by Dr. Bradford throughout his address was that the rapid progress made by Japan has had no parallel since the history of the nations has been written. We are accustomed to speak of them as a heathen nation, but they are fast taking their place among the most progressive nations of the world, having adopted western inventions, the railway, the telegraph and telephone, even the omnipresent trolley, western methods of dress, education, etc.

The beautiful mountain, Fuji-San, is the first sight of Japan to the incoming traveller, and the one which abides longest in his memory. In going through the country, one feels as if he were on some other planet from that on which he was born, all is so different from the Occident. There is scarcely a horse in the Empire; people are taken from place to place in jinrikishas, like two-wheeled baby carriages, drawn by men. The houses have sliding walls instead of partitions, which are often opened, so that as you pass, you may look in and see all the daily life of the family within. The Japanese have the most exquisite manners of any people in the world. They think, and they are right, that the English and Americans are simply boors in comparison.

Of their home life, the less said the better. To see a man and his wife in the street tells the whole story; they never walk side by side; the man is always ahead.

The Emperor, formerly unseen and unknown to his people, has now taken his place among the rulers of the world, and appears on all state occasions, as any other monarch would do.

The Japanese have gone to England for their ideals of government, to Germany for education, to France for army training, and to America for practical affairs. They are very quick in learning, but show less skill in application than in acquisition.

Is it necessary to send missionaries to such an enlightened people. Shinto ism, Confucianism and Buddism prevail in the country. There is no hope in these religions. The highest thought that they give of the universe is "an eternal process of causation." Let us send missionaries: surely joy is better than sorrow, and hope than dispair.

The Christians in the Empire are among the finest and most cultured people in the country. The missionaries among them are a noble set of men and women, some of them worthy of a place among the heroes and heroines of the world.

What of the future? The Japanese are a fickle but a progressive people. They will make a thousand mistakes, but sooner or later, we may feel sure, they must come to take their true place not only as one of the civilized nations, but as one of the Christian nations of the earth.

EPISCOPAL CONVENTION.

Bishop Scarborough Gives an Address and Reviews Church Work.

The annual convention of the Episcopal Diocese of New Jersey, which comprises all territory south of the Passaic River, began a two days' session in Elizabeth Tuesday in St. John's Episcopal church. Bisop Scarborough presided, and about three hundred delegates were present.

The convention sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Purse, of South Amboy. Bisop Scarborough delivered his annual address yesterday afternoon and reviewed the church work done during the year. A missionary service with addresses was held in St. John's church last evening. Communion was given this morning at 7 o'clock and the business session will meet at 8 o'clock.

The delegates were entertained with luncheon in the chapel by the women of St. John's church.

Mr. D. P. Davis, a prominent liveryman and merchant of Goshen, Va., has this to say on the subject of rheumatism: "I take pleasure in recommending Chamberlain's Pain Balm for rheumatism, as I know from personal experience that it will do all that is claimed for it. A year ago this spring my brother was laid up in bed with inflammatory rheumatism and suffered intensely. The first application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm eased the pain and the use of one bottle completely cured him. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, druggist.

MARRIED AT HIGH NOON.

A Pretty Home Wedding at Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Marsh's.

A pretty high noon wedding took place Tuesday when Miss Florence Amelia Marsh, daughter of Randolph and Maria Marsh, of 210 Plainfield avenue, was united in marriage to William Frederick Waglow, of New Market. The ceremony was performed at precisely twelve o'clock by Rev. G. K. Newell, the bridal party standing under an arch of dog-wood flowers and apple blossoms. The bride was prettily attired in a costume of gray Dresden cloth, trimmed with chiffon and velvet, while the bridesmaid was Miss Lillian Waglow, a sister of the groom, and was dressed in light cloth, with pink trimmings. Randolph Marsh, Jr., a brother of the bride, acted as best man. After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present. Later the couple left for Hartford Conn., by sound steamer, where they will remain for a few days. On their return, they will remain with the bride's parents for a month, after which they will go to housekeeping in this city. The happy couple will be at home to their friends at the bride's home after the 20th inst.

ABOUT THE FRENCH PEOPLE.

Mrs. E. B. Horton Gives an Entertaining Lecture to Plainfielders.

A fair-sized audience greeted Mrs. E. B. Horton, of Cranford, in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church last Monday and listened very attentively to her lecture on "Historic Paris and the Treasures of the Louvre." The lecture was accompanied by stereopticon views and was given for the benefit of the Boys' Mission Band, the Earnest Workers.

The speaker dwelt mostly upon scenes in Paris and its immediate vicinity, and included the scenery, exterior and interior, of buildings. The latter embraced many spots having bearing upon the lives of numbers of the great and noted men and women of the French Republic. Scenes of especial interest were those of points in the streets of Paris where events of unusual importance occurred in the various wars which have from time to time taken place in and about that city. The lecture closed with a view of Napoleon and his staff engaged in viewing their troops while the latter were engaged in battle.

The views shown throughout the lecture were unusually fine. A snug sum was realized for the treasury for the boys' society.

TO LUNCH WHILE ON PATROL.

Police Board Arranges to Feed the Officers at Midnight.

Improvements still go on with the police force. Since the Police Board has been organized they have had under consideration a plan by which the men could receive a midnight lunch while on their beats. The Board recognized the fact that to allow the officers to leave their posts and go home for lunch would be to court crime. It was also considered that twelve hours was too long a time for men to go without food when out in the night air in all kinds of weather and exercising continually. The Board have therefore made arrangements whereby sandwiches and coffee will be served to them on their posts at midnight. The plan will be put into immediate operation.

The Press Found the Owner.

Ex-Councilman J. B. Brown found a pocketbook a few days ago and advertised for its owner in the News. He received no replys from this medium, and then inserted a like advertisement in The Press. He immediately received several answers from people who had lost pocketbooks, and among them found the rightful owner, Mary James, of East Sixth street.

YOUNG MEN AS HOSTS.

They Arrange and Carry Out a Pleasing Church Sociable.

The young men of the Park Avenue Baptist church made an enviable record for themselves last Tuesday when they arranged and presented a social and entertainment that was probably the equal of anything of a similar nature ever given in the church. There was a large number of people present, many of whom came out of pure curiosity. The programme was opened with a pleasing selection by the orchestra, under the direction of Joseph Sattels. This was followed with zither solos by John VanEps, which were well received, as was also a vocal solo by E. E. Runyon. The last number on the programme was an amusing recitation by Miss Florence Smith.

Interspersing the numbers genuine sociability ruled among those present. A feature of the evening was a guessing contest. Cards bearing one word were given to each person and they were supposed to write a definition of the word on the card. The result was very amusing. Some of them were "What is Plainfield Trying to Be?" "A City," was the answer; "What Does Plainfield Want?" The appropriate answer was "A River." There was a great amount of fun in this part of the programme which was conducted by H. E. Ryder.

After two more selections by the orchestra the young men served refreshments to the guests. The fact that they had forgotten to bring knives to cut cake, and trays to pass it around, did not mar the pleasure.

Those having charge of the affair were H. E. Ryder, J. M. Hawkins, Wm. Stimpson, David Runyon, Wesley Brokaw, Nelson VanWinkle and Frank Clarkson.

At the close the remaining cakes were auctioned off and some brought as much as one dollar.

CODINGTON'S CORRECTION.

Is Not and Never Has Been Administrator of the W. J. Lowe Estate.

With reference to the action of Mrs Lowe, of Morristown, in seeking an accounting of her husband's estate, Assemblyman William B. Codington makes this correction of the published reports in the World this morning:

"I am not, nor have I ever been, the administrator of the estate of William J. Lowe, nor has the Union County Court ever appointed me administrator. Ex-Senator Marsh and myself were Mrs. Lowe's attorneys in the suit in the Union County Orphan's Court, wherein she sought the right of Mrs. Lowe to administer on the estate of her husband was questioned and bitterly fought by the brothers of William J. Lowe, Congressman Pitney representing the contestants. We were successful in the contest and both ex-Senator Marsh and myself were allowed a counsel fee, neither of which has yet been paid. The Morristown real estate of which William J. Lowe died seized has been sold by Charles A. Reed, Esq., special master, and the proceeds thereof still remain in his possession, except so far as they have been ordered paid by the Court and the dower interest of Mrs. Lowe still remains in the master's hands. The administrator pendente lite was Mr. Kelly, of Elizabeth. After the determination of the litigation in the Union County Orphan's Court, Hezekiah Hand and Mary E. Lowe were appointed administrators of the estate and still are acting as such."

Domesticated Robins.

A pair of robbin birds have chosen a very peculiar place for their nest at the home of Dr. Jenkins, East Front street. It is in a honeysuckle vine at the rear door of the doctor's office, even with a person's optical vision and within arm's length. So tame are the birds that they allow the doctor and his family to go in and out of the house without disturbing them. Woe to the dog, cat or other animal that attempts to disturb them.

KATE GARDNER'S CHAT.

Chicago Stores Show a Rich Display of Dress Fabrics.

The New Tailor-Made Gown Is a Thing of Beauty as Well as Utility—Novelties in Millinery—Dainty Cycling Gown.

[Special Chicago Letter.]

To the woman who considers it one of the first duties of life to be well and suitably gowned there is no more interesting and more delightful shopping time in all the year than in the spring when the stores first show their new and most fetching styles.

She knows by past experience how unwise it is to wait until a garment is actually needed, and takes time by the forelock, as it were, and selects what will be necessary for late spring and early summer wear before the goods have been picked over and the best styles culled out.

She must needs keep her wits about her, though, for what at first glance might appear the redeeming feature of the situation is really the thing that bewilders most. And that is the variety of designs and materials to choose from. So gorgeous and varied is the array that she need be limited only by individual taste or the length of her purse strings.

The tailor-made gown in all its beauty and elegance of design will be the favorite costume for spring wear, and deservedly so, for nothing can be prettier or more chic than the well made and perfect-fitting tailor gown of this season.

Some of the large importing houses are showing models in this line that for beauty of material and elegance of style and finish are never been equaled. The severely plain tailor gown that was so trying and universally unbecoming is a thing of the past, I am happy to note. And in its stead we have a gown in which much attention is given to trimming and ornamentation, but never to the verge of being elaborate. In short the tailor-made gown of to-day is perfection, nothing less or nothing more.

The skirt of cloth gowns — and I might say the same of many of the new frock and other material—is cut somewhat narrower than any yet seen, with the fullness massed into a very small space in the back, similar to the bell skirtof a past season. The main point of beauty in this new skirt, and one never lost sight of by the experienced modiste, is to have it well cut and well hung even when made of inexpensive material. Indeed, the expense of the new gown seems to be solely in the cut and finish, for in some of the most costly ones the material used is remarkably cheap.

Black and white in combination seems to have lost none of its popularity with the fashion makers. Many of the handsomest gowns hailing from Paris are in this rather old yet pleasing combination. For instance, a handsome tailor-gown with chic and French written in every seam, was made of smooth-faced cloth in somber black. The jaunty little coat opened over a waistcoat of cream-tinted broadcloth. Black and cream white mixed braid was used most tellingly on the white vest and flaring cuffs of the coat.

Another one, in black and white material, had the short jacket faced back with black velvet with an embroidered shirt of white finished at the neck by a narrow black silk cravat.

Many of the new gowns boast a cravat of black or white, and the neck bands are elaborately frilled round the back. And it is in the jauntiness and the little finishing touches at the neck where by the true artist in dress proclaims herself.

The actual style of a gown is easily copied by anyone, but to put just the right piece of lace in the most telling manner, to have the cravat tied in the proper way, and the knot of ribbon made to assume the proper position, are little tricks of taste understood by few.

In color or material for spring toilettes no particular one is paramount, unless perhaps I except blue alpaca in a rich, dark tone. It is favored alike by both home and foreign dress-makers and promises to reign supreme before the end of the season.

A stylish costume in this particular shade and material showed a distinctly novel mode of trimming. Every seam at the back of the waist was striped with jet embroidery which revealed a lining of tucks colored velvet. The fronts were decorated to match and partly cut away above the bust, showing a yoke of chiffon over which frills of black lace fell softly.

The sleeves were smaller than any I have seen, made to fall over the hands and utterly devoid of trimming save a very small puff at the elbow.

Of the change in the size of sleeves there is no longer any doubt. The knell of the huge sleeve is surely sounded, and the one minus puffs, frills and furbelows is to reign in its stead. Fashion as represented in Paris has spoken the word and our sleeves, by the time summer is here, will be grillless of fullness and as uncompromisingly plain as they were seven or eight seasons ago. It is really a social calamity, from my point of view, and I am sure many other women think the same, for whereas full sleeves in moderation were becoming to every figure the plain sleeve is to very few. But such abject slaves are we all to Dame Fashion that if she so decrees in three months' time the feminine world will swear by the plain sleeve.

The jackets this spring are exceedingly smart and fetching, and to the majority of women will prove almost irresistible. Fortunately, they come in several different styles, so that stout and slender women can select just what is most becoming to their respective figures and still be in the fashion.

They are a trifle shorter than those worn last season and have very little, if any, fullness in the back. They are made with sack-back, while not exactly new, has still enough of the air of novelty to justify its popularity.

Some of the new capes are wonderfully pretty, and are enough to bankrupt the most resolute woman. They are far more dressy than those worn in the autumn and the prettiest, but not the most costly, are made of grenadine over a handsome colored silken lining. The most expensive models come made up in richest velvet and are entirely covered with exceedingly fine silk braid and invariably lined with white or pale tinted lining.

As this braiding is all supposed to be put on by hand it represents a vas amount of time, skill and labor, and the braiders ought to be making a fortune this year.

One thing is assured about our coming head-gear. It will be as bright, if not brighter than last season, but the combinations, while daring, will not be crude.

Loose fancy braids and the new horse-hair trimming seem to be the things for foundations. The millinery world is fairly going mad over tulle as a trimming, and every hat almost boasts two or more large rosettes of black or white tulle. It is used extensively for entire hats and bonnets—one love of a bonnet in particular being made of it, and its sole trimming consisting of a bunch of Parma violets placed cunningly at the side under a snow-white os prey. It was an adorable creation which might best be described as quietly chic.

The popularity of the poke bonnet is assured, and many artistic Easter bonnets ordered in this novel shape. With its broad, projecting brim softly lined with lace and pretty flower face trimming it will prove a most bewitching frame to many beautiful faces.

Green is much liked for millinery, and a charming hat I saw yesterday in this color might be called a study in green. It was a dark shot green straw covered with a variety of green-ish brown flowers, the rosettes of pale green tulle on either side. At the back was an upstanding spray of leaves, held in place by a bunch of pale green roses.

With the first warm days of spring comes the tendency of women to exploit their cycling abilities, and, en passant, how truly awful, not to say disgusting, some of them look on wheels. The suitability, one might well say decency, of dress is not considered at all, and half an hour in any of the parks during the wheelwoman's parade —or exhibition—is enough to disgust any masculine creature, and has in itself done more to bring cycling for woman into ill-repute than anything else.

Many women would like to enjoy the pleasures of the wheel, but dare not venture forth in any of the so-called cycling costumes.

I think the one in the picture meets the requirements of the perfect wheeling dress, namely, genteel appearance and appropriateness.

It will not find favor in the eyes of the bloomer girl, although bloomers are worn under the plain, neat-fitting brown cloth skirt. KATE GARDNER.

REMEMBERING THE DEAD

JOINT DETAIL ARRANGE THE PROGRAMME FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Col. Mason W. Tyler Will Act as Chief Marshal—Gen. Negley, a Veteran of Many Battles, to Deliver the Memorial Address.

The Joint Memorial Detail from the G. A. R. posts, Woman's Relief Corps and Sons of Veterns met last Friday and about completed arrangements for the Memorial Day celebration. Col. Mason W. Tyler was selected as marshal of the day.

The line of march will form in the morning at 8:30 on East Front street, with the right resting on Watchung avenue, and the parade will be a short one. The Plainfield Cornet Band will head the line as usual. They will escort the Sons of Veterans camp to Scotch Plains in the morning after the parade in town. At Scotch Plains special exercises will be held at the Baptist Cemetery.

The children from the public schools will parade and each one will receive as a gift a handsome flag to carry. Captain Edwards and the Third Regiment Cadet Corps will also parade. In the afternoon at 2 o'clock the G.A.R., S. of V., and escorts will meet and proceed to Music Hall where interesting exercises will be held.

Both the Plainfield and North Plainfield Common Councils, city officials and members of the Board of Education will occupy private boxes. The opening prayer will be offered by Rev. Father Smyth, of St. Mary's church, and the oration of the day by Brigadier-General James S. Negley who led the famous Pennsylvania brigade. He was a veteran in the Mexican War while yet in his teens. In speaking at one time of General Negley, General Grant said that the former's fleet of steamboats for the transportation of his brigade from Pittsburg during the war taught him a lesson that he never forgot. He performed splendid service during the war and was a warm personal friend of General Grant.

In addition to the oration, there will be music by the band and singing by a large chorus of shool children.

Of course, the various cemeteries about the city will be visited in the morning, as usual, and flowers will be placed on the graves.

Col. Tyler will appoint his aides at an early date, and they will then be published. The detail will hold another meeting, subject to the call of the chair.

PITY FOR HIS FAMILY.

That is the Reason Why John Barry's Sentence Was Reduced.

Justice Mattison desires The Daily Press to state that the only reason why he remitted the sentence of three months imprisonment in the case of John Barry for cruelly treating a horse was on account of his wife and children. He does not think the sentence was too heavy as might be imagined. The fine of $50 has been paid, and $25 of the amount goes to the State. The balance goes to the complainant. In connection with this the Justice says that a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals should be organized in the borough, and thus the work could be carried on more successfully. He is very anxious that a society should be formed, and all persons interested should call on him. The $25 that now goes to the State would be placed in the treasury of the society if there was one, and there is no reason why such a society can not be started.

Not as Bad as Pictured.

The report of an accident on the Jersey Central railroad last Saturday, which was published in the New York papers on Sunday and in the local papers on Monday, was greatly exaggerated. The startling reports about the hair breadth escapes and hysteric passengers were coined by a sensational New York reporter, who by clever writing, made them appear plausible. Very naturally, The Press used the story because of the local flavor and the fact that at the time it believed it was true. The story caused quite a good deal of comment among timid people. Later investigation, however, proved that it was untrue, and was an unjust reflection on the management of the Central, who use every precaution to protect its patrons, and who are wonderfully successful in that direction.

Good News.

Street Commissioner R. A. Meeker told a Daily Press reporter recently that the work of repairing Park avenue between the railroad bridge and Front street, would probably be commenced next week. The Plainfield wheelmen would rise up and call him blessed if he would only get the roads in good condition.

Gained a Non-Suit.

The case of Swoody against Albert was tried at Somerville Tuesday afternoon, Assemblyman W. R. Codington appearing for the defendant. The case was a suit for damages for right of way through some property in Somerset county belonging to Swoody. Lawyer Codington succeeded in securing a non-suit for his client.

NATIONAL ENDEAVORERS

ANNUAL CONVENTION OF UNITED SOCIETIES TO BE HELD IN JULY.

They Will Meet in Washington—A Big Programme Arranged for Them—President Cleveland to Address Them.

The annual convention of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, which will be held at Washington, D. C., beginning on July 8th, is only a little more than two months away, and many Plainfield Endeavorers are preparing to attend.

The reception committee expects that fully 60,000 will attend. On every morning of the convention there will be held at 6:30 o'clock from twenty to thirty early morning prayer meetings in as many churches. The formal opening of the convention will occur on Thursday morning, July 9th, in the three great tents which will be pitched upon the White lot, south of the executive mansion. These will seat 10,000 persons each, including a chorus of 1,000 voices. On Thursday afternoon there will be held about thirty denominational rallies. The rallies of Presbyterians, Baptists and Congregationalists will be held in the three tents, and the others will be held in large churches. The topic for consideration Thursday evening will be "Christian Citizenship," the feature which has become very prominent since the last meeting. The topic for Friday is "Saved to Serve."

Saturday will be outdoor day. An open-air praise service will be held at the Washington monument, and it is hoped brief addresses will be delivered from the steps of the Capitol. Saturday evening will be devoted to receptions of the State delegations.

Each State delegation will hold their reception in the First Presbyterian church, and the pastor, Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage, a native of this State, will be present. President Cleveland has promised to accept the invitation to attend, if possible, he also being a Jerseyman.

No service will be held on Sunday morning or evening in the tents, everyone attending the regular services in the churches. In the afternoon there will be held denominational missionary rallies. On Monday morning the World's Christian Endeavor Union, formed last year in Boston, will hold its first annual convention.

A special train will leave Jersey City two days before the beginning of the Washington convention in order to give the delegates a chance for sightseeing. The total expense for each New Jersey delegate to the Washington convention will not be more than $22.50 from New York city.

BATTLE WITH SNAKES.

Two Scotch Plains Lads Succeed in Killing Two Big Reptiles.

John Sell and Archie Davie, two boys who reside in Scotch Plains, had a fierce battle with two large black-snakes Thursday at the foot of the mountains back of Netherwood. The boys were roaming through the woods when they were suddenly set upon by the snakes. The boys bravely stood their ground and after a battle which lasted half an hour they managed to kill the reptiles. One of the snakes measured five feet nine inches in length and the other six feet two inches.

A Spring Rally.

Preparations for the spring conference of the Union County Christian Endeavor Society to be held in the latter part of May, were begun at a meeting of the county executive committee Tuesday night, and an invitation was accepted from the Greystone Presbyterian church of Elizabeth as the place for holding. Simon Lirch, of the Greystone church, was appointed chairman of the committee of arrangements, and Mrs. Lowry, of Plainfield, the county junior superintendent, was selected as one of his associates. It will be the annual rally, and an election of officers will take place. The nominating committee are Spencer A. Van Derveer, Mrs. L. D. Williams and Clifford Willis, of Elizabeth, A. B. Wilson, of Rahway, and W. J. Harris, of South Plainfield.

SIX AT HYMEN'S ALTAR.

BUT NOW THEIR HEARTS BEAT AS ONE, SO TO SPEAK.

Two Church and One Home Wedding Solemnized Last Night—Names of the Bridal Parties and Those Present.

A very pretty wedding took place in St. Mary's church Thursday afternoon at 5:30, when Miss Katherine Agnes Mahoney and James J. Strappe were united in marriage by Rev. Father Murphy. The bridemaid was Miss Margaret Strappe and the best man P. J. Mahoney, a brother of the bride, of New York. The bride was attired in a blue cloth traveling suit, trimmed with silk and spangles, and carried a bouquet of white bridal roses. The bridesmaid wore a gown of brown silk, trimmed with lace and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The church was filled to the doors with the friends and relatives of the happy couple. The ushers were Michael Mack and Thomas Strappe. Miss St. Leger, organist of the church, was unavoidably absent, and Miss Teanie Smith, organist of St. Joseph's church, kindly volunteered to officiate at the organ.

Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party proceeded to the future home of the newly married couple, 27 Brook avenue, where a reception was held from six until nine o'clock. Two rooms were necessary to hold all the valuable and handsome presents which the couple received.

The house was completely filled with invited guests, among whom were the following: Miss Margaret Strapp, Miss Mary Hines, Miss Minnie Charles, Miss Lizzie McInerney, Miss Josephine Hayes, Miss Kate Dargan, Miss Kate Savard, Miss Minnie Walsh, Misses Margaret, Julia and Lizzie Day, Miss Ellen Reilly, Misses Mamie and Kittie Lehay, Miss Nellie Kelly, Miss Katie Whalen, Miss Kate Kiely, Miss Nellie Bagley, Miss Mary Burke, Misses Margaret and Agnes Mahoney, Mr. and Mrs. James Mahoney, Mrs. Ella Mahoney, Mr. Margaret De Mott, Mrs. Mary Farley, Mr. and Mrs. James Whalen, Mr. and Mrs. Lehay, and Mr. and Mrs. Burns, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Staats, Mr. and Mrs. Guise, Mr. and Mrs. Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. T. McCarthy, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Day, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Day, and Messrs. Harry Weirenger, M. J. Cashin, Dennis Bagley, Michael Higgins, Con Guinee, William Winn, Patrick Mahoney, James Mahoney, Charles Gillmore, Michael Mack, Thomas Strappe and Patrick Revelle. Father Murphy and a section of the Catholic Club also visited during the evening.

After nine o'clock dancing began, and continued throughout the evening, music for which was furnished by an orchestra under the direction of Prof. O'Reilly.

Mr. and Mrs. Strappe will be at home on Thursday, May 28th, from six to nine.

The Mt. Olive Baptist church was the scene Thursday of one of the most fashionable weddings that has ever been witnessed there. The happy couple were Miss Hattie Bailey, of East Sixth and Washington streets, and John W. Murray, of the Hotel Albion. Rev. P. S. Gibson, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends.

The appointed hour, 8:30 o'clock, did not bring the bridal party and the guests there anxious, but their anxiety was somewhat subdued by the rendition of several classical selections on the organ by Thomas Marsh, of New Brunswick. The party arrived soon after 9 o'clock and while they entered the church the Lohengrin wedding march was executed. The ushers, Alfred White, Frank Kelsey, George Anderson and Mr. Johnson, of New York, preceded the party and before reaching the altar faced inward to allow the maid of honor and bridemaids to pass through. The bride followed leaning on the arm of William J. Douglass who gave her away. After a circle was formed about the altar the groom and best man, Frederick Boughton, of New York, entered from a side room and joined the party.

The bride was gowned in white silk trimmed with lace. She wore a handsome diamond ornament veil and carried white roses. The maid of honor, Miss Lulu Douglass, wore a gown of white China silk, decollette, trimmed with lace, ribbons, roses and smilax and carried a basket of pink and yellow roses. The bridemaids, Miss Lina Coles, Miss Minnie Harris, of Elizabeth, Miss Murray, of Brooklyn, and Miss Carrie Johnson, of Jersey City, were all gowned in white, except Miss Coles who wore pink. They carried pink roses. The bridesmaidon wedding march was rendered while the party were leaving the church.

A reception followed at the home of William J. Douglass, 525 East Third street, which was largely attended. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Murray left for New York where they make a short visit. They will reside in this city. They were handsomely remembered with presents from their many friends with whom they are very popular.

Miss Anna Elizabeth Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith, of Johnson avenue, and John Hewitt, of East Third street, were quietly married last Thursday at 7:30, by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, at the home of the latter. After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt went to 126 Johnson avenue, where they will reside. Owing to the illness of the bride's mother the wedding was a quiet one. Mr. Hewitt is a machinist and is employed at Scott's Printing Machine Works.

FOR TEMPERANCE.

Editor O'Brien, of New York, Reads Its Benefits.

During the past winter St. Mary's T. A. B. Society have given several entertainments, the object being to further the cause of temperance, the last evening a good-sized audience assembled at eight o'clock to hear J. W. O'Brien, of New York, editor of the Sunday Union and Catholic Times, deliver a temperance lecture. The subject is naturally a dry one, but Mr. O'Brien made it very interesting, his remarks being interspersed by many anecdotes, and he held the close attention of his hearers to the end of his address. Mr. O'Brien has had large experience in temperance matters, having been National Secretary of the Catholic Temperance Union for many years. He told of the benefits of temperance, and cited many examples to prove his assertions. A great many people, he said, think ale and beer contain strengthening properties, but according to a test made by Prof. Doremus, a loaf of bread has more nutriment than a barrel of ale. The speaker said that Stanley, the African explorer, told him he always took men on exploring expeditions who did not drink liquors, as they stood the heat better. The same rule also applied to those in the Arctic regions. Fathers Smyth and Murphy also made a few remarks. The temperance society and cadets were present and renewed their pledge. St. Mary's Temperance Society was organized May 19th, 1872, is in a flourishing condition and a credit to the church and city.

UNIFORMS FOR THE COPS

AFTER DISCUSSION BOROUGH SOLONS DECIDE TO BUY THEM.

Much Talk About Street Improvement—Petition That a Street Be Vacated—Reports of the Clerk and Collector.

The only member absent from the May meeting of the Borough Council Friday was Mr. Peck. After the minutes were read and approved Clerk Arnold presented the following report:

	Balance.	Deficit.
Borough	$1,145.59
Fire department	249.93
Light	75.49
Road	310.59
	$2,081.44
Poor	92.58
	$2,398.36	total balance.
Collected from fines and licenses		$155.00

Tax Collector H. N. Spencer presented his monthly report, which was as follows:

Board of Health	$ 2.91
Special school tax	39.50
	$ 40.81
County, State, etc.	169.91
Total tax	$ 210.72
Previously reported	37,954.99
Total for 1895	$38,165.91
County tax	$23.34
State school	20.79
Poor	15.40
Light	17.71
Road	15.40
Fire Department	10.78
Poor	5.39
Bell	4.00
Dog	2.00
Sidewalks	45.30
	$189.91

Both reports were received and filed.

Two petitions were received from D. A. Mills and others asking that Summit avenue be macadamized; also that water mains be laid through the avenue. They were referred to the proper committees. The resignation of Patrick Kellegher as engineer of Warren Engine Company, No. 1, was received and accepted. A. E. Faber, Jr., and others, asked that an electric light be placed at the corner of Howard and Grove streets, also that Howard street be repaired. The matter was referred to the proper committees.

Mr. Riker, of the Street Railway Company, communicated with the Council regarding the narrowing of the gauge of the tracks in the borough and asked that permission be granted as early as possible. In regard to the complaints made about the poor condition of Somerset street, Mr. Riker stated that it would be more satisfactory if the borough would do the entire work and let the company pay their proportionate share for the work which they were willing to do. The communication was referred to the street committee.

Mrs. W. J. Roome petitioned the Council to vacate Sycamore avenue from Mr. Irven to the brook. The map shows a street on the above property and as Mrs. Roome owns one half and the White estate the other half. The petition is made for the reason that a street is not wanted and it is the desire to secure the property in such a state that it can be used for building lots. The petition was received and filed. Later in the evening Mr. McLaughlin offered a resolution that May 15th be set as the time to hear any objections to the vacation of the property. The resolution prevailed. After the presentation of the usual batch of claims, they were audited and ordered paid. Clerk Arnold started to read the report of the Watchung avenue commissioners, but on motion of Mr. MacLaughlin the reading was suspended. This was the last heard of the report.

Mr. Lounsbury stated that a year ago it was ordered that summer uniforms for the marshals be purchased. This was not done; but it was now his intention of renewing the resolution, also that a wardrobe be placed in the lockup, which can be used by the marshals to keep their clothing, etc., in.

Mr. McLoughlin raised the objection that the marshals should purchase their own uniforms. Dr. Cooley, who was in the lobby, also protested against it. He said that when the borough first began paying for the uniforms the marshals received $37 a month, now they were getting $60. Mr. Lounsbury stated that during William N. Pangborn's first term as marshal he collected a sufficient amount to secure the clothes and then the borough re-imbursed him. This he thought was not proper. Mr. Valiant said their salaries were not lucrative and the borough ought to purchase the uniforms. Continuing Mr. Lounsbury said that the borough should be ashamed to think that they ever paid their marshals $37 a month. He thought it was beneath the dignity of the borough to only pay enough to keep body and soul together. It is not easy work that the marshals perform. Mr. McLoughlin stated further that many men were working harder and getting less money, and yet purchased their own clothes. On a vote the resolutions prevailed, Mr. McLoughlin voting no. The cost of uniforms is not to exceed $60.

Mr. Valiant offered an ordinance repealing the ordinance regulating the use of bicycles in the borough, and offered another ordinance in its place to conform to the State law. The ordinance was repealed and the other one adopted on its second reading and laid over the required length of time for its third reading.

Mr. Valiant called up the ordinance which provides for the re-numbering of Westervelt avenue. It was passed on its third reading, and will go into effect May 18th.

Mr. Schutt offered a resolution that the clerk be instructed to draw a warrant for $25, the amount appropriated by the Memorial Day ordinance, the same to be payable to W. W. Corfell, of the G. A. R. committee. It was so ordered. Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution that as the Watchung avenue commissioners had made assessments for damages and duly filed their report, that Friday evening, May 15th be set as the time to hear any objection to their report. The resolution prevailed. Mayor Hegeman appointed W. T. Newman as engineer in the place of Peter Kellogher, resigned. The appointment was confirmed. At this time Mr. Woolston called for the bids for furnishing crushed stone, flagging and crosswalks. J. Y. Wilson presented the only bid for crushed stone. He offered slab No. 2, at 95 cents per ton No. 1 dust at $1 per ton. John T. Thickstun offered five, four, and three feet flagging at 90, 66 and 50 cents per lineal foot. Mr. Lazzie's bid was flagging two feet and five inches at 85 cents and two feet and four inches at 45 cents per lineal foot. H. C. Johnson bid 40 cents for flagging and 40 cents for crosswalks. The bids were all referred to the committee with power. Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution that Geo. Kirch be given permission to erect a shed in front of his building on Somerset street, providing that he will take it down if requested to by the Council. Mr. Schutt offered a resolution that Mercer avenue, between Duer and Grove streets, be macadamized under the direction of the Street Committee. The resolution was adopted. Following in the same line Mr. Woolston offered a resolution that the petition of T. R. Silvers and other residents of Westervelt avenue, asking that the street be macadamized, be granted.

He stated that the residents had contributed $60 and the cost would be $480.

Mr. McLaughlin objected and thought that it would be establishing a bad precedent to grant such a request when so small amount had been raised toward the work.

Mr. Lounsbury said he thought they should pay for the benefits, and he ventured the assertion that where the property was not improved the owners wanted such enormous prices for their property that it would be impossible to improve it.

Mr. Valiant said that if the assessment on property was not sufficient the fact reflected on the assessor and something should be done.

Mr. Cooley stated that he had paid for macadamizing streets when it had been injurious to his business, owing to the increase in travel. He did not care whether Westervelt avenue was macadamized or not so long as the street was made passable.

Mr. McLaughlin's motion that the resolution lay on the table was lost and by vote the resolution was adopted, Mr. McLaughlin alone voting no.

On motion of Mr. Valiant, Council then went into executive session.

Mr. McLaughlin moved that the Council meet Friday evening, May 8th, when the petition from the street railway will be considered.

Operation on the Eye.

The many friends of Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, who has been suffering for a week with terribly inflamed eyes, will be glad to learn that she obtained relief this morning through the skill of Dr. F. C. Ard, who discovered a small particle of foreign substance in one of her eyes.

—The excursion of Grace M. E. church and Sunday-school, together with the Westfield M. E. church and Sunday-school will be held July 10th. They will spend the day at Oscawana Island, N. Y.

—At a meeting of the Sunday-school teachers of Grace M. E. church held a few days ago, it was decided to celebrate children's day this year as usual. After children's day, for the summer months, the school will meet in the morning from 9:45 to 10:45.

Plainfield will be visited tomorrow by the Manhasset Cyclers, of Brooklyn, on their club run. The party will leave the club house at 396 Clinton street at 8:15 a. m., in charge of Capt. Farrel F. Cowley.

The racing team of the Clio Wheelmen, of Jersey City, consists of Walter Roome, Harry Rohfs, Frank Kuhl and Charles Heebers. The team will probably train on the old Guttenburg race track, and it is the intention of the club to hold several meets there this season.

Monte Scott, Plainfield's old favorite, is now training for the Irvington-Millburn road race on Decoration Day and expects to contest. Scott is still at his home in Providence. Although the handicaps are not yet announced for the big race, it is very probable that Scott will be one of those to start from scratch.

LIBERAL WOMEN ELECT.

FEMININE MEMBERS OF THE UNITARIAN CHURCH IN SESSION HERE.

Papers Read on the Service Which Rational Religion Demands—Most of the Delegates From New York and Brooklyn.

Mrs. F. W. Hooper, of Brooklyn, President of the New York League of Unitarian Women, presided at the annual meeting held in All Souls church Thursday. Mrs. Florence Howe Hall made a most excellent address of welcome to the visiting women. Mrs. W. T. Nichols, who delivered one of the papers at the morning session, is the wife of General Secretary W. I. Nichols of the Brooklyn Bureau of Charities. A talk followed by Mrs. Burden, of Brooklyn. The subject "Services Which Rational Religion Demands" was discussed by Mrs. Chadwick, of Brooklyn, and Mrs. Hall. A short paper prepared by Mrs. B. Ward Dix, president of the National Alliance, was read by the secretary, after which a delightful hour was spent at lunch.

The first busines of the afternoon session was the election of officers. The result was as follows: President, Mrs. C. E. Lowe, Brooklyn; vice-presidents, Mrs. C. T. Catlin, Brooklyn, and Mrs. R. H. Davis, New York; recording secretary, Mrs. A. Wendell Jackson, New York; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Whiting, Brooklyn; treasurer, Mrs. C. C. Knowlton, Brooklyn. This was followed with excellent reports from the various branches, after which the meeting adjourned.

There were about one hundred women present, mostly from Brooklyn and New York, and they very eagerly sought branches of the apple blossoms and dogwood, which formed the decorations, to take home as souvenirs of their visit to Plainfield.

The following women of this city composed the committees having in charge the reception and entertainment of the visitors, and the decorations of the church: Reception committee, Mrs. Hobart Clark, Mrs. Ruth Leonard and other members of the executive board; refreshment committee, Mrs. S. R. Krom, Mrs. Ruth Leonard, Mrs. F. H. Hebard, Mrs. Arthur Kerr; decoration committee, Miss Caroline Haviland, Miss Anna Haviland, Miss Edith Leonard; waitresses, Mrs. Edgar B. Smith, Mrs. Edgar Munford, Miss Eva Pierce, Miss Curry and Miss Stephanie Krom.

Altogether the meeting was very successful, and this being the first time it has been held in this city the Plainfield women hope it will not be the last.

MENTAL TRIP THROUGH ITALY.

Rev. T. Logan Murphy Gave an Interesting Lecture Last Night.

A very interesting and instructive lecture on Italy was given last evening in the Holy Cross parish building by Rev. T. Logan Murphy under the auspices of the Willing Circle King's Daughters. There was a good attendance. The first pictures thrown upon the screen were of the scenery and buildings. Italy is just as noted today for its glorious scenery, sculptures and paintings, as it was ages ago.

Views of all the principal cities were shown, including Naples, Genoa, Milan, Verna, Venice, Florence, Pompeii and Rome. In each of the cities the wonderful architecture of the buildings, all of which were built thousands of years ago, were eulogized by the speaker in an eloquent manner. In each city, the buildings which were the most interesting and wonderful in regard to architecture and history, were picked out. Venice and its streets of water, the beauty of Pompeii and the wonders of ancient and modern Rome were talked of. The speaker said a great many people have an idea that the latter place is not up to the other cities in Europe in regard to modern improvements, but he wished to say that he saw more electric light to the square inch in Rome than in any city in this country. Several fine views of the wonderful statuary of ancient Italy which have been destroyed, were also given. The lecture closed with a picture of the altar and choir boys of Holy Cross church. The lantern which was used belonged to the Camera Club and was operated by members of the club. Refreshments were served after the lecture.

Robert G. Ingersoll, the talented agnostic, is one of the latest converts to wheeling. His conversion to this has been easy, while his conversion to Christianity has been laborious and fruitless. However, the stately lecturer, now that he has a racer, can prepare for scorching. —The American Wheelman.

A. B. Barnett, of the Jersey Wheel Company's racing team, stated positively to a Press reporter that, despite all reports to the contrary, he will not ride in the Irvington-Millburn road race on Decoration Day. He will confine his work to the track this year. He will open the season at Philadelphia on May 16th, when he will ride in a ten-mile professional handicap.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—According to the latest school census in New York 70,000 fewer children were in attendance at the schools than a year ago.

—Mgr. Agostino Caprara, the advocate of the devil, has just died at Rome. The duty of the advocatus diaboli is to present the objections to the canonization of any person proposed as a new saint and to cast doubts on his miracles, while the advocatus Dei takes the other side.

—Rev. Dr. Jacob Cooper, professor of logic in Rutgers college, is to be Mr. Gladstone's American editor, or, rather, editor in America. Dr. Cooper suggested the latter book to Mr. Gladstone and has revised numerous articles written by the grand old man.

—There were 114,439 fewer children being educated in French primary schools than there were five years ago, according to the last report of the minister of public instruction, while in the five years the number of pupils in the schools of the Christian Brothers nearly doubled. The Brothers are now teaching 1,363,886 children, with no aid from the government.

—Rev. John Watson, M. A., minister of Sefton Park Presbyterian church, Liverpool, more widely known as "Ian Maclaren," has received from the University of St. Andrews the degree of Doctor of Divinity. "The most ancient university," as the late Lord Selborne once said, "in a land whose citizens are distinguished in every sphere in which distinction can be gained," has a happy way of anticipating the larger recognition by institutions in its recognition of merit.

—The "Costers' Parson" is dead. It is not too much to say that more than any other Christian worker of recent times Rev. A. R. Goulden succeeded in civilizing the Coal-whippers. It is worthy of reserve that those who labor among the London poor have found so difficult to overcome. He won first the confidence and then the affections of an almost unapproachable class, and the church in Shoreditch, in Southwark, became the temple of the most thoroughly working-class congregation in London.

—An "experience social" was held by the young women of the Methodist church in Coldwater, Mich., recently, in which the usual conditions of things was reversed, because the young women were paid for the experience they acquired, instead of themselves paying dearly for the privilege of getting it. They shined shoes, tended babies, split kindling wood, and one or two shaved and cut the hair of a few fearless men who attended the social.

STEAL INVENTIONS.

Pirates in the World of Discovery Who Thrive Upon Stolen Ideas.

As Thomas A. Edison watched the pumping of air from a glass tube in his laboratory a day or two ago a man said to him:

"You patent every little thing you discover, don't you, Mr. Edison?"

"I do," said Mr. Edison. "And do you know why I do it?"

"I suppose you do it so you will reap the benefit of your discovery," was the reply.

"I thought you'd say that," said Mr. Edison; "and I don't suppose you will believe me when I tell you it isn't so. But it isn't. I patent things because I'm a great many things that I would be very glad to give to the public for nothing, but I don't dare. I patent these things to save myself from defending lawsuits. There are a lot of sharks in this world who are continually on the lookout for new things, and when one of them hears of something new he hustles to the patent office to see if it is patented. If it isn't he claims it as an original idea and then files his claim. Then he will turn right around and, like as not, begin suit against the very man who invented the things for making or using it. The inventor will say: 'But I discovered this thing first; I am the inventor.' He is referred to the patent office, where he finds the official claim of original invention. The fact that the papers are filed long after he made his discovery does not help him, for all the other man does is to hire a fellow to swear that he made the discovery a month or two prior to the date the inventor claims. It sounds ridiculous, probably, but it is a fact, that there are often races between the inventors and these sharks to reach the patent office, the sharks having had early information about the inventor's discovery. There are many such races, and thousands of dollars depend on each one. What I say is literally true. I patent things, and no doubt, many other inventors patent things, just to save defending lawsuits."—N. Y. Sun.

A Touchy Ruler.

Emperor William is something of a tartar when it comes to himself being discussed. Less sensitive to criticism is a curious thing. A man in Cologne last fall was discussing the American constitution. He had just returned from America and was eloquent in our praise. Then going on to discuss the kaiser, he began: "Now, he kaiser—," and stopped, realizing his danger. But he was overheard and denounced to the police, arrested, tried and sentenced to three months' imprisonment for what he was reported to have said. The day a man was called upon to appraise a plaster bust of the empress. He said the bust was not worth a mark. He shared the fate of the first individual. Last summer at Posen at a pleasure party said: "What a fool that kaiser is!" He was arrested and taken to the police station, but was able to prove that he had been speaking of a man named Kaiser instead of the emperor. A common mode of concealing their views from servants, who are perhaps, spies, is for persons when talking of the kaiser to call him Herr Muller. Speech was free under Louis the Great in France 200 years ago than in Germany to-day under William.—Chicago News.

THE BATTLE SHIP IOWA.

Will Be the Most Formidable Craft in Our New Navy.

Over a Thousand Tons Larger Than the Indiana and a Model Floater—"Double Bome" Sides a Feature of Its Construction.

About two years and a half ago the keel of the Iowa was laid, and within another year she will be completed and ready to join the North Atlantic squadron. She is now over 1,000 tons greater displacement than the sister ships Indiana, Oregon and Massachusetts, and several feet longer and broader.

One striking peculiarity of the vessel is her "double bome" sides, or inclosed bulwarks, that makes the French warships so different in appearance from those of other navies. The old Constitution is one of the few ships that have ever been in the American navy with sides of this design. The object was to give a defective side to shot and in the Iowa the idea carried out is to afford greater rapidity of fire and ease of manipulating the guns in her broadside sponsons. One great military mast with an interior spiral stairway leads to two fighting tops, where rapid fire guns are stationed and accommodations provided for a large number of sharpshooters. Her complement when will be nearly 500, or greater than that of any preceding warship of the new navy.

The Iowa is constructed under the act of July 19, 1892, when provision was made for one "seagoing battleship of about 9,000 tons displacement," to cost, exclusive of armament and speed premiums, not more than $4,000,000. To Secretary Tracy, assisted by his advisers, Chief Constructor Wilson and Engineer-in-Chief George W. Melville, were left the details. Comparing the Iowa and the Indiana, the difference between their dimensions may be appreciated by the accompanying measurements:

	Indiana.	Iowa.
Length on load water line	348 feet	390 feet
Breadth, extreme	69 feet	73 feet
Displacement, normal draft	10,300 tons	11,296 tons
Mean draft at normal displacement	24 feet	24 feet
Freeboard forward	12 feet	19 feet
Normal coal supply	400 tons	825 tons
Total coal capacity	1,800 tons	2,000 tons
Maximum speed indicated horse power	9,000	11,000
Speed in knots per hour	15 knots	16 knots
Complement of officers and men	400	495

The comparison shows to the advantage of the new ship 1,100 tons more displacement, an increased length of

FIRST-CLASS BATTLESHIP IOWA.

12 feet, four feet more beam, seven feet four inches more freeboard forward, a large coal capacity of 200 tons over either the normal or maximum coal supply of the Indiana, 2,000 more collective horse-power, and, as a result, one knot more of speed, together with a correspondingly increased sustained force of propulsion, which latter, rather than high speed, was what saved the English ship Calliope during the Samoan disaster.

The hull will be of steel, with a double bottom and close, watertight subdivision of about ten feet above the water line. The vessel will have one military mast, with fighting tops, but will carry no sail. The water line region of the hull is to be protected by a side belt of 18 inches of maximum thickness, with a main depth of 7½ feet. The transverse armor at the ends of the belt will be not less than 12 inches in thickness, with a main depth of 7½ feet. The 12-inch plate is to have armor not less than 15 inches thick. The ship's sides, from the armor belt to the main deck, will be protected by steel armor five inches thick, and coal is to be carried back of this five-inch casemate armor. The protective deck is less than three inches thick, is to extend forward and aft from the ends of the armor belt, and over the side armor belt this steel deck will be 2½ inches thick.

A conning tower, not less than ten inches thick, will have an armored communication tube not less than seven inches thick extending to the armor deck, and affording protection to speaking tubes, bell wires, etc.

The armament is to consist of the following guns: Four 12-inch, eight 8-inch, and six 4-inch breech-loading rifles; twenty 6-pounders, four 1-pounders, four Gatlings, and one field gun.

Briefly, then, the Iowa, compared with the Indiana, has greater length, greater beam, more than 1,000 tons additional displacement, increased length of outer-belt line and greater coal endurance and speed, together with the ability to carry a heavier 4-inch gun in almost any condition of sea.

There will be six torpedo tubes, one bow, one stern and two on each broadside, one forward and one abaft the beam.

The propelling engines will be rights and lefts, placed in water-tight compartments and separated by a middle line bulkhead. These engines will be of the vertical, inverted cylinder, direct-acting, triple-expansion type, each with a high-pressure cylinder 39 inches, an intermediate-pressure cylinder 55 inches and a low-pressure cylinder 85 inches in diameter, the stroke of all pistons being 48 inches. The collective indicated horse power of propelling, air pump and circulating pump engines will be 11,000 when the main engines are making about 122.5 revolutions per minute. The high-pressure cylinder of each engine will be forward and the low-pressure cylinder aft.

MARQUETTE STATUE.

A Work of Art Which Has Caused Considerable Ill Feeling.

Wisconsin's statue of Pere Marquette, the French explorer and Jesuit priest, stands in Statuary hall in the capitol at Washington with no definite date set for its unveiling. The ceremony was to have been performed on February 29, but was then postponed and no other day has been fixed upon. The cause of this inexcusable tardiness and delay is the opposition raised by the American Protective association and other anti-Catholic interests as expressed in the resolutions of Congressman Linton, of Michigan, introduced recently in the house of representatives.

STATUE OF PERE MARQUETTE.

The statue is offered to the United States by Wisconsin under the law which permits each state to place a statue of one of its citizens in Statuary hall. For years Wisconsin's legislature had been trying to honor some one of its most distinguished citizens by taking advantage of this privilege and placing his statue in the national capitol, but was unable to agree upon anyone to be so honored until Father Marquette was proposed by George C. Ginty, then, in 1887, a state senator. The Catholic interests in the state at once gave the project their strongest support and raised the greater part of the $8,000 the statue has cost. That legislature of Wisconsin took the necessary official action and, in 1894, Gov. Peck made a contract with Trentanave to design and make the statue.

But Congressman Linton declares that the law which gives to the separate states of the union the privilege of erecting statues in Statuary hall provides that the statues shall be those of citizens of the states erecting them, who shall have performed civic or military services pre-eminent to distinction. Pere Marquette, he further says, was a Frenchman and not a citizen of Wisconsin or any other state of this union. However, the statue was accepted on behalf of the United States by a joint resolution passed in special session of the Fifty-third congress. Then Congressman Linton, as spokesman for the opposition, declares that the statue represents Marquette wholly in the character of a priest, and therefore does not conform to the intent of the resolution providing for its acceptance, and that it now occupies a place in Statuary hall in violation of the law. Mr. Linton's resolution, embodying this allegation and this claim, was referred to committee and cannot be brought before the house until he is recognized by the speaker.

GREAT CHESS CONTEST.

International Match, Played by Cable, Won by the Americans.

One more international triumph was added to America's long list March 14, when the gallant team of eight chess experts successfully upheld the country's honor on the checkered board and wrestled from the Britons the INTERNATIONAL CHESS TROPHY.

$500 trophy offered by Sir George Newnes, of London, by a score of 4½ to 3½.

The Yankees downed their British rivals after the most stubborn team chess match on record, every inch of the ground being fiercely contested. Wild excitement prevailed when the final score of 4½ games for the Americans and 3½ games for the British was announced. When play started it looked as though the British players would come out successful, but as the play advanced the Americans gained wonderfully and managed to win out. Following is the final score:

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

The consolidation of the New York Times and Recorder is like mixing milk and vinegar.

Colored Republicans are anxious to have two representatives of their race on the State committee.

The McKinley movement is getting the delegates while Thomas C. Platt is telling how he is going to defeat the Ohio man.

John Kean is said to enjoy General Sewell's favor for chairman of the Republican State Convention. And that is half of election.

The new Board of Aldermen of Rahway organized last night by re-electing President Holmes and City Clerk S. Rusling Ryno.

Chancellor McGill has appointed Martin P. Gray, of Camden, a vice-chancellor, to fill the vacancy created by the last Legislature. This completes the Chancellor's staff.

It is said that the Woman's Town Improvement Association propose to ask the Central Railroad Company to make improvements at the North Avenue station which will cost over $1,000.

Frederick C. Marsh, of Elizabeth, and James E. Martine, of this city, are mentioned as possible delegates to the Democratic National Convention from the Eighth Congressional District.

Ohio has followed the custom of New York and hereafter electrocution will prevail instead of hanging. How long will it be before New Jersey follows suit? It is the only proper capital punishment.

Both the New York and Plainfield police forces are engaged in putting down the free lunch. But their methods and objects are somewhat different. The Plainfield minions have the most agreeable task.

Congress has fixed the salary of the United States Marshal and District Attorney of New Jersey at $3,000 each. The House fixed the figure at $2,000 and the Senate at $4,000. The $3,000 was fixed as a compromise.

Our up-Jersey Democratic friends are hopeful of victory this fall, and this reminds us that the South Jersey Democrats should get together and make a long and strong pull for victory this fall.—Camden Democrat.

The latest slate of delegates at large who are out to be elected on Thursday at the Democratic State Convention is Allan McDermott, United States Senator James Smith, Frederick Marsh, of Elizabeth, and either Attorney General John P. Stockton or Judge Howard Carrow, of Camden, says The Herald.

Miles Ross denied the statement that he was a candidate for delegate-at-large to the National Democratic Convention in Chicago, yesterday. He stated he was not a candidate and would not accept the appointment. His health would prevent him from attending to the duties of delegate, even if he had no other objections.

It does not seem practical, as the Trenton True American advocates, for the Democratic State Committee to resign as a body in order to infuse new blood into the leadership of the party. There should be, at least, a few of the older heads left who are versed by experience in political strategy, to direct the important campaign about to be inaugurated.

The Shah of Persia has been killed. He was worth a good many millions, and leaves a thousand or more wives. It is reasonable to presume that they will draw straws to see who will act as chief mourners. If reports be true, the Shah was a tyrant and cruel man, and civilized people can express but little sympathy for him.

Poor New Brunswick. Dirty, slow and wicked she is. The only commendable things she ever has come as gifts. Now Congressman Howell has had Congress pass an act making a gift to the soldiers' and sailors' association of the squntry old town. The present is four condemned cannon and thirty balls, and they will be used to decorate the war monument which has recently been put up in that city.

City Judge DeMeza yesterday retained Craig A. Marsh in the chancery suit brought against him by Irenaus P. Allen, about which the New York dailies yesterday printed serious charges against the Judge. In less than twenty-four hours time, Mr. Marsh has secured the complete exoneration of Judge DeMeza and had the suit dismissed with costs. The Judge's many friends in this city will be glad to hear of his vindication.

The Woman's Town Improvement Association is neither slow nor bashful. Therefore, they may be expected to accomplish something of what they undertake.

It is said that the Newark Daily Advertiser has been purchased by Shef field Phelps, who recently became interested in the Jersey City Journal. There is plenty of room for improvement on the Advertiser.

At the present rate of improvement, the Plainfield police force will soon be the finest in the land. It is doubtful if there is another city of 13,500 population in the country that can compare with this municipal department of Plainfield.

The Prohibitionists are tenacious as a party organization. Year after year they hold their conventions and year after year they neither grow nor dwindle. Next Wednesday they will hold their State Convention at Trenton and elect delegates to the National Convention to be held at Pittsburg on May 28th.

The board of directors of the Brunswick Traction Company have decided to allow the members of the fire department in New Brunswick the free use of the trolley cars in cases of fire. This has long been the rule of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, the members of the department being allowed free tranportation for a half hour after the fire is extinguished.

The committee appointed by Governor Griggs to select a site for a home for indigent New Jersey veterans of the late war and their wives have visited Vineland and examined the old Sacred Heart College, which was recently abandoned. The Commissioners have decided to recommend the purchase of the college, and the next Legislature will be asked to make an appropriation.

This the time of year when all sorts of political rumors permeate the air, and among those that are current is one to the effect that an attempt will be made at the Democratic State convention on Thursday to explicitly instruct the National convention delegates to work for the nomination of President Cleveland for a third term. Little has been heard of such a rumor and it seems hard to give it much credence. If, however, such action is taken, it will be a surprise to the vast majority of the members of the party in New Jersey.

State Road Commissioner Henry I. Budd says that the State is making an extraordinary effort under the $100,000 appropriation to secure good roads, but that there are already more roads petitioned for in Essex, Mercer, Burlington and Atlantic counties than can be built under the present appropriation. At present there are about fifty miles of stone road under way all of which he expects to be completed this year. Altogether there are about 1,000 miles of good stone roads in the State and Mr. Budd said that of not a road that was not in good condition.

Rash and fickle is the young man who inserted this advertisement in the personal column of the New York Herald yesterday morning:

LIBERTY st ferry, Monday noon, beautiful young lady, black dress, small bag. Railway car; gentleman in gray orates honorable acquaintance. WESLEY RICHARDS, Plainfield, N. J.

Plainfield has long been noted for its handsome and amiable damsels, and it is rash reason for Wesley to allow Cupid to pierce his heart away from home. How different is the action of the German who is now advertising in The Daily Press for a wife. He is sensible, practical and patriotic of Plainfield.

The Newark Advertiser says that John Kean is a candidate for the chairmanship of the Republican State Committee, and if reports are true he stands a very good chance. In Union county, Mr. Kean's friends say they think he is laying his pipes again for the gubernatorial nomination, but the politicians in other parts of the State say that he is really in the fight for United States Senator, independent of any consideration for Garret A. Hobart, says this paper. He is in favor of Mr. Hobart for a second place on the National ticket, and is using his influence to create a sentiment for him in New York, where he has many political friends, and even in other parts of the United States.

Every Jerseyman will hope that the bill to prevent the sale of convict-made goods outside the State of their manufacture will become a Federal law. The measure is in the hands of Representative Gardner, of this State, a good friend of those who seek to check convict competition with honest labor. The Federal Government cannot, of course, interfere with State industries, but it can exercise the right of control over inter-State commerce, to prevent the sale of these prison productions outside the State. Mr. Gardner says very truly that until this sale of convict goods in localities remote from the prisons is stopped, the harm done to honest industries cannot be effectively dealt with.—Newark Call.

APPEALING TO THE CITY.

TOWN IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION PETITION THE CITY COUNCIL.

The Women Want $200 Appropriated to Exterminate the Elm Tree Beetle—Also Want Ordinances Printed Poster Form.

A considerable amount of business was transacted by the City Council at the regular May meeting, held last Monday and all the members were present except Mr. Tolles. After the minutes were read and approved, three applications for peddler's licenses were received and later they were granted. Residents of Clinton avenue asked for better fire protection and petitioned Council for two hydrants, one at Albert and West Front streets and another at Albert street and Dunellen avenue. They were referred to the proper committee and were granted later in the evening. The residents on East Front street, above Berckman, asked for two two-way hydrants. The petition was referred to the fire and building committee.

A communication was received from the Town Improvement Association, signed by Mrs. E. D. McCarthy. The association recommended the establishment of a city park in the centre of the square on LaGrande avenue at the intersection of Franklin place, Putnam and LaGrande avenues, also the printing of the city ordinances on posters for the benefit of the people so that they could be seen, and the appropriation of $200 to prepare and spray the elm trees about the city and thereby get rid of the elm beetle. They suggested that the latter work be done under the direction of a specialist. The communication was referred to the street, laws and ordinances, lights and trees committees. The Plainfield Water Supply Company presented a claim of $119.07 for water used by Honan & Sons in connection with sewer work.

The claim was filed with the City Treasurer. W. E. Martin, of the Postal Telegraph Company, petitioned Council for permission to erect poles and string wires for the extension of their system. The matter was referred to the street committee, and Mr. Fisk reported later that if the company desired such privileges they should make application in the proper way, the application to be signed by an official of the company. The Clerk was instructed to hand the petition back and give Mr. Martin the proper information.

J. B. Coward presented a claim of $30 for damages caused to his building when Honan & Sons opened the sewer trench last year through Park avenue. It will be remembered that several panes of glass were broken in the upper story at 113 Park avenue and other damages resulted to the building. Mr. Fisk said that the city had no right to retain money in the case of a claim for damages.

Mr. Dumont stated that it did not come under the contract and on his motion it was referred back to Mr. Coward.

The Council received and accepted an invitation from the G. A. R. to attend Memorial Day exercises at Music Hall.

Chandler W. Riker, of the Plainfield Street Railway, asked the Council for permission to extend their turnout 300 feet on the Plainfield side of West Front street near the Dunellen line. Mr. Fisk moved that if there was no legal objection the same be granted and that the company be allowed to place their tracks in the middle of the street, if permission was secured to extend the line through Dunellen. The motion prevailed.

The reports of the City Treasurer and Collector were received and filed, and a communication was presented by the Board of Health asking for an appropriation of $1,500 for the establishment of an emergency hospital. It was referred to the finance committee and Mr. Dumont reported that there was no money for such purpose and a tax could not be levied. The clerk was instructed to communicate the fact to the Board of Health.

Overseer of Poor Marx reported that 46 cases had been treated and that there were now 35 under the care of the city. Mr. Ginna reported in connection with it that $4,200 was expended last year and that fully as much would be needed this year, but the Council had cut down the appropriation to $4,000, making it possible for them to run behind.

The city physician's report showed that 26 cases had been treated and 9 examinations made.

Inspector of Buildings T. O. Doane reported that 25 permits had been granted during the last month.

Corporation Counsel Marsh presented a lengthy report regarding the cases of Michael Wilson against the city, which had been settled as recommended by him previously. He also reported that in the case of Charles Schipper, et als., against the city of Plainfield and the street railway, in which a city railway ordinance was attacked, the city was prepared at any time to proceed with argument.

By resolutions the fire and buildings committee were authorized to purchase 1,500 feet of hose at a cost not to exceed 65 cents a foot, and make repairs on the West Second street engine house at a cost not to exceed $300.

The contract of the N. Y. & N. J. Telephone Company agreeing to take full charge of the fire alarm system for $37.50 per month, was presented, and on motion of Mr. Fisk the terms agreed to and the form was referred to the corporation counsel for certification.

Mr. Dumont made a motion that the note of $4,000 now due be renewed, and that two warrants one for $2,000 and the other for $9,000 be drawn, the same to be charged to the sewer account. The motion prevailed.

Mr. Frost stated that the residents of Stelle avenue had asked for sewers and he understood they were willing to pay the cost of having them built if permission would be given them. Mr. Dumont moved that if the petitioners would construct the sewers at their own expense, the sewer committee be authorized to give them permission to have it done. It was so ordered.

Mr. Frost thought it would be a good idea to charge property owners $1 for making connections to the sewer from the curb to the house. It was done in other places and he offered a resolution that $1 be charged each property owner after May 15th. Mr. Fisk questioned the right to charge any amount and on his motion the matter was referred to the Corporation Counsel, he to report in one week. Mr. Fisk then moved that when Council adjourn it be to meet Monday evening May 11th. It was so ordered.

Mr. Barrows introduced an ordinance amending the police ordinance and defining the duties of the Police Board. It provides for the imposing of fines not to exceed $5 on policemen who violate any of the rules governing that body. All complaints are to be filed with the City Clerk and are to be thoroughly investigated both by the Board and the Council. It places the department under the control of the Board instead of the Mayor. The ordinance was passed on first and second readings and ordered engrossed and advertised. The sidewalk ordinance was called up by Mr. Fisk and on his motion it was rescinded. He offered another ordinance in its place which eliminates all injustice found in the other and provides for the outlying districts. The ordinance passed its first and second readings and was ordered engrossed and advertised.

Two petitions were received from residents of Netherwood. One stated that over 7,000 feet of sidewalk had been laid and other improvements made, while the other was in the form of an objection to the sidewalk ordinance previously killed. Both were received and filed.

Chief T. O. Doane presented a list of the various officers elected by the different fire companies and asked that the same be confirmed by the Council, which was done. Council then adjourned.

The entries for the athletic games of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association have closed and the prospects for the day are very bright. There are a number of New Jersey's best scholastic athletes entered, and exciting finishes are promised to all the events. GERMS.

They Exist Everywhere Now-a-Days.

In the Air and in Our Food and Drink. No One is Free From Them for a Moment.

One reads so much about germs, these days, that he becomes almost afraid to drink a glass of milk or wash his face in a basin of water. Yet those who are most competent to judge tell us that there are many diseases now known to be caused by germs; and probably other diseases will be discovered to be due to germs also.

If you sow wheat in dry dust and keep the soil in that condition, the kernels will not sprout and grow. And if you should sow the grain in very wet soil it will not grow then, but would mould or rot. Therefore we must not only have proper seed, but the soil must also be exactly right for the growth of the seed, if we expect results. For instance, you may inhale these germs and yet no harm follow; because the soil in your lungs was in such a healthy condition these disease-germs cannot grow there. Then, again, you may have exactly the right kind of soil in your lungs for the germs of consumption, and yet not have the disease because you have not inhaled the germs. It is certainly true that thousands of persons inhale the germs of consumption, and yet do not have the disease. The fact that this soil must be suitable to germ-life, explains the reason why some children have severe stomach and bowel trouble, and yet others in the same house be unaffected.

There are a number of complaints which may not be due to germs; and yet the principle we wish to establish is the same. Some take cold more easily than others; have frequent attacks of indigestion; become easily exhausted; and show in every way that the body is not strong. What is the best weapon with which to fight germs? A strong constitution. How can you prevent many of the ailments of every-day life? By keeping the body well nourished and the nervous system substantially re-inforced.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites will do all this. It feeds. It nourishes. It builds up. It invigorates. It fortifies. It shields the body from the enemy, and brings victory even in the face of defeat.

It is pleasant to know that such a remedy can be prepared in a form agreeable to the palate and the stomach. It does not nauseate. It does not cause diarrhœa. It does not produce those disagreeable eructations of gas. It does not necessitate bribing or threatening the children. Best of all, it does not fail to do its work.

Scott's Emulsion contains more pure Norwegian Cod-liver Oil than any other emulsion in the world, that will stand the test of time as being a perfect inseparable emulsion. Ask your doctor

WITH A BIG FIRM.

W. E. Lowe Enters into Partnership With Johnson & Higgins.

The Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin on Saturday published the following about W. E. Lowe, of Park avenue, this city:

"The most important insurance brokerage combination which has been made for a long time was announced to the 'Journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin' last night. Mr. William E. Lowe becomes a partner in the firm of Johnson & Higgins, and will have charge of its fire insurance brokerage business everywhere. He will for the present continue in his office at No. 58 William street, but will ultimately join Johnson & Higgins in one office.

"The Johnsons & Higgins firm therefore now consists of the following partners: Messrs. A. Foster Higgins, William Krebs, J. J. Barrett, John H. Gourlie, James B. Dickson, Stephen Loines, Frank Curtin and W. E. Lowe. The firm is known among marine underwriters all over the world as controlling an enormous marine insurance business, and it has branch offices in the principal cities of the United States.

"Its influential connections have never heretofore been thoroughly and aggressively cultivated for fire business, and that they now will be is beyond question. Mr. Lowe brings to Johnson & Higgins the important American Sugar Refining Company account and quite a number of other large customers. Quite a number of brokers will feel uneasy over certain lines when they learn of the new combination."

A SUNDAY MARRIAGE.

Miss Rosa Hinsgen Becomes Mrs. Frederick Bennett, of Cranford.

The marriage of Miss Rosa Hinsgen, of Grove street, and Frederick Bennett, of Cranford, was celebrated yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the German Reformed church. Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony. Miss Amelia Hinsgen, a sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid and Frederick Hinsgen, a brother of the bride, was best man.

After the marriage a reception was held at the home of the bride on Grove street. About fifteen guests were present, all of whom were from Cranford. Mr. and Mrs. Bennett will reside at Cranford.

WANT NO COMPETITION

ACTION TO COMPEL ITINERANT MERCHANTS TO STAY AWAY.

Suit Commenced Against A. Wienberger Who Opened a Sale in the Stelle Building Saturday—Merchants Incensed.

Action has been started in Justice Newcorn's court by George Dent, prosecutor, against M. Wienberger, who has opened a store on West Front street, advertising a bankrupt clothing sale, for a penalty of $100 for the violation of an act entitled "An act to prevent fraud in sales of wearing apparel at public or private sales by itinerant venders, and to regulate all such sales," passed May 24th, 1894. This act provides that any itinerant vender conducting such business shall obtain a State license on the payment of $25 and deposit with the State treasurer $500 as a guarantee against fraud. He shall also file with the State treasurer, under oath, a statement of where the goods came from, who owned them and a full account of failure and such other particulars as are necessary. He shall also pay a local license of $5, if not otherwise provided for, in the town where the sale takes place.

Any person, principal or agent, violating any provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon arrest and conviction shall be fined $50 or 60 days or both, beside which a penalty of $100 to be recovered in an action of debt by any prosecutor who sues for the city as well as himself.

Mr. Wienberger came to Plainfield last week and opened on Saturday the store on West Front street, formerly occupied by Powlison & Jones. He advertised an immense bankrupt sale of clothing. The merchants in town were incensed at his action when they knew he had no legal right to carry on the business, and they decided to take the case into court which they did. It will be remembered that sometime ago New York parties came to town and conducted a similar business in the Love building on West Front street, and the action of the merchants compelled them to leave town. The step in this case, as in the other, is taken to protect the business men of Plainfield.

GRADUATING ARRANGED

BOARD OF EDUCATION SELECT JUDGES FOR COMPETITIONS.

Women Will Act as Judges in English Composition—Members Remember When They Were Young—Circus Half Holiday.

The completion of the sewer system makes it necessary to connect the public school buildings with the sewer and the preliminary arrangements for that and the details for the commencement exercises were the principal matters that came before the Board of Education Monday at the regular May meeting.

Messrs. Probasco, Lounsbury, Abbott and Jenkins were present. There was the customary list of approved bills for small amounts which were ordered paid:

The City Collector's report was received and was as follows: Amount collected, $1,011.72; interest, $104; total amount, $1,115.72, deposited in the City National Bank.

The question of grading the property about the Irving School was revived by Mr. Lounsbury in his report as chairman of the building committee. He said that he had visited there last Saturday and conversed with James A. McGee, as representing the Monroe Avenue chapel. Mr. McGee was, he stated, willing to pay for the entire grading of Monroe avenue from curb to curb, if the Board would reduce the grade of their side and relay the sidewalk. Mr. McGee also agreed to lay the curb on the chapel side of Monroe avenue if the Board would curb the school property. Mr. Lounsbury then gave the estimate made by A. C. Lazzi, who is to do the work for Mr. McGee.

The grading on the Monroe avenue side, including the sidewalk and fifteen feet back, will cost $78. The relaying of the Fourth street sidewalk to grade, including the lowering of four trees, will cost $85. The estimate for the entire curbing is $161.04. If Lazzi is given the contract for grading and curbing he will do the grading for $130, instead of $163, and the curbing for $161, making a total of $311. This estimate caused a lengthy discussion. All of the members agreed that the work must be done some time, but the question was whether the expense of doing it at the present time would be best. The general opinion was that a better offer could never be secured, and it was decided on motion of Mr. Abbott to authorize it and to charge it to the property account.

Some of the residents of East Sixth street have long been desirous of having the fence in front of the Bryant School removed, and Dr. Jenkins brought forward their request. It was discussed but no action taken, as the members of the Board wished to thoroughly understand the situation before deciding.

The matters that need the serious attention of the Board at present, so Mr. Lounsbury stated, are the questions of sewer connections and the repairing of the Washington School. Those matters were also discussed, and while nothing definite was decided Mr. Lounsbury, as chairman of the building committee, was authorized to employ Mr. Karr, the New York architect, to draw up plans and specifications for water closets for all the schools and for the needed improvements in the Washington School. The latter will consist mainly in changes to the ventilating and heating apparatus, which are very poor. The furnaces are over twenty years old.

Another college, Mt. Holyoke, was reported by Superintendent Maxson as having placed the High School on the list of accredited schools for the classical course.

The arrangements for the commencement exercises are usually made by committees, and so President Probasco appointed the following committees: Hall, Dr. Jenkins; police, Mr. Abbott; music, Mr. Lovell and Dr. Probasco; programmes and tickets, Mr. Lounsbury; ushers, Mr. Clark.

The selection of judges for the different competitions was made, and it was also decided to give the women a chance on these committees to award the prizes. They were chosen as follows: For mathematics, W. M. Stillman; for English composition, Mrs. W. R. Richards, Mrs. W. H. Stirling and Miss Edith R. Leonard; for United States history, Superintendent H. M. Maxson; for penmanship, Rev. C. E. Herring, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges and Assemblyman W. R. Codington. The prizes will probably be given the same as last year. The speaker for the evening has not been definitely decided upon, but all the members acquiesed in Dr. Probasco's opinion that a professor and graduate of Princeton should be secured if possible.

Last, but not least, came a discussion as to whether school should be kept open on Wednesday when Barnum's circus is in town. Dr. Jenkins believed that the children should be given an entire holiday, but the rest thought that school should be held as usual in the morning, but be dismissed for the rest of the day at noon. As for the parade in the morning, the the recess will be arranged so as to occur at that time, for all the members of the board agreed that the parade of a large circus was well worth seeing. They had evidently not forgotten their younger days when they themselves used to follow the parades. The board then went into executive session.

The financial statement for April was passed around before the meeting. It was as follows:

CHOIR CHANGES.

First Baptist Church Music in New and Capable Hands.

Several marked changes were noticed at the First Baptist church Sunday. E. J. Fitchugh, who has filled the position of organist for the past two years so acceptably, has returned to Brooklyn, and his place is taken by Howard Case, of East Second street. A change has also been made in the soprano soloist. For several years Miss F. May Grant has held this position with great acceptability, and her singing has been thoroughly enjoyed by all who have heard her. The position is now filled by Miss L. C. Harris, of Elizabeth, who sang a solo yesterday morning. She has a voice comprising richness and fullness of tone and her upper notes are especially pleasing. Mrs. T. M. Ward, also of Elizabeth, has been secured as the leading contralto. No opportunity was given Sunday morning of hearing her voice. The high standard of work performed by the choir in the past, under the direction of C. W. McCutchen, will be fully maintained in the future and those attending this church can be assured of hearing excellent music.

At the evening service there were solo parts rendered by Miss Harris and Mrs Ward. The latter's voice is a pleasing one, and her singing will most surely be a feature. The worshippers at this church will no doubt miss the singing of B. T. Barnes, who has also retired after several years service.

Trinity Church Choir.

The music committee of Trinity Reformed church, of which P. S. Cutter is chairman, have completed the reorganization of the church choir and for the coming six months, commencing next Sunday morning, the choir will be Mrs. E. H. Rider, soprano, Miss Lizzie Dunn, contralto, and Messrs. Robert Clark, tenor, and F. S. Cutter, basso. A. L. Titsworth, organist, will continue as choirmaster in training the choir.

HUM OF THE TROLLEY.

IT IS HEARD ON THE NETHERWOOD EXTENSION FOR THE FIRST TIME.

The First Car Left North Avenue at Six O'Clock Last Night and Was Filled With City Officials and Prominent Citizens.

If a stranger had visited the eastern end of Plainfield Monday evening, about six o'clock, he would have thought that some great event was about to take place. People stood along the streets with an expectant air and uneasily awaited the arrival of something. At the corner of North and Watchung avenues the crowd was the greatest. The trolley car on the new tracks of the Netherwood branch seemed to be the principal object of attraction. At about six o'clock the car was run up to the regular starting point and there was a general scramble for seats.

The crowd that filled the car was a varied one, ranging from the millionaire Councilman, Charles J. Fisk, to Estil's lightning messenger, Charles Remson. Among the well-known citizens that made up the party were ex-Councilman D. S. Roberts, a prominent member of the "Big Six" that granted the original franchise to the company, Street Commissioner R. A. Meeker, Councilman W. A. Wesphal, Councilman J. B. Dumont, Councilman C. Fiske, J. Ford MacDonald, Dr. J. T. Fritts, of the Street Railway Company; S. C. Langhorne, ex-Councilman J. B. Brown, of the Street Railway Company, Constable Amos Moffett, ex-Councilman W. L. Hetfield, another prominent member of the "Big Six," Lawyer C. L. Moffett, G. W. V. Moy, Charles H. Hand, ex-Councilman, Elias Bird, George Tobin, A. D. Mallinson, J. J. Kanney, Theo. Smith and F. O. Smith. Superintendent John Adleman, of the Street Railway Company and Superintendent V. H. Harnell, of the contractors, were present.

It was the first trial of the Netherwood extension and the residents gazed at the car as it sped by as if they had never seen an electric car before. The road-bed was remarkably smooth, and everybody on the car was highly delighted with the running of the car, especially on the level stretch on East Fifth street. The entire ride flavored very much of an ovation, and the people seemed to like to see the car running. A gentleman who lives on Putnam avenue was so much pleased that he rushed to the curb and waved an American flag as the car passed. He was answered by bows and cheers from the car. The car ran as far as Putpam avenue and Webster place and then returned.

S. C. Langhorne, who has greatly favored the extension from the start, was the first to pay the fare. The car was in charge of Motorman Hipp and Conductor Carty. The running time on the up trip was 54 minutes.

REINER CASE IN SIGHT.

Libel Suit Brought by Mayor Rankin to Be Considered.

The case of Dr. Reiner, editor of the New Jersey Herald, who is charged by Mayor John E. Rankin, of Elizabeth, with twenty-six counts of libel, will be the most important which the Grand Jury, which will be sworn in on Tuesday before Judge VanSyckle, will have to consider. It is said that if the jury does indict, and the case comes to trial, it will prove the most sensational trial before the County Court in many years

Public sentiment has wavered, and there appears to be no disposition on the part of the public for the affair to come before the courts because of the expected unpleasant testimony, a part of which the defendant published in his arraignment of Mayor Rankin for not, as the plaintiff alleged, closing the disorderly houses of Elizabeth.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sarsaparilla as a blood purifier and building up medicine leads everything ever produced. It is positively the best. Others may make the same claim. But there's this difference: We prove it. Not by antiquity, but by Merit. Not by what they say, but by what Hood's Sarsaparilla does. It has a record of Cures unequalled in medical history. Is positively, perfectly and permanently cures when all other medicines fail. That the keen discrimination of the people recognizes its merit and the cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla, is shown by the fact that they buy Hood's Sarsaparilla in preference and to the exclusion of all others. Hood's Sarsaparilla has a larger sale than all other blood purifiers. It wins confidence everywhere because the statements in its advertising and testimonials are verified by all who take it. No other medicine has ever received such praise, or so many voluntary testimonials of wonderful cures. No other medicine possesses the peculiar combination, proportion and process used in preparing Hood's Sarsaparilla, and which give it merit peculiar to itself. This is the secret of its wonderful power, of its wonderful sales, of its wonderful hold upon the confidence of the people. This is why it cures Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Catarrh, Rheumatism, all Humors, Kidney and Liver troubles, Dyspepsia, That Tired Feeling, builds up the nerves, creates an appetite and strengthens the whole system. Its merit, its sales, its

parilla

An Appeal for a Mission.

An earnest appeal for the support of the East Third Street Mission was made by Dr. Yerkes at the morning service in the First Baptist church. He said that the Mission was six years old and over since its organization in the tent an immense amount of good had been accomplished both at the regular meetings and the sessions of the Sunday school. A collection was taken at this service for the Mission to which there was a liberal contribution.

ARBOR DAY READING

Investigations Conducted by the New York Forestry Commission.

Valuable Facts About the Black Spruce—Secretary of Agriculture Morton's Tree-Planting Idea Growing in Popular Favor.

An increasing interest is everywhere shown in Arbor day. Already in some states it is made a legal holiday, and parents and teachers in the public schools are recommended by official proclamation to encourage children to plant at least one forest shade tree on a public highway, or at their home or schoolhouse. The conviction is growing that the rapid denudation of the forests is the occasion of the prolonged droughts which are of periodical recurrence throughout the land, and that the lowering of the levels of the great lakes may be attributed to the same cause. The proceedings of the forestry commission of the Empire state's relations to the great park or reservation established in the heart of the Adirondack wilderness "for the free use of the people in the pursuit of health and pleasure," are therefore worthy of careful attention.

The commercial prosperity of the state being largely dependent upon the free and safe navigation of the Erie canal and the Hudson river, both of which are to a large extent dependent on the waters of Black river, the preservation of the Adirondack forests became a matter of prime importance, hence the action of the law-making body of the state creating the commission and placing under its care these immense preserves, with the duty of enforcing the laws designed to prevent the reckless waste of timber by fire and ax, and the wanton destruction of game. The benefits already accruing to the public from this policy are beyond computation; and this is especially true with respect to the measures adopted to guard against destructive fires, in the past one of the chief sources of waste. It is true that about one-third of the Adirondack forest is owned or controlled by private clubs, but these heartily cooperate with the state authorities in the enforcement of protective measures.

The novice, as well as the professional expert in the science of forestry, find much that is of interest in the recent investigation conducted by the commission concerning the Adirondack black spruce, the most important arborescent timber of the region. Its habitat is in New York, Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine and Canada—though it is sometimes found in Pennsylvania, and even as far west as Wisconsin. In the Adirondacks it commonly attains a height of about eight feet and a diameter of 18 inches. The maximum height is 103 feet, with a diameter of 36 inches. It is distributed pretty evenly throughout the region, forming something like 15 per cent. of the whole forest.

SECRETARY MORTON, THE ORIGINATOR OF ARBOR DAY.

The habits of the black spruce are quite erratic. When it grows in dense thickets its lower branches fall off, leaving a coltsney, tapering shaft, sparsely and irregularly crowned with foliage; but in the open it forms a beautiful dark green pyramid, the branches extending from very near the ground to the apex.

The lumber taken from the black spruce forests of the Adirondacks in 1893 exceeded 240,000,000 feet. That it is not very much greater is chiefly due to two peculiar causes. One is the extraordinarily large number of scrawny trees, so called from a crack which extends up the trunk from base to the lower branches of the crown, in most cases penetrating to the heart of the tree. This seam, fills with a resinous substance which exudes and hardens, thus forming the spruce gum of commerce.

Some 23 years ago a destructive blight fell upon the black spruce forests. It attacked only mature trees, and the cause is still a puzzle to the foresters.

It is interesting to note that the clear butt logs of the Adirondacks black spruce is the principal source of supply for the manufacture of sounding boards for pianos. Choice timber is expensive, the minimum price being about $35 per 1,000 feet at the mill. In trade parlance these logs go under the name of "violin butts."

To ascertain at what age the black spruce matures, the commission has made a most interesting investigation. Impressions were taken on cylinders of the stumps, and of trees cut at various heights of the pole, of 1,000 trees in various portions of the forest. By the use of a magnifying glass it was discovered that the tree which had a diameter of 36 inches at the stump showed an age of 250 years on a section at the base, and of 102 years at a height of 110 feet. The average age of 12-inch trees is 90 years; of 13-inch trees, 174 years; of 14-inch trees, 189 years; of 15-inch trees, 185 years.

Horses Cheaper Than Bicycles.

At a recent sale of the assets of a riding academy in New York city the saddle horses brought on an average less than $30 apiece. This is said to be the lowest price on record for horses of this description, and the fact was generally noted that in New York the market value of a horse is lower than that of a bicycle.

ROSECRANS HONORED.

Presented with the Lastare Medal by the University of Notre Dame.

Upon Gen. William Stark Rosecrans—army leader, ex-minister to Mexico, ex-congressman from California, and President Cleveland's first register of the treasury—has been conferred the Lastare medal, annually presented by the university of Notre Dame to the Catholic laymen judged most worthy.

It is only since 1883 the medal has been presented. The custom is an offshoot and the American counterpart of the presentation of the golden rose by the pope. Every year, on the third Sunday of Lent—Lastare Sunday—the pope blesses a golden rose of great beauty and priceless workmanship and sends it to the Roman Catholic of Europe whom he judges most deserving of such honor.

The history of the Lastare medal, though brief, is marked by many familiar names. Its first year, 1883, saw it presented to John Gilmary Shea, the historian of the American church. During the next three years it went to Patrick Kelley, the architect; Eliza Allen Starr, poet and artist, and Gen. John Newton, the engineer. In 1887 there was a break in the chain. The name of the man chosen by the trustees is not set down in any book. He was a convert to the Catholic faith, but he vowed to refuse any ecclesiastical honor offered him, and he felt that he must decline the offer. In 1888 the medal was given to P. V. Hickey, editor of the Catholic review, and during the following years to Mrs. Anna Hanson Dorsey, William J. Onahan, Daniel Dougherty, Henry F. Brownson, Patrick Donohoe, Augustin Daly and Mrs. Anna T. Sadlier.

The medal conferred each year is of necessity very similar to those which have gone before, but a certain uniqueness is imparted by the efforts of the artist to epitomize the career of the one to whom it is awarded. The one presented to Gen. Rosecrans is almost severely plain. It is a massive disk of gold, with raised edges and sunken centre, bearing on the obverse the usual legend: Magna Est Veritas et Praevalebit." The letters are of black enamel and precious stones. The reverse of the disk is much the same. Another inscription in black enamel letters encircles Gen. Rosecrans' name, which is engraved in the center. The medal was presented by Bishop Montgomery, of Los Angeles, in whose diocese Gen. Rosecrans resides.

BOOTH'S NEW ARMY.

New Religious Organization Is Called "God's American Volunteers."

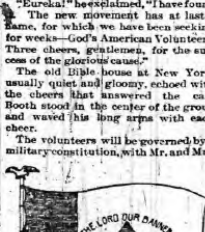
Ballington Booth has named his new religious organization "God's American Volunteers."

"Eureka!" he exclaimed, "I have found it."

The new movement has at last a name, for which we have been seeking for weeks—God's American Volunteers. Three cheers, gentlemen, for the success of the glorious cause."

The old Bible house at New York, usually quiet and gloomy, echoed with the cheers that answered the call. Booth stood in the center of the group and waved his long arms with each cheer.

The volunteers will be governed by a military constitution, with Mr. and Mrs.



FLAG OF "GOD'S AMERICAN VOLUNTEERS."

Booth as joint presidents. The local branches will be called posts, and the various grades of officers will have rank and titles like those of the American army.

The standard of Ballington Booth's organization will consist of a white flag, emblematical of purity. In the center will be a large blue star, typical of hope; in the middle of this star will be a white cross, emblematical of sacrifice; reaching to the point of the flag, nearest the top of the staff, will be 15 white stars in a field of blue, representing the states of the union. Over the central large blue star will read the motto: "The Lord Our Banner," and underneath the words designating the number of the post to which the standard is presented.

It is to be carried by a color sergeant at the head of the parade, along with the national flag.

Bridge Across the Bosphorus.

Trouble with the Turk may delay work on the proposed railroad bridge across the Bosphorus at Constantinople. It will be 5,645 feet long.

A Legal Marriage Engagement.

EXONERATES MR. DEMEZA

LAWYER HANCE DECLARES THE JUDGE DID NOTHING IMPROPER.

He Says That Mr. DeMeza's Actions are Entirely Free From Moral Culpability—The $700 Mortgage is Due to the Judge.

The charges brought against City Judge DeMeza by Irenaus P. Allen in reference to a mortgage were of a very serious nature. Last Friday Hiram O. Hance, attorney for Mr. Allen, signed the following statement which is a complete exoneration of Jude DeMeza from any implication of wrong doing:

In Chancery of New Jersey.

Between
Irenaus P. Allen, Comp't On Bill
Vs.
G. W. DeMeza, Defend't

The defendant in this cause having submitted to the inspection of counsel for complainant, the original chattel mortgage duly cancelled; and all the original cancelled checks of said defendant given by him and used by the complainant or his wife in other transactions and also a detailed statement of all transactions and accounts between the parties to this suit; and said counsel for complainant from such examination of the original documents being fully satisfied and convinced that said chattel mortgage was in fact cancelled by defendant prior to November 28, 1895, and endorsed with a complete authorization to the County Clerk to cancel the same of record; and said counsel for complainant from such examination of original documents and accounts being further satisfied and convinced that the whole amount of the $750 real estate mortgage made by the complainant's wife and complainant to said George W. DeMeza, March 1st, 1895, is justly due and owing to said DeMeza, and that the whole conduct of said George W. DeMeza has been entirely free from moral culpability of any kind, and that the most that can be charged against him in the premises is mere delay in delivering up the mortgage after being in fact cancelled and rendered of no value to him, and without power of doing harm to his client the complainant and said counsel for complainant having delivered to said George W. DeMeza a receipt in full of all demands of complainant upon being convinced as aforesaid and receiving said mortgage, this is to testify that said George W. DeMeza is entitled as a matter of right to be vindicated from all charges of wrong, unjust, illegal, unprofessional or improper or improper conduct, and the above entitled cause is hereby on motion of complainant ordered dismissed with costs to be paid to said George W. DeMeza by the complainant.

Signed Hiram O. Hance,
Dated May 1st, 1896. Sol'r of Compl't.

DISTRICT MEETING OF PYTHIANS.

A Large Number of Lodgemen are the Guests of Perseverance.

The district meeting of the Knights of Pythias held in the rooms of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., last evening was one of the most enjoyable and successful ever held. Grand Chancellor Hithcock, of Jersey City, called the meeting for the purpose of talking over the district work and laying plans for the coming year. In addition to the Grand Chancellor the following grand lodge officers were present: Grand Vice-Chancellor Rockatellow, of Somerville; Grand Master of Finance J. H. Conger, of New Brunswic; Past Grand Chancellor Walter F. Hayhurst, of Lambertville; Deputy Grand Chancellor Sloan, of Newark.

It was reported that during the past three months the net increase in membership had been 709. After a general discussion of topics of interest to the order and the reports from the various lodges had been received, those present were invited into another room where the Bathbone Sisters had provided an excellent repast. The committee on refreshments and entertainment included Morgan Turton, C. W. Lines and Charles Foster.

ENTERTAINED THE EUCHRE CLUB.

The Misses Barrett Afford a Pleasant Time for Their Young Friends.

The Young People's Progressive Euchre Club, of Dunellen and North Plainfield was delightfully entertained by the Misses Barrett, of North Plainfield, last Friday. As usual, an exciting game of euchre occupied the first part of the evening. The first prizes were won by Miss Carlotta Williams and Fred Haynes. Miss Edith McArthur and Miss Sadie Barrett tied for the second choice prize, while Robert Giddis and Charles Cayleil were tie for the second gentlemen's prize.

A donkey party followed and kept the guests in a continual roar with its amusing incidents. Miss Blanche Marlow was the most successful one in locating the correct position for the tail. Dancing and refreshments followed, and every one declared that the evening had been a very pleasant one.

Will Kitchen, George Saunders and several of their friends are planning a bicycle ride to Philadelphia for Decoration Day morning.

MRS. DREIER VINDICATED

WINS THE CASE BROUGHT AGAINST HER FOR ALLEGED FRAUD.

Craig A. Marsh Appears for Her in the Supreme Court and After Considering the Case the Jury Found Her Not Guilty

Mrs. Augusta Dreier and her husband came home from Court at Jersey City Thursday feeling proud of the vindication which they had received from Supreme Court Justice Lippincott in the suit brought against them by Richard Bernhardt and wife.

Nearly a year ago, the Dreiers bought a large quantity of furniture from the Bernhardts and took a bill of sale for it. Two or three months ago the Bernhardts offered back the money and demanded back the furniture, claiming that the transaction was merely a loan, and that the bill of sale was obtained by fraud. The Dreiers indignantly denied the charge of fraud, and retained Craig A. Marsh as counsel to defend them in the threatened suit.

Mr. Stuhr, a Jersey City lawyer of prominence, brought suit for the Bernhardts for $3,000 damages, and the suit has been going on for the past two days in Jersey City. After the evidence was in, Mr. Marsh insisted that, even under the evidence of the plaintiffs themselves, there had been no fraud or imposition of fraud of any character, and that it was their right to have the Court direct the jury to bring in a verdict in favor of the defendants. Mr. Stuhr opposed the motion and the argument over the matter was long and heated, but at its conclusion, the Court, in an elaborate opinion delivered orally from the bench, sustained every proposition advanced by Mr. Marsh and directed the jury to render their verdict in favor of the defendants.

A COW WITH A REPUTATION.

It Has Been Arrested a Number of Times in Court This Morning.

There is no animal in town better known in the annals of the city court than Mrs. Mary Burke's cow. It has cost the police no end of worry and kept the City Judge busy settling the cases that it has caused. This poor cow has the very bad habit of straying away and wandering into the street which is in direct violation of the city ordinance. The creature has been arrested several times and severely reprimanded by the Judge, but the cow continues to placidly chew its cud and follow on in its evil ways. Mrs. Burke, the owner of the cow, was arrested some time ago for allowing her cow to stray about the streets and the case was set down for this morning.

Mrs. Burke and her counsel, ex-Judge W. A. Coddington, were present and tried to prove it was another cow that was committing the misdeeds this time. It was shown, however, that the hero of the previous trials had been out after all, although another cow had really been on the scene. The Judge suspended sentence and sent a warning to the cow to never do so any more.

A WORTHY CASE.

Organized Aid Association Make an Appeal That Should Be Responded To.

The Organized Aid Association appeal to the public in behalf of a woman in the direst need. She was found in a small dark room, helplessly sick, suffering from pain and neglect. She has been moved to more comfortable surroundings and has been attended by the city physician and two nurses. It is necessary now to seek a home for her where she will have constant care and good food. Such a home has been found but the money necessary for her support has been assured, but it is impossible to give her the comforts of the new home until money has been raised. We therefore appeal to the charitable of Plainfield for assistance, feeling that it is only necessary to state these facts to secure for a woman deceased in body and feeble in mind, the few comforts which it is possible to give her.

Money may be given to Mrs. Woodruff, at the office of the Association, 344 West Front street, or to either of the undersigned.

W. L. Saunders,

G. Kennedy Newell,
Chairman District Committee.

The course selected for the Newark-Philadelphia century run on June 13th, will be by way of New Brunswick and Princeton. At Trenton a stop of two hours will be made for dinner and rest, and also to allow the stragglers to catch up. Fours prizes age to be given for clubs having the largest representation, and also for clubs having largest number in proportion to their membership to finish.

Some of the bicycle policemen on the Coney Island bicycle path have been put into plain clothes. This is done to enable them to suppress the army of scorchers who infest this path on Sundays and holidays, to the great discomfort of and danger to women in particular, and to men who do not care to ride fast. When the policemen all wore uniforms, it was a simple matter for the scorcher to slow up until the officer had been passed, and then resume his reckless riding.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatuleney. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
Dr. G. C. Osgood,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
Dr. J. F. Kincheloe,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. Archer, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular preparations, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
United Hospital and Dispensary,

CYCLING COMMENT.

Here are a couple of tables, condensed within a small space, which tell more about bike gears at a glance than a long string of explanation. The gearing of the bike is an operation of extreme importance. One of these tables tells about the gear and the other tells how far a particular gear will carry you, and how many revolutions are necessary to carry you over a mile of road. As almost every bicycle is fitted with 28-inch wheels, the following table is based on that size of wheel:

TO COMPUTE THE GEAR.

Teeth in sprocket.	Gear.
16X6	74
16X7	84
16X8	94
17X6	79
17X7	92
17X8	94
18X6	83
18X7	93

20X8	120
22X6	102
22X7	119
22X8	136
24X6	111
24X7	130

Another table which is quite interesting is the following, which shows the distance covered by each turn of the pedals and the number of revolutions made in a mile:

A Tramp Highwayman.

A gang of tramps has been infesting Mountainside woods for several days. While on her way home from Westfield, the little daughter of Mr. Meyer was stopped by one of the tramps, and asked to give up all the money she had. When the child replied by denying that she had money, the fellow made her turn out her pocket. Satisfied that she told the truth he contented himself with swearing to emphasize his disappointment.

PLACE FOR THE RELICS.

President Saltzman Makes the Exempt Association a Present.

A regular meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association was held last Friday and the following officers were elected: President, Augusta Saltzman; vice-president, Alex. Titsworth; secretary, G. Thorn; treasurer, E. M. Laing; financial secretary, Geo. Clark; board of trustees, T. W. Little, E. M. Laing, W. A. Woodruff, Edward Vermeule, J. A. Hubbard; representatives to relief association, Auguste Saltzman and G. Thorn; delegates to State Convention, to be held at Hackensack, May 20th, E.M. Laing, D. W. Littell, W. A. Woodruff, Jos. Bilmm and Frank Schuck.

A resolution was received from Gazelle Engine Company, signed by the officers, relinquishing all right and claim to the old fire bell, which is now in possession of the Exempts, and which hung in the old fire house on Park avenue forty years ago. The bell is now the property of the Exempts. President Saltzman presented the association with a large and handsome book-case, which will be kept in the rooms. The relics now owned by the association will be placed in it for safe keeping.

Lecture by a Talented Woman.

Mrs. E. B. Horton, who is to lecture on "Historic Paris and the Treasures of the Louvre," in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church, next Tuesday evening, is a delightful speaker and from her long residence abroad is admirably qualified to address an audience on this subject. She is well-known throughout this State as a vice-President of the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs and as an officer in the General Federation as well. She is spoken of as the prospective President of the State Federation to be elected next fall. The lecture will be fully illustrated by beautiful stereoptican pictures and the proceeds are for the benefit of the Boys' Missile Band of the Crescent Avenue church.

Epworth League at Work.

The Westfield Epworth League reformers have undertaken to extend their Sunday-closing crusade to its suburban speakeasies. Complaint is made of two unlicensed places on the county road, near Garwood, one near the Fanwood line, and one in the borough. Evidence has been collected against them all, and the League has requested them to observe the law. The offenders have followed the example of the candy shop and fruit stand keepers, and promised to cease their [illegible]. Vide them, they will doubtless continue to keep open, and the young people of the League will carry out their threats of prosecution.

New Baptist Church.

The Westfield Baptists have decided to build a new church. Some of the members advocate selling the property on Elm street, either to the Episcopalians or Lutherans, and building on the south side. A few years ago the late Chauncey B. Ripley offered the society the gift of a lot, and they still incline to build in that section. Other members think best either to enlarge the present edifice or to remove it to the rear of the lot and build on the old site. A church meeting is to decide as to what action will be the best.

FESTIVAL OF VIOLETS.

BEAUTY IN COLORS AND ARRANGEMENT AT TRINITY CHURCH.

The Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters Conduct a Sale and Entertainment Was Great Success—Those in Charge of the Ballroom Were Very Superb.

Violet and white make a beautiful combination, and the lecture room of the Trinity Reformed church never looked prettier than it did on Thursday in its tasteful garb of those two colors. The occasion was that of the Festival of Violets given by the Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters of the church. The decorations were beautiful, and the banquet lamps on the tables sent out a soft light, tinged with violet from their violet colored shades, that added to the effect. The gas light overhead it filled the room with a brightness that dazzled the new comers. The pleasant faces and the merry chatter helped to make the scene a delightful one.

The young women of the circle presided at the various booths and tables in light colored gowns, which corresponded to the decorations in color. The effect was charming and added to the general harmony of color. The waitresses' gowns were also trimmed in a delicate shade of violet.

But the booths! They were, every one of them, works of art, and though simple, they were far more attractive than any flashing combination of colors that could be arranged. The many visitors looked around with unconcealed admiration, and the praise that was bestowed on the decorators was lavish and hearty. For the first moment the visitor was dazzled, but the beauty of the tables drew him on and he soon became a purchaser at one of the booths.

The first booth to attract the attention of the visitor was the flower booth, which was placed in the corner directly in front of the entrance. Three arches, the central one of which was used as an entrance, with their supporting pillars, inclosed a beautiful booth. White bunting was draped in an artistic manner from the arches and was twisted around the pillars. The artistic effect was heightened by little bunches of violets fastened on the white while violet bunting was festooned around the edge and base of the board counter on which a pretty display of flowers, both cut and potted, was displayed. Miss Virginia Van Winkle presided over this bower of flowers with Miss Martha Cook and Miss Maud Van Dyke as her assistants. A King's Daughters cross of violets hung over the entrance.

A less pretentious table was the perfumery booth, but it was decorated with equal taste. The handsome banquet lamp with its violet shade, and violet ribbon and violets made up its decorations. The Misses Jennie Quick and Louise Snediker were the committee in charge.

The next table groaned beneath a load of delicious cake. Violets were everywhere arranged in wreaths around the cakes and formed a striking contrast on the snowy-white spread. Mrs. Will F. Williams was in charge, assisted by Miss Mabelle Force.

In the centre of the room dainty cups full of delicious chocolate were served by Miss Minnie Williams and Mrs. F. S. Cutter, from a small table handsomely decorated with the flower and leaf of the violet on the white table cloth.

A lemonade well occupied one corner of the room. An artistic combination of violet and white bunting, tastefully hung over the framework of wood, made it equal to any the rest in beauty while the cool and refreshing lemonade, served out by Miss Emma Gillem and Miss Mabel Wilson, was just the thing. Little bunches of violets were fastened about the sides in a pleasing manner.

The refreshment department consisted of a number of small tables, on each of which was a jar of violets, at which light refreshments were served. Mrs. F. E. Woodruff was in charge and the waitresses were the Misses Jessie Hockridge, Nellie Hockridge, Grace Boland, Grace Emmons, Emma Lines, Eva Donavan, Lizzie Cutter, Dora Bennett, Mabel Moore and Martha Anthony.

Last, but by no means least, came an octagonal booth decorated in the usual violet and white, at which homemade candies found ready sale. Miss Mabel Woodruff and Miss Edith Du-Bois were in charge.

The kitchen where the dainty supper was prepared was not so prettily decorated but the good things that came out from there more than made up for its appearance. Mrs. Anna E. Leggett and Mrs. Edward Van Winkle superintended the work here. Violet paper napkins were given to all that partook.

The chairman of this wonderfully successful festival was Mrs. J. F. MacDonald. The decorations and entertainment were arranged under the supervision of Miss Jennie Quick. The decorations were well arranged and consisted, besides the booths and tables, of a large sign in letters composed of violets, "Festival of Violets," while bunting and violets were arranged in choice array.

A SPINSTER GERMAN.

DELIGHTFUL EVENT GIVEN BY THE LADIES IN THE CASINO.

New and Novel Figures Arranged for the Pleasure of the Guests.—Decorations of the Ballroom Were Very Superb.

Society saw the Casino at its prettiest last Friday and at the same time enjoyed one of the most novel and delightful Germans that have been held in this city. It was a subscription "Spinster" German, gotten up by the ladies. The ballroom of the Union County Country Club is charming in itself, but when the ladies had finished with it, it was transformed in appearance and scarcely recognizable.

A screen of lattice work, intertwined with sprays of apple, cherry and dogwood blossoms, was stretched across the end of the room by the large fireplace, making the pleasantest little reception room imaginable. Easy chairs and fancy tables were placed around this room. Soft rugs covered the floor, while the dainty white apple blossoms, greens and luxurious hangings hid the walls from view. Bluedelf ware conformed with the general color of the decorations, while potted plants, screens and all the little fancy articles that beautify the home, were arranged artistically about this reception room.

An opening in the middle of the latticed partition formed an entrance to the remaining portion of the ballroom. The white blossoms were fastened about the walls in tasteful array, while in a far corner was the favor table, hidden in a latticed bower, covered with the prevailing apple and cherry blossoms. The front of the stage was hung with white bunting which was almost hidden by greens and branches of apple blossoms, while potted plants and ferns were arranged along the edge so that the musicians were almost hidden from view. The general effect was certainly very beautiful and it was pronounced the prettiest manner in which the Casino has ever been decorated.

The German itself was a great success. The music was excellent, the favors dainty and original and the figures novel and pleasing. Among the new figures was the golf figure. Each of the ladies were provided with a numbered golf club and a numbered ball. They gathered at one end of the room and drove the golf balls to the other end where the gentlemen were waiting. Each of the gentlemen secured a ball and danced with the lady holding the golf club of the same number. The target figure was also something new. Three targets, with hearts as bulleyes, were placed in position and three gentlemen chosen, to representative a target. Then two ladies, armed with blowpipes, blew little darts at each target and the one coming nearest to the heart in the centre received the next dance with the gentleman representing her target, while her less skillful opponent retired to the settees. In the leap year figure, each gentleman was provided with a fancy red glove and a red mitten. Then two of the ladies asked him to dance and he was forced to show his preference by giving his choice the heart and the other one the mitten. The screen figure was another novel one. Six of the ladies were inclosed behind a colored paper folding screen of six divisions, the colors corresponding to those of the different colleges. Six of the gentlemen kneeled before the screen, each in front of a different division. At a given signal, the ladies burst through the paper screen and danced with the gentleman kneeling in front. There were a number of other pleasing figures, all of which passed off very successfully.

During the evening the gentlemen were escorted to supper by the ladies and the other leap year features of this very successful German were carried out without hitch.

The German was led by Mrs. Lewis G. Timpson. The favors were given out by Mrs. J. W. Reinhart, Mrs. O. T. Waring and Mrs. D. F. VanBuren. Others present were the Misses Wilson, Wharton, Waring, Reinhart, Walz, Evans, Yates, Baker, Sprague, Murphy, Shepard, Hyde, Smalley and Clark; Miss Phillips, of Pittsburg; Miss Barber, of New York; the Messrs Waring, Shepard, West, Runyon, VanBuren, McGee, Murphy, Frost, Peck, Dr. Hedges, Dr. Ard; Mr. Hunghart, of Pittsburg; the Messrs Biagden, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Wharton, Jr., L. G. Timpson, Fred. W. Yates, Evarts Tracy, John Doull Miller, E. M. VanBuren, Alfred Small, Ferdinand Streuli, M. S. Ackerman, J. Frank Raymond.

The music was furnished by Rogers. Max Wiertz served the supper.

Sheriff Kyte for Senator.

As Senator Voorhees persists in his purpose of *retiring, and as ex-Assem*blyman Codding declines to permit the use of his name, the chances grow that Sheriff Kyte will be the probable Republican candidate for Senator, says the Newark Advertiser. In this case the Shrievalty nomination will doubtless go to W. H. Hulskamper, of Elizabeth, who in the recent election distinguished himself by running two hundred votes ahead of Mayor Rankin.

LIVES A LIFE OF FEAR

STARTLING STORY OF CRUELTIES TOLD BY A COLORED WOMAN.

Mrs. Francis Wilson Says That Samuel Johnson Appropriated Her Money and Is Abusing and Keeping Her Confined.

The quietude of City Judge DeMeza's office was interrupted Wednesday by a colored woman, whose startling story of cruelty and abuse promises, if true, to make things lively for Samuel Johnson, the colored proprietor of the little restaurant on Madison avenue between Front and Second streets.

Roundsman Mattox was riding past the postoffice on his wheel this morning at about 10:30 o'clock when he heard screams coming from the *direction of Madison avenue. On in*vestigating he found that they came from Johnson's restaurant. When he entered the place Johnson explained that it was only a little quarrel and that he had his hand over the mouth of Mrs. Francis Wilson, who looks after the kitchen, to prevent her from screaming.

Mrs. Wilson managed to escape on the entrance of Roundsman Mattox and went to Judge DeMeza's office where she told a different story.

Mrs. Wilson kept an intelligence office on Richmond street and managed to lay aside a little money. She finally decided to start in business, so Mr. Johnson interested bonsers at Judge DeMeza's office, and consented to let Johnson run a restaurant under his name while she put up the money. Mrs. Wilson looked after the cooking and assisted in serving the customers. This plan has been in operation since last October and Mrs. Wilson says that Johnson has kept her in perfect misery ever since. He has, she says, beaten her, kicked her, and ill-treated her in all manner of ways and, of late, has not allowed her to leave the house but kept her there as in a prison. Her indignation rose to such a pitch that it was with difficulty that she could tell of the trials that she had undergone.

Mrs. Wilson is known to the police as a very quiet and orderly colored woman and is well known among the people of this city, as she has been employed in many Plainfield residences. Johnson is not known very well except through his recent scrap with Lemuel Perry, the North avenue barber. Mrs. Wilson declares that his real name is not Johnson and that he is a desperate character. She was confined to her bed for about a week a month ago by a terrible blow Johnson gave her in the eye.

Mrs. Wilson made a formal complaint and a warrant was issued and given to Patrolman McCoye to serve.

GETTING RIGHT TO WORK.

Town Improvement Association Will Be No Nonentity.

The word slow is not included in the dictionary of the Town Improvement Association and there promises to be no delay in the carrying out of their plans. The executive committee met this morning and listened to the reports of several committees. The outlook committee reported as did the committee on cruelty to animals. The action of ex-Marshal Pangborn in having Barry arrested, and the unfavorable criticism it has caused, was discussed and the following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That the Town Improvement Association extend their appreciation and approbation to those citizens who considered it their duty to make an arrest in North Plainfield, when the laws or the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals is violated.

Mrs. Eaton, as chairman of the railroad committee, made an interesting report. They suggested that stations be kept in better order.

The North Avenue station was reported to be in bad condition, while the condition of the Netherwood station was highly commended. The Grant Avenue station and the street railway station were both reported to be in good order. The chairman of the committee was authorized to write to the officials of the Jersey Central Railroad and call their attention to the condition of the North Avenue station, and the height of the steps of the cars, which are so high as to be very difficult for women to mount.

Another interesting report came from the committee on parks, trees, and natural beauties, and the chairman, Mrs. McCarthy, call especial attention to the ravages of the elm tree beetle and reported having consulted Prof. Smith, of New Brunswick, State Entomologist, who recomended taking the matter in hand at once.

It was reported that vines would be placed on the stonework of the railroad bridges as soon as the required permission could be obtained. The placing of the soldiers' monument and a memorial fountain in front of the Crescent Avenue church was suggested, as was the arrangement of a little park at the intersection of LaGrande and Putnam avenues and Franklin place.

A public meeting will be held next Friday.

Perhaps the ends may justify the means in the case of Booth-Tucker using Steve Brodie as a guide in his slumming expeditions, but it doesn't look well.

POOR POLICE FORCE.

The National Capital Is But Indifferently Guarded.

A Ghastly Morning Scene on Capitol Hill —The Colored Population of Washington Is a Source of Constant Trial.

[Special Washington Letter.]

Strange sights sometimes greet the eyes of diligent observers in this city; but something unusual occurred this morning which will be as surprising to the reading public as it was startling to the witnesses.

The customary crowd of statesmen, newspaper men, visitors from afar and local habitues of the capitol were crowded into the cable cars which ascended Capitol hill shortly before noon. The car stopped at the top of the hill, and as its occupants entered the capitol grounds they were surprised to see a negro and negress engaged in wrestling over a pint bottle of gin. The negro finally wrested it from the woman and started to run away with it.

Nobody interfered. There was not a policeman in sight. The capitol police force is made up of politicians, who receive $1,000 each per annum, and who do nothing but walk around the capitol building in beautiful blue uniforms. Not one of them was out in the capitol grounds to prevent the disgraceful scene.

There ought to have been one of our city policemen somewhere in the vicinity; but none appeared, and the fight went on. The woman grabbed the negro by the coat collar, struggled with him for the bottle, and finally he threw it away over the bushes which line the capitol grounds. It struck a tree trunk and was destroyed. That did not end the fight.

The woman began pounding the negro with her fists, while she uttered a torrent of ghastly profanity. The statesmen and newspaper men did not feel called upon to enter the arena in behalf of either contestant. Moreover, I is dangerous to interfere with the negroes of Washington, for nearly all of them, of both sexes, carry razors. So the fight went on, the woman doing all of the swearing and pounding. Finally the negro shook her from him, and again tried to run, when she again grabbed him. He then took hold of her hair, and swinging her around like a top, dropped her upon the hard cobble stones on the south side of the street.

All this occurred within 200 feet of the capitol building, and at the edge of the beautiful grounds surrounding that splendid legislative temple. When the woman dropped, the city policeman appeared a block away. He was called to by the assembled crowd. Everyone beckoned to him, but he walked unconcernedly down the street, as though he were merely out for a promenade. There might have been a murder committed; but it seemed to make no difference to that alleged guardian of the law. He was in no hurry. If any woman of colored persuasion had fallen at that negress feil, it must surely have fractured her skull. But she arose and went after the man again, and, long before the policeman reached the original scene, the woman caught the negro a black eye and again began to assault him.

The policeman now saw what was going on, and he leisurely walked towards the fighting couple. Somebody must have informed the fighting policeman, who, coming, for once, decided from struggling, and ran away. Still the policeman walked slowly along down New Jersey avenue, and he looked as pretty as a piece of the majesty of the law as one would care to see.

The crowd dispersed, the majority going into the capitol building; but, so far as was observed, no arrest was made. The policeman was in no hurry.

The capitol grounds are not properly policed. Numerous outrages have been committed there at night, and the records of the police court show that several murders have occurred. Probably the chief is to blame for this. It is reported that the superintendent of police for years past has made annual recommendations for appropriations which would enable him to employ additional policemen, but the appropriations have not been made.

At the foot of Capitol hill, on the west side of the grounds, are the botanical gardens, and beyond them for fully a mile are the arsenal, Smithsonian, agricultural and monument grounds, forming a continuous park, containing numerous old trees with widespreading branches. There is an excellent driveway along the entire distance and there are numerous pretty walks within the parks. But no part of this beauty spot is safe at night, because the police force is inadequate. It may be said that, as a general rule, the members of our metropolitan police force are diligent and brave; and the specimen referred to on Capitol hill is an exception.

You must not infer that the negro and negress are types of their race in the national capital. But the quarreling couple, who began their fight over a bottle of gin, represents a majority of their race in this city, and a large majority of it, too. But there are some splendid specimens of the negro race in Washington, and a number of them are of superior intelligence. There is a large Roman Catholic church on Fifteenth street maintained by colored people, and their choir is an aggregation of excellent musical talent. On the same street, near the white house, there is a Presbyterian church maintained by the same race of people, and some of its communicants are quite wealthy, many of them being prominent in the political world.

Then, at the foot of Capitol hill, not far from the Botanical gardens, there is a Methodist church where revivals are held four or five times each year. But this church is contiguous to the lower regions of South Washington, and numerous scenes of disorder have occurred there during recent years.

But the majority of the negroes are ignorant, poor and vicious. There are distinct classes of them, and they are as readily divided and discerned as are the currents of the ocean. Some of them come from the old families of Washington, others from the old homes and plantation of Virginia, but the majority, and a few from the better classes in states more remote. These are quiet, docile, gentlemanly and well-bred people. They have as much pride in their families and family histories as the blue bloods of the cavaliers of the southern states.

When the union armies converged here at the close of the civil war they brought with them the riffraff of the colored population of the south. The negro camp followers did not represent the better element of their enslaved race. The good negroes were loyal to their masters and mistresses. Tens of thousands of them refused to accept freedom, preferring to live upon the old plantations with their white folks. Only the worthless and vagabond classes ran away and followed the armies. Consequently, when they were ajogged off by the victorious legions of the armies, they became our permanent lazzaroni. They have propagated their kind, and fully 20,000 negroes of the lower order are numbered with the total population of the District of Columbia. They drink, carouse, steal, violate all of the ten commandments, and ignore all human law. Their chief cause of continued crime and degradation is the bottle. Like the red men who originally inhabited this entire continent, they have fallen victims to the demon of the still. It is the prime cause of their woes and crimes.

"You have no idea how the faithful negroes loved their masters and homes before the war," says Senator-elect Hernando D. Money, of Mississippi. "No book ever had such a sale, at that period of our history, as 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' and yet it was a dreadful exaggeration of facts and conditions. It was really a political pamphlet; and it produced its effect. The worst scenes depicted by Mrs. Stowe were not exaggerated; but the book conveyed the impression that those worst scenes were of daily occurrence in the land where slavery existed; but in reality they were the exception.

"You must remember that the black people were regarded by their owners as chattels, and they were valuable. No man in the north who possessed a horse worth $1,800 would beat him to death. No man owning a negro worth $20 would flay it alive. You can understand that such a man as old Uncle Tom, faithful, valuable and honest, would have been easily worth $2,000; and his owner would not carelessly drive that piece of property to death in a terrible torture. On the contrary, he would keep him well fed and well clad, and look after his health.

"Well, no matter about that now; for slavery has gone. What I was going to tell you was about the faithfulness of the negroes to their masters and mistresses. An old negro who had belonged *to my father, remained on the planta*tion until after the war, and then said he would like to go north, and see how it was to be free. Of course, no obstacle was placed in his way, for he was free, and after he went to Cincinnati he remained there a year, and one morning I found him sitting on the front doorstep, looking very woebegone and poor.

"I immediately spoke to him very severely, telling him that we didn't want any free niggers about our plantation, especially the free niggers from the north.

"The old man looked at me pitiably, and said: 'Marse Sam, please let me come back. I been 'way up to Canady, an' in Ohio, an' lots o' places; but there's no place like de old home.'

"Still looking severely at him, I said: 'Get up off of that doorstep.' He slowly arose, and then I gave him a shove and a little kick, not enough to hurt him, but just to appear severe, and told him to go around to the kitchen and get something to eat.

"As the old fellow felt the tip toe of my boot, he fell on his knees, raised his hands, and shouted: 'Glory Hallelujah. I'se wid my friends again.' And he never wanted to go away from the old place again as long as he lived."

SMITH, D. FRY.

WAS A REAL STATESMAN.

The Late President Hippolyte's Patriotic Work for Hayti.

He Ruled Wisely Over the Little Island Nation of Negroes and Was a Truly Great Man in His Sphere—Sketch of His Career.

Louis Mondestin Florvil Hippolyte, president of Hayti, who died recently, was born at Cape Haytien, in the Island of Hayti, in 1827. His mother was a native woman of almost pure African descent; his father one of Soulouque's ministers. The boy had all the advantages his native country afforded, and grew into a handsome and promising youth. From the first he was of a proud, aggressive nature, and naturally became prominent in the movements which serve as politics in the half-tropical land. He first attained distinction in the civil war of 1865, where he was the leader of the sanguinary revolt in which Legitime was defeated. No signal a success could not but give Hippolyte a prominence which marked him either for assassination or dominance, and he was strong enough to escape the former by achieving the latter.

For 23 years he was one of the foremost men in the Haytian nation, and did perhaps more than any other in shaping its policy and developing its resources. In October, 1889, he was chosen acting president, and in the following May his election was formally confirmed. The term is seven years, of which he had served less than six at the time of his death.

The status of affairs in the Haytian republic calls for the greatest tact and statesmanship. One of the chief problems is the overcoming of a lethargy which prevents any real activity except such as is developed at the time of a revolution. But Hippolyte managed to encourage industry and to cultivate in steady growth a system which gave great promise of making his country as prosperous as it was peaceful.

The population of the little republic was 572,000 by a census taken in 1890. Native statesmen have recently placed their estimate at 900,000; and the hope of 1,000,000 was warm in Hippolyte's bosom in these later years. Nine-tenths of the people are negroes of nearly pure African blood, and the unchangeable policy of the people is the refusal of land titles to whites. The religion is Catholic, though owing to the president's wise counsel Protestant missionaries are tolerated. One of his main troubles was the existence of voodoo worship, but he succeeded in confining it to the very lowest classes, where it still exists.

Hippolyte gave every encouragement to educational matters, and lived to see 400 national schools established. The grade has constantly improved for the last ten years and a smaller number of rich young men than usual now completes their education in the United States or in France.

One of the wisest measures to be credited to Hippolyte is fixing the right of suffrage at visible occupation. No man who does not work is permitted to vote. And a measure of this sort cannot but result in bettering the whole field of government.

The national debt in 1892 amounted to about $9,000,000, of which half was held abroad. In 1896 the debt had been reduced, and the proportion held at home was much greater. In 1892 there was $12,000,000 export and $14,000,000 import. But in the course of his administration Hippolyte succeeded in adjusting the balance of trade more advantageously for his country. He gave every possible encouragement to the cultivation of coffee, cocoa and cotton, and did much to establish a financial stability of which perhaps never been known. The Haytian dollar was, at the time of his inauguration, worth 75 cents in United States money. To-day it is nearly fixed at 95 cents.

No man in the history of the island had so combined the qualities which made the nation self-supporting, which made assistance of white men unnecessary and which preserved peace with the tempestuous kingdom at the farther end of the island. Hippolyte was easily the foremost man in his country, though the very excellence of his work is proved in the fact that other men may to-day conduct its affairs who ten years ago would have been overwhelmed by revolution within a month after inauguration.

How Sound Waves Move.

The speed with which sound waves are transmitted through the atmosphere depends on several conditions. When the temperature is at 32 degrees Fahrenheit, sound travels with a speed of 1,090 feet per second, the velocity increasing with the temperature at the rate of about one foot of speed per second for each degree above the freezing point. Then, again, in damp air sound moves with a greater velocity than it does in dry air, no odds if the dry air be warm and the damp cold. In water sound moves more than four times as fast as it does in air, or say at about the rate of 4,700 feet per second.

SEDAN MONUMENT.

To Be Erected in Memory of French Soldiers Who Fell There.

Sedan is to be commemorated by a monument from the hand of M. Croisy, the French sculptor. It is the figure of Fame seated above a dead soldier and placing upon the drooping head a wreath of bay leaves. On the pedestal runs the inscription: "Gloire a ceux qui moururent pour la Patrie." The composition of the whole monument is exceedingly florid, from the wing of the mythical figure to the wreath which is suspended above the soldier's head. Of course, so fine a sculptor as

FRENCH MONUMENT FOR SEDAN.

M. Croisy is permitted to have his own ideas of the appearance of Fame, and she is certainly depicted as a very pretty girl. She is also French; and there is no doubt that had the sculptor been German or Italian Fame would have been German or Italian. It may be, however, that an injustice is done to M. Croisy's ideal by the inspection of a mere reproduction that faces the eye upon a horizontal level. There is marked disproportion, from this point of view, between the size of the figure of Fame and that of the soldier. The monument will be placed upon a pedestal ten meters high, a position which will not only give elasticity and a sense of poise to the winged figure, but will also reduce its apparent size in the resulting perspective.

INEXPENSIVE X RAYS.

Pittsburgh Scientist Describes a Simple Way of Producing Them.

A very simple method of illustrating the theory of Roentgen regarding the collection of light may be made in the following manner, as a Pittsburgh scientist says:

Fold a piece of white paper of ordinary thickness into the form of a cone, closing the small end tightly, so as to exclude the light. Place this cone over the globe of an incandescent light, folding the edges around the same in such a manner as to prevent any rays from escaping which do not penetrate the paper.

Then darken the room as much as possible, excluding all the light save that furnished by the covered globe, and place your hand, with fingers extended, within two or three inches of the latter. The accompanying picture shows the process before the lamp has been entirely enveloped in the small end of the cone.

CHEAP X RAYS.

They can be produced without electric apparatus.

After holding it in this position for a minute or a little longer you will be astonished at the result. Not only can the circulation be plainly seen, but even the outlines of the bones will be discernible.

In the absence of an electric light a common lamp may be used with good results.

Agent Succeeded in Selling.

Yankee bustle has perhaps never been better exemplified than in the case of a sewing machine agent who is exploiting the vicinity of Dover, Me. A week ago he tackled a house in which lived an old bachelor who hadn't a sewing machine. The agent was persistent and the bachelor obdurate, until finally the latter said he positively wouldn't buy a machine unless a woman to run it was also provided. Then the agent hunted around, and in a few weeks had found an elderly but excellent maiden lady who had been waiting for some good man to speak out to her, and actually succeeded in getting her married to the bachelor. Then he made a sale of a machine, though it might seem that he ought to have given one to the bride as a present. This story is vouched for by the Maine papers.

The Horse Chestnut.

Etymologically speaking, the word horse chestnut has nothing whatever to do with horses. A Frenchman, however, has made the discovery that horse chestnuts are an undoubted cure for broken-winded animals.

CYCLING COMMENT.

T. J. Carey, of West Front street, is now riding his new Spalding wheel.

Messenger Higgins, of the Postal Telegraph Company, has purchased a Warwick wheel.

Jay Eaton, of the Jersey Wheel Co's racing team, is entered in the indoor race meet at Chicago on May 11th to 16th.

The forthcoming road book issued by the Pennsylvania Division of the L. A. W., will, it is said, be one of the most complete publications of the kind in existence. The maps are expected to be exceptionally fine.

It is not unlikely that an official handicapper may be appointed to go the rounds of the National circuit. The Racing Board has the matter under consideration, and believes it would result in better contests than where the cracks who follow the circuit are handicapped by different men caree or four times a week.

Very shortly there will be running through the streets of Boston, handsome hyrseless mail wagons for the collection and distribution of mail matter. These horseless wagons will be propelled either by electricity or naphtha. They will be the same long, narrow mail vehicles which are now used on postal cars on the street railways in many cities.

Charles Carpenter, of Rahway, has signed with the Jersey Wheel Company and will ride in their racing team. He is now doing his preliminary training on the road and has made Plainfield his headquarters for the present. Carpenter and Barnett will open the season at Philadelphia on May 16th, when both will ride in a ten-mile professional handicap.

Another race for the supremacy is one between cycling and baseball, says The American Wheelman. Cycling manages usually to give baseball a handicap and beat it out for popular favor. By the way, it is a notable fact that in the revived Olympic games cycling was one of the few modern sports included in the programme.

The Police Commissioners of Newark have decided to detail two policemen in citizens' clothes for duty on the streets in the First Precinct, which is the part of the city most frequented by wheelmen. They will be mounted on bicycles, and will regulate the speed of wheelmen and otherwise curb the recklessness of cyclists now prevalent in the district. The action of the commissioners has the endorsement of the better class of wheelmen.

Among the latest to purchase Cleveland Swell Specials from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company are Dr F. C Ard, John V. Beekman, Jr., G. E. Hall, W. M. Runyon, H. C. Adams Mrs. W. E. Stelle and Miss Estelle Daniel. Crescent wheels have been purchased by Miss Jessie A. Dayton, of South Plainfield; Mrs. H. Bruens, John McMurtree, William H. Addis, L. G. Fulton, John Sharkey, P. Corrigan and J. F. Horman. Meredith Dryden has purchased a Cleveland racer.

The one-mile novice race, for club members only, promises to provide lots of sport for the Crescent Wheelmen's Decoration Day race meet in itself. A number of the younger riders are quietly training and expect to spring a surprise on the other competitors when the race starts. Of course there are many that think they can pick the winner, but the chances are that a "dark horse" will appear at the finish. Among those who have signified their intention of entering the race are E. I. Serrell, J. R. Giles, G. R. Rockfellow, T. U. Smith, F. J. Pope, Tom Hannon and Clifford Pierson.

The cycle path fever has struck Jersey and is aided and abetted by the recent law enabling and authorizing municipalities to build cycle paths. The most advanced project of this sort is that of the wheelmen of Monmouth, Mercer and Ocean counties, who have agreed on a route for a path from Asbury Park to Trenton, a distance of forty-five miles. The Mercer county wheelmen are also agitating the building of a cycle path along the Delaware river bank from Camden to Trenton. The wheelmen of Jersey City and Newark have been so encouraged by the prospective success of their South Jersey brethern with the Asbury Park-Trenton path that they have decided to agitate the question of a path from Newark through Harrison to Jersey City, along the old turnpike and Harrison avenue. The excellent stone roads of Essex, Union and Monmouth counties, with the proposed cycle paths, will give the riders of the two wheeled vehicle a continuous road-way from Jersey City to the seaside resorts along the Jersey coast and even to Philadelphia. The craze for century runs will no doubt receive from these projects stimulation which it does not need at present.—New York Sun.

In the Spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of—DeWitt's Little Early Risers, for they always cleanse the liver, purify the blood, and invigorate the system. For sale by L. W. Randolph, 143 West Front street.

AROUND THE BASES.

T. Lyons will play short stop for the Fishkill Athletic Club, of New York city.

The Somerset Baseball Club of Somerville opened the season last Saturday with a hotly contested game with the strong nine from the Reading Academy, of Flemington, on the Somerville diamond. Despite the chilly weather and the cold east wind quite a number turned out to greet the home team on its first appearance on the diamond. Conover, the local pitcher, had the ball well under control for six innings. In the seventh inning four runs were batted out by the visitors, but Garretson was in put in the box and struck out the following six men, which saved the game. The teams were as follows:

SOMERSETS.	READING ACADEMY.
Ewright, sb.	Conkling, p.
Garretson, 1b and p.	Mulligan, c.
Conover, p and 3b.	Murphy, ss.
Fleener, 2b.	Green, 3b.
